Czar Reaches Italy in Good Humor.

"Little Father" Gets Royal Welcome in Land of Caesars.

Kissed on Both Cheeks by King as He Leaves His Carriage.

Crowds Shower Flowers in Path of the Visiting Sovereign.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

RACCONIGI (Italy) Oct. 23.—Emperor Nicholas appeared in excellent health and the best of humor as he stepped from the train, which came into the station five minutes ahead of schedule, for his eagerly anticipated visit to Italy.

His coach had been decorated with the Italian and Russian colors. King Victor Emmanuel stepped toward the imperial carriage as the Emperor descended to the platform. The sovereigns embraced and kissed each other on both cheeks.

At the moment the Italian troops presented arms, cannon belched forth a salute, the bands struck up the Russian national anthem, and the crowd cheered. Accompanied by the King, the Emperor reviewed a company of infantry inside the station. Here the Ministers and other government dignitaries were presented to His Majesty, following which ceremony the sovereigns emerged from the station and entered a carriage.

As the people outside caught sight of the King and his imperial guest the [illegible] was renewed and continued as the two monarchs drove away.

WELCOME CORDIAL.

[illegible] Unsanctioned demonstrations had been sternly suppressed, but the day's rejoicing was spontaneous and genuine, even the Mayor of Rome having been sent by a radical and socialistic board of aldermen to participate in the imperial reception.

Broadly viewed, the much-discussed and anxiously awaited meeting between Emperor Nicholas and King Victor Emmanuel, opened most auspiciously.

From early dawn the scene in this city was animated as crowds gathered in the streets. The strict measures to preserve order adopted by the police and military did not serve to dampen the ardor of the populace.

CITY DECORATED.

The whole city had been decorated with flags and bunting, while the householders along the route to the palace had spread carpets before their doors and filled their windows with brocades and bright-colored streamers. Triumphal arches stretched across the path traversed by His Majesty.

This morning the Mayor posted a manifesto exhorting the citizens to give the Emperor a greeting that would show their appreciation of the great event and express Italian gratitude for the aid the Russian sailors gave at the time of the earthquake in Southern Italy.

From the moment the imperial party entered Italy through the famous Mont Cenis tunnel, at Modune, until it reached the royal castle, it was attended by an extraordinary military guard. Not an inch of the tunnel but was examined, and it was lined with soldiers, who could almost touch hands.

EX-CONGRESSMAN OF NEVADA CAUGHT IN PITTSBURGH.

C. D. Van Duzer, Whose Recent Stock Transactions Are Said to Have Had a Shady Tinge, Is Arrested as Suspicious Character by Police of Smoky City.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Former Congressman C. D. Van Duzer of Nevada, is a prisoner at the Central Station. He was arrested as a suspicious character at the Colonial Hotel where he registered under the name of F. H. Harris, Chicago. The Chicago police were notified of his arrest and it is reported Van Duzer is wanted that [illegible] against him. The stock sold to Pittsburghers, it is said, afterward turned out worthless. This morning a number of alleged victims visited him at the Central Station.

When Van Duzer's lodgings were located Detective John Lally found his room and knocked at he door.

"Mr. Van Duzer, I believe?" inquired Lally.

Van Duzer turned red.

"No, sir! My name is not Van Duzer. You'll find my signature on the register downstairs." He slammed the door, interrupting Lally's feigned apology.

Lally went down stairs. In a short time Van Duzer came down. When he reached the street he broke into a quick walk and was about to cross the Sixth Street Bridge, when he was captured.

At first he declined to talk. Later, Lally says, he acknowledged his identity.

DR. CHARLES TAYLOR INJURED.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—While Dr. Charles S. Taylor, a physician of No. 1547 St. Andrews street, Los Angeles, was on the front platform of a crowded street car today, a shaft of a passing buggy struck him on the thigh, inflicting a wound three inches deep. He was treated at the Emergency Hospital and departed for home tonight.

DIPLOMATIC IMPORTANCE

JAPS MAY TRY TO BUY MANCHURIAN RAILWAY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 23.—Russian and foreign diplomatic circles ascribe great importance to the meeting at Harbin on October 26 of M. Kokovsoff, the Russian Minister of Finance, and Prince Ito, president of the Privy Council of Japan, although the exact motives impelling Japan are not known. The subjects to be discussed were not suggested in the Japanese overtures and M. Kokovsoff, in accepting the invitation to meet Prince Ito, barred political questions. He said that he was competent to discuss only financial and technical subjects, these covering the status of the Manchurian railroads which have proved such a financial incubus.

Russian statesmen are seriously considering the sale of the Russian railroad interests in that territory. The Japanese proposal to purchase the portion of the railroads remaining in Russia's hands might be entertained by Russia because of internal complications, but although it is understood that Japan is ready to make tangible offers, the Russian government is disposed to look with favor on a proposition for the sale of the Manchurian lines either to China, financed by an international syndicate, or to such a syndicate direct.

It is authoritatively stated that overtures for the purchase of the lines were made during the summer by a group of financiers with which E. H. Harriman was connected, but these have lapsed since Mr. Harriman's death. The railroads that may be sold include both the main line and the southern branch from Harbin to Port Arthur. The Russian title runs about thirty years, after which it passes to China. Only China's lack of finances prevented earlier negotiations for the transfer of the title, before its expiration, both Russia and China having agreed to this in principle.

The placing of the North Manchurian Railroad under international financial control would have far-reaching political consequences, as it would virtually create a buffer state to safeguard the political integrity of Manchuria until China is strong enough to assert herself.

The meeting at Harbin was arranged when M. Kokovsoff was unable to accept an invitation to go to Japan.

Barrill's Affidavit Refuted.

Ex-Partner Gives Different Version of Trip Up Mt. McKinley.

Hints That Large Sums Were Spent to Get Guide's Statement.

Sworn Story of Cook's Companion on Ascent Is Flatly Denied.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MISSOULA (Mont.) Oct. 23.—An affidavit contradicting the assertions of Edward N. Barrill in his affidavit, declaring that Dr. Cook did not reach the summit of Mt. McKinley, was secured by the attorneys representing Dr. F. R. Cook in this city today from C. G. Bridgford, until recently a partner with Barrill in the real estate business in Hamilton, Mont.

Other affidavits denying statements made by Barrill and declaring that the latter had uttered contradictory statements before he made his affidavit, were also secured by the attorneys, but have not yet been made public. Bridgford will leave here Monday for New York, where he will appear as a witness in support of the sworn statement he has made.

BRIDGFORD'S STATEMENT.

His affidavit recites:

"I have known Edward N. Barrill of Darby, Ravalli county, Mont., for about ten or twelve years. During this time I have had business relations with Mr. Barrill. We have been in the real estate business together. We have offices in the city of Hamilton, and our business relations continued until he went to Seattle, which was about the last of September, 1909. During the time I have known Mr. [illegible] business transactions and associations together. During this time I have always found Mr. Barrill an upright citizen and a man of integrity. Our relations are at this time friendly. Although we have dissolved our partnership, we nevertheless bear to one another the closest relations of friendship.

"The first time I heard Barrill say anything relating to Dr. Cook's ascent of Mt. McKinley was in September of this year; this was about the time of receiving the news of the discovery of the North Pole. He and I started out in an automobile up in the south end of Hamilton; I stopped at the Ravalli Hotel to see a gentleman. When I came out Barrill and Mr. Nichols were talking. This Mr. Nichols is from Chicago and is connected with the Bitter Root Valley Irrigation Company.

"They still talked while I was there just a little and Mr. Barrill said to Mr. Nichols, 'I will see you this evening.' Mr. Barrill told me that afternoon that Mr. Nichols wanted him to come to his office and make a statement to him in regard to Dr. Cook's ascent of Mt. McKinley.

"MEANT MONEY TO HIM."

"Mr. Barrill said that he did not intend to go. He said that this meant money to him. The next evening he met Mr. Nichols at the Hamilton bar and Mr. Nichols asked Mr. Barrill why he did not come to his office the evening before. Mr. Barrill said that he did not have time; that he was too busy, he could not go.

"Mr. Barrill told me that Mr. Nichols told him if he would come there and make a statement with reference to Dr. Cook's reaching the summit of Mt. McKinley he would give him a bond that he would get his money.

"Then the next conversation I had with Mr. Barrill was the evening before he started for Seattle. He had told me before about getting a telegram from a man by the name of Miller. I think Mr. Miller is a photographer in Seattle. I went to him that evening and told him we had some men to take out to look at some land that next morning. He said to me 'I cannot go, that party Miller from Seattle is at Missoula, and I am to meet him there tonight; this means from $5000 to $10,000 to me.'

"That was the last I saw of Mr. Barrill until he came back from Seattle, which was on Thursday, October 7, 1909; he came up from Missoula and went on up home to Darby that night. Mr. Barrill after coming from Seattle and before going to New York left the impression with me that he was going as the friend of Dr. Cook.

CLIMBED MT. M'KINLEY.

"Mr. Barrill stated that he was there at Mt. McKinley when Dr. Cook made the ascent of Mt. McKinley. Mr. Barrill showed me pictures in a book, and said that the pictures had been taken on the trip up Mt. McKinley. He also showed me a picture of the place where they were cutting the steps on Mt. McKinley; he showed me the diary used on the trip and showed me right where Dr. Cook froze his toes; showed me the pack horses crossing the water; he showed me right where the blaze of ice was on the mountains.

"From what Mr. Barrill stated, I judged that Dr. Cook and he had reached the top of Mt. McKinley; I

SHOTS MAKE DISCORD AT A MERRY DANCE.

Lone Bandit Breaks in on Ballroom With Two Vicious Looking Revolvers and Lines Men and Women Against the Wall.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A lone bandit, masked and carrying two revolvers, invaded a dance at the Beverly Country Club, Eighty-seventh street and Western avenue, tonight, lined about twenty of the dancers along the walls, forced one of their number to go through the pockets of the others, and then, surprised by the club watchman, fired a fusillade of shots and escaped, leaving his booty, the glittering sum of $1.60, scattered over the ballroom floor.

Only one of the bandit's bullets took effect. That hit Tony Sartore, the watchman, in the arm, inflicting a slight wound. The others whistled around the heads of the dancers, tore bits of plaster out of the walls, and left scars that will be pointed out as evidence of his visit. The dance was being given by the employés of the club, which is supported by wealthy golfers.

Everything was going along happily up to about 9 o'clock. An orchestra merrily reeled off the notes of "My Wife's Gone to the Country," with thirty pairs of feet tapping time to the music, when suddenly there appeared between the portieres of the ballroom entrance, a short, dapper-looking young man, dressed in a black suit, a black slouch hat and a black mask, and carrying two pistols.

"Say," he shouted violently, "cut this stuff out." He flourished his two pistols to give point to his command.

"Now you," he yelled, indicating the group of dancers nearest to him, with the muzzle of his gun, "herd yourselves over in that corner or I'll make your mugs look like the open-faced end of a pepper can."

Immediately Miss Ruth Dawson proceeded to have an attack of hysterics. Several other women started to faint, looked at the bandit's pistol, and though better of it, but the men, with silent unanimity, went right ahead and obeyed orders.

Watchman Sartore was notified by a boy, and ran, pistol in hand, for the dance room. He found the robber presiding over twenty very scared-looking men and women, whom William Mack, one of the merrymakers, was artistically "frisking."

Just as Sartore came in Mack finished his work and handed the thief $1.60 in small change. As the bandit picked up the money, he turned and saw the watchman. Without a word he dropped the coins on the floor, and began shooting with both pistols at once. One of his bullets hit the watchman on the arm.

The dancers fled screaming from the ballroom, and the robber ran out into the night. Nothing more has been seen of him.

Man "Who Took Message to Garcia" Will Quit the Army.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It was announced today that on December 1, after more than thirty two years of service, Maj. Andrew S. Rowan, the "man who took the message to Garcia," will voluntarily retire from the army.

Maj. Rowan was a first lieutenant in the Nineteenth Infantry when his great opportunity came. Necessity arising for the dispatching of a trustworthy messenger to Gen. Calixto Garcia, in the interior of Cuba, Lieut. Rowan was selected by Gen. Miles.

He made his way to Garcia's camp disguised at one time as a Cuban, and again as a Spaniard. He was well aware that if he had been captured he would have been hanged like Nathan Hale.

Tiger Is Ready to Spring.

McCarren's Death Removes Only Bar to Tammany in Brooklyn.

Crushing of Democratic Machine Is People's Sole Hope of Safety.

Otherwise City of Churches Must Become Prey of Wigwam.

BY SUMNER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Into the municipal campaign now approaching its climax in New York has been injected a new element, a grave concern, by the death of Patrick McCarren, Democratic leader of Kings county, a politician who for years has commanded recognition in national and State as well as local affairs, and a figure who at all times has dominated his part of the situation with the best and the worst of them.

A boss in all that the term implies—shrewd, magnetic in his peculiar way, open in his friendship for corporations whose exploitation of the public funds has been a scandal—not at all the type of a leader to be held up as an example to young men—a race horse gambler and a person who had achieved that success to be won by those who measured political eminence by the money there is in it—McCarren had for years held the bridge against the invasion of Brooklyn by Tammany.

And now the Tiger, repeatedly driven back in its attempts to carry the red light and the wide-open license into Brooklyn borough, is licking its chops at the Manhattan end of the bridge and crouching for a spring that will not be repulsed.

GLOOMY ASPECT.

Who, now that McCarren is gone, can hold the bridge against the Tiger? The answer is a gloomy [illegible]. The best opinion is that no leader looms large enough to take McCarren's place in the kind of factional politics that has been fought heretofore. The people of Brooklyn, aided by those of Manhattan and the other boroughs have the only power—that of defeating Tammany at the polls, horse, foot and dragoons. Otherwise and eventually Brooklyn must be Tammanyized, Murphyized and Sullivanized. The long cherished dream of Tammany chieftains for greater [illegible] larger fields for graft—for the exploitation of vice and the corruption of youth—all combined in the weaving and strengthening of political power, seems perilously nearer realization.

While the tragedy of McCarren's end brings the banners to half-mast, and envelops the campaign for the hour in a funereal atmosphere, there is no losing sight of the real significance of the situation. A momentary truce may be declared as a mark of respect to the lamented and hated leader, but the ultimate significance of the interposition of Providence cannot be lost to sight. Tammany, in all its striped hideousness, is on the bridge, greedy, snarling, drooling with expectancy and fired with a hope never before known.

THRILLING FEATURES.

It is altogether too early to foretell what the effect of McCarren's death will be as to the election one week from Tuesday. The Brooklyn end of the Democratic campaign has been in the hands of a regency, so to speak, ever since the titular leader was stricken and as likely as not affairs may go on harmoniously. The after effects are a deeper concern to the friends of decent government—and there will be plenty of time to devote attention to them.

They keep saying here that things will liven up wonderfully in the final days and there is admonition to watch for explosions of a sensational character. The trouble thus far, from the standpoint of sensational interest, has been that this is not a billboard and dead-wall campaign.

RAP AT HEARST.

But what avails Gaynor if the bone and sinew of the ticket be lost—the control of contracts and all that? The question is not susceptible of an offhand answer. Perhaps Tammany knows what it has to gain by saving Gaynor alone; at any rate its only salvation is to do its best for the Mayoralty candidate, for, as has been clear from the first, there would be no show for anything if the head of the ticket suffers defeat.

Tim Woodruff, who also is the Republican leader in Brooklyn, took occasion today to puncture the reputed Republican alliance with Hearst in a signed article, in which he says:

"It is incredible that the great citizenship of this metropolis should prefer a judge of no business experience whatever, especially after the experience with Judge Van Wyck, during the first four years of the city's existence, or a newspaper publisher whose only claim to fame since he emerged from California, is based upon his ability to advertise himself. This is money in his pocket. Bryan, who was getting only $20 a week in 1896, owns the finest home in the capital of Nebraska and has amassed an independent fortune through his political activities. Hearst's great public achievements appear only in the columns of the newspapers which he owns and his great services to the people are recognized chiefly by the men on his staff, whose salaries he pays."

FEAR SPREAD OF SOCIALISM.

Germans Dismayed by Results of Recent Election.

Saxony and Baden Have Become Strongholds.

Sixteen Members to Diet Where Was Only One.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The leaders of the dominant political parties in Germany are dismayed at the outcome of the week's elections in Saxony and Baden, which indicate an enormously increased spread of socialistic sentiment. Saxony, where the conservatives heretofore have had forty-six seats in the Diet, elected only fourteen members of that party on the first day's balloting and the chances of making material gains in the supplementary elections are small. The socialists, who at present have only one representative in the Diet from Saxony, elected sixteen members and amassed enough votes in fifty-three other districts to make supplementary elections necessary. It is probable that they will obtain more seats than any other party.

Their victories have been won in spite of the fact that the voting was carried on under the new four-class election system, which was aimed to concentrate power in the hands of the conservatives and other parties recruited from the wealthier classes. The leaders of the conservative and liberal parties throughout the empire are thoroughly alarmed at the result, which suggests a widespread and deep-seated spirit of revolt against the taxation system lately adopted by the Reichstag. This is the first occasion on which the sentiments of the people could be tested at the polls.

CLOSETED WITH MR. BALLINGER.

NEW MEXICO'S GOVERNOR TALKS OF HIS TROUBLES.

While no Statement Is Given Out It Is Rumored He Promised to Resign Within a Month—A. M. Jackley, Who Preferred Charges, Goes to Kansas City With Secretary.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA FE (N. M.) Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Although rumor had it that George Curry, Governor of New Mexico, would today hand in his resignation to Secretary of the Interior Richard Ballinger, the day passed without any definite announcement from officials. Ballinger arrived late last night and stayed in his private car until this morning, when he received various visitors at the executive mansion. He was in close conference with Gov. Curry, but nothing was given out for publication. Rumor has it, however, that Curry told Ballinger he would resign within a month and that this was satisfactory to the Secretary.

It is known that on September 11 A. M. Jackley of Alamogordo filed serious charges against the Governor and placed the evidence in the hands of Ballinger. Jackley was not called into the conference during the day by Ballinger, but left with Ballinger on an evening train. Jackley will accompany the Secretary as far as Kansas City and en route the charges will be thoroughly gone over and future action decided upon. Other charges are said to have been placed by prominent Republicans, and it is known that Jackley is being backed for the place.

The visit of Ballinger is sensational, conversationally, the speculation as to Curry's successor running high, Paul A. F. Walters is being mentioned for the place.

COL. SOBIESKI IN CHICAGO.

Los Angeles Temperance Worker Revisits Former Home, Shows Keen Interest in City.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] One of the oldest lecturers in America, Col. John Sobieski of Los Angeles, a pioneer in the local option and women suffrage movements, is a guest in Chicago. George M. Bassett, superintendent of the Washingtonian Home, is entertaining Col. Sobieski for the week he will remain here.

Col. Sobieski is a Chautauqua lecturer and was greatly interested in "Gypsy" Smith's red-light district parade. "I am thankful for any good that has come of it, but I question its wisdom," was his expression.

Keen interest in Chicago and her progress is displayed by the lecturer, who at one time was a resident of the city, making a race for Congress against Carter Harrison, Sr., in 1887, and losing to the father of the former Mayor.

The colonel is eagerly watching developments in the anti-smoke crusade. "What a great thing it will be if the workers succeed," he said yesterday, "but it's a big undertaking. From the top of a high building, Chicago has the appearance of a city on fire."

PRESIDENT'S VOICE IS GETTING HOARSE AS JOURNEY PROCEEDS.

Makes Brief Addresses at Many Points Between Houston and Dallas and Learns of Rivalry of Big Cities of Lone Star State, But Avoids Committing Himself and Praises All.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DALLAS (Tex.) Oct. 23.—President Taft arrived here from Houston at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon. He was taken immediately to the State Fair Grounds, where he spoke.

Mr. Taft was so hoarse that he could be heard only a short distance, despite heroic efforts. He spoke briefly tonight at a banquet tendered him at the Oriental Hotel, and returned to his train preparatory to leaving early tomorrow morning for St. Louis. From St. Louis on Monday afternoon the President will begin a pilgrimage of four days and five nights down the Mississippi River to New Orleans.

The President's voice began to grow husky after his speech at Corpus Christi yesterday and broke down almost completely during his address at Houston this morning, when he tried to make himself heard by a crowd that filled four intersecting streets for two blocks in either direction. According to Dr. Richardson, the President's physician, the hoarseness is due in large part to the let-up in speech-making which came during the President's visit to his brother's ranch, and he predicted that the vocal cords will be all right in a day or so.

CUTS SPEECHES SHORT.

On account of hoarseness the President did not attempt to make a long speech either at the fair grounds or the banquet, and confined himself in each instance to an expression of his appreciation of the warmth of his reception in Texas. He completed, on arriving here, his eighth day in the State.

"I was asked today," said the President at the fair grounds, "if I had any doubt by this time about Texas being a part of the Union. I replied that the only doubt I had was whether the Union was not a part of Texas."

On his way from Houston today, the President traveled in the most populous section of the State and the succession of prosperous looking towns and cities was in striking contrast to the long stretches of barren cactus and mesquite-bush plains in the West.

At each station through which the train passed there was a large crowd to cheer the President. He made several brief car-end talks and at those places where no stop was scheduled, he appeared on the platform to wave a response to the cheers sent up in his honor.

At Hempstead, the President spoke to several hundred pupils of the Prairie View Colored State Normal School, and at College Station addressed the students from the Agricultural and Mechanical College.

ONLOOKER BAYONETED.

An unfortunate incident of the trip to Dallas was the bayoneting of Deputy County Clerk Louis Reichtenstein by one of the militiamen on guard at the fair grounds. Reichtenstein is said to be fatally injured. He was operated on tonight at St. Paul's Sanatorium and it was said he could not live. The stabbing occurred just before the President's train arrived at the fair grounds and it is presumed that Reichtenstein was trying to force a way through the crowd, although it is said he was behind the wire cable holding the crowd back when the soldier used his bayonet.

President Taft during his stay in Texas, has learned much of the rivalry among the cities of Dallas, San Antonio and Houston as to which is really the foremost city in the State.

The throng in the grand stand was restless and noisy. Those in the more remote sections of the structure were endeavoring constantly to get a better view of the President and this resulted in continuous confusion.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS.

The President has discussed postal savings banks in several recent speeches and has again expressed the hope that the banking interests will withdraw their objections to the bill. He declares that government institutions, paying 2 per cent., would interfere in no way with the great savings banks paying 3 and 4 per cent. At Beville, Tex., while the President was discussing postal savings banks, there came a voice from the crowd:

"Where do you put your money, Bill?"

"Well," laughed the President in response, "I haven't much to put anywhere. When you have been in politics and public office as long as I have, you won't have much, either."

To the students of the Agricultural and Mechanical College today, the President said:

"We have gone long steps ahead in the matter of education, and especially under State auspices, in teaching the young men something that is useful for them in after life; so that they can begin right away. To those who have time to indulge in a classical education, it is all right, but there are many of us not so situated, and many of us will learn well to accept the opportunity to go into engineering, into farming, into those things that we are going to do all the time. Now that is what you are doing, and I am sure you are improving every minute.

"If you are engaged in farming you don't have to go far to try it. I have been through your State during the last week, and if you will put the new processes with respect to irrigation and reclamation into force you will make a State that will be so big you won't know what to do with it."

To the colored students of the Prairie View School, the President said:

"I congratulate you upon the opportunities for useful education which you are receiving under the auspices of the State of Texas, and I congratulate the State that it makes no distinction in furnishing those educational facilities to all its citizens."

OPTIMISTIC.

BATTLE IS WON, SAYS LADY COOK.

AMERICAN WOMEN SHALL HAVE RIGHT TO VOTE.

Noted English Suffragist Gives Out Statement Declaring the Goal Is Just Ahead and All That Remains Depends on Women Themselves. Struggle to Death in England.

BY LADY COOK.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The women of Great Britain and America will get the ballot within a year. This is my prophecy. Whether it will come here or in England first is an even chance.

Here, it seems to me, it may hang on any sudden emergency, may become at any moment a possible political pis aller.

On the other side of the water it may be forced upon the politicians to stem the tide of a threatening revolution.

The women's struggle for votes in England is to the death. It is the struggle of desperation—of maddened desperation—and some of the women now engaged in it will look for nothing better than to die before Asquith.

The English minister, to protect himself, has before now been obliged to take his women relatives on more than one platform with him, for the suffragettes respect their sex. But if the battle there is not soon won it is patent that blood will be the outcome. There will be bombs thrown; there will be murder done.

Delicate women, day after day and night after night expose themselves to severities of the weather, to the insults of coarse men, to the violence of the mob. Sticks and stones have been thrown, but the women have gone on. The most tenderly bred have been accused in the vilest billingsgate.

In America the battle is practically won—was won forty years ago. All that now remains depends on the women themselves. Still in the position of a pioneer country, America has fought out its problems in a primitive way. It would be absurd to say that women in America are oppressed, ground down, set aside in any degree comparable to the women of the older countries.

When I return to this country, as I propose to do at the beginning of the year, bringing some of my English allies, I want to take a hall in Washington to talk it over with Congress. And I think Congress will listen. The American man wants to do the proper thing, but he is just waking up.

In America a wife is her husband's companion. Here the women rule. Here the women are worshiped. If a man wants to save his property from his debtors he puts it in his wife's name. In England the reverse is the case. There the women are suffering from the traditions of generations. My horse, my dog, my castle, my wife, is still the order of precedence in the Englishman's home. A wife may be deprived of her last shilling by her husband. A mother may have the child snatched from her breast by the father. And there is no redress. It is literally the struggle of the mediæval woman to shake off her shackles.

FIGHT WHITE PLAGUE.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Another campaign for raising funds for the various anti-tuberculosis organizations throughout the United States, is to be conducted by the American Red Cross during the coming Christmas season. Thirty million Red Cross Christmas stamps have been ordered, and will be delivered before the end of November. The societies hope to have 50,000,000 stamps on sale by December 15. Permission has been obtained to sell these stamps in all of the postoffices of the country.

HIS MOTHER COLLAPSES.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—The aged mother of State Senator Patrick H. McCarren collapsed today on learning of the death of her son, and this afternoon her physicians said her condition was critical. Mrs. McCarren is 84 years old.

CZAR'S ITALIAN VISIT.

was occupied by the military, and each coach of the train on the line leading to Raccogini carried a guard.

On the Italian frontier the Emperor was met by a commission of generals sent by the King, and by Prince Dolgorouki, Russian Ambassador to Italy, and the staff of the Russian Embassy. At the appearance of the Emperor's train the troops, drawn up beside the track, presented arms and their bands played the Russian national anthem. Throughout the Mont Cenis Railroad line the progress of the Emperor had the character of a triumphal march.

CROWDS WARDED OFF.

The troops prevented crowds from the villages that line the route from approaching the railroad. This restriction, however, served only to stimulate the curiosity of the people, who gathered at the rear of the soldiers, climbed into tree tops, or upon the cliffs, wherever a view of the passing train was to be had, and, as the train passed, waved their hats and handkerchiefs, shouting "Long live Russia" and "Long live the Emperor."

Women threw bouquets of flowers over the heads of the soldiers and against the train as it swept past.

At the station Emperor Nicholas was met by King Victor Emmanuel, Premier Giolitti, Foreign Minister Tittoni, Mayor Nathan of Rome, members of the court, staff officers and government dignitaries. These had driven to the station in brightly-decked carriages with outriders, and escorted by cuirassiers.

King Victor Emmanuel wore the full uniform of a general, with the collar of the Order of the Annuziata.

OFFERS WARWICK CASTLE.

Countess Would Have Mrs. Mabelle-Gilman-Corey Take It Off Her Hands for a While.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Countess Warwick is eager to have Mrs. Mabelle Gilman-Corey take Warwick Castle off her hands for a while. The rent would have been a mere trifle for it is said the estate has been offered to the wife of the steel trust's president at £1000 a year. Warwick Castle is one of the finest places in England. It has wonderful gardens, is situated on a river, and is an objective point for American tourists who admire its wonderful pictures and objects of historic interests. The value of the paintings alone is $5,000,000. In the collection are many examples of Reynolds and the older English painter's, beside rare works by old continental masters.

MASONS MEETING ENDED.

Four New Members of Executive Council Inducted Into Office at Washington.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—After two executive sessions today the Supreme Council for the southern jurisdiction, Scottish Rites Masons, adjourned late this afternoon to meet again in October, 1911. The most important action was to elect four members of the order to active membership on the Council. The new members were inducted into office with the impressive ritualistic ceremony of crowning. They are: William Busbey, Oklahoma; Melville R. Grant, Mississippi; John H. Cowles, Kentucky and A. C. Stewart, Missouri. All were vested with the powers of Inspector General.

STOP SCHOOL FOR HARVEST.

Classes Close While Children Help Pick and Pack Huge Colorado Fruit Crop.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

GRAND JUNCTION (Colo.) Oct. 23.—To harvest a crop of fruit, estimated to be worth $1,500,000, it was announced today that all public schools will be dismissed for two weeks, beginning Monday. The pupils in the Indian school and all public schools in the Grand Valley also will be given a vacation that they may hep relieve the shortage of pickers and packers. It is estimated that more than 10,000 men and women will be assisting in the harvesting, the crop of which is being shipped out at the rate of forty cars daily.

LOSS OVER HALF-MILLION.

STOCKTON, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The big winery of George West & Son, which was destroyed by fire early this morning, presented a desolate scene at daylight, and hundreds of people collected around the immense plant to watch the final efforts to keep the crushing plant and fermenting department from being burned. The brandy mixed with the wine, which escaped from the large vats, and the flames were carried in all directions by the burning brandy.

The workmen built small embankments and stopped the burning liquor from reaching some of the buildings. This move also saved a lot of the liquor, which was turned into ditches and cement reservoirs.

The wine which escaped from the vats, as well as that left in the partially-destroyed tanks, will be turned into brandy. A still and other machinery is already on the road and Frank A. West announced today that by next Tuesday the plant would begin work again. The greater part of the grapes have been crushed and the loss is unusually heavy. It is estimated that it will be about $600,000, covered by about 75 per cent. of insurance.

"COTTON TRUST" ATTACKED.

Latest "Octopus" Found in Oklahoma and Tentacles Are All Indicted by Uncle Sam.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

GUTHRIE (Okla.) Oct. 23.—Indictments were formally filed here today charging three of the largest cotton-purchasing, ginning and oil-mill concerns of Oklahoma with alleged violations of the Federal and State anti-trust laws.

The defendants are the Houghton & Douglas Company, W. H. Coyle Company and the Lawton Cotton Company, firms which control at least twelve other corporations.

The indictments will, it is said, affect seventy-five persons, including some of the most prominent men in the State. They were returned following a grand jury investigation, which has been proceeding under the direction of Atty.-Gen. West of Oklahoma.

JOY TURNS TO SORROW.

Man Announces Engagement in Morning and Is Seriously Injured in Afternoon.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

FRESNO, Oct. 23.—Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Johnson, parents of O. H. Johnson, who was seriously injured near San Leandro today, while watching the automobile races, live in Fresno, and Johnson resided here up to three years ago. The parents left tonight for Oakland.

This morning they received a letter from their son, announcing that he was to be married on the 20th of next month to Miss Grace Murphy of Alameda. In the afternoon word was received of his injury.

OBITUARY.

Gen. Alfred Orendorff.

SPRINGFIELD (Ill.) Oct. 23.—Gen. Alfred Orendorff, president of the State Historical Society, died here yesterday, aged 63 years. Gen. Orendorff served as a captain in the One Hundred and Thirty-third Illinois Infantry during the Civil War.

John Jackson Guthrie.

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] John Jackson Guthrie, a nonogenarian, who had resided in Sacramento since the early fifties, succumbed today at the home of his son, Henry E. Guthrie, chief of the Sacramento fire department. Natural weakness caused by his advanced years brought about death. He was born in Boone county, Mo., in 1819, and came around the Horn to California.

Mrs. W. S. Ladd.

PORTLAND, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. W. S. Ladd, the richest woman in Portland, if not in the entire Northwest, died this afternoon. Mrs. Ladd was the widow of the late William S. Ladd, one of the most prominent bankers in the Northwest. Her interest in her late husband's estate, consisting of realty and bank stock, is estimated at $5,000,000. Mrs. Ladd was about 80 years old, and while she had been failing for some time past her death was sudden. She came to Oregon with her husband in 1853, and had lived here continuously ever since.

Thomas Coman.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Thomas Coman, who was Mayor of New York City in 1868, is dead of pneumonia, at his home here. Dr. Coman was one of the leading political figures in this city twenty-five years ago, and was president of the board of aldermen when Mayor Hoffman resigned in 1868, Mr. Coman serving one year as Mayor in the unexpired term.

Alfred R. Whitney.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—The death is announced of Alfred R. Whitney, who for thirty years has been one of the most conspicuous men in the country in the iron and steel trade. On his retirement as general eastern agent for Carnegie steel company a position he held since 1880, Mr. Whitney established a country residence at Morristown, N. J., where he died. Mr. Whitney entered the steel business in 1865 and soon became perhaps the largest single contracting agent in the United States, accumulating a large fortune through numerous foreign and domestic orders. He early became an ally of Andrew Carnegie, and at the time of the formation of the United States Steel Corporation he held a large block of stock in the Carnegie Steel Company.

Rear-Admiral Henry Erben.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Read-Admiral Henry Erben, U.S.N., retired, died here today, aged 77. He entered the navy in 1848 and served through the Civil War with a brilliant record.

Michael J. Dougherty.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—Michael J. Dougherty, superintendent of streets of the city of Chicago since 1897, and prominent in Democratic politics of the municipality, died suddenly here last night.

LOCK UP MILLIONAIRE.

Wealthy Banker of Alaska Held by Police Until His Sanity Is Determined.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SEATTLE, Oct. 23.—Samuel A. Bonnifield, a banker of Fairbanks, Alaska, whose fortune is estimated at $3,000,000, rushed into police headquarters today and demanded protection from his enemies, who, he said, were pursuing him.

Bonnifield was locked up, and a commissioner will investigate his mental condition.

Bonnifield is one of the best known of the Alaska and Klondike gold fields pioneers. He established the first saloon and gambling house in Dawson in the spring of 1897, and, in one winter cleared $500,000. He was at one time the richest man in the North.

WATCH DREDGERS.

LAW TO BE ENFORCED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Hearing that the hydraulic mining companies are about to resume operations this winter, the Anti-Débris Commission today appointed a large number of watchmen to patrol the mining districts for the purpose of keeping close tab on the operations, and reporting at once if the law is being violated. The commission has the situation well in hand now, and does not want the mines to get headway, having found by experience that operations are hard to check when once under way. The commission also received word from the Anti-Dredge Committee concerning the gold-mining dredger, which is carrying on its business in such way as to injure the river. As soon as evidence is complete prosecution will be started.

GRANT'S PASS (Or.) Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Stealing a sleeping baby from the home of Arthur Conklin, a publisher, a burglar awaited until the child had been missed and the family had rushed forth in search of it, and then reëntered the house and looted the silverware and other valuables. The babe was found in a nook on the ground of the place where the burglar had hidden it, the searchers being attracted by its cries. Only ten minutes elapsed between the beginning of the search and the return of the family to the house with the child, but the burglar had worked quickly and was gone with his loot.

Whyte of the San Francisco Golf and Country Club won the amateur tournament on the links of the San Francisco Golf and Country Club today and Willie Anderson, a former national champion, was successful in the professional event. Whyte won from F. C. Newton of the Claremont Country Club and Anderson defeated MacDonald Smith, the professional of the Claremont Country Club.

Both matches were well contested, and had the interest of the enthusiasts from start to finish. These were the final matches of the tournament, which has been in progress since last Wednesday. Anderson defeated Smith by a score of 5 up and 3 to play, and Whyte won from Newton, 4 up and 3 to play.

As a result of his victory, Anderson was awarded first money, which amounted to $750. Smith took $350 for the loser's end. Whyte took the John A. Hammersmith trophy, emblematic of the Portola amateur championship, and Newton won the Shreve trophy by being the runner up in the tournament.

Whyte's victory over Newton came in the nature of a surprise, as Newton has been practically invulnerable in the past. There were no excuses to offer for the loser, however, as he played god golf. Whyte, who in the past has been considered a rather poor tournament player, showed his best form in this match. He had none of the nervousness which has characterized his play in the past, and his driving and putting were equally good.

He assumed an early lead in the morning round, and when the eighteenth hole was completed he was 6 up on Newton, Whyte completing the round in 76. Newton's game improved somewhat in the afternoon, but he could not overcome the long lead of his opponent, and Whyte finally won by a score of 4 to 2.

Anderson won his match from McDonald Smith largely through his longer tournament experience. Smith played well all day, but he realized that he was in a final match, where considerable money was involved, and consequently was nervous. Anderson was 3 up at the end of the morning round, and he increased this lead in the afternoon to 5 and 3.

SLOPE BRIEFS.

Tried by Court-martial.

MANILA, Oct. 23.—A court-martial with Rear-Admiral Nazro presiding, sat at Cavite today, and tried Surgeon Francis W. F. Wieber on the charge of having used abusive language to a brother officer.

Routed by Flames.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—Two hundred Portola visitors were driven from their beds in the Hotel Irwin early this morning by a fire which started in the restaurant on the ground floor. The fire did not reach the rooms, and no one was injured. The damage was slight.

Portuguese Men-o'-War.

TACOMA (Wash.) Oct. 23.—Capt. Charles Pinkham, of the British steamer Riverton, which arrived here last night from Bahia Blanca, reports that between Point Reyes and Cape Flattery, millions of "Portuguese men-of-war"—jellyfish, with sails—were sighted.

DETROIT YOUTH IMMORAL.

Conditions Very Lax in City Selected by National Y.M.C.A. Committee as Typically American.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DETROIT, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Moral conditions among the youth of Detroit are described as very lax and are severely arraigned in a report of the National Y.M.C.A. Committee.

Detroit was selected by the Y.M.C.A. as a typical American city, where such a research would not only benefit local conditions, but helpfully serve in the work in all other cities of the country.

The results of the investigation can be briefly summarized as follows:

Boys of rich parents are no better morally than those from poor homes. Middle-class boys are better off than either.

Girls are in many cases as lacking in morality as boys.

Newsboys and boys of the industrial districts patronize saloons and cheap theaters freely.

Girls at amusement parks lure boys to evil.

Suggestive and immoral pictures are displayed for the temptation of the boys who visit penny picture booths.

Poolrooms are a stepping-stone to evil.

Fifty to seventy-five per cent. of high-school boys are habitual smokers.

Indecent literature and pictures are circulated freely, especially among high-school boys.

Boarding houses should be regulated.

BLOODSHED FEARED.

Factions Taking Sides in Louisiana Murder Case Threaten Battle of Clans.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. FRANCISVILLE (La.) Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Before Dr. E. C. McKowen is convicted of the murder of the lunatic, E. K. Judson, whose body was found near here last Sunday night, it is feared that there will be outbreaks between opposing factions in Feliciana parish that will result in bloodshed. State officials await developments with trepidation, knowing the people.

Friends of the McKowens, constituting a powerful faction here, who have been wrought up five years over charges against Dr. McKowen that he wrote threatening letters to many persons in the parish, have reached the limit of endurance, now that a murder accusation has been lodged against him.

The murder of Judson and the jailing of Dr. McKowen has resulted in alignment of clans of opposing belief over the doctor's culpability. All that averts a clash is the refusal of interested persons to discuss the Judson tragedy.

Meanwhile the parish authorities are exerting themselves to link a chain of evidence against Dr. McKowen that will convict him of Judson's murder.

OUR HORN OF REJOICING IS A BOOST FOR LOS ANGELES!

IT'S a boost for Los Angeles for The Times to be able to make and substantiate the boast that it prints more paid advertising matter than any other daily newspaper in the United States, "bar none."

The record printed from month to month consists of figures compiled by a leading newspaper in each of the cities named, and their accuracy is indisputable.

The following detailed statement shows the aggregate volume of advertising printed during the month of September, 1909, by each of the various newspapers named:

COOK AFTER BARRILL.

judged as much from what other men told me as from what Mr. Barrill told me. Mr. Printz told me that when Dr. Cook and Mr. Barrill returned from their trip and rejoined him that Barrill said:

"'I want to introduce to you the man who went to the top of Mt. McKinley—Dr. Cook. Congratulate the doctor.'

[Signed] "C. G. BRIDGFORD."

DR. COOK WON'T NOTICE ATTACK.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DULUTH (Minn.) Oct. 23.—Commander Peary's latest move in the polar controversy, his dispatch to Washington friends regarding the Rasmussen story, brought nothing but a nod from Dr. Cook when he learned of it here today. The doctor intimated that it was unlikely that he would take any particular notice of the attack on the Danish explorer's report.

Neither could Dr. Cook be induced to say anything regarding the dispatch from Missoula that his agents in Montana had secured satisfactory evidence that Barrill's affidavit was the result of "inducements." His only comment on that dispatch was that Gen. Weed evidently had been mistaken or misquoted regarding his going West, as it would be impossible for the explorer to go to Montana before the latter part of November, and possibly not until the middle of December.

Dr. Cook will go directly to New York from Minneapolis, Monday night, and will devote his time to preparing his report on the North Pole trip for submission to the scientists. After that is done he will feel at liberty to take up the Mt. McKinley matter in Montana, or wherever else it may seem best to go about it. Dr. Cook also dictated a message to Prof. Torp of the University of Copenhagen. The text of the message is:

"Hope to send Mr. Lonsdale with data and records in about a month. Instruments cannot be sent until next year.

[Signed] "FREDERICK A. COOK."

STOP LECTURES.

Dr. Cook stated that his lecture tour will be abandoned for the purpose of completing the data as early as possible to be forwarded to the University of Copenhagen. These data and records will be officially passed upon by the Royal Geographical Society of Copenhagen. As yet these scientists have not examined the full and complete records of the doctor. These records he is now working upon.

The instruments, regarding which there has been so much comment, will be sent for next June, according to a statement made by Dr. Cook today. This will bring the instruments to this country some time next September. Dr. Cook prefers to let the members of the Royal Geographical Society pass upon his complete records rather than engage in any further controversy. In the meantime he says he will leave his case to the American people.

ASKS PROFESSOR TO CLIMB MOUNTAIN.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

TOPEKA (Kan.) Oct. 23.—A special to the State Journal from Lawrence, Kan., says Dr. Frederick A. Cook wired Prof. L. L. Dyche from Duluth, Minn., today as follows:

"Will be pleased to have you join Mt. McKinley expedition. The details of that expedition will be undertaken shortly."

Prof. Dyche wired his acceptance.

SAYS RASMUSSEN BADLY MISTAKEN.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Commander Robert E. Peary, the Arctic explorer, has telegraphed to scientific friends here that it was impossible for Knud Rasmussen, the Danish explorer, to have seen any of the members of the Dr. Cook party and that any information which Rasmussen received was therefore not at first hand.

That the story told in Rasmussen's report of his impressions of Dr. Cook, as recently made public by Mrs. Rasmussen at Copenhagen, lacks authority, is the substance of Peary's latest message.

The dispatch came from Peary a day or two ago, and it has been scrupulously kept secret. Efforts to procure a copy of the dispatch were unavailing.

It is known, however, that the telegram was sent by Peary from Maine, after he had carefully read the report of Rasmussen, and that it is intended to discount what the Danish official, Rasmussen, had to say in support of his belief in the full achievement of Dr. Cook's ambition to reach the goal at the farthest north.

Rasmussen did not assert any direct communication with Ah-Pe-Lah and I-Took-a-Shoo. The message from Peary is intended to show the impossibility of Rasmussen having had any direct communication with those two members of the Cook expedition in its final dash. Any information which Rasmussen received, Commander Peary points out, went through two or three others before reaching Rasmussen.

This filtering of information through indirect channels, instead of its coming to Rasmussen at first hand, has given considerable importance in the weighing of the polar controversy by members of the scientific colony here, particularly in view of the widespread interest aroused by Rasmussen's contribution to the rival claims of the honor of unfurling the flag at the pole.

FRAUD SUSPECTED.

BASIN (Wyo.) Oct. 23.—At the urgent request of both prosecution and defense in the Ten Sleep murder cases, in which seven prominent cattlemen are charged with the murder of three sheep men, Judge Parmalee has ordered an investigation of the grand jury box and jury list. It is charged that eighty-two names were erased fraudulently from the jury list and were abstracted from the jury box.

Cure Your Rheumatism

Costs Nothing to Try.

Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Pain in the Back, have been cured, in the real meaning of the word, by a little Stillingia, Iodine of Potassium, Poke Root, Guaiac Resin and Sarsaparilla. Anyone, even a young child, can take these remedies in any reasonable amount with perfect safety, and the results have been found to be astonishing. It has been proven that this combination makes up the best rheumatism remedy in existence, having actually cured many stubborn cases of over 30 and 40 years' standing—even in persons of old age.

The five ingredients mentioned above prepared with great accuracy and skill not only in regard to proportion but also in selecting the best material, have been put up in compressed tablet form, and is called "Gloria Tonic." All good druggists keep it.

If you suffer from any form of uric acid in the blood, and have Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, this is the way to drive it out of your system in quick time.

Dr. Rice Makes Good

Miss Belle Mitchell, 115 S. Olive St., Los Angeles, says:

This certifies I had a severe attack of astigmatism, which caused headaches and dizziness. My sight failed; could not see to read at all by night. My position as public school teacher was advised to give up by prominent oculists, as my eyesight was in imminent danger. My friends advised me to consult DR. RICE, leading Specialist. After wearing his famous PERFECTLY BROUND LENSES for six months and using his liquid eye remedy, my headaches disappeared and eyesight improved, so now have no trouble whatever with my eyes. Can now read all night without eye strain. I heartily recommend DR. RICE to my friends. Dr. Rice is located at 500½ S. Broadway, opposite Fifth St. Store.

A Beautiful Complexion

Is Dependent Upon An Absolutely Pure Condition of the Blood.

It is rare indeed to find a woman who does not desire to acquire a beautiful complexion, or to permanently maintain it, if she is so fortunate as to possess it naturally. It makes little difference how expensive and stylish may be the clothing she wears, or how much she may be adorned with costly jewelry, if her complexion is sallow, her cheeks covered with pimples or blackheads and dark, semi-circles under the eyes, all efforts to make herself beautiful and attractive are entirely wasted.

The woman who is the happy possessor of a clear, clean, unblemished complexion, and a rosy, healthy color of the cheeks, is the envy of all her sex less fortunate than she. The fair sex spend thousands of dollars every year in their efforts to secure and preserve a fair skin and perfect complexion.

Powders, cosmetics, facial creams, without limit, are purchased and used on the cheeks in endeavoring to get rid of pimples, blotches, blackheads, liver-spots, and various other blemishes, completely overlooking the fact that all of these skin disorders are due to an impoverished and depraved condition of the blood, which must be purified and renovated in order to get rid of the unsightly skin diseases.

It is equally absurd to resort to facial massage with fancy, perfumed cold creams, or steaming the face in hot vapors, or using electro-vibratory massage in an attempt to improve the circulation of blood through the face with the idea of making the cheeks rosy.

Local treatment is simply a waste of time and money. Ladies who desire to gain and retain a smooth, clear skin, unaffected by blemishes of any kind, should use STUART'S CALCIUM WAFERS, which act upon the system generally, and upon the blood specifically, relieving it of all the impurities which float upon its current, and which are sent out through the poles of the skin by the blood in its efforts to eliminate the foreign matter, to the detriment and damage of the complexion.

These marvelous, little blood-purifying wafers will clear the roughest and most thickly blemished skin of every form of cutaneous disease in a remarkably short time, and persons who have been trying for years to rid themselves of pimples, blackheads etc., will be agreeably surprised and pleased at the rapidity and completeness with which they do their work.

Purchase a box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers from your druggist today, price 50 cents, then send us your name and address for free trial package. Address F. A. Staurt Co., 175 Stuart Building, Marshall, Mich.

A WISCONSIN PIONEER

Says Pe-ru-na is "Worth its Weight in Gold."

John Paulin, Sr., Says: "Peruna Cured My Catarrh"

Mr. John Paulin, Sr., a pioneer of Port Washington, Wis., 119 Franklin St., is held in high esteem by the residents of that place. He is one of the oldest citizens. In a recent letter he says:

"I have used Peruna with good results for coughs and colds which troubled me every fall and winter. It has also cured my catarrh, which always became worse when affected with but a slight cold. I am recommending Peruna because it is worth its weight in gold."—Mr. John Paulin, Port Washington, Wisconsin.

Pe-ru-na is a Catarrhal Tonic Especially Adapted to the Declining Powers of Old Age.

Hale and hearty old age means simply healthy organs and healthy functions retained beyond the usual time.

As a rule, at the age of 60 or 70 years, the functions begin to wane and the various organs to lose their natural power.

This need not occur. At least not in all cases. Many a man and woman have retained their health and vigor much later in life.

We have on file several letters from octogenarians who have found Peruna of priceless value to them as their declining years advanced.

Has Reached Four Score Years and Weighs 156 Pounds.

Mr. Levi Kegg, Rainsburg, Pa., writes: "Your medicine has done me so much good I intend to keep it on hand all the time.

"I had all the symptoms of systemic catarrh. My eyes were red and inflamed, my throat, stomach and bowels troubled me, was nervous, had nervous headaches. I am now entirely cured by Peruna.

"I am eighty years old, and I never weighed more than 140, but now I weigh 156 pounds.

STRADDLE.

NO "GOO GOO" COUNCIL SLATE.

That Is, Not One Bearing the Official Watermark.

But the Municipal League Will Give Real "Dope."

Boss Lissner Wins His Fight Against Indorsement.

Boss Lissner pulled the throttle himself last night at the Good Government Organization meeting, and when he blew the whistle everybody got off the track. The result was that the convention—that is, the meeting—indorsed the Lissner plan of not indorsing any candidates for Council. Seventy-five of the 194 precinct committeemen were present and voting, and fifty of them stuck to the Lissner programme.

While there will be no indorsement by the organization, the little boss stated that the Municipal League, which, cross his heart, is absolutely non-political and unbiased and sweet and pure, will issue within a few days a "dope sheet" and send a copy to each member of the G.G.O.

The names of Council candidates picked by the Lissner machine will appear in this sheet, the favored ones indicated by crosses, while "double crosses" will mark such Good Government candidates as Frederick Freeman Wheeler, the well-known Prohibitionist, who is too good for the Earl-Lissner gang; also John T. Pope and the rest who wouldn't take orders and get out of the race by withdrawing their nominating petitions, thus putting the organization in an awkward plight.

BOSS LISSNER IN CAB.

In climbing up into the cab with his overalls on, Lissner modestly said he thanked the "awganization" for the "honah" it had conferred on him; thanked it "hahtily" for permitting him to take the place of Police Commissioner Graham, who, unfortunately, had to quit because of the heavy load he carried as a member of Uncle Aleck's booze-fighting brigade. It is a "hahd" place to fill, said Lissner, referring to the running of the machine. And he knows.

"Now, let's all pull together," said Councilman Wallace of the Executive Committee and of the Committee of Eighteen, which, after a dozen stormy meetings, failed to agree on indorsement or non-indorsement.

"Let us all pull together," he repeated, turning to the twenty-four candidates for Council, who had seats in the rear of the hall, separated from the delegates to the conven—that is, the precinct committeemen who had votes at the meeting.

"Each of you candidates for the Council get out and work as hard as you can for yourselves, and twice as hard for Alexander, then we will have the good government for which we are working."

Cobbler Coulson of the Sixth "locality, formerly known as a ward," and others from other "localities," looked rather glum, but they did not have the privilege of the floor and could say nothing.

FINE FOR UNCLE ALECK.

But this is what they thought—and they said it out loud after Boss Lissner had stopped bossing for the evening: If each one of the twenty-four Good Government candidates for Council puts in his best licks for himself and for Alexander, too, why, Uncle Aleck will have the benefit of their combined strength and will get the whole cheese, while each of them will get only one twenty-fourth of the total vote.

That is, if each candidate can persuade 200 persons to vote for him as candidate for the Council, he will have exactly 200 votes, while Uncle Aleck will have 4800. Fine for Uncle Aleck and the gang that writes veto messages for him.

Boss Lissner came back from San Francisco on the jump to help the Committee of Eighteen "get off right" after it had battled for ten days or so in an effort to agree whether to indorse or not to indorse a Council ticket. First the committee voted to indorse, then not to indorse, then to indorse, and finally it turned in a report showing eight in favor of indorsing and nine against.

During the meeting last night two members of the committee who had not been at the final conference of that body added their names to the majority against indorsement.

This made eleven of the Committee of Eighteen against indorsement and eight in favor.

PROBLEM IN ARITHMETIC.

"Many of you may wonder how a committee of eighteen can cast nineteen votes," said Lissner, getting out his "Ready Reckoner" and turning to the section on addition, "but you see I am ex-officio a member of the committee, and I was one of the eleven." [Cheers.]

The report of the committee was presented by its chairman, F. V. Owen, who remarked that, while there never had been harmonious opinion on the question, the meetings always had been harmonious. Owen moved that the report be adopted, but Will D. Gould, who always is shy about speaking and who always takes the most inconspicuous place in the hall, right in front of the speaker's table, offered an amendment to the effect that the report be received and the committee discharged with thanks.

Charles B. Keiser of Precinct 26 moved that the report be referred back to the committee with instructions that it recommend indorsement by the convent—ah, meeting. But the boss promptly ruled this motion out of order. Gould's motion then carried.

Committeeman Slocum of Precinct 20 moved that the body proceed to indorse nine candidates for Council. He was ruled out of order.

Committeeman Kase—Case with a "K"—moved that the chair appoint a committee of nine with instructions to recommend next Saturday night nine candidates for Council. But Lissner could not hear a second to the motion.

NEWBY AN INSURGENT.

[illegible] Newby of the Church Federation, also a committeeman, moved that the Committee of Eighteen be reappointed with instructions to indorse nine candidates and report later. Another non-programmer leaped up with a motion that the meeting indorse the nine candidates right there and then.

Police Commissioner Topham of Uncle Aleck's cabinet favored the Newby motion, modifying it to the extent that the committee report at once. "They can present the names of the nine men they favor within fifteen minutes," he said.

"The Good Government people do want an indorsement of Council candidates," declared W. T. Harris of the Committee of Eighteen. "I have talked with fifty of them, and only one was against indorsement. Twenty-four candidates are entitled to the support of the organization. You are going to divide your vote if you do not pick out nine of them."

Mr. Harris apparently does not read the papers that have already picked the slate of nine Council candidates.

Committeeman Woodbury of Precinct 77 insisted that the G.G.O. people in his part of the city are opposed to indorsement. "It is very probable that we shall carry nine candidates through the primary election, and maybe more. If we carry nine through, we shall elect eight of them at the December election."

OUGHT TO INDORSE ALL.

Slocum of Precinct 20, who evidently offends Boss Lissner because he talks out so plainly, said that as the organization already had indorsed all the rest of the city ticket, it should be consistent and indorse a Council slate. "The people want to be advised by us how to vote," he said, "because they cannot make an investigation into the merits of the many candidates. We shall get left if we scatter our vote."

Another case of a man who did not know that the Municipal League "petit bleu" will carry the "dope" on nine good men and true.

Committeeman Forbes opposed indorsement because it is not in accord, he said, with the spirit of the direct primary law. (Of course it was all right to indorse a Mayoralty and other candidates.) "We are going to have two elections," he said, "and we have eighteen candidates out of our twenty-four at the primaries. I believe we can get twelve of them through the primaries."

Committeeman Newby said the logic of Forbes would lead to disruption of the Good Government organization. "The constitution of the organization," he said, "states that the purpose is to select the best men for office; if we do not, what are we here for?

"If we adjourn without indorsing Council candidates, the general public will assume that there is no choice among the twenty-four and they will scatter their votes. Either select nine or say that there are twenty-four men who are worthy of support. Shall it be left to two or three newspapers to select the men?"

WALLACE SEES A WAVE.

Councilman Wallace then said that the people were capable of making the selections and that a wave of enthusiasm will sweep over the city when they find they can pick their own ticket.

Committeeman Hughes of Precinct 78, a candidate for Council, who, unfortunately, does not seem to have the pleasure of Boss Lissner's acquaintance, here arose to speak.

"The name, please," asked the boss, like a shop girl taking an order for soap.

"Hughes of 78," replied the big candidate, glaring at the chairman. All that Hughes had to say was that there should be no indorsement, that he is the manager of a pigeon farm and an ostrich ranch, and that he would please like a few votes.

Committeeman Phillis of Precinct 15, who at a previous meeting remarked that his is the toughest precinct—physically—in the city, said it would be a grave political blunder not to indorse a ticket of nine.

Whit for the Municipal League blue book, Phillis, dear.

Capt. Louis Hansen of San Pedro and several others spoke against indorsement, and a number of others in favor thereof, but Lissner's fifty out of seventy-five of the total committee of 194 stuck by the non-indorsement programme, and that settled it. For the real ticket, watch the biographies in the recall organettes.

COBBLER SQUELCHED AGAIN.

Cobbler Coulson, who's a good, old soul, tried to edge in a word along toward the last, as he did at Marshall Stimson's hairbrush meeting of the week before, but Lissner gently sat on him, and the shoemaker candidate from the Sixth "locality formerly known as a ward," meekly subsided.

For several minutes Coulson had tried from a seat down among the delegates—er, committeemen—to catch the chairman's eye.

"I think," said the boss, finally permitting his eye to be caught, "that it is better for candidate not to talk."

"I think so, too," remarked Coulson, saluting the boss, and retiring to the rear of the hall.

"Will this organization give publicity to any sort of list?" inquired Committeeman Gates.

"This organization, if you will pardon the chair," replied the boss, "is a political organization and has the general respect and confidence of the people"—here he paused—"but there is in the city a non-political organization, which has undertaken to collate (one of Uncle Aleck's veto words) the records of candidates and send them to voters. This will take in all candidates for the Council, no others."

It was announced that Saturday night meetings will be held at Symphony Hall until the December election, and that the G.G.O. will soon move into larger headquarters.

RETURNED LOOT TO LAUNDRESS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OMAHA (Neb.) Oct. 23.—William Eschle, at whose home Mrs. Thomas Wendt, an aged woman, was robbed of over $7000 yesterday, while she was doing the Eschle family washing, today confessed having taken the money and returned it all. Mrs. Wendt reported her loss at $6300, but the amount proved to be $7650.

HOLD-UP STORY FAKED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PEORIA (Ill.) Oct. 23.—Driven by a sudden impulse to get rich quick, James Mahan, aged 25, night agent of the American Express Company at the Union Station here, originated a fake hold-up story, after robbing the company safe of $4000 in currency, early today. After sewing $1000 in large bills in the lining of his coat sleeves, and scattering the remainder of the loot about in obscure places, throughout the Union depot, he called for the police and declared that he had been held up, at the point of a revolver, and robbed of the money. During his investigation of the alleged hold-up, Detective Wombacher had occasion to grasp Mahan by the arm. The crinkling of the bills in the coat sleeve under the grasp of the detective, led him to suspect Mahan. With the assistance of fellow-officers, Wombacher overpowered Mahan and the money was recovered. Mahan then led the officers to the places where he had hidden the $3000. He admitted he had opened two packages, one of $3000, and the other of $1000. He destroyed the wrappers and could not tell just where the money was addressed to. A State warrant was issued charging him with embezzlement.

DENIES BELL COUP.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CLEVELAND (O.) Oct. 23.—James S. Brailey, Jr., of Toledo, denied emphatically today that the Bell Telephone Company interests had secured the independent companies controlled by Brailey, through his recent purchases. Mr. Brailey added that the United States Company would do everything in its power in behalf of the independent interests, and that his object in gaining control was for the sole purpose of giving the independents additional protection. In addition to acquiring control of the United States Company, Mr. Brailey has practically completed negotiations for control of the Cuyahoga Telephone Company, the local independent concern, and one of the most important feeders of the United States Company. Asked whether he contemplated a national organization of independent companies, Mr. Brailey said that was a matter he was not considering at this time.

TO HOLD HEALER'S BODY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

HASTINGS (Neb.) Oct. 23.—The body of Charles McLean, or Francis Schlatter, the alleged divine healer, who died here Thursday, will be kept within the jurisdiction of the Adams county court until his affairs are legally settled. The county judge says the man's effects will be guarded until a legal disposition is made clear. A bank book shows a deposit of $300 in a New York bank. An envelope is held by the Bay State Trust Company, of Boston, which may contain money. No word has been received from Boston.

FATALITY RESTORES FATHER.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

TERRE HAUTE (Ind.) Oct. 23.—A man killed recently by a train at Edwardsville, Ill., was supposed to have been Jacob Klein until a son of the latter was summoned. He found the dead man was not his father but later located the parent, whose whereabouts had been unknown to the family for fifteen years, at the county poor farm.

CONSPIRACY CHARGE FAILS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—Michael Heitler, Samuel Bloom and Louis Kirsch, who were on trial on charges of conspiracy were acquitted yesterday after the jury was out for four hours. It returned a verdict that they were not guilty of trying to induce Morris Schatz to leave Chicago so that he could not be a witness in the trial of Inspector McCann, who was found guilty of accepting tribute from resort keepers.

Rudolph A. Nieberding, German Minister of Justice, resigned his office yesterday because of his advancing years. He was born in 1838.

What Is Hyomei?

You Have Heard About the Catarrh Cure Sold by Druggists

Hyomei is a wonderful antiseptic, so powerful that it promptly destroys germ life, yet its action on the mucous membrane is extremely soothing and healing. It relieves catarrh in five minutes; it cures in a few weeks or money back.

It is made chiefly of eucalyptus and eucalyptol taken from the eucalyptus forests of inland Australia. The medical profession knows that eucalyptus is an absolutely certain germ destroyer, and with the active principles of eucalyptus as a base Hyomei is made more efficient, pleasant and quick acting by the addition of Thymol, an antiseptic and disinfectant largely employed in the Listerian System. Guaiacol and other important medicinal agents are also included in the Hyomei formula, which, without doubt, is the greatest destroyer of catarrh germs the world has ever known.

Hyomei is a powerful, penetrating antiseptic that is pleasant to use. It does not contain a particle of cocaine, opium or any habit-forming or injurious drug.

No dosing the stomach when you use Hyomei. Just breathe it in through the small inhaler that comes with each outfit. Sold by leading druggists everywhere, at $1.00 for complete outfit.

MI-O-NA

Charcoal Lozenges Powerful Absorbents

Offensive Breath and Stomach Gases Cannot Exist When They Are Used.

Charcoal, by virtue of its porus nature, takes up gases mechanically just as a sponge takes up water. Its capacity in this respect is in proportion to the number and fineness of its pores. Charcoal made from poplar, beechwood, vegetable ivory, cocoanut shells and willowwood, is a compact, heavy substance, having a metallic luster, the pores being quite invisible.

Chemical tests of various kinds performed by expert chemists have revealed the fact that charcoal made from willow wood, is not only absolutely harmless, but it is by far the most powerful absorbent of all kinds of gases. Certain other woods, mentioned above, are used by some manufacturers in making charcoal, and besides not being half as effective in absorbing stomach-gases, have also been found to be positively harmful to the digestive system.

Willow-wood charcoal is, then, the very best for the purpose of absorbing excessive gas of the stomach, removing intestinal flatus, and purifying foul breath. Charcoal to be effective against gastric flatulence must be introduced among the gases of the stomach in the same state as when fresh from the crucible. The means of effecting this is to compress them into soluble lozenges, so that after being dissolved in the mouth and swallowed, the charcoal is "set free," at once begins its work of oxidizing and absorbing foul gases, and also, through its antiseptic properties, of purifying the entire alimentary tract.

It is definitely known that the absorbent and cleansing action of charcoal is protracted and continued through the intestinal system as well as in the stomach, and it proves beneficial there also.

In STUART'S CHARCOAL LOZENGES we have a gas-absorbing remedy which readily takes precedence over all others. The charcoal used in them is the very best that can be obtained. They are composed of the finest young willow-wood, converted into charcoal by the special, carbonizing Stuart Process, and before being compressed into Lozenges, the powdered charcoal is rendered sweet and thoroughly agreeable to the taste by being mixed with pure honey, and the result is a product equally as palatable as candy.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges have attained a wide popularity among the people, millions of boxes being sold every year. They have, over and over again proven their efficiency as rapid and powerful absorbents of foul stomach-gases, relieving and curing flatulence, belching, or the eructation of gases, and finally in the purification of offensive breath.

Buy a package of these little lozenges from your druggist for 25 cents and forward us your name and address for free sample package. Address, F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

A Hotel of 600 Rooms and 600 Bath Rooms

California is unique in many things, and offers to the visitors many things which cannot be seen elsewhere in the world. One of her latest claims of excellence, however, is having the only large hotel in the world in which every room has its attached bath. This is the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco. The Fairmont was originally designed under the direction of a woman—its owner—Mrs. Oelrichs, who was Miss Fair. Perhaps because Mrs. Oelrichs appreciated the conveniences which appeal to the women, she had every room built with its attached bath and clothes closet. Both the bathrooms and closets are of immense size—large enough to delight the heart of every woman. Another feature of the Fairmont's construction is that it has no inside rooms—every room opens upon the streets, with city or sea view, or upon our great open-to-the-sky court. Every room is equipped with local and long-distance telephone; also telephone connection to the dining rooms. Despite these many conveniences the rates at the Fairmont are low. For $2.50 per day and upwards European plan, one may enjoy a great room with attached baths. Richly furnishes suites of parlor, sitting room, bedroom and bath may be had for as little as $10 per day and upward. The Fairmont is operated by the Palace Hotel Company, owners of the Palace Hotel on Market street.

RAILWAY RECORD.

SQUARE DEAL TO RAILROADS

of National Association of Commissioners.

Twenty-first Annual Convention in Washington.

Important Session in History of Order.

DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

INGTON, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive patch.] The twenty-first annual ention of the National Association Railway Commissioners, which will held in this city beginning Novem- is likely to be the most important in the history of the organization. In the early years of the association and prior to the passage of Hepburn amendment the convention amounted to little more than re-, with a long junket at the expense of the railroads thrown in. the passage of the Hepburn amendment, which galvanized the Interstate Commerce Commission into useful life, and since the passage of many State laws giving State commissions greater regulating power, national organization has assumed important place in railway life.

The reports which its committees are awaited with considerable interest by the railroad managements by legislators, both State and national. This year the association has vital list of problems before and its reports are being carefully prepared with the view to giving them force and the influence they should have. Among the subjects which are carefully considered are the following: Powers, duties and work of State Railway Commissions; legislation, amendment of the act to regulate commerce, uniform classification, and rate making, car service demurrage, railroad taxes and for ascertaining the fair value of railroad property, railway capitalization, railroad statistics, construction and operating expenses of electric railways, safety appliances, delays in orders of railroad commissions, grade crossings and trespassing on railroads.

The committee on grade crossings prepared an exhaustive report signed by William J. Wood, commissioner of Indiana, as chairman. The committee strongly advocates the abolition of all grade crossings in the United States and urges all the State commissions to take the matter up at once. Interesting statistics are given relating to the slaughter and maiming of human beings on grade crossings which is declared to be the crowning disgrace of the present age. The committee, however, does not advocate drastic legislation which shall compel railroads to eliminate all grade crossings at once, irrespective of expense. On the other hand it is urged that each State commission take the matter up with a view of working it out as it seems best in view of the conditions which exist in each particular State.

Although the committee does not favor the railroads paying all the expense, but it is believed to be fair that the municipalities, the State and the county organizations should bear a portion of the expenses.

BANKS OUTLOOK GOOD.

RAILROAD HEAD OPTIMISTIC.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Albert J. [illegible] president of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, takes an optimistic view of the condition of business in the Northwest and the part the road's new extension to Puget Sound will play.

Business in the territory of both the St. Paul and Pacific Coast extension," he said, "far exceeds our expectations, notwithstanding the fact that the movement of grain is not so heavy as a year ago. The grain traffic is diminished not because the crop is smaller, but because the farmers have improved their financial condition so that they are now able to hold back for higher prices, and the result will be, of course, that our tonnage will be unusually heavy this winter. I expect to see all records broken for tonnage. The main line, 1400 miles long, reaching from the Missouri River to the Pacific Coast, is entirely completed, and we are now at work on [illegible] or 700 miles of branches. Most of these will be completed by the end of this year and they will all be finished by next July. About that time we will add a through passenger service. We are opening a through freight service now, but the passenger business is so far entirely for local RAILROAD ACTIVITY.

LONG ISLAND FARMER.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Officials of the railroad with offices in this city are interested in the success of the Long Island Railroad as a farmer. The corporation's experiment is likely to be repeated extensively on lands along the great railway systems throughout the country. After years' work on the eighty-seven acres of land purchased by the Long Island Railroad at Wading River and Medford, L. I., and converted into farms by the company, the two experimental farms have received [illegible] first, twenty-three second and six third prizes at the river head fair. By placing graduates of agricultural colleges in charge of the work, the railroad has demonstrated that scientific methods can turn waste lands into profitable money-winning farms.

LOS ANGELES KICKS.

THINKS RATES UNFAIR.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—The Associated Jobbers of Los Angeles, through their attorneys, filed a complaint yesterday with the State Railroad Commission, alleging that the Southern Pacific and Santa Fé discriminate against Los Angeles to the advantage of San Francisco, in rates to points in the lower San Joaquin Valley. The petition sets forth in effect the claim of Los Angeles that the San Joaquin Valley, south of should be included in its distributing territory.

FOLLOWING WATER.

BURLINGTON TO BUILD.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The management of the Burlington road has just ordered the construction of an additional 100 miles of track in the West, which will have an important bearing upon the development of the Big Horn Basin in Wyoming. The new line, upon which construction will soon be begun, will run south from Kirby, Wyo., through Thermopolis, and east as far as the Powder River, and making a connection with the Northwestern road.

In this territory there are, within a radius of sixty miles, fully 1,412,000 acres of land now opened by irrigation through government and private enterprises. The purpose of the new line is to give a through southwestern connection for freight and passengers and afford a competent route to the markets of the East.

HARRIMAN INHERITANCE TAX.

State Controller Nye Questions Authority to Collect on California Property.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Whether any proportion of the property of E. H. Harriman held in California is subject to the State inheritance tax law, even though the railroad king died outside of the boundaries of the State, is a question to which State Comptroller Nye is seeking answer.

"Probably no inheritance tax was ever collected in the United States where conditions were similar to what they are in the case of Mr. Harriman," said Comptroller Nye today. "It is simply a problem as to whether the State has right to collect the tax under the application of the State inheritance tax law, where the deceased person is a non-resident, but has left property in the State."

The suggestion for this exploration into the law to ascertain whether such tax would be legal came through an effort on the part of the State Tax Attorney of Illinois to collect the tax based on Harriman stock holdings in the Illinois Central and the Chicago & Alton railroads. Comptroller Nye wrote for information, but the reply was indefinite.

ROAD REINCORPORATED.

VALLEJO AND NORTHERN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] New articles of incorporation has been filed with the Secretary of State by the Vallejo and Northern Railroad, and work on the road was begun at Fairfield, in Solano county. The Vallejo and Northern will run from Vallejo north to Napa Junction, through Jamison Cañon to Cordelia, Solano county, through Fairfield, Cement and Broderick to Sacramento. This route is roughly estimated to be a distance of sixty-two miles. From the main line there will be four branches. One of these will be three miles long, and connect Fairfield and Suisun. Another will turn off at Cement and run northerly to Woodland, via Vacaville and Winters, a distance of thirty-five miles. Another will turn off near Davisville, pass through Davisville, and run to Woodland, seventeen miles. Still another branch will close the gap of three miles between the town of Dixon and the main line. Altogether, this makes 112 miles of railroad tributary to Sacramento and Vallejo. All the franchises have been acquired and depot sites purchased outright.

ORE ROAD TO BE BUILT.

CONSTRUCTION IN NEW MEXICO.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO (Tex.) Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] For the purpose of constructing a railroad in the Burro Mountains to develop a rich mineral section, a grading outfit has opened a camp near Tyrone, N. M. Persons in the employ of the Phelps-Dodge interests purchased the supplies for the outfit at Silver City, and this gave rise to the rumor that the construction was to be for the Phelps-Dodge company, the work also being in charge of James Douglas, who has been identified with that company. The new line, however, is being promoted in the name of the Chemung Mining Company, a Cole-Ryan interest, and it is reported here tonight that the railroad is for the Calumet and Arizona, another Cole-Ryan holding. The road may be built to Whitewater, to connect with the Santa Fé, or it may be built to Deming, N. M., to connect with the Southern Pacific. In any event, a line will be constructed giving outlets for ores for many rich mining properties.

Some Car Shortage.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—The American Railway's fortnightly statement, made public here today, shows a shortage of 23,481 cars in the East and South and a surplus of 35,977 in the West and Northwest.

SALOONS BACK BOURBONS.

Many Indiana Candidates Nominated by Liquor Interests of the State.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

INDIANAPOLIS (Ind.) Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Municipal officers and members of Common Council will be elected in all Indiana cities on Tuesday, November 2, and on the same day all towns will elect boards of trustees.

As an indication of the activity of the saloons in the fight through to their elective officers, some twenty-five candidates for Mayor owe their nominations to this element, and there are other candidates whom the liquor interests actively supported, but cannot be said to have really nominated. The majority of candidates thus nominated are Democrats, and some of them were especially active last year in working for the repeal of the local option law, but in a few instances the nominees are Republicans, but known to be in sympathy with the liquor interests.

TO TALK TO DRY FARMERS.

James J. Hill and Senator and Others Have Promised to Address Congress Next Week.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

BILLINGS (Mont.) Oct. 23.—Addresses to the Dry Farming Congress next week have been promised by Senator Clapp of Minnesota, James J. Hill of the Great Northern Railway, and President Howard Elliott of the Northern Pacific. Exhibits for the dry-farming exposition are coming in on every freight train.

Colorado Springs is the latest candidate for the 1910 congress. That city will send a strong delegation to advance its interests. The publications of the congress have just been granted second-class rates by the Potoffice Department.

HIS ART REALISTIC.

Youngster Fires Real Shots as Vivid Accompaniment to "Charge of the Light Brigade."

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

PORTLAND (Me.) Oct. 23.—Philip Hamilton, son of Mayor Hamilton of South Portland, caused a stir at a session of the Portland High School devoted to rhetorical exercises, when in reciting the "Charge of the Light Brigade" he emphasized his remarks by firing a number of shots from a revolver.

When he reached the line, "Cannon to right of them, cannon to left of them," he whipped a revolver from his pocket and began shooting.

The spectators were quieted before any one was hurt.

Failure to Pass Pending Budget Bill Bodes Disaster.

King Edward Openly Favoring the Measure.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "If the English House of Lords does not pass the pending budget bill, putting an end to the exemption from taxation which the estates of peers have enjoyed since the beginning of English history, there will be a revolution in England."

This was the prediction made by Dr. Stanton Coit of London at a luncheon given in his honor yesterday by the City Club. He declared that the English people are in a state of excitement without a parallel since the time of Gladstone, and that the appointment of 400 new peers by King Edward to replace the present ones is a possibility.

"The lords have been backed into a corner from which they cannot escape," he said. "Their great estates have been free from taxation for centuries, and the people have decided that the discrimination has lasted long enough. They put their demand for taxation in the budget because the bundget is the only thing the House of Lords cannot amend. Any other bill they could amend out of existence, but to this they can say only yes or no.

"And if they reject it there will be a revolution. There is no mistaking the temper of the people, and the King is on their side. They are not hampered by a written constitution, as you are over here, and when they make up their minds they want a thing they have it.

"King Edward has taken a greater interest in politics than has any English sovereign for a long time, and he is much more of a power than was Queen Victoria. He has been on the side of the Liberals since the beginning of his reign, while the lords have been unchangingly conservative. He has given the leaders of the House of Lords to understand that he wants them to pass the budget. The complications will be interesting, because the government will be left without funds, and even the King's salary will be cut off."

It is to the "snobbishness" of the working class that the lords look for their support, Dr. Coit declared.

"It is significant that while the lords have vonsistently vetoed every measure emanating from the Liberals, they have passed everything supported by the labor interests," he said. "It is the snobbishness of the working classes that has kept the lords entrenched as long as they have been, and they do not dare to offend them."

ROB CONVENT.

SACRED JEWELS GONE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CZENSTOCHOWA (Russian Poland) Oct. 23.—During the night robbers entered the chapel of the Pauline Convent here and despoiled the much-revered image of the Virgin of the Robe, with its pearls, the diamond-studded crown, and many votive offerings of jewels. The image itself was not damaged.

The objects stolen have an intrinsic value of several million roubles. Today the chapel, which had closed up on the discovery of the outrage, was surrounded by a great crowd of weeping and praying men and women.

The convent at Czenstochowa is famous for its representation of the virgin, and attracts probably 250,000 pilgrims annually. Formerly it was strongly fortified.

AWAIT LOMBROSO'S GHOST.

Famous Criminologist Promised Milan Society to Communicate With It After His Death.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

LONDON, Oct. 23.—A dispatch from Rome says the appearance of the ghost of the late Prof. Cesare Lombroso is being looked forward to with extraordinary interest by the Italian spiritualists. Before his death the professor announced that after his demise he would place himself in communication with the Milan Society for Psychical Research. He declared also that for this purpose he would make use of Eusapia Palladino, with whose aid he had conducted many experiments since 1895.

QUITS GREECE FOR GOOD.

Prince George, Who Has Resigned from Hellenic Navy, Advertising for Castle in Denmark.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Prince George of Greece, who has been in this city a long time as the guest of Prince Valdemar and who recently sent to the government at Athens his resignation as admiral of the Greek navy, is advertising in Copenhagen papers for a castle and country seat near this city. He offers 1,000,000 kroner ($250,000) for a suitable place. This tends to confirm the report that Prince George intends to leave Greece and pass the rest of his days in Denmark.

Reports have been current for some time that King George of Greece would abdicate because of the recent crisis caused by unpopular appointments in the army by Crown Prince Constantine, former commander-in-chief. It is not believed, however, that the powers would consent to such a step and probably he will remain on the throne, even if certain members of his family leave the country. Prince George is his second son.

TO MOVE BERLIN UNIVERSITY.

Kaiser Creates Uproar Among Germans by Proposal to Abandon Historic Site.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The leaders in German educational circles are surprised by the revelation that the Kaiser virtually has committed himself in support of a project for the removal of Berlin's famous university from its historic site in the center of the city.

The plan originated with the late Friederich Althoff, Minister of Education, who advocated converting the foremost educational institution of the empire into a "German Oxford," and taking it from the heart of the metropolis. It develops that the Kaiser has taken up Althoff's project and caused plans to be prepared and submitted to educational authorities, and to a number of his closest personal advisers. The site which he is said to favor is Dahlem, in the environs of the capital.

Lively opposition is developing among many Berlin people, who assert that abandonment of the present site near the royal castle, occupied longer than a century, would be an outrage against tradition. The building has been the scene of many historic events connected with the rise of the empire.

FOREIGN BRIEFS.

Toll of Cyclone.

CALCUTTA, Oct. 23.—Details have not as yet been received from the interior, but the best information is to the effect that the total deaths during the recent cyclone in Eastern Bengal, did not exceed 100, and that the fatalities included no Europeans.

The pleasant, purgative effect experienced by all who use Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, and the healthy condition of the body and mind which they create, makes one feel joyful.

Caffeine—in coffee—is a direct poison to the nerve centers of many highly organized persons.

It produces all sorts of disorders from stomach troubles, palpitation of the heart, kidney affection, etc., up to more intricate nervous troubles, such as paralysis.

The way to keep well is to leave off coffee and use Postum, which is a direct rebuilder of the nerve centers.

"The Owl sells nearly every drug store article for less than do the big down town stores in New York City." This remark was made recently by a prominent New York Druggist and we believe it. We often sell articles made in New York and goods imported from foreign countries by way of New York, and pay freight on them, and yet retail them for less than New York prices.

"The Owl" is figuring on VOLUME of business, and this can only be secure by "The Owl" way of selling RELIABLE GOODS at very popular prices—at the same time giving a service that is talked of from coast to coast, a well-directed modern service.

Study these offerings, then examine the goods at any of "The Owl" stores. That will surely convince you that "The Owl" does not exaggerate to sell goods.

DEDUCTIONS.

SLIM FINGERS LEFT IMPRINT.

Woman Sleuth Works to Solve Slashing Mystery.

Facts Point Strongly to an Attempt at Suicide.

Victim in Hospital, However, Appears Very Cheerful.

Lying swathed in bandages at the Westlake Hospital, Mrs. George Staehle of No. 818 Gladys avenue, whose throat was mysteriously slashed late last Sunday night, seems the last person in the world to have longed for death.

With bright, black eyes, roving eagerly from face to face, she seems in the best of spirits, yet yesterday, it is said, the detectives, who were given permission by Dr. Welbourn, for the first time, questioned the injured woman closely with a view of investigating the suicide theory.

Mrs. George Staehle, woman whose mysterious throat-slashing is now thought to have been done by herself in a fit of despondency.

The cheerful spirits, the neighbors have told the police, have come to Mrs Staehle since the mysterious attempt on her life, and that for some time prior the woman had seemed despondent.

Little Elsie, who is her mother's pride, has been under the doctor's care for many months, an operation on her left leg, which resulted in blood poison, may mean the loss of the use of that limb. This, coupled with many doctor bills resulting, seemed to have caused the mother much worry. To a friend she is said to have expressed the wish that she could end it all.

The shape of the fingers, which left their telltale imprint on the ledge of the window, by which the assailant is supposed to have gained access to the Staehle home, is said to resemble Mrs. Staehle's and the chain of circumstances slowly gathers around the woman, who seems the personification of cheerfulness.

The finger prints, which constitute the only tangible clew the police have to the crime, were made by slim fingers, and this fact first led to the theory that the perpetrator was a woman.

WOMAN SLEUTH ON CASE.

Few persons, except those directly connected with the investigation, know that the work of running down the would-be murderer, by means of the finger prints, is being undertaken by a woman.

She is a young, attractive woman at that, who looks more like a boarding-school girl than a feminine sleuth.

Miss Priscilla Evans, who is connected with the District Attorney's office, has had entire charge of the work of taking and judging the finger prints of those who have been connected with the case. Miss Evans has spent years in the study of the detection of crime by this means, and to her will be left the question of whether or not the marks left on the window sill were made by Mrs. Staehle.

Miss Evans, who has for eight years made a study of crime and criminals, is slim and frail-looking, but she is said to be one of the most clever detectives in the District Attorney's office.

"Had our office had a chance to work on the Staehle case from the start, I am sure we could have done more than we have toward clearing up the mystery that surrounds the attack on the woman. What a world of evidence we could have gotten from the razor with which the deed was done," said Miss Evans yesterday. "You know that every inch of smooth surface that a hand or finger comes in contact with preserves an impression, and this impression will remain for many hours

"Why," continued the young woman, "I have secured a good, clear outline seventeen hours after an impression was made."

Miss Priscilla, as she is known to the detectives of the city, stated that had the police taken the razor up by the extreme ends, thus eliminating any imprints of the fingers of those known to have handled it, the remaining marks would, by this process, be those of the party who sought Mrs. Staehle's life.

"You see," said Miss Priscilla, "there is no question, as to the accuracy of the finger-print system, and if we can find the fingers that made the marks on the window sill we can clear up a great many points, but of course, they might not necessarily have been made by the one who is responsible for the midnight attack. If we could have had the marks from the razor we would have been quite certain."

MR. SIMS ARRIVES.

J. H. Sims, the husband of the young woman who was wrongfully accused of the crime by Mr. Staehle, arrived in Los Angeles yesterday and immediately visited police headquarters in company with his wife.

Mr. Sims, who is manager of the Palace Hotel at Tonopah, took the first train for Los Angeles upon hearing of his wife's trouble.

"I cannot conceive of a single reason why my wife should have been accused of this crime," said Sims. "She was a close friend of Mrs. Staehle, and the one to whom the injured woman turned when in financial distress or trouble. I always kept Laura well supplied with money, and she has loaned Mrs. Staehle money a number of times."

Mrs. Sims when asked, said that Mrs. Staehle now owed her close to $50, but that, as Mrs. Staehle worried a great deal over the unpaid doctor bill, she had assured Mrs. Staehle only a few days before the trouble, that she was in no hurry for the money.

Mr. Sims said he regretted the imprisonment of his wife more on account of his little daughter, than for any other reason.

"The girls at school and her playmates have been teasing her about her mamma having been in jail and it has nearly broken her heart," he said. "She is too young to realize that there is no stigma attached to the arrest, as her mother was released from all charges and the police department expressed regret that they had held her unjustly, but the taunts seem to cut my little daughter deeply. I should like to take my family away from here. Mrs. Sims, however, will not consent to go away, but says she means to remain here until the guilty party is found, and she is fully cleared in the eyes of all her neighbors."

Mrs. Staehle was attacked last Sunday night at about midnight. The would-be assassin, it was thought, entered the house by the bath-room window. After slashing Mrs. Staehle's throat, as she lay sleeping beside her daughter, Elsie, a girl of 11, the intruder made his escape. The weapon with which the woman's throat was cut, a white-handled razor, was left beside the bed.

George Staehle, who is employed in the Maier Brewery, working nights, when questioned by the police, said that the domestic relations between himself and wife had always been peaceful.

UNCLE SAM'S WORD.

FRAUD ORDER HITS OPERATOR.

MAIL FOR ONE COMPANY IS UNDER THE BAN.

Concern Is Alleged to Be in the Business of Pretending to Buy Stocks for People Who Have Not Enough Money to Purchase Outright. Incident in Stormy Career.

A fraud order against the Guarantee Securities Company, No. 208 Chamber of Commerce building, this city, was yesterday issued by the Postoffice Department at Washington, D. C. According to reports made by inspectors Dr. J. Byron Sloane of this city is the president of the offending concern, and is practically the "whole works."

The company is alleged to be in the business of buying stocks for people who have not enough money to purchase outright. Advertisements in metropolitan papers and street cars represented that the company bought the stocks ordered for the customers when the first installment was paid at the prevailing market price. The stocks were supposed to be held until the last payment was made, and then turned over without interest, commission, or any other charges.

Postoffice inspectors reported that when the stocks were ordered no attempt was made to buy them, but the company kept the money. Delivery was only made on the last payment, and then only if the market decreased. Sloane represented that he had assets of anywhere from $10,000 to $15,000, but could produce for the inspectors a grand total of only $65.

The career of Dr. J. Byron Sloane in this city has been what "the profesh" term "stormy." In February, 1906, he was arrested on a charge of selling worthless mining stock in Michigan. He was later released on habeas corpus proceedings, and the charges were dropped.

In August, 1908, Sloane became again involved in trouble, and was placed in jail on a felony embezzlement charge. A mistake in book-keeping when $700 was placed to his credit in a bank instead of being deducted from his account brought about difficulties. The broker deposited a personal check with the bank for $700, and it was placed to his credit on the declaration that it was good. Later the check was returned from St. Louis, and the bank there refused to honor it. Instead of deducting it from his account the mistake was made of crediting Sloane with the money. He soon withdrew his account of $1400, and the bank here had him arrested for what it alleged was a willful swindle, due to the fact that Sloane was supposed to be aware that he had no such sum coming to him.

On the preliminary examination Sloane was released on bail and later the case fell through, due to legal technicalities.

Sloane lived until recently at No. 2630 Western avenue, where he roomed with a private family. His present place of abode was in doubt late last night, but he was in the city yesterday, and stated to personal friends that the fraud order was due to a misunderstanding, and he denied that stock was not bought outright as represented in the advertisements. He is also reported to have stated that he will continue business at his present offices, and will rely on local customers who appreciate what he has been able to do for them.

VOTE FOR NINE.

City Attorney Rules the Ballots Will Be Invalidated If Error Is Made in Picking Councilmen.

If an elector votes for more than nine candidates for Council at the coming primary or general election, the entire ballot will be invalidated.

The same rule applies to members of the Board of Education, of which only seven are to be elected.

Also if a confused voter stamps a cross opposite the name of more than one of the many candidates for each of the other officers the ballot will be lost.

Should less than nine candidates for Council be designated, however, the ballot will be valid. The same as to other offices.

This is the gist of an opinion given yesterday by City Attorney Hewitt and if it is noted by voters generally there should be no confusion. But it is believed that many ballots will be thrown out because of errors in marking, especially in voting for too many candidates.

Elmore Travels Fast.

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Oct. 23.—The Elmore car, carrying George Dake, C. F. Smith and R. B. Rose, arrived at 3 o'clock this afternoon from Los Angeles, on a scouting trip preliminary to the Los Angeles-Phoenix automobile race. The Elmore left Los Angeles at 2 o'clock Thursday morning. Net running time was twenty-seven hours, over three hours less than the record of the last race. No trouble was encountered except one blowout, though the roads were reported bad.

Fourteen Chinese who arrived in Dallas, Tex., October 15 have been arrested, suspected of having been smuggled across the Mexican border.

CRASH ON RAIL.

REAR-END COLLISION PILES CARS IN SPECTACULAR HEAPS.

Flashlight Photographs of the Smashup.

FREIGHT cars were smashed into kindling wood and piled all over the Southern Pacific crossing at the intersection of Redondo and North Main streets yesterday evening at 5 o'clock, when a switch engine drawing thirty-seven heavily-loaded cars crashed against the rear end of a local freight train. Quick jumping by the crews saved all from being hurt.

The local freight from Colton, on its way into the Southern Pacific yards, had been stopped by the block at Main street to let a trolley car go by. Behind the local, a switch engine, or "goat" puffed along at a lively clip, drawing thirty-seven cars, most of which were loaded with heavy structural iron. Between the two trains lay a short curve, leading downgrade to the Main-street crossing.

Engineer Lockwood, on the switch locomotive, did not see the caboose of the local freight until he was well into the curve and down the grade—a collision hardly more than three car lengths away from him. He slapped on the emergency brakes, reversed his engine, and did all that could be done, but the great weight of the iron-laden cars behind him made a stop impossible. A frantic tug at the whistle lever—a strident warning to the men on the train ahead, was all he could do before he jumped, in the nick of time.

Conductor Swaggart of the local was sitting in the caboose of his train, making up his reports, when he heard the "goat's" warning blast close behind him, and he made a bolt for the nearest platform, and as far from the track as he could hop. He, too, escaped unhurt. The next instant there was a terrific bump and a crashing sound that seemed to crowd hours into two or three fractions of a second.

One of the cars—the second up from the caboose of the local, buckled up in the center and closed like a jackknife, and the next moment it had been speezed together like an accordion, leaving its trucks to be shoved under three other cars, while the caboose pitched over to the sidewalk, after climbing over three cars.

Redondo street, at that point, is none too wide for the several railroad tracks. The wreck occurred on the second track from the south side of the street, and the kindling, splinters and heavy timbers flew up against the houses on that side of the street, causing a panic among the people on the street.

When the big wrecker car of the Southern Pacific arrived and began lifting débris from the pile that covered the tracks, it was found that four empty box cars had been so much smashed that nothing was left of them but the trucks. Several other cars were damaged, but all of them were empties, and the loss was said by the railroad people to be comparatively slight—ont more than $500 or $600.

The track was cleared in a couple of hours, while a crowd gazed and marveled at the ease with which modern railroad appliances permit the great weights of wreckage to be lifted and laid to that side and this, on waiting car or beside the track, as need be.

DENIALS.

ACCUSED MAN IN JAIL HERE.

Alleged Embezzler Says He Has no Fears.

Asserts He Can Prove Every Charge Is False.

Denies Bigamy Story; Also That He Eloped.

"I am innocent, innocent of any charge that can be brought against me, and I am not in the least worried about the outcome of this thing."

This was the statement of N. J. Ocksreider last night, as he sat in the detectives' office at headquarters, immediately after his arrival from Salt Lake City, where he was arrested on a charge of embezzling $2400 from Pease Bros., whose collections he handled as head of the Merchants' Discount Company.

"Send me a paper in the morning," he laughed at the close of a long statement denying all the charges against him. "Oh, George," to Detective Home, who brought him back, "what is the number of my room tonight?"

Ocksreider was apparently no more eager to vindicate himself than to defend the character of Mrs. Bertha Sonnenberg, with whom he was reported to have eloped from Los Angeles.

"I left Los Angeles August 9," said Ocksreider, "going from here to Salt Lake City, then to Denver and Chicago. From Chicago I went to New York, stopping between the two cities at some place I do not care to name, to visit my father and my mother.

DEFENDS WOMAN.

"From New York I came back West, first to Tacoma and then to San Francisco, where I met Mrs. Sonnenberg. She wished to have somebody settle some community property between herself and her divorced husband. This was in my line of business, but I did not take the matter up as a business proposition, but as a friend of Mrs. Sonnenberg. My relations with Mrs. Sonnenberg have always been strictly honorable, and my intentions toward her are of the best. I wish you would make that clear.

"To settle this matter of property, we went to Chicago—we were under the impression that Sonnenberg was there, as I had heard that he was connected with some theater or other—I knew nothing about him. From Chicago, we went to Salt Lake City, where Sonnenberg was working. Incidentally, I wish to say that I had the pleasure of playing football with Mr. Sonnenberg. He was very ugly, and I do not think that I came off second best, if I did dislocate my thumb in the affair.

"I settled Mrs. Sonnenberg's business satisfactorily, but, in the meanwhile, I had met a judgment debtor in Salt Lake City who owed me $1500, and I made up my mind to collect it.

"I was put off from time to time in Salt Lake City on this proposition, until I finally met a gentleman by the name of George Sheets, a detective, who arrested me. And here I am.

"While I was going East to visit my parents, I got a letter from Mr. Pease in Chicago. The letter was addressed in care of a firm of lawyers upon whom he knew I would call.

"I wired Mr. Pease, I think it was from Fort Wayne, Ind.—telling him that I was writing him, and I mailed the letter to him in Pittsburgh. The substance of this letter was that the funds involved in my account with Mr. Pease were intact in Los Angeles, but that my business away from home was dragging out unexpectedly long. The money is still here."

Ocksreider gave his story in an easy, confident conversational tone. He looked more like a young bank president addressing a meeting of directors than a prisoner seeking to set himself right before the public through a newspaper.

"Did you desert your wife in Los Angeles?" he was asked. For the first time the dapper young man began to show signs of agitation.

DENIES BIGAMY STORY.

"I did not," he said with rising voice. "I have seen an interview published to the effect that I was a bigamist and that I had three wives. That is not true. Mrs. Ocksreider filed a suit for divorce against me—I think it was in June or July. She set up failure to provide as her grounds for divorce—you know the law on this subject."

"Did you leave here with Lamar H. Harris, or did you meet him in Chicago?"

"I never knew Lamar Harris in my life." Mrs. Sonnenberg never heard of him. "While I was here I heard his name a few times, but I never was introduced to him and I would not have known him if I had met him."

Then Ocksreider reverted back to the charge under which he was arrested.

"I do wish you would make it perfectly clear that I never was in the employ of Pease Brothers," he said. "I handled their accounts just as I did the accounts of several other large firms.

"As to the charge they have made against me, I leave it to you to judge whether I would have come back so far West, whether I would have associated with or gone among associates of the Chief of Police of Los Angeles, if I had felt guilty or had the least reason to fear arrest on any account."

Mrs. Sonnenberg and her little boy were with Ocksreider when he arrived at the Salt Lake depot last night, accompanied by Detective Home, who went to Salt Lake City for the prisoner. The party boarded a car, and none who saw them would have dreamed that one of the men was a prisoner and that the woman had so much at stake. The child, a bright little fellow of about 5, seemed to be having the biggest kind of a time.

Arrived uptown, Ocksreider and Mrs. Sonnenberg separated. She took a car for her mother's home in West Adams street—he went to jail.

EXCESS FREIGHT RATES.

San Joaquin Valley Traffic Association to Be Formed to Appeal to Commerce Commission.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

FRESNO, Oct. 23.—At a meeting of the Terminal Rate Committee of the Chamber of Commerce this afternoon, it was decided to form a San Joaquin Valley Traffic Association Monday. Judge M. K. Harris, who presided, made the statement that Fresno pays $300,000 a year excess freight rates in local charges.

The traffic association will appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission for equitable rates. If the desired relief is not obtained it is proposed to build a canal to the San Joaquin River.

RAISIN GROWERS COMBINE.

An effort to organize the raisin growers to form a $1,000,000 corporation to control the market, is meeting with success. Today, the first day for signing, 1000 acres were pledged. Growers are given stock in proportion to their acreage.

MORGAN BUYS PORCELAINS.

Pays Approximately Half a Million Dollars for Absolutely Flawless Collection.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Marsden C. Perry, the Providence banker, has sold to J. Pierpont Morgan his magnificent collection of antique Chinese porcelains, consisting of nearly 300 absolutely flawless specimens. The price Mr. Morgan paid is said to be between $500,000 and $600,000. The collection has been loaned to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, of which Mr. Morgan is president, and soon will be shown in connection with the Garland collection.

Mr. Morgan also owns the Garland collection, and when merged the two groups will form what is considered the finest assemblage of Chinese ceramics in the world. Connoisseurs have placed a value of $1,500,000 on the Garland collection, so that together the two will represent approximately $2,000,000.

ELKS MET BY ELKS.

White Squadron Entertained at Bakersfield Lodge on Way Home from the Portola.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BAKERSFIELD, Oct. 23.—The 125 Elks making up the White Squadron of Los Angeles, en route from the Portola Festival to their homes were met in this city this evening by eighty Elks from Los Angeles, and the visitors were given a royal welcome by the local lodge and citizens.

A big public meeting was held tonight at which Exalted Ruler Charles A. Lee presided, and which was addressed by Leo V. Youngworth, Exalter Ruler, of Los Angeles.

VERMILION THE MEETING.

Reds Protest Against the Arrest of De Lara.

Judge Works Joins in Storm, Denouncing Police.

Works Thinks His Country Is But a Despotism.

A red meeting of the "Reds" and a few others was held last night in Simpson Auditorium to create sympathy and raise money for the defense of L. Guiterrez de Lara, the anarchistic fomenter of trouble, who was arrested while making an incendiary speech on the Plaza on the eve of the visit of President Taft. De Lara is now held at the request of the Mexican government, pending an investigation into the charges against him in Mexico.

A large audience was present, made up of men, women and children, mostly of foreign birth, with the usual bunch of trouble-makers, old-line windjammers, labor union fire eaters and other small fry. Few voters were in the hall, comparatively speaking.

Reynold E. Blight, minister of the Los Angeles Fellowship, presided at the meeting and made the first inciting remark, for which the Reds were in waiting and of which they took quick advantage.

"This gathering shows that the American spirit is not dead," declared Blight, after referring to the execution of Ferrer in Spain, "and we are determined that the dastardly outrage shall not be duplicated on the American continent."

The sentiment was received with yells of "No, no," and loud stamping of feet, together with mingled yells of various kinds.

John Kennett Turner, who made a trip through Mexico with De Lara, gave details of the trip, and told how they escaped back over the border into the United States. His talk was full of incendiary insinuations concerning the officers of Los Angeles, and among other things he said:

"Gold is the god of officers numerous in Los Angeles and along the Mexican border," and to this fact he laid the "betrayal," as he termed it, of De Lara.

Among the old-line windjammers were F. I. Wheat and Job Harriman, socialists, both of whom were arrested several weeks ago for making inflammatory speeches on the streets of the city, when trouble was brewing with the anarchistic element, and the character of their rantings is well known.

But the principal speaker of the evening was ex-Judge John D. Works, one of the Goo-Goo candidates for the City Council.

Judge Works first denounced the Chief of Police and the officers under him for what he termed a despotic and unconstitutional act in the arrest of De Lara, when collared for making an inflammatory speech on the Plaza.

"This is a free republic," declared Mr. Works, but he was immediately interrupted with a bedlam of cries from the audience.

"No, no, no," they cried, and there was wild confusion.

"Think of it," he continued, "the police claimed that the arrest was made for the protection of the President of the United States, who was about to visit our city. They claimed that this man is an anarchist, and they must arrest an anarchist now and then to hold their jobs," at which there was wild applause.

"And what of a Police Commission," he continued, "that permits an innocent man to be arrested and thrown in jail by its officers, without protest?"

Again came a bedlam of shouts and stamping of feet.

"What are we to think of a police force that makes an arrest of an innocent man, and in violation of the Constitution, claiming it to be for the protection of a President of the United States, who has sworn to support the Constitution?" he said.

The response was characteristic of the audience, and came in wild and clamorous shouts and stamping of feet.

"So far as I know," continued the speaker, "no President of the United States was ever killed by an anarchist. We are standing on the brink of our Constitution, and are in danger of becoming a despotism; and when a man is arrested without warrant of law, what is it but despotism?" [Great applause.]

JUST A PIPE JOB.

Only Position Now Open Here in the United States Internal Revenue Service.

A good many candidates for examination for positions here in the United States Internal Revenue service seem destined to disappointment. Examinations are to be held November 6, for which between ninety and 100 applications have already been filed. The belief that the eligibles will stand a chance for a $1400 position has become current.

"The $1400 position," said Collector Parker last evening, "will expire December 31. By the time any eligibles can be selected through this examination, that date will have passed. The only position open now in the Sixth District of California is one of $500 per year, for being in charge of pipe lines at the brewery."

NOTED LECTURER COMING.

His topics, while in Los Angeles, will be "Man's Hell," "Hoo-Doos," and the "Problem of Marriage." Dr. Bancroft is one of the leading psychologists of the day. He will be assisted by Miss D. Lillian Lewis, who will sing popular airs.

WORKING FOR A TUNNEL.

At a meeting of the First-street Tunnel Association held at the association headquarters, No. 108 South Beaudry avenue, last night, the committee appointed at the last meeting to present a petition to the City Council for a tunnel reported that the petition, bearing over 300 names of property owners, had been referred by the Council to the City Engineer, with instructions to investigate the proposed undertaking. Another committee was appointed to present a paper to the Council, stating the needs of a tunnel and the advantages to be gained.

PASADENA.

TWO GIRLS ARE CAUSE OF FIRE.

SPILL GASOLINE, STRIKE MATCH, AND HOUSE BURNS.

Furious Forest Fire Rages in the Mountains East of Dark Canyon. Aged Woman Steps Off Car While It Is in Motion and Sustains Concussion of the Brain.

Office of The Times No. 28 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, Oct. 24.—The beautiful home of J. C. Webster, on the corner of Rio Grande and Mentor streets, was totally destroyed by fire late yesterday afternoon. The two young daughters of Mr. Webster spilled some gasoline on a stove and the floor and struck a match before it had all dried. Instantly the room was in flames. Fortunately the girls escaped without injury. The gasoline tank on the stove burst and within three minutes the whole building was in flames. The entire fire department turned out but was unable to render any assistance. Only the piano and a few small pieces of furniture were served. The house was insured.

In making the run to the fire the team hitched to the chemical wagon of the Dayton-street department slipped and fell in making the turn at the corner of El Molino and Washington. One horse sustained a broken leg and had to be shot by Humane Officer Stillwell.

All day yesterday a forest fire raged in the mountains east of Dark Cañon. The entire force of forest rangers was called into service and every available man employed who could be secured. A strong wind was encountered. However, a new fire break proved effectual and by night time the blaze was under control.

TWO ACCIDENTS.

Two painful accidents occurred late last night at the corner of Colorado and Hudson streets. J. L. Carter, a stranger stopping on Bruce street, stepped off the car while it was in motion and sustained a severe cut on the right side of his face.

The other accident was to an elderly lady named Mrs. Beery of Dayton, O., who arrived in Pasadena a few days ago and is stopping with Mrs. Gabuey at No. 176 Bruce street. She spent yesterday sightseeing. She states that she became suddenly sick and does not remember how the accident happened. The conductor on the East Colorado street car, on which she was riding, states that at the corner of Colorado and Hudson streets she suddenly got up from her seat and walked off the car while it was in motion. He states that she did not give him any signal to stop and he did not know that she was going to get off. She fell on the back of her head and sustained a severe concussion of the brain and several other bruises about the body. The fall rendered her unconscious. She was taken to the Pasadena Hospital and was treated by the Pacific Electric Company's physicians.

WANT NEARLY A MILLION.

Th boards of directors of the three water companies have decided that the city must pay $965,760 if it wants their plants. This is $102,770 more than they asked a year ago. However, many improvements have been made, the most expensive being the new 14,000,000-gallon reservoir which the Lake Vineyard Company is building in the northeast part of the city.

The City Engineer and A. L. Sonderegger, an expert water engineer from Los Angeles, are now making a careful examination of the plants to see if they are worth the price asked.

There is a strong sentiment here that the city should make arrangements with Los Angeles to take water from the Owens River Aqueduct when it is completed and in that way secure a sufficient supply for all time.

PLAN FOR BIG SEASON.

The big hotels are planning for a season which is expected to eclipse anything in the history of the city. Greater preparations are being made for the winter's guests than ever before. Inquiries and reservations are coming in fast and advices from eastern connections are to the effect that all the principal points in the East will send liberal numbers of people to Pasadena for the season.

The Maryland opened earlier this year than usual and is doing an excellent business. Some ninety guests are settled there for the winter. Others are coming every day. During the past week many small dinner and luncheon parties were given at the Maryland and a large number of bookings have been made for the next few weeks. During the past summer many improvements were made at the Maryland. The hotel will be able to accommodate 350 people this winter.

The Hotel Vista del Arroyo has made many expensive changes and is preparing for a large business. It is not an exclusively winter resort, but keeps open the entire year. It had a good business the past summer.

The Hotel Green will be opened for business on December 1. Painters, paper-hangers, carpenters, plumbers and carpet cleaners are busy getting it ready.

David P. Simpson, the new assistant manager, arrived this week and immediately took charge. D. B. Plumer, the new manager, will not be here until December.

Mr. Plumer has had charge of the famous Briar Cliff Lodge at Briar Cliff, N. Y. During the past summer Mr. Simpson was manager of the Edgewood Inn at Greenwich, Ct. For many years Mr. Plumer was manager of the Lakewood Hotel at Lakewood, N. J., at which time Simpson was the assistant manager. Therefore Plumer and Simpson have worked together before and both look forward to a big and successful business at the Green.

The Casa Grande Hotel has been renovated. "We have made a large number of changes and are now ready for the people," said Manager Ferris. "We have a good many already and have made a large number of reservations for the season. I expect the largest business this year the house has ever had."

THEIR SIXTY-FIFTH.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac N. Webster celebrated the sixty-fifth anniversary of their wedding yesterday. Mr. Webster is 88 years old and his wife is 84. They were married at Ithaca, N. Y.

The case of the Humane Society of Pasadena against J. T. Gorytino, a rancher of Palmdale, charged with starving seventy-seven horses on his ranch, came to a close yesterday afternoon with a disagreement of the jury. Justice Klamroth stated that it would be tried again this week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Stone of No. 37 Valley street will entertain today in honor of their daughter, Miss Harriett, who is to be married soon to Edward Cheney.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Buchanan of No. 201 May street celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary yesterday afternoon.

SANTA MONICA.

HOPES REST ON WAR OFFICE.

BREAKWATER PLANS SOON TO BE SUBMITTED TO IT.

If Washington Approves Them City May Have Harbor Within Two Years—Fremont Avenue Extension Will Materially Aid Town to Advance.

SANTA MONICA, Oct. 23.—Should the War Department approve the plans submitted for a private bulkhead and breakwater on the North Beach ocean front, Santa Monica may within two years secure through the efforts of private enterprise the harbor which was denied when government aid was withdrawn for the development of the harbor. The plans presented by T. J. Hampton and W. H. Bainbridge comprise a 4000-foot breakwater, extending northerly from the deep-water end of the new municipal pier, and include designs for jetties for pleasure yachts and launches and fishing boats, accommodations for bathers in the still water of the enclosed harbor, and safe anchorage for boats of all kinds and drafts. The breakwater is to be constructed in five and one-half fathoms of water, approximately 2000 feet from the shore line, and will have an average depth of thirty feet over an area of considerable extent.

CHANCE TO GO AHEAD.

"Here's a good chance for Santa Monica to go ahead, and now a few persons are already trying to check it," said a Los Angeles man who is interested in property here today in discussing the remonstrance started against the improvement of Fremont avenue. This man, who says he has consistently "boosted" Santa Monica for years, stated that in contemplation of the widening and paving of the avenue from the sea to the city limits he has already planned a good business building on it a few blocks from the beach, and declared that if this improvement is not made he will give up in disgust here and sell out at any price. "These objectors to improvements, who complain of the cost, do not figure on the enhancement of property values that is sure to follow progressive steps, and forget that their money will return many fold in due season. It is this same lack of enterprise and unwillingness to spend a few dollars for the general welfare that has held Santa Monica back for years, while Long Beach, Redondo Beach, Ocean Park and other towns have made mighty strides in building, population and wealth. Many hundreds of automobilists in Los Angeles are interested in this Fremont-avenue extension for a short cut to the ocean, and it would mean thousands more visitors to this beach every month, yet some property owners want to stop it."

GLENDORA.

GLENDORA, Oct. 23.—A. C. A. Knester, evangelist of Highland Park, will conduct a series of meetings at the Methodist Episcopal Church, starting tomorrow.

The Glendora Citrus Association's packing-house is being renovated preparatory to handling the next orange crop, which promises a better yield, as the season advances than at first supposed.

H. C. Wentworth, cashier of the First National Bank, has returned after a two-weeks' vacation at Seattle and Portland.

W. S. Turk arrived yesterday from Joplin, Mo., and is a guest at the home of his sister, Mrs. W. S. Taylor.

COVINA FIRE DESTRUCTIVE.

PACKING-HOUSE, ORANGES AND FINE RESIDENCE BURN.

COVINA, Oct. 23.—The packing-house of the Irwindale Citrus Association, with its entire equipment, two cars of Valencia oranges, packed ready for shipment, one refrigerator box car standing on the sidetrack, partially loaded, and the residence of George W. Krum, adjoining the packing-house, were totally destroyed by fire shortly after 10 o'clock this morning.

The fire stated in the basement of the packing-house from a back flash from a gasoline engine, and, although a large force was working in the house at the time, it was only a few moments before the entire structure was a mass of flame. By the united efforts of the packing-house force the furniture and other contents of the Krum residence were saved. The house was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. William T. Frasier, and their four-weeks-old baby.

The heat was so intense that the $4000 residence of B. Miller, manager of the association, located over 500 feet from the burning building, was saved only by the use of wet blankets. A large quantity of shook and 8000 orange picking boxes were consumed. The picking boxes were in one immense pile, and the flames from them arose nearly 100 feet in the air.

The trees in the orange groves on both sides of the packing-house were badly scorched. Two refrigerator cars were standing on the sidetrack at the time, but one was saved by the switch engine from the Covina yards. The loss is estimated at over $13,000, with only partial insurance. The Krum residence will be a loss of $3000. The association has a number of cars of Valencia oranges yet to move. Immediate steps will be taken to rebuild in readiness for the coming crop.

TO THE RESCUE.

LONG RUN TO FIGHT A FIRE.

LONG BEACH DEPARTMENT GOES BEYOND CITY LIMITS.

Has to Stretch Thousand Feet of Hose to Reach Blaze Started from Oil Stove—Two Buildings Saved. Wanderer Returns—Fasting Man Is Better.

LONG BEACH, Oct. 23.—The fire department this afternoon went beyond the city limits and successfully fought a blaze, which destroyed one house and threatened two others. In order to secure water, it was necessary to stretch 1000 feet of hose. The house burned was at No. 955 East Sixth street, and was owned by Mrs. C. F. Westgate. It was occupied by Mrs. Mary Dire and three small children.

Mrs. Dire was heating water in an oil stove to wash the children's hair when she heard one crying in the back yard. She ran out, only to hear a scream from the one in the kitchen, and darting back, found the kitchen ablaze with burning oil. The children were gotten out without injury. The loss is about $1000, on which there is no insurance.

POLITICAL FERMENT

Independent party politics were in a ferment this afternoon over the report that a programme had been outlined for next Tuesday's convention to drop the lowest candidate for the Mayoralty after the first ballot, and follow this rule on successive ballots. This will provoke a hot row, as the general sentiment is that any candidate has a right to remain in the fight.

CRACK DEBATERS.

In a try-out this morning for debating honors by nine High School students the judges, Misses Miner, Bailey, Harnett and Carroll of the faculty, decided in favor of Harry Riley, president of the student body, and Fred Cranston, center on the football team, with Earl McDermott third. The first two will represent Long Beach in the first debate with Pasadena on Thanksgiving evening.

WANDERER RETURNS.

W. Scott Cummings, who disappeared from home three weeks ago, returned from San Francisco by steamer last night, and was met at San Pedro by his wife. Cummings is still very ill, and shows evidences of being mentally weak, which the doctors say will disappear with the return of health. Cummings says he remembers nothing of how he came to be in San Francisco, and attributes it to a dose of medicine he took the day of his departure to cure a cold. The strange part of the incident is that Cummings had but $1.50 when he left home, yet he was able to get to San Francisco and return. His wife thinks some friend paid his fare home.

Attorney Frederick Baker this morning received word of the death of his mother, Mrs. A. M. Baker, at Chillicothe, Mo.

SQUELCHES SALE STORY.

Unfounded Report About Disposal of Part of Soldiers' Home Ground Effectively Denied.

SOLDIERS' HOME, Oct. 23.—An unfounded rumor is going the rounds to the effect that the Pacific Branch is negotiating for the disposal of that part of its land consisting of a strip of about sixty acres, situated north of Sawtelle, and otherwise bounded on the west by Ninth street, Sawtelle; on the east by the Los Angeles-Pacific Railway, and converging, between the two latter boundaries, to a point on Sunset boulevard at Westgate.

The governor of the home, Col. Cochrane, was shown one of these articles this morning, and said: "The officers of the Home have heard nothing of such a proposed transaction, and I suppose like many other rumors regarding this place, it originated in some otherwise idle brain; but, so far from entertaining a proposition for disposal of the triangular tract referred to, we are just now planning to plant the entire strip to eucalyptl trees, as soon as funds for that purpose are available."

As the grounds were donated specifically for occupation as a soldiers' home, the latter has no legal right to dispose of any part of its acreage.

LOAN AGENTS SAD.

At the post store, a credit system, similar to that already existing in other homes, has been established, whereby members "gone broke" may obtain a book of coupons, good for purchases at the store, and pay for the same when pay day comes around. This privilege, while proving popular with veterans, is viewed with disgust by a number of soldier bankers in the Home, who find a falling off in their business of loans to comrades at the rate of 25 per cent., or more, per month.

Henry Kyle, late Co. I, One Hundred and Eighty-third Pennsylvania Infantry, is appointed home undertaker, vice Bradley, resigned.

"Billy" Campbell, whom the earlier members remember was orderly almost twenty years ago—under the home's first governor, Col. Treichel, is appointed orderly to the adjutant and inspector, Capt. Startzman.

Donal L. Moore, late adjutant Twenty-seventh Wisconsin Infantry, a native of Maine, admitted from Los Angeles August 30, 1909, died October 20, aged 69.

HUNTINGTON PARK.

HUNTINGTON PARK, Oct. 23.—A delightful reception was given by Mrs. Gilbert-Lillie at her home on Pacific boulevard day before yesterday. She entertained the Woman's Literary Club. Instead of the regular literary work everything was on the subject of the Civil War. The hostess arranged the programme and was chairman. The roll was called at 10:30 o'clock. The members responded with a talk on some event of the war. A paper on "How the War Broke Out" was read by Mrs. William Porter. Another, by Savillia Clark, was entitled "Reminiscences of the War." Patriotic songs and recitations were given. Mrs. Lillie paid a beautiful tribute to the army nurses. Others who took part were Mrs. Martha Brunson, Mrs. Hadden and Mrs. Cowden.

A bean breakfast was served at noon on the lawn. The Army Nurses' Association was represented by Mrs. Margaret Hayes and Grace Lawrence, who were made honorary members of the club, as was also Mrs. Brunson.

well-known Los Angeles architect, who died at his home in Alhambra Wednesday.

ARCHITECT DIES.

Man Who Planned Many Houses and Hotels Passes Away at Alhambra. City Treasurer Resigns.

ALHAMBRA, Oct. 23.—Peter August Westberg, a well-known architect of this city, died at his home, No. 111 North Third street, Wednesday morning.

Mr. Westberg had been in business in Los Angeles for seven years, and planned many handsome residences there and in this city. He also built the Heizman Hotel, the Alhambra Hotel, the Hotel Marengo at Pasadena and a number of residences in Wilshire and Westmoreland districts.

He was a native of Varmland, Sweden, and came to America in 1881. He located in Chicago, where he spent twenty-two years. Mr. Westberg was 52 years old, and leaves a widow and one son. The funeral services will be held at the home at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

James McLaren, City Treasurer for many years, has resigned on account of ill health. Trustees Wallace and Hilton were named by Mayor Weeks to draw up suitable resolutions regarding Mr. McLaren's excellent record and expressing the regrets of the board that he had been compelled to give up office.

The question of providing sufficient school room is troubling the school board. At the meeting called by the Board of Trade in the High School auditorium recently, State Senator Thompson presented the subject, and after some discussion a motion recommending the appropriation of $50,000 was unanimously carried. The amount of $60,000 in bonds was voted last year.

CHORAL CLUB.

A Children's Choral Club is being organized under the direction of Miss Octavia Hudson. It is hoped to secure a chorus of fifty. They will practice in the Sunday-school room of the First Methodist Church, corner Main and Chapel streets.

Councilman J. F. Hall has leased his hotel property at No. 316 North Broadway, Los Angeles, and the building is being fitted up by Colyer & Sons with $25,000 of fine fixtures.

George Yelland, manager of the Pacific Telephone Company's local exchange for four years, has been transferred to the main office in Los Angeles, where he will work in the commercial department.

Among recent arrivals in Alhambra are Dr. C. M. Easton and wife, E. T. Armstrong, wife and daughter of Hebron, Neb. Dr. Easton and Mr. Armstrong are brothers of Mrs. George E. Lewis.

At a general election of the student body of the High School, these officers were chosen: President, Frank Murphy; vice-president, William Carr; secretary, Frank McMillan; treasurer, Miss Maud Lowell.

CHILDREN OF PIONEERS WED.

Wilmington Couple Marry—Old Landmark Is Being Moved—Public Library Poorly Patronized.

WILMINGTON, Oct. 23.—A pleasant affair was the wedding of two of Wilmington's most popular young people this week, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Nuffer, where Miss Pearl Nuffer was united in marriage to William Kast, Jr., son of William Kast, Sr., of this place. Both families are among the earliest residents of Wilmington, and opened up fine ranches in the prosperous German settlement. The young couple will occupy the home place of Mr. Kast, while the parents will move to Los Angeles to place their daughter in the University of Southern California.

An old landmark of Wilmington is being removed. It is the palm tree which has stood for many years on Canal street, between Second and Third. It was planted by Joaquin Rios, thirty-two years ago, when Wilmington was in its palmy days. The street is to be widened. The tree will be reset in the vacant space adjoining the Pacific Electric depot.

E. H. Marbutt, principal of the grammar school, is planning to organize a Parent-Teachers' Association in this city. The first meeting will be held next week.

It is said the public library will soon be closed unless it gets better patronage. The stock of old books was removed, a new set was sent from Los Angeles and a librarian was appointed from Los Angeles, who divides her time between San Pedro and Wilmington. The present patronage does not warrant the outlay for salary.

The liquor licenses, which were paid a year in advance to the old city, previous to consolidation, have been declared valid by City Attorney Hewitt.

The Home Telephone Company is placing poles along Canal street for the purpose of installing a local service in this city. It has a large list of local subscribers.

The recent death of Samuel Miller of Prescott, Ariz., leaves D. E. Connor as the only living member of the famous Walker party, which entered Arizona in 1862 and continued until 1867. Connor, a civil engineer, resides here. This party was organized in California for the purpose of exploiting the mineral regions of Central Arizona. Mr. Connor was the engineer of the party. He was the only one who kept notes of the incidents and references of the party among the Apaches. These notes are being compiled and edited by T. W. Lincoln and will soon be published.

FLOWER SHOW ENDS IN GLORY.

WHITTIER PARADE FULLY MILE IN LENGTH.

Carnival Is a Winner, Artistically and Financially—Beautiful Displays and Large Attendance—Winners of Prizes in Various Departments.

WHITTIER, Oct. 23.—The flower show closed tonight in a blaze of glory, with attendance and entries of such number as to make it a success, both from an artistic and a financial standpoint. The parade today was the largest ever held here, being fully a mile in length. It was headed by the City Council and Mayor, the City Band, the G.A.R. and many other organizations following.

The State school entered its Cadet Band of forty pieces, its baseball and football teams, and its fire brigade, the latter beautifully decorated in show blooms of Emily Tucker chrysanthemums, the mass of blooms being drawn by six lads in natty sailor suits.

A beautiful entry, given first prize, was made jointly by the Union High School and Whittier College. The float showed a Greek temple of learning, with stately columns and massive roof. The pretty girls and strapping lads each represented some educational phase. The various departments of both institutions were well represented.

Nearly fifty equestrians were in the parade, the ladies with beautifully-decorated saddle blankets and harness. Children, with their ponies, were seen prominent in this class, being the little son and daughter of E. C. Guirado, dressed as Spanish aristocrats, and riding their pair of spotted ponies. A little Indian entry, with long Navajo saddle blanket, riding in true Indian fashion, bareback, attracted great applause.

In the decorated automobile division there were many unique entries. The queen's carriage, in which rode tiny Queen Helen, with a party of ladies, parade guests of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Kirkwood, was easily first. One auto covered with snow white and bearing two little Eskimos in furry garments and a flag-topped pole, was entered by F. A. Fletcher. It, too, was given a prize.

Many merchants took part in the industrial section, this in turn being followed by a "horribles" division, in which were some very clever entries.

The parade was marshaled by Capt. C. E. Arfwedsen, with William A. Smith and Wallace Gregg as aides. The judges were Dr. Curtis H. Kent of Hollywood, H. E. Swan of Ontario and Mr. Albertson of Long Beach.

Among the winners of prizes in the flower show were the following: For best collection of chrysanthemums, C. E. Arfwedson; in professional class, Miss Mabel Norcross; in amateur class, Mrs. P. H. Chrystopher won first for floral basket; Thomas Hough for begonias, Miss Minnie Mendenhall for ferns. In the preserved fruit classes, Mrs. C. Z. Anderson got first for jelly, Mrs. F. A. Nixon for preserves, Mrs. A. A. Heltman, canned fruit; Mrs. T. E. Little, pickles; Mrs. W. L. King, catsup; Mrs. Thomas Newlin, marmalade. The prize for juvenile entry of fruit went to Caroline Maple.

RETURNS FROM ORANGES.

Annual Report of Duarte-Monrovia Fruit Exchange Issued—Additional Mail Service.

MONROVIA, Oct. 23.—The annual report of the Duarte-Monrovia Fruit Exchange, just completed by Secretary A. T. Blain, deals with 80 per cent. of the district's output. Less than 3 1-3 per cent. of the total shipments were made in December, 1908, and all sales were made after January 1, 1909.

Of the 750 carloads of oranges from this district, the exchange picked, packed and sold 600 carloads, 466 cars navels, seeds and other varieties, and the rest Valencias. For all varieties, except Valencias, growers received net $210,000, an average per box of $1.18. Valencia growers received net $70,000, an average of $1.33 per box. Total for this year's crop, $280,000. Expense per box of handling and marketing was: Packing-house, $0.2905; central office, $0.0550; Fruit Growers' Supply Company, $0.0150; total, $0.3605. This includes box, preparation for market and selling expense.

The exchange membership is 225. Many have but small city lot holdings, yet the average dividend per member is $1245. Another average of interest, which includes young and recently budded non-bearing orchards, is $200 net per acre for all groves controlled by the exchange. Some of the older and best managed groves netted over $500 per acre.

Considering the severe standard of inspection now maintained, the six-tenths of 1 per cent. decay in transit, due to avoidable mechanical injury, is probably the smallest since extensive shipping from this district began. The explanation of the increased percentage of transportable and marketable fruit is, first, wiser orchard management and general fumigation for scale pests, intelligent fertilization, proper pruning and picking, and careful cartage.

PICNIC BY THE SEA.

VENICE, Oct. 23.—The first annual picnic of the Federation of State Societies, held here today, brought a large number of visitors to the bay, and the day was very much enjoyed, weather conditions being ideal. Picnic dinner followed the baby show, which was conducted in the auditorium. Prizes were awarded without classification in this order: Lyman Stanley, 3 years old, largest; Clarissa Cention, 5½ months, prettiest; Arlington Louden, 2 years old, most beautiful; Harry Anderson, 14 months, best natured; Howard Tapley, 2 years, prettiest; Thelma Salter, 19 months, largest; Fannie Hanna, 5 weeks, youngest; Harriett de Myer, 17 months, liveliest; Lula Louden, 3 years, best natured; Arthur Watson, 3 months, liveliest; Elizabeth Burnes, 4 months, fattest; Francis Sackett, 10 months largest; Glenn Nichols, 3 years, best natured; Carroll Bottell, 10 months, largest; Thelma Beach, 11 months, liveliest; Robert Lane, 6 months, largest; Henry Bouck, 7 weeks, prettiest.

Speech-making and music followed the noonday meal. Waldo M. York acted as presiding officer, and spoke briefly. F. K. McCarver, on behalf of the Venice Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the visitors to the beach. Among the other speakers were Mayor Alexander of Los Angeles, Johnstone Jones, H. A. Pierce and W. O. Morton.

The picnic parties spent the afternoon in visiting the attractions along the shore and in renewing old and forming new acquaintances.

KILLS HIMSELF AS DANCE ENDS.

RIVERSIDE YOUTH ENDS LIFE IN EASTERN CITY.

As High School Festivity Finishes He Bares His Breast and Shoots. Three Girls Find His Body—Was Despondent Because He Lost Position Few Days Ago.

RIVERSIDE, Oct. 23.—A dispatch from Rockland, Me., received tonight, says:

"Frank Andrews, aged 20, who is said to be the son of wealthy parents in Riverside, Cal., shot himself fatally on Main street early this morning at the close of a High School dance.

"Some girls on their way home were startled by the sound of a revolver shot only a few rods behind them, followed by three agonizing screams. Retracing their steps they found the young man stretched upon the sidewalk. The police and doctors were summoned but the man died in less than ten minutes after the shooting. The deliberation with which the suicide was planned is shown by the fact that the young man had torn his coat and shirt aside and placed the muzzle against the bare breast, the flesh of which was burned.

"Coroner Judkins and the police are unable to find a motive unless it was despondency, because Andrews was out of employment. He lost his position a few days ago. He had made his home in Camden, Maine, since last May. Andrews had acted somewhat peculiarly the last few weeks. He was well liked and was considered an upright young man."

Frank A. Andrews, who was a clerk at the Wells-Fargo office here, and a son of G. F. Andrews, a carpenter of No. 1268 Market street, is the only Frank Andrews of any consequence known here. When last heard from he was in the East.

DIES IN HIS BUNK.

Because he had grown too poor and feeble to earn enough money to buy the opium that had kept him alive, Wong Look, a Chinese drug fiend, died in his bunk in a shack in Chinatown. When found yesterday he had been dead five days. He is the first here to succumb to the conditions existing because of the warfare on the opium trade.

The police made an investigation yesterday, and say that many Chinese laborers are wasting away for lack of the drug to which they have become slaves, and that others must soon give up the fight.

DEACON DISMISSED.

John B. Culpepper, the colored deacon, who was arrested Wednesday night on the charge of having assisted the Los Angeles negro, Tom Watson, to make his escape, was dismissed yesterday by Justice Holton Webb. On the stand Culpepper testified that he had advised Watson to give himself up, and had telephoned to the Los Angeles Chief of Police that Watson was at his home, and that he could get him by coming after him. Frank A. Miller stated on the stand that Culpepper had been in the employ of the Riverside and Arlington Railway Company for a number of years, and had been found scrupulously honest. C. W. Barton testified that Culpepper had in charge all valuables found in the street cars, and he had always found him painstaking and honest in reporting the articles.

ENTICED FROM HOME

William Nelson of San Diego, 16 years old, who was enticed away from home two weeks ago by an unknown man, was arrested last night, and is in the hands of the Riverside police, after having stolen a bicycle and attempted to dispose of it to a second-hand dealer in San Bernardino. At the time of being pursuaded to leave San Diego with the stranger, Nelson was on probation for running away from home. Nelson says the man promised to take him to Los Angeles and get him a position. The lad soon learned that the stranger had designs on him and made his escape in Los Angeles. He lived there until his money gave out, when he came to San Bernardino to find work, he says. He came to Riverside Thursday, and stole the wheel here yesterday afternoon.

An attempt will be made to locate the man who enticed the boy away.

GARAGE DEAL.

The sale of all of the automobiles, equipment and fixtures of the Glenwood garage has been made by the Riverside Auto Transfer Company to C. A. Dundas and A. A. Jamble, both of whom are practical automobile men. The deal is said to involve more than $20,000. The big Stearns cars, which were bought by Frank Miller when the garage was opened go with the rest of the property.

The stock and business of the George H. Seaton Lumber Company have been sold to the National Lumber Company of Los Angeles, which will conduct the business in its own name.

VISITS SCENES OF A TRAGEDY.

YOUNG RAILWAY MAGNATE GOES OVER THE GROUND.

Massachusetts State Senator, Whose Wife Ran Away With His Chauffeur, Is Taken to the Cheap Lodgings They Occupied in Santa Barbara—School Girl Shoots Herself.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] State Senator James F. Shaw of Massachusetts, reëlected president of the American Street and Interurban Railway Association at the Denver convention two weeks ago, came here today at the head of a delegation of eighty Bay State railway men. But though the special train was received at the station by members of the Chamber of Commerce led by La Monaca's Band and publicly entertained here, it was not a happy day for Shaw.

While the other members of the party were being entertained as guests of Manager Wilder of the local street railway company, Shaw, with Chief of Police Ross, visited the scenes of the latest act of his marital tragedy. It was in this city six months ago that detectives sent West by Shaw, found the young railway magnate's wife living in cheap lodgings with H. Keno Marble, proprietor of a local moving picture theater. Marble was formerly Shaw's chauffeur in the East.

With Shaw today was Lewis Field, his negro butler, who took an active part in the denouement last April. Field pointed out Chief Ross at the station today and Shaw at once introduced himself. The latter, at his own request, was taken to La Petite Theater, where Mrs. Shaw, whose father is Fisher Eldridge, the Portsmouth, N. H., millionaire brewer, formerly took tickets. He also visited the Tremont House, where Mrs. Shaw and Marble and Shaw's young son were living together when the police burst in on them at 3 o'clock in the morning.

Mr. Shaw was next taken to Judge S. E. Crow, whom he thanked for awarding him the custody of his son. Mr. Shaw denied later that any of his acts today were to gather data for his divorce suit now pending in Boston. He said his deepest regret was the influence under which his boy had lived there.

The divorce case will come up again in December, Mr. Shaw said. Owing to the prominence of the families in financial and social circles in the East as well as the several attempts at "kidnaping" of young Eldridge Shaw, the case attracted country-wide attention.

GIRL SHOOTS HERSELF.

Grace Gill, aged 13 years, pointed a revolved at her playmate, Ethel Stewart, this afternoon.

"You musn't do that, Grace," cried the Stewart girl.

"Oh, it isn't loaded," said little Miss Gill, and she pointed the weapon at her own head and pulled the trigger.

There was a report and the girl fell to the floor, the blood pouring from a wound in her face. The 32 caliber bullet entered the Gill girl's temple just above the right eye and lodged against the cheek bone. The sight of the eye is gone forever, and the girl is still in a critical condition. She was taken to the hospital this evening and Dr. Boeseke will probe for the bilet. He feels hopeful of the child's recovery.

The accident happened at the house of Grace Gill's mother, Mrs. Gertrude Gill, No. 408 De La Vista street.

Go now to Paso Robles Hot Springs.

ELECTRIC RAILWAY SOON.

Upland Expects to Realize Its Dream. City Is Growing—New Packing-house Begun.

UPLAND, Oct. 23.—A. P. Haiwood member of the Right of Way Committee for the electric railway line, is authority for the statement that the matter of the strip across the Ford place has been satisfactorily adjusted, and that the deeds for the land are in possession of the railway people. This removes the last obstacle to the early completion of the work. The realization of the dream of this city for the last three years seems about to materialize.

For the quarter ending with September 30, the local postoffice reports a gain of 24 per cent. in stamp sales, and over 40 per cent in the money-order business, as compared with the same period of 1908. The registry department also shows a perceptible increase. This is considered a barometer of the progress of the city.

J. T. Cumming has sold to S. Schaffner, formerly of Burlington, Iowa, an orange and lemon grove of ten acres on West Nineteenth street, Upland, for a reported consideration of $14,000. N. G. Pehl has purchased of E. Hubbard, ten acres of oranges and lemons, on West Twentieth street, the price named being $8700.

NEW PACKING-HOUSE.

Ground is being broken for the erection of the new Upland Heights Orange Association's packing-house. An acre was secured at the intersection of the Santa Fé tracks and Euclid avenue, at a cost of $4000, and a packing-house, thoroughly modern and well equipped, with the very latest machinery for the expeditious handling of the fruit, is to be built. The association is composed of men who represent some 150 cars of fruit, and the groves are located in a most favored district of this section. The aim is to raise the standard of their pack, as well as of the quality of the fruit shipped.

The supply of rock in Marble Cañon, north of this city, from which Rose & Wilson of Alhambra, have been drawing in their work of macadamizing Euclid avenue, is said to be now almost exhausted, and the crusher will have to be removed to some other site. This will mean a heavy expense.

USED GASOLINE.

Charles Anderscon, residing in the northern part of the city, filled a lamp in the dark, and by mistake, he used a gasoline can instead of kerosene can. When lighted a few minutes later the lamp exploded, throwing burning oil over the kitchen. Luckily, however, the flames were confined to the one room, the woodwork of which was badly charred.

Mrs. M. A. Anderson and her daughter, Mrs. Diamond, have returned from Pennsylvania, whither they went several weeks ago, to look after the interests of Mrs. Anderson in an estatte. Mrs. Anderson is said to be one of twenty-five heirs.

Go to Paso Robles Hot Springs today if you have kidney or bladder trouble. The water and treatments are most efficacious. Write Frank W. Sawyer, medical director.

LINEMAN KILLED.

Santa Barbara Operator Comes in Contact With High-Tension Wire While in Tree.

SANTA BARBARA, Oct. 23.—Fred Litters, a lineman in the employ of the Edison Company, while up a eucalyptus tree at Montecito, trimming a bough, today came in contact with a high tension wire of 2300 volts. He was rendered unconscious, but remained in the tree. It was necessary to lower him to the ground by a rope.

All efforts to resuscitate him failed. He died several hours after the accident. Litter's home was in Chicago. His family has been notified.

SAVED.

LOST FAMILY IS DISCOVERED.

VICTIMS OF DESERT AT LAST GET RELIEF.

Prospector Arrives at San Bernardino from the Julian Country With News of the Wanderers Reaching a Homestead Where Succor Is Obtained—Boat Wrecked.

SAN BERNARDINO, Oct. 23.—That the family of five, lost on the Imperial county desert, has been saved is the assuring news brought here today by Leonard Phelps, a prospector, just in from the Julian wilds of San Diego county. Phelps says that the family was rescued last Tuesday evening, having reached the Robert Gales's homestead, on the edge of the Imperial desert, in an exhausted condition from the exposure to the desert heat and from thirst.

Phelps cannot recollect the name of the family. The man was ignorant of desert travel, and had forced his horses fifty miles through mountain and desert in a day's journey from San Diego. He had lost the road and was following the bed of Carrisso Creek, where his tracks were encountered by T. H. Kellogg, who brought out the first news of the affair.

Gales's homestead is situated on a water ditch, which supplies irrigation water to a little settlement below him on the desert. The ditch crosses Carrisso Creek, and the lost family coming to the ditch determined to follow its downward course, feeling confident that help would be found not far off.

Within 200 yards of the Gale cabin the lost man had his family take shelter in a small cave, while he continued in search for aid. Gale had been returning from Julian when he met Kellogg, and was told of the finding of the abandoned vehicles in the creek. Gale hurried home and was preparing to undertake a search when the lost man hove in sight, staggering into the Gale clearing as if intoxicated.

Seeing Gale the man slightly waved his hat toward his rescuer, and then sank upon the ground, too exhausted and overcome over a sense of his salvation to continue to tramp to the cabin. Gale rushed to his aid, learned of the woman and children in the cave, and at once started for the place. The miners are said to have recovered the abandoned wagons, and started the little family on its way across the desert, a prospecting party going into Yuma, accompanying the travelers.

BOAT WRECKED IN RIVER.

Capt. Erick Nelson and his first mate, Max Bley, of the ship Eldorado, which has for a number of years plied between River Branch and the mining camps up the Colorado River, were wrecked Thursday, and barely escaped from the treacherous river with their lives. Minus their shoes the two men were compelled to tramp five miles across the desert, and arrived at the Ellis Camp, exhausted and with their feet cut and bruised from contact with the rocks and cacti along the way. All the supplies aboard the ship were lost.

The men set forth with the water calm. There was nothing either in the appearance of the river or the skies to indicate trouble ahead. A day out the river seemed to suddenly hump up as if drawn uphill by a suction pump, and a few minutes later the strain upon the waters gave way, and down the channel the flood rushed, the little vessel being tossed about like a mere chip and finally sunk.

The sailors believe that the river was agitated by some severe subterranean disturbance. Miners along the shore felt no shock, although it is said that many of the severest earthquakes in that region have not been noticeable to those dwelling in the open country.

PROPOSES WATER ARBITRATION.

Kenneth McRae of Rialto, one of the four San Bernardino men who bolted the recent meeting of the Water Conservation Association, has written to E. E. Keeck of Santa Ana, proposing that a board of arbitration be formed to settle the water disputes involving San Bernardino, Riverside and Orange counties. It seems here that most of the ranchers of the valley are more favorable to the organization of an absolutely San Bernardino water protective association. The move of the Riverside Water Company to prevent Rialto orange growers and East Colton ranchers developing water to irrigate lands in this valley has stirred up a hornet's nest.

WILL IMPROVE ROAD.

Old Beach Thoroughfare Between Ventura and Santa Barbara to Be Put in Shape.

VENTURA, Oct. 23.—The old beach road between here and Santa Barbara is to be improved. The property owners along Ventura avenue, who will issue $50,000 bonds, for the construction of the Casitas boulevard, have announced their purpose to spend $7000 of that amount in putting the beach road in order. This will not make a boulevard, but will get the road in better shape than it has been for many years.

An effort will be made to get the county to make a liberal appropriation for the road, and at the next session of the Legislature State aid will be asked. The road to be improved is the stretch of fifteen miles between Ventura and Rincon Creek—the Camino Real of old Mission days.

COLTON.

COLTON, Oct. 23.—Mrs. C. W. Tetwiler and Mrs. J. G. Dyas were thrown from their carriage this morning while out driving. The horse became frightened and overturned the vehicle. Mrs. Dyas was badly hurt, several ribs being broken. Mrs. Tetwiler escaped with minor bruises, but is suffering from the nervous shock.

Mrs. W. C. Hanna and Miss Tacie Hanna are Los Angeles visitors this week.

SCHOOL DISTRICT GROWS.

Trustees at Porterville Plan Omnibus to Outlying Sections—Fruit Men to Meet Soon.

PORTERVILLE Oct. 23.—The school district of which Porterville is the center, which district is practically coextensive with the city limits, has increased so rapidly within the last year that the housing of the children has become a serious problem, as has that of getting the younger children to the schools.

The primary grades are now situated on the south side, which makes a walk or a drive of several miles for the children from the Zante neighborhood. This neighborhood has petitioned County Superintendent Walker for a separate district.

Mr. Walker was here last evening, and in conference with residents of that section and the school trustees it was decided the most feasible method of solving the problem will be for the directors to run a bus to and from the school every morning to transport the younger pupils. If this is found to be practical, it will also be extended to the Reservation neighborhood.

FRUIT MEN TO MEET.

Letters have been received by the Chamber of Commerce from State Horticultural Commissioner Jeffrey, asking that a meeting of the orange growers be held here previous to the State examination, to be held November 26. This meeting will be attended by Mr. Jeffrey, and he will make an address the purpose of which will be to impress upon the growers of this district the importance of the work being done by the commission. Letters received by individuals express Mr. Jeffrey's great confidence in the Commissioner now in charge of the work here.

Porterville fruit growers generally are preparing to attend in force, the meeting of the counties' committee of the State Board of Trade, to be held at the county seat next month.

Announcement was made yesterday that at the close of the Congregational conferences, held last week at Santa Cruz, it was unanimously voted that the conference for next year be held in Porterville. The date has not been decided, but it will be early in October. Invitation to meet here was extended by Rev. C. N. Flanders, and Rev. Albert G. Bryant.

Members of the Anti-Saloon League, who precipitated a fierce discussion of the present liquor laws at a recent meeting of the Council, have been assured that the lawmakers of the city will pass a liquor ordinance which will be drawn up by the prohibition leaders and their attorneys.

It was denied in St. Petersburg yesterday that there was any truth in the rumors that the powers had addressed a joint note to Russia concerning affairs in Manchuria.

How to Get Rid Of Catarrh

A Simple, Safe, Reliable Way, and It Costs Nothing to Try.

Those who suffer from catarrh know its miseries. There is no need of this suffering. You can get rid of it by a simple, safe, inexpensive home treatment discovered by Dr. Blosser, who, for over thirty-five years, has been treating catarrh successfully.

His treatment is unlike any other. It is not a spray, douche, salve, cream, or inhaler, but is a more direct and thorough treatment than any of these. It cleans out the head, nose, throat and lungs so that you can again breathe freely and sleep without that stopped-up feeling that all catarrh sufferers have. It heals the diseased mucous membranes and arrests the foul discharge, so that you will not be constantly blowing your nose and spitting, and at the same time it does not poison the system and ruin the stomach, as internal medicines do.

If you want to test this treatment without cost, send your address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 526 Walton St., Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you by return mail enough of the medicine to satisfy you that it is all he claims for it as a remedy for catarrh, catarrhal headaches, catarrhal deafness, asthma, bronchitis, colds and all catarrhal complications. He will also send you free an illustrated booklet. Write him immediately.

Talks on Teeth

BY Rex Dental Company
Incorporated

The Partial Plate

When a man loses most of his teeth he begins to cast about for a substitute, and his dentist will be most apt to suggest either a "bridge" or a "partial plate."

In some of our previous "Talks on Teeth" we have considered the "bridge" and shown why it is at best a makeshift. Now let us consider that other makeshift—the "partial plate."

There have been cases where such a plate, having anywhere from two to a dozen teeth on it, would stick up in the roof of the mouth or would be on the lower jaw, depending on which plate it was (upper or lower,) with fairly good success—WHEN NEW. But not for long.

The constant shrinking of the gums changes the shape of the mouth and soon a little air is admitted under the plate, spoiling the suction, and down it comes, and the constant wobble up and down brings canker sores on the roof of the mouth and gums, so the man takes to wearing his partial plate in his pocket most of the time.

If you have ever worn one you will agree that these statements are true. The partial plate is a delusion and a snare, and no man or woman would wear one for a moment if he or she knew of a better way of supplying the vacancy in the mouth caused by the missing teeth.

The Alveolar Method

(Teeth WITHOUT PLATES) is the better way.

If you have two or more teeth left in either jaw, tight or loose ones, we will supply WITHOUT USING A PLATE the missing teeth and tighten the loose ones.

This is wonderful news to victims of poor teeth and poor dentistry.

We not only supply the teeth that have been lost, but we cure the cause of the loose teeth which are left, and make them strong, tight and healthy. Then with the Alveolar Method we put a full set of teeth in your mouth that are beautiful to look at, that you can use with the same enjoyment you would get from nature's teeth, and that will last as long as you last. In comparison with the Alveolar Method of supplying teeth the partial plate bears the same relation that a tallow dip bears to an arc light.

WE CAN REFER TO AN ARMY OF PEOPLE WHO HAVE HAD OUR WORK DONE AND THAT IS THE BEST SORT OF PROOF.

We have risen to a point where we no longer need to ask you to take this work on faith. We show the actual results.

Are you a partial plate victim? Don't you want to throw the plate away? Come to our offices in the Severance Building, corner Sixth and Main, for a diagnosis and examination. If that is not possible right now, send for our book, "ALVEOLAR DENTISTRY," which will tell you all about this work. The reading of that book will bring you, if you need teeth, no matter where you live. IT IS SENT FREE.

Eyes tested free. If you don't need glasses or don't want them, we will not charge you anything. We are so confident that we can please you, both in regard to our prices and our ability to fit glasses, that you are at liberty to give an order or not, just as you please. We have just lately thoroughly modernized and equipped our testing rooms with the latest and most scientific eye tests. Sight is priceless. If you have poor vision, if your eyes pain you or if you are subject to headaches it is worse than folly to not find out if you need glasses. If your eyes are too far gone for glasses, or if you don't need them, we will tell you so, as we too highly value our reputation and prospects for future business to do otherwise. We make a specialty of all high-grade glasses. Toric, Kryptok and Astigmatic. A great many people can be fitted with entire satisfaction with simple lenses. Why, then, should we charge the highest prices. First quality reading (stock) lenses fitted in 10-year gold-filled frames, complete for $1.50; some ask $5 to $6. J. C. Fleming, 531 S. That heavy expenses have much to do with the price of an article, nobody can deny. Small expenses are to the benefit of customers. Those ladies patronizing Mrs. Kruseman, milliner, 1302 Pico, corner Rich (four blocks west of Figueroa,) find this out to their greatest satisfaction, as they either pay less or are getting so much better materials for the same money than that they have to pay in places with heavy expenses. The reason that the expenses of Mrs. Kruseman are small is because she makes only to order, a special line in the millinery business in America, but not in Europe, where Mrs. Kruseman got her thorough experience, so even that she fully guarantees of her work, so that ladies ordering do not run any risk whatever. With such a favorable condition no lady can have any objection to order work, as this class of work is not only always the best, but gives you exactly what you want. Not only entirely new, but work of own materials and retrimming is order work, and is consequently done by Mrs. Kruseman. As she is giving this part the same careful attention, the results are always more than pleasing to her many customers.

The Steinway Stands Alone

THERE are pianos as good as any piano—but the Steinway. The Steinway stands alone the standard to which other good pianos approach —but never equal.

STEINWAY

Incomparably The Best Piano In Musical Quality—

The musical quality of the Steinway is supreme. If you are unacquainted with music, ask any competent person to name the best piano. An honest answer will inevitably be "The Steinway." Its supremacy is universally recognized. And there is reason for it, for no other piano is produced under the same conditions as the greatest instrument of them all. The Steinway Piano is the product of four generations of Steinways—all masters of the piano-maker's craft during their period, and all adding something of merit to the instrument they labored upon. The Steinway is the result—the perfect [illegible] of highly-specialized, ever-increasing skill. Yet Steinways are obtainable at moderate prices—and on terms that make them available to every cultivated home.

We Are Exclusive Steinway Representatives for Southern California and Arizona

The Steinway Pianos are obtainable only through this Establishment. Grands, Vertegrands and Uprights, $575 to [illegible]—Eastern prices, with a small added charge to cover the cost of freight and handling. Steinways may be purchased on terms of $15 monthly and up. THE COUNCIL
VETO MESSAGE
BUT OF COURSE UNCLE ALECK DONE IT!!

Who "Done" It?—The evolution of one of Uncle Aleck's veto messages.

IT WAS morning in the City Hall—the dawn of an historic day.

Uncle Aleck had gone twice to the great safety vaults to see if his top hat was secure and had notified the City Hall policeman that if he should see any one hurrying out of the City Hall wearing a nearly-new tall hat in a suspicious manner, he should do his duty.

Then he rushed back to the Mayor's office, where the hired clerk, who can spell pretty near any word, right offhand, was waiting. With him was another young gentleman, Mr. Ledgerton, the human fire alarm and messenger of the Municipal League.

"What's the matter?" asked Uncle, uneasily. "Didn't I use the right fork?"

The appearance of Mr. Ledgerton usually means that Uncle is in bad.

The young reformer raised a deprecating hand—just like that. "I have come," he said with a solemn voice, "to see that you do what's what with that hound-dog of an ordinance."

Uncle saw that the ordinance lay on his shiny office desk, and slowly sank into his chair under the commanding eye of the young reformer.

He took up his old quill pen, chewed out a feather; tickled up his beard, and finally asked in some embarrassment of the hired clerk:

"Frank, I forget how to spell veto."

"Spell it like potato," replied the clerk, referring to the absence of the final "e."

"What kind of a potato?" asked Uncle Aleck, somewhat bewildered.

"Any kind of a potato."

"Then," said Uncle, absently, "I guess I'll spell it like an Irish potato. That will land every Irish vote in town."

With that Uncle Aleck grabbed the pen and wrote: "I veto this here ordinance. Aleck."

WHAT NEXT?

Mr. Ledgerton, the young reformer, who was leaning suspiciously over his shoulder, slipped a blotting pad over the wet ink and picked up the paper.

"Hey," said Uncle Aleck, "that has to go to the City Council."

"That has to go to the Municipal League," retorted the messenger, sourly.

Uncle Aleck watched him as he folded up the paper and started to go.

"After the Municipal League gets plum through with it——"

"Then it goes to the Mr. Mush Slimson, the wielder of the official hair brush."

Uncle Aleck scratched his head in dismay.

"After that," said Mr. Ledgerton, "I don't mind telling you, although it isn't any of your affairs, that it goes to Mr. Listener and Mr. Churl and Mr. Gammon."

"By golly," muttered Uncle Aleck.

As Mr. Ledgerton started down the hall he felt a timid hand on his arm. "Excuse me," Uncle faltered, "but I jist wanted to ask you as a p'sonal favor, if, after Gammon and Churl and that young feller with the hair brush and all get through with it, and after the children get through playing with it—I jist wanted to ask if the Council could look at it."

"Well, perhaps; we will see about it," said the young reformer in a kind voice; and continued on his way.

Uncle Aleck sighed heavily and went down to the safe to have another look at his hat.

A SUMMONS.

After hunting up the night watchman and making him sign an oath that if any safe-cracker got Uncle Aleck's hat it would be over his dead body, the Mayor had returned to his office.

"Z-z-zang." It was the office telephone. Uncle put the receiver to his ear. The conversation was brief. He jammed on his hat—not THE hat, of course; just an every-day hat—and started off in hot haste for the Municipal League.

When he arrived the "Committee on Ruling the City" was in session, obviously waiting for him. Mr. Ledgerton was standing at one side, in an attitude of conscious virtue, much as a detective looks when he gets a medal for capturing a bad bank robber.

"It was certainly considerate of you to leave us to write the message," said the chairman.

"Huh!" gasped Uncle Aleck.

"You didn't intend this thing for the veto message, I hope," said the chairman, scornfully holding up the few crisp, simple words written by Uncle Aleck's own hand; "I veto this here message!"

Uncle tried to bluff it off; but they saw the truth by his guilty manner.

"This was all he was going to say," shouted the chairman.

"Ha, ha, ha," laughed the reformers.

"Ha, ha," said Uncle, meekly, being anxious to please. And then, seeing that he had omitted something, politely added, "Ha."

They told him he could be excused and he hurried to the office. But first, before going to the office, he made a detour to the safety vaults for a certain purpose.

Presently he was summoned by telephone to the office where Mr. Churl, the editor, holds conference with Nick Oswald and his other advisers.

By preconcerted signal, Uncle Aleck made a noise like a rebate in the corridor, and the door slowly creaked open.

Editor Gammon was just leaving.

"What you did to the Mayor's message," Editor Churl was saying, savagely, "was simply fierce. If it happens again——"

Editor Gammon shuddered.

Uncle Aleck found out that Editor Gammon wanted to add this to the message: "P. S.—The Mayor wishes to commend the noble enterprise on the part of that sterling patriot, that peerless American, Thomas Jefferson Gammon, who recently assembled a vast concourse of forty-one people to divide the State of California."

"It was merely a suggestion on the part of one of my editorial writers on the Hurid," whispered Gammon.

"My editorial writer on the Hurid," corrected Churl. With this Mr. Gammon faded.

Uncle Aleck, as he approached the desk, wondered on what spot on the carpet Mayor Harper had stood, and tried to stand somewhere else.

Churl scowled at Uncle Aleck, and said he had been reading his message and didn't like it at all.

WHAT'S THAT?

"There should be," he barked, "something about 'forestalling the prerogatives.'"

"Pre who?" queried Uncle Aleck, timidly.

"Prerogative," roared the reform editor.

He was fingering his beard with nervous, shaking fingers. Then a sly, glitering look came into his eye.

"The fact is," he explained, "I left the feller out on purpose. I wasn't sure he was on our side, and I heard you didn't like him, anyhow."

"And you ought to have said something about 'indexed and collated.'"

"Certainly; certainly," agreed Uncle Aleck, nervously. "Put in the collection, and—that other thing."

Uncle finally got out; but he was in a cold perspiration.

He had hardly time to get back to the Mayor's office, when he was summoned to the office of Mr. Listener, the boss, who told him he was about the worst ever, and bullied him around for a while on general principles. When he found some one else to bully, Mr. Listener sent Uncle Aleck over to the office of Mr. Mush Slimson, the young political sunburst of reform.

Mr. Slimson greeted Uncle Aleck

PLAN TO HOLD BROWN.

Authorities Will Consider Advisability of Filing New Charges Against Bucketshop Man.

Paul McCormick, Deputy District Attorney, and Detectives Jones and Boyd, will confer tomorrow in regard to filing new complaints against Harry D. Brown, "stock broker," who is now at liberty, under bail, awaiting trial on two charges of felony.

In view of the fact that there are indications that Brown is intending to leave the city, the authorities believe they will be justified in again arresting him, if evidence on other cases is sufficiently strong to lead them to believe they can obtain convictions.

Brown's bail of $4000 is considered exceedingly small, in comparison with the amount he is accused of having mulcted from former "customers." The police are keeping a weather eye out for Brown, who was seen on the streets yesterday.

COUNCIL MUST COUNT VOTES.

CANVASS OF THE ANNEXATION ELECTION LENGTHY.

City Attorney Will Advise About One of the Idiosyncracies of the Special Act Under Which the Municipality Takes in More Territory. Six Thousand Ballots.

When City Attorney Hewitt tells the City Council tomorrow that it must count all the votes cast at the annexation election on the 19th, inst. there will be a change of the day's programme for Tuesday. There was eighty-two precincts in that election, and more than 6000 votes were cast. This means that the Council, instead of canvassing the returns, as it usually does in an hour or two, must open each bag and count the votes as found.

"This is one of the idiosyncracies of the annexation law," said Mr. Hewitt, "but it is the law and must be followed. It means that the Council will have to give a whole lot of time to this work in order to verify the result.

"The variations of the election laws in California, and the multitude of ways in which the legal result is reached are an interesting study. When a special law has been designed for a special purpose, and an election has been involved, it seems to have been the rule to provide a special system of election. Consequently, there are many ways of determining what is the popular will—and this is one of them."

The Council had expected to dispose of the annexation election in a jiffy, but it now appears that most of the day will be consumed.

FUNERAL OF MINISTER.

The funeral of the late Rev. Limer Brickels was held yesterday, at his late residence, No. 1721 Arapahoe street, where he died on Thursday, aged 74 years. The deceased was a retired Presbyterian minister, who came here to make his home with his son, John L. Brickels. The remains will be sent to Waukesha, Wis., for interment.

DICK FERRIS FINED.

Dick Ferris, actor, aëronaut and general promotor, was among the petty offenders in Justice Frederickson's court yesterday. A patrolman had arrested him on a charge of not having a seal on his automobile. He admitted he was guilty of a negative violation of law and paid the $3 fine levied by the magistrate

DOLLARS AT WORK.

FAVORS CITY LOANING BODY.

LOS ANGELES WILL HAVE NEAR MILLION TO INVEST.

Corporation Counsel Will Go Before Council Tomorrow and Recommend Creation of Special Committee or Commission to Attend to Idle Funds in Treasury.

Los Angeles will have a sinking fund approximating $1,000,000 to invest before the fiscal year ends in June, 1910. This is the estimate of the City Attorney, who will go before the City Council tomorrow and advocate the creation of a special Council committee or commission to perform the sole function of investing this fund as it accumulates.

The attorney is not particular how the Council creates the power that is to perform this duty, but he wants it empowered to buy in the open market short-time bonds with the sinking fund, so that this great amount and the accretions from year to year will be kept active and earn almost as much as the city is paying on the same amount of its bonded debt.

This sinking fund is a large part of the aqueduct scheme of finance, and to be beneficial must be invested all the time in earning securities. The law permits its investments in the bonds of this or any other municipality or school district in California, government bonds or the bonds of any other State.

The tax levy for this year will bring $550,000 alone to the sinking fund and the interest on that amount until 1915, when the first aqueduct bonds mature, will be a snug fortune in itself.

It is the idea of the City Attorney that the Auditor and Treasurer should not be members of the committee or commission, because they must pass on all demands against the fund, and they would serve as a check on improvident use of it.

PRIZES FOR BABIES.

Feature of Pure Food Show for Four Days This Week—Large Attendance Last Night.

Yesterday was "Polytechnic Day" at the Pure Food Show, now being conducted in the Panorama Rink, on South Main street. Several hundred boys and girls were on hand to sample the "goodies" offered at the different booths. Many of them were accompanied by their mothers, and a few brought their fathers down to see, taste and be convinced. The attendance in the evening was the largest of the week.

All of the booths have been completed, and no space remains in the pavilion.

Secretary Pauly of the Merchants' Exchange, who is superintending the affair, has provided numerous entertainments. A new one is a negro quartette, located at the door as an enticement for those who can just get a glimpse of the interior.

A baby show has been arranged for Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. On the first day, all girl babies, under 2 years, will be allowed to enter the contest. The following day, babies from 2 to 4, also of the feminine sex, will be entered. The last two days of the baby show, boys will be called for. The prizes will be silver loving cups.

The vaudeville and musical programme for the coming week has been changed entirely. This part of the "show" is in charge of Alfred Ellis. Many of the grocers throughout the city are giving tickets to their customers, and many exhibitors are also sending out tickets to help swell the attendance

DANCE WITH NEPTUNE.

DO HIGH JINKS ON THE REEF.

Los Angeles Boys Tell of Songs in Hurricane.

Forty-five-Foot Waves Beat Accompaniment.

Passengers on Liner Have Sure Enough Thrill.

High jinks in a hurricane blowing 110 miles an hour, with waves forty-five feet high, is something new. Yet it was the experience of Joseph Duncan Gleason and John Paul Burnham, young Los Angeles artists, on their trip from New Orleans to New York on the Morgan line steamer, Antilles.

This is the biggest liner of the Morgan system, and it went aground in the storm on the Great Bahama banks on the night of the 11th inst. Its fate and the fate of its passengers was a matter of grave concern to the families of the young men in this city, who did not know that while they were worrying the youngsters were having their high jinks.

LETTER TELLS OF STORM.

A letter received by Mrs. Nora Gleason, mother of Duncan Gleason, from her son yesterday, turned all the worry into smiles and she hastened to send it to Architect F. C. Burnham, whose son was her son's companion on the trip.

Gleason's letter explains what happened. It says:

"We are at last nearing New York, having been transferred to the Comus, and the events of the past ten days have already come to be a sort of dream. Now that we are nearing old New York, I can say that I would not have missed it for ten years of my life. I shall not attempt to describe the storm, except to give some extracts from the ship's log.

"'Monday, Oct. 11, 8:30 a.m.—Shipped a heavy sea forward, which smashed dead light in dining-room, flooding saloon and striking a number of passengers. Glass hit one lady on head. Shipped a sae through ventilator funnels, which spoiled entire breakfast, which had to be cooked over again.

"'Monday, 9:30 a.m.—Cone of water seventy feet high struck vessel amidship and lifted lifeboats out of caulks, smashed two and damaged two others. Stove in smoking-room skylights, flooding smoking-room and staterooms. Smashed chairs and tables, and broke all other skylights, flooding saloon.

"'Monday, 10 a.m.—Velocity of wind 110 miles an hour. Waves running forty-five feet high. Cone of water sixty-five to seventy feet high.

"'Monday, 12:40 p.m.—Shipping heavy seas. After-derricks set adrift, smashing skylights, bucket racks, etc.

"'Monday, 11:30 p.m.—Grounded on Great Bahama Shoals. Two miles from Gulf Stream (deep water.) One hundred miles off Florida coast.'

"We were in the very vortex of the storm, which was the most severe the Gulf has ever known. We were fortunate in having an exceptionally courageous lot of passengers, and Tuesday morning, at 2 o'clock, it was dark as pitch. Knowing only that we were grounded, with heavy seas pounding us, we got up a concert in the saloon. We found a waiter who could sing Irish songs, and we had a rag time, and all who could hammer the piano at all, took turns, and so through the night we had high jinks.

"While on the reefs three of us got up an illustrated daily paper, cartooning all the events of the week. It made such a hit that the passengers insist on having copies printed, offering to pay us $5 a copy. I will send you one.

"Friday morning the Comus was sighted and anchored two miles off and we were transferred in the life boats.

"I was thoroughly drenched, both in the dining-room and smoking-rooms, but was not seasick at all and am feeling fine now."

Before receiving this letter Miss Pearl Gleason, secretary of the Library Board, was kept busy hunting news of the wreck in the eastern papers. Word had already been received that the passengers had been transferred to the Comus, another steamer, and that they were all safe.

GULF STREAM OFF COURSE.

"One of the trans-Atlantic liners reported," said Miss Gleason yesterday, "that it had discovered an unprecedented phenomenon, as a result of the great storm on the gulf and Caribbean Atlantic. It sailed in the teeth of the gale on its trip from Gibraltar. The captain said the ship encountered the Gulf stream 200 miles out of its course. In making tests they found the warm water of this ocean current in the position as stated, where, so far as known, it had never been found before. Evidently that blow was 'going some,'" said Miss Gleason.

One of the passengers on the Antilles was Gov. Sanders of Louisiana.

Gleason is not only an artist of rising prominence in New York, but is an athlete of capability enough to enter the contest for the world's championship on the flying wings. He has many acrobatic stunts to do and his family imagines that he helped a whole lot to cheer the shipwrecked passengers on the great Bahama bank.

DAMAGES BY FLAMES.

Four Buildings Scorched by Fire Originating in Apartment House—Gasoline Figures Twice.

Two barns, a dwelling house and an apartment building were damaged by fire yesterday afternoon.

The flames broke out in the apartments kept by A. Stableman, No. 1362 Wright street. The damage was about $1000. The fire spread to the barns of A. Martin, No. 1400 Wright street, and N. E. McGowain, No. 1363 De Long street, and were also communicated to the home of J. B. Smith, No. 1401 De Long street. The damage on each of these buildings was about $200. The fire department has been unable to learn the cause of the fire.

An exploding gasoline stove set fire to the home of L. Panpost, No. 1179 East Forty-second Place, yesterday. The damage was about $130.

The home of Mrs. Aulasisak, No. 516½ East First street, was slightly damaged by flames originating from gasoline being used in cleaning a dress.

HISTORY AND FESTIVITY.

PAGEANTRY OF PORTOLA SEEN BY THOUSANDS IN PAST WEEK'S SAN FRANCISCO JOYOUSNESS.

of Thursday in San Francisco, when thousands witnessed most wonderful street pageant in city's history.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The last day of Portola week was given up to sports in the daytime, but tonight came the greatest parade of the festival—the electric street parade, followed by dancing around great illuminated floats on Market-street corners. The sport included an auto road race of 250 miles, in which the Vanderbilt cup time was beaten; tennis between May Sutton and Hazel Hotchkiss, and other sports.

The story of California was told pictorically in an immense historical pageant this evening. This parade, with the ensuing carnival, was the crowning triumph of the Portola festival.

Glimpses of three centuries of California history were afforded the immense throngh that lined the streets of the city. From the coming of Portola down to the present day, the history of the State was unfolded in a panorama brilliant with color and lights and life.

While several of the parades during the festival have been longer and had more participants in line, the pageant this evening surpassed all others in gorgeousness. It was a climax of the immensely successful festival. It was the result of months of work on the part of the famous artists, skilled mechanics and stage directors. No theatrical spectacle surpassed it in glitter and magnificence, and it was as historically accurate as the lore of antiquarians could make it.

The stirring events in the history of the State were portrayed by dramatic life tableaux. Scenic artists lavished their skill on the floats, and the actors were costumed and drilled by experienced theatrical managers.

Don Gaspar de Portola headed the parade, riding on a float and escorted by the Portola dragoons. This tableau was symbolical of the arrival of Portola and his expedition in California. The life of the early citizens was depicted. A tableau portrayed the coming of the padres and the building of the early missions.

The romantic life of the early Spanish settlers was shown. There were bullfighters on foot and on horseback to give a piquant dash of color to the scene.

The second division of the pageant was headed by a tableau showing the discovery of gold by Marshall. Then came a series of pictures depicting the wid care-free life of the days of the Argonauts. Prairie schooners, stage coaches and a pony express rider typified the early means of communication. There were picturesque Bret Harte characters and the interior of a gambling hall of the early days.

RAISING OF BEAR FLAG.

Fremont at Sonoma and the raising of the Bear Flag were vividly portrayed, an dthe driving of the last spike on the first transcontinental railway brought to a close this era in California history. Students from Stanford University made up the cast for the railroad tableau.

The Chinese made an even more elaborate display in the pageant tonight, than they did in the big parade Thursday. A number of illuminated fish, which have never before been seen in America and seldom indeed in China, were a feature of the Chinese display.

The Chinese also had a float showing the building of the first railroad in the State. Several Chinese who actually worked on this road, some of them now more than 70 years of age, were on the float. There were more than a thousand of San Francisco's Chinese colony in line.

An allegorical section was a feature of the pageant. The floats in this section typified agriculture, California poppies, sunshine, etc., were fashioned by some of the leading artists and sculptors in the city, and nothing more magnificent has been seen here.

QUEEN ON FLOAT.

Queen Virgilia on a float escorted by the MacClay cadets brought up this portion of the big pageant. The MacClay cadets are the California Grays, who made a big hit in the parades on Tuesday and Thursday.

Then followed the Japanese section. The cherry blossom float of the Japanese was one of the big hits of Thursday's parade, but it was surpassed by tonight's display.

Headed by a confetti volcano came the carnival section of the parade. It was a motley dancing crew in fantastic garbs that filled to overflowing the streets through which it passed. Folly, Mirth, Fi-fi, Zo-zo and all the others were there.

After the parade the great crowd promenaded the streets or indulged in dancing around the floats, while fireworks lit up the sky. So in a blaze of glory passed the great Portola Festival.

WONDERFUL PARADE.

Twenty-five thousand men and women marched in the parade of Thursday, the greatest ever in the West. More than one million persons were in the throng which viewed it, the greatest number of people ever gathered in San Francisco. The vastness of the crowd was not appreciable to those who had no opportunity to view the entire line of march. At every point a dense, swaying human mass awaited the oncoming parade. To keep the crowd within the cables stretched along the streets seemed impossible, the police in many instances being compelled to use their clubs to drive back those who fought for positions of vantage.

SCENE A THRILLING ONE.

At Kearny and Market streets the scene thrilled. With limbs dangling from fire walls, cornices and every sill of the tall buildings at this intersection, thousands of men and women looked down upon the unfolding pageant. Those who did not care to view the parade at possible risk of life and limb, leaned out from the windows, while thousands of others sought places upon the sidewalks. So dense was the crowd at the Lotta fountain, the Geary-street railway turntable had to be stopped when half way round. The car upon it was immediately taken possession of by the rollicking spectators.

The parade amazed. Its numbers amazed. Its variety amazed. Its beauty amazed.

With Indian braves in war paint playing the scout before it, and with the Chief of Police following the braves in an automobile to make certain that the way was clear, the great parade started from the ferry at about a half-hour before the advertised time. Yet it was into anything but an enemy's country that the marchers were to penetrate.

KING GASPAR APPEARS.

With the appearance of King Gaspar and Queen Virgilia, escorted by the Portola Dragoons, throats were cleared and shouting rent the air. Never have rulers received such a greeting. Enthusiasm was loosed when the Spanish-American War Veterans came within range, carrying the largest American flag. As the Stars and Stripes moved slowly through the streets the slumbering patriotism that is in the heart of every being asserted itself. Hats were doffed, arms waved and a mighty cheer went up. The fanfare of brass, the rolling of the drums intoxicated. The crowds caught the spirit. When the parade was well on, San Francisco had become a bedlam.

Fifty Portola Dragoons, under Col. J. K. Ritter, resplendent in red, yellow and green, with breast-plates shining and helmets flashing in the down-pouring sunlight which a kind Providence had turned on from the sky, had the place of honor, for they acted as escort to Virgilia and Don Gaspar. Their white ruffs and vari-colored plumes gave the last touch to a costume which, in any other parade, would have been remembered as the climax of the spectacle. They looked as if they had just stepped out of a play. But the now-familiar figures of the Queen and the Spanish Governor had all the air of genuine royalty. To say that Miss Virgilia Bogue and Nicholas A. Covarrubias received an ovation is merely banal. It was more like the greeting that usually falls to the lot of a Republican candidate for the Presidency just before election than anything else.

HEADED BY CAVALRY.

The second division, which began after a number of well-known personages, whose fame rested upon mere present-day history and lacked the glamour of fiction and romance, was headed by troops H and G of the Second Squadron and the Fourteenth Cavalry, U.S.A. Grim reality now stared the onlooking thousands in the face—men who rode in the pageant with the same nonchalance and the same easy horsemanship which would have characterized them had they been going to quell a riot, or to repel an invasion. Market street has seen many troops of cavalry pass and repass—several times to escort a President of the United States, once to hold the protecting hand of government over a populace stricken and homeless. In Portola's reception to the men on horseback there was more than a touch of the respect and grateful remembrance which lingers in the hearts of the people towards that branch of the public service which once did them such yeoman's service.

There were fourteen divisions in the wonderful parade, each section vieing with the other for honors in splendor. In the fifth division were only the Elks and members of the Knights of Pythias lodge. The Los Angeles "Bills" had the place of honor, leading off with their famous White Squadron Band and the crack White Squadron Drill Corps, fifty-four men uniformed in pure white, with facings of Elk purple, and each carrying a tiny, fluttering American flag on a staff. Marching perfectly in a solid column of fours, they won "a hand" throughout the entire course of the parade.

The Oakland Elks also made a brave showing. They were led by a gay company of heralds wearing medieval costumes of gay blue and red plush, and bearing the trumpets and the banners of Oakland Lodge, No. 171.

San Francisco Lodge, No. 3, quietly garbed in uniforms of black, marched as an escort to one of the most unique floats in the entire parade—a live elk from the Golden Gate Park paddock, lying down inside a wire cage decorated with greens, and as drowsily indifferent to the applauding thousands as if their noise was but the wind through his native forests.

FILLED EVERY INCH.

Along the entire route of the three-mile parade a double row of residents and visitors filled every inch of the space, sometimes so many rows deep that the last ones were crowded against the walls of the buildings.

Business was suspended, for, although all the shops did not close, there was no space in which people could move about to purchase goods. Every office building made a frame for the faces of pretty girls in the windows, while the men sat upon the ledges or stood upon the roofs. Thousands of people were on the hillside, carrying field glasses, to whom the music of the many bands came as a distant echo, but who saw every separate item in the most wonderful procession that has occurred in Western America.

With the dawn of the great feature day the transportation companies began landing their hosts of passengers at the various depots and docks of the city, until at 10 o'clock every street leading from the ferry and coast line depots became black ribbons of humanity, whose common goal was a vantage point from which to view the parade. The influx continued until noon, when the tide turned and many who had witnessed the monster pageant turned their steps homeward and loaded the boats leaving the city as fast as they could be docked.

CROWDS WELL HANDLED.

The crowds were handled with little or no delay by the companies operating between here and the transbay cities. The Oakland and Berkeley trains of the Key Route were made up of eight cars each and ran every twenty-minutes, while the Southern Pacific ran twelve and fourteen-car trains, and in one instance sandwiched in a twenty-two-car special on the Alameda line.

In one instance an Alameda train, which was loaded at Park street, left 500 people standing on the platform at the Chestnut-street station, being unable to carry another person.

On the Oakland broad-gauge lines trains started from the terminals at 6 o'clock, and from that hour until noon seats were at a premium, if, indeed, one could get one at all. These lines carried an average of 25,000 passengers an hour from Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley, and up to noon handled 150,000, according to conservative estimates by officials of the company.

The Key Route carried an average of 12,000 persons every hour, and landed about 75,000 passengers in the city by noon. The Creek route of the Southern Pacific ran one boat every hour and transported over 5000 persons before noon. The last boat before the parade had 1200 passengers and 80 automobiles on board. This line carried 250 machines during the forenoon.

The arrivals on the Tiburon and Sausalito ferries numbered 10,200, divided as follows: Sausalito, 1000; Santa Rosa and Petaluma, 1200; suburban points, 7500, and main line stations, 500.

The various cities and towns on the Coast line of the Southern Pacific contributed about 4200 persons to swell the Portola crowd, and the line from Santa Cruz brought in another 1200. The main line trains of the Santa Fé landed 1200 passengers in the city before the parade started, many of them coming from as far south as the Tehachepi.

CAME BY STEAMER.

The bay and river steamers brought down about 2500 people, the Monticello, Frisbee and Arrow carrying 1130 of this number from Vallejo and Napa. Three hundred of these passengers came from Napa and St. Helena. The Zinfandel and Monticello brought 400 and 600 persons respectively on their first trip.

Together with the traffic handled by the San Mateo line outside of the city limits, competent traffic officials make a conservative estimate af 275,000 out-of-town people brought into the city between daylight and noon, and many hundreds more traveled in automobiles from San José and points in Santa Clara and San Mateo counties.

Longer parades there have been elsewhere—yet 25,000 persons marching

Invest Your Money In Oil

Oil is the greatest money-making industry in California. Oil is the greatest dividend-producer of California's mineral output. Invest your money in the stock of a company operating in a district where high-gravity oil is produced. Remember, the higher the gravity of oil, the higher the price obtainable for it. The Ventura district is noted for its production of high-gravity oil, and the property leased by the Ventura Oil Development Company is almost surrounded by high-gravity oil producing properties.

PROPERTY

The present holdings of the Ventura Oil Development Company consist of a fifty-year lease on 640 acres of oil land with an option to purchase outright. Royalty one-sixth. Holdings located at Piru, Ventura, California. There is easily room for from 250 to 300 wells. Oil seepages are found in numerous places. This tract is bounded on three sides by the Modelo wells, which have been producing for years. These wells prove the ground and make it an almost positive certainty that this company will prove an immensely profitable one.

Cost of Development

The cost of drilling wells is much less than in most oil fields, as it is not necessary to use the expensive heavy casing that is used in other parts of the state.

Oil for fuel and water for all purposes is right at hand, oil from our immediate neighbors, water on the property. Water costs many companies thousands and thousands of dollars a year.

The property is located within a few minutes' walk of the railroad and a mile of pipe will bring the oil to tank cars by gravity, thus eliminating the cost of pumping through the pipe line.

It is in the heart of one of the most prolific agricultural regions in the State and everything is cheap, here again lessening expenditures such as less favored localities are forced to make. Living is cheap.

Gravity of Oil

The oil here is of high gravity, running from 25 to 35 degrees, exceptionally adapted for refining purposes, and therefore is in demand at a high price. The market is unlimited.

Only a short distance away, in Torrey Canyon, the Union Oil Company secured its first wells, which formed the nucleus of what is now a company with one hundred millions of dollars in assets.

Free Trip of Inspection

If you are skeptical let us take you to the property at our own expense. You don't have to buy a share of stock until you have seen with your own eyes and are convinced that as an investment proposition the stock of the Ventura Oil Development Company is the best on the market today. Many people have already gone as our guests and we should like to take you. Write us at once for further particulars regarding this free trip.

Stock of the Ventura Oil Development Company to be advanced in price shortly Bear in mind that the first allotment of stock at ten cents a share is bound to be sold very rapidly. Consequently, an advance in price may be looked for shortly. Therefore, we earnestly urge you to act promptly.

You can buy the stock both for cash or on the installment plan. Our terms are 20 per cent. down and 20 per cent. per month on the installment plan, and a discount of 5 per cent. is allowed for cash.

Hurry and get in your order at the ground-floor price. Make reservation at 10c pending your further investigation. Buy as much or as little as you can afford, but buy at once.

Call at our office tomorrow, if possible. See the maps, the expert oil men's report, and get full information.

If you cannot call immediately, fill our and mail the coupon below without delay, and you will promptly receive literature which will supply you with full information.

We will also mail you the "Oil Book," which tells all about California oil stocks. How $170 made a million. How stocks earn 20 per cent. to 30 per cent. dividends. How you can invest idle money to the best advantage. How you can invest on the monthly payment plan. The "Oil Book" is published twice every month.

Doctor-Dentists.
Dentist-Doctors

The ordinary Doctor is not a Dentist. The ordinary Dentist is not a Physician. In our Institution of Physicians and Surgeons we have SPECIALISTS in all departments. Our Dental Department is the only DENTAL office where a practicing physician is constantly in attendance. We have, besides, the best mechanical dentist in charge of our laboratory, the best dental surgeon in charge of our operating rooms. If anaesthetics are desired, we administer them with scholarly expertness. If tooth trouble arises from diseases of the body we diagnose and treat correctly. If neuralgia is occasioned by decaying teeth we remove the cause and cure to stay cured.

Our dentistry beautifies the mouth, and our artificial product cannot be distinguished from Nature's finest toothcraft.

Children and ladies who fear to go to other dentist's are so gently treated here that they delight to come again.

Our practice of dentistry makes it seem a relief to be hastened to, not a torture to be shrunk from.

Dollar for dollar, we give you more value for service than any dentists in the city.

Come NOW. After the holidays our prices will be advanced.

Ours is the only Dental Office in Los Angeles which offers FREE EXAMINATIONS — FREE EXTRACTIONS—FREE CLEANING —FREE MEDICAL ADVICE.

of the Spanish govern- to associate Ferrer and of education and of politics with the red anarchy of practical nihilists, seems not sustained by facts, or, if the facts exist, they are not presented by the government, which tried and condemned Ferrer by secret process.

The Spanish government, when it opposes free education by Ferrer's schools, is not suppressing anarchy, is not standing for order, it is simply arrayed against the enlightened spirit of the age. And its real quarrel with Ferrer was not because of its fear of him as an anarchist, but its fear of him as an educator. He died with the words "the modern school" upon his lips.—[Minneapolis Journal.

Mercy Better Than a Crown.

Even if Ferrer had been guilty of the charges which had been brought against him, a pardon would have been good politics. Modern nations do not inflict the death penalty on rebels. England would not have executed Robert Emmet in 1909. Nobody was led to the block by the United States for participation in the rebellion of 1861-65. Enlightened Europe protested against the carrying out of the sentence of death against the Barcelona offender. Pius X appealed for clemency for him, and the Pontiff belongs to a caste which has always and everywhere counseled obedience to the existing order. 'Tis true, 'tis pity. But on the follies and crimes of its enemies, the cause of popular rights moves on to victory. The executioners at Barcelona fired a shot heard round the world.

Fertile Blood of Martyrs.

Russia has found that the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church. Spain will learn the same truth. Turkey has already done so. Ideas may be rooted out by argument. They cannot be extirpated by the scaffold or the firing squad. This holds good in the domain of politics as well as that of religion.

It behooves Spain to stamp out bomb-throwing—to punish every one who, after a fair trial, shall have been proved to be a party to such a crime. No evidence has been presented as yet to show that Ferrer was engaged in work of that kind. It is a crime for a government to execute or imprison men merely because they preach a propaganda of liberty. It is the duty of the Spanish government, as of every other government, to jail men who preach a propaganda of violence. The fact that no evidence proving that Ferrer did that has been made public is strong evidence that the government has none that will stand scrutiny.—[Chicago Tribune.

Punished for Modernism.

One of the most disquieting features of the Ferrer tragedy is the suspicion, which is widespread and not without some plausible appearance of foundation, though we must hope that the foundation is not real, that that distinguished educator was a victim of the clerical opposition to what is known as "modernism" in teaching. It is indisputable that Mr. Ferrer was a "modernist." He was the head of an institution of learning which was called the Modern School, and he wa an avowed exponent and advocate of "modernism."

Now, "modernism" is not a crime, even if some criminals profess it. It is nothing more than freedom of thought, Galileo, insisting that the world moved, and Columbus, proclaiming the possibility of circumnavigation of the globe, were "modernists" in their times.

We cannot believe that even the present reactionary government of Spain would be so fatuous and so wicked as deliberately to make a martyr to free thought and to put such a man as Mr. Ferrer to death for no other reason than his "modernism." If it had done so it would be guilty of one of the most foolish crimes and most criminal follies of the age. It must be that there were other reasons for its action. In that case, for its own sake and for the sake of humanity, it is to be hoped that it will speedily make those reasons known so clearly that the world will be convinced of their sufficiency and justice.—[New York Tribune.

Hope for Better Conditions.

We may all wish for Spain far better conditions than now exist without shutting our eyes to the fact that they are not easily produced, and are not to be expected by the way of anarchy. France resorted to anarchy, and drew Napoleon for a prize. It was not until nearly a hundred years later that she enjoyed a government worthy of the name republic, and from which began to benefit in happiness and prosperity for the masses.—[Washington Star.

CHAUFFEUR A PALLBEARER.

Helps Carry Massive Bronze Casket Containing Body of Mrs. Jones to Tomb, by Her Request.

Many stories are told relating to remarkable attributes of the late Mrs. John H. Jones, who died Tuesday night after having led a long life of Christian charity, which did not stop with the donation of money, but was carried into her household.

Typical, of the woman who made her servants revere her and look upon her as a guardian and friend, was one of her last requests, which was carried out at the funeral Friday. Among those who carried the heavy bronze casket to the tomb was Charles Wetenhall. He is not a bank president, a bondholder or in any way related to the dead woman. He is a chauffeur, and as driver of the family automobile did much to brighten the life of Mrs. Jones. She saw no reason why his friendship should not be acknowledged and respected.

All who knew Wetenhall declare he is a cultivated man, and a kindly, generous youth, and members of the family say there is no reason why he should not have acted as pallbearer. They say it is an unfortunate fact that many persons with far less wealth an power would have selected as pallbearers those who represented large worldly interests.

This is merely an incident, but a strong commentary on the life of the late Mrs. Jones.

MOUNTAINEERS' CLUB.

The Mountaineers' Club of Bungalow Land, Laurel Cañon, held a business meeting last evening, and elected A. A. Pratt, president; R. G. Marsh, vice-president; Mrs. B. M. Small, secretary, and Mrs. R. B. Vercler, treasurer. On the committee appointed for the next entertainment are Foster M. Price, R. B. Vercler and Evan L. Miller. The next meeting will be on Hallowe'en evening.

The Anglo-Saxon bids fair to become more mythical in Great Britain than he is in America.

It is reported that J. Pierpont Morgan is making after-dinner speeches. It gets the best of them.

It will be a good test of the Mississippi as a waterway if Mr. Taft shall be able to navigate it successfully.

Lloyd-George says the House of Lords must go. There is the sinister ring of ancient vengeance in his command.

There can no longer be doubt that Mexico is coming to the front. An Orizaba brewery advertises "The beer that made Milwaukee jealous."

We trust that "Tay Pay" O'Connor will come to Los Angeles during his American tour. There is no place that would give him a warmer welcome.

Every dog has his day. Even the dogs that dragged both Cook and Peary farthest north will soon cease to be subjects for general conversation.

But as far as Los Angeles being a big city of strangers is concerned, it may be just as well for some of the candidates that so little can be known about them.

The Democratic party is again engaged in its usual hopeless occupation of looking up a man for President who will prove satisfactory to William J. Bryan.

Thomas A. Edison thinks that airships will be used to carry the mails within the next ten years. If so, we may expect a big roar from the railroads and steamships.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat speaks of a Californian city named "Frisco." We have carefully searched the map and find no such city within our golden and imperial borders.

A dispatch states that Prof. Fay of Tufts has found Cook's records on the summit of Mt. McKinley. But isn't "Prof. Fay of Tufts" a rather vague identification of the new hero?

The report that the gatemen at the Seattle Exposition cribbed $28,000 from the receipts show that the exposition was a success as far as the gatemen were concerned, anyway.

Politics for the politician is somewhat different in Los Angeles from what it used to be in the old haunts back yonder where every man knew his neighbor and his father before him.

Let every man of these seventy-five or more candidates for the City Council come right up to the captain's office and prove that his name is the same now as it was before he came here.

A woman in Brooklyn has been placing flowers on a grave for fifteen years only to discover, at last, that it was the wrong grave. We'll bet she wished then that she could hire Bob Evans or Uncle Joe Cannon to do a little high-class swearing for her.

It is lucky for Judge Gaynor, perhaps, that he is the candidate of Tammany in a city that seems to want Tammany to rule, instead of trusting his chances to the country at large which does not think so well of Tammany.

Though "Uncle Aleck" shall be defeated for the office of Mayor—and there can be now no doubt that he will be defeated—there will soon be some other kind of an election and he can then—as he surely will—run for another office.

It will be necessary for The Times, now and then, as the campaign progresses, to keep the people informed as to the true records of these "holier-than-thou" reformers. The Times has never failed in its devotion to the interests of Los Angeles.

The daughter-in-law of Napoleon III recently died in Brittany without as much as seven lines in the dispatches about it. The world is just now a great deal more interested in the Wright brothers, Cook, Peary and Jim Jeffries than it is in the Napoleon family.

"THE TYRANT IN WHITE."

If any of you ever get within reach of a story with the title in the headline to this article, don't let go of the book until you have read it. It is a story with a purpose quite as serious as any motif ever put into a novel by Charles Reade. "The Tyrant in White" is meant for boys, and any fond mamma who can induce her young hopeful to spend a few spare hours in conning its contents will be in the way of doing him some good. The story is bright, full of action. There are no long rambling lectures or sermons in its pages. The characters do their own talking. They are boys who grow up into young men and they talk exactly as schoolboys talk, as baseball players talk, and as young men whose fancies "lightly turn to thoughts of love" talk, too.

The purpose of the story is to warn boys and young men of the dangers of cigarette smoking. Its philosophy is not a bit narrow or fanatical. It is sound common sense in every paragraph. There is meant to be in this story no crusade against tobacco. The advice in the words of the story itself is, "If you must smoke, smoke cigars or a pipe. There is much less danger in these than in the cigarette." These are words of truth and wisdom. The most insidious, dangerous form that tobacco has ever been put into is the innocent-looking little cigarette. The cigarette contains only a little whiff of smoke. Passing over the moot question as to whether the tobacco in the cigarette is doped or not, there is no controversy about the mildness of the tobacco put into the bit of brown paper. Here is where the danger in the cigarette lies.

There are used in the United States by male and female smokers annually 5,500,000,000 of these little coffin nails. Just do a little arithmetic. That means over 2000 cigarettes a year for every male human being in the United States, assuming that there are 25,000,000 of us lords of creation between the cradle and the grave. Of course there are many women smokers. But when we realize that so many men and boys do not smoke cigarettes, the average daily ration per capita for the smoker is something appalling. Now if the cigarette had never been invented the habit of using tobacco would have been acquired by boys at a much later period in life than prevails now. A chew of tobacco once tried by a youth is likely to produce such dire results that he is little tempted to try the experiment again until the last one has faded out of his memory. A boy of tender age may smoke a cigarette and not get tobacco sick. The little coffin nails are always in his pocket, always near at hand, and little by little the use of the mild narcotic grows and grows upon him until he becomes a cigarette fiend, his breath fetid with the nicotine, his fingers permanently stained yellow with holding the cigarettes.

If that were all we might easily bear with the deadly cigarette, but every one of observation knows that the cigarette fiend is but a little above the degraded level of the opium fiend. Of course, we must not forget the allegation that opium is used in the making of cigarettes rather freely. The "fiend" loses his nerve, his courage, his stamina, he loses every manly quality of mind and body, if he becomes sufficiently addicted to the use of the cigarette. The trouble is that it grows unconsciously into a habit and before the youth knows what is happening to him he is a confirmed cigarette fiend.

We have before us a table prepared by a public school teacher who has taken pains to study the use of cigarettes among young boys and the effect upon their minds and bodies. Under his observation have come nearly 1200 youths of whom he has made a study in his work in the schools. He classifies them by grade, beginning with the first where there were eight smokers to 190 non-smokers. The average age of the smokers was 8½ years, of non-smokers 7½. The average standing of the smokers in studies was 60 and of the non-smokers 85. So we go down the list to the eighth grade, where the number of cigarette smokers was eleven. In the fifth grade it rose to the highest level, forty-two. In this eighth grade there were seventy-three non-smokers. In this classification the highest figure is found in the first grade. It decreases little by little to the eighth. In the eighth grade the average age of the smokers was 15½, and of the non-smokers, 14. In studies the smokers averaged 75, the non-smokers 86. As we go down the list we find those addicted to the use of cigarettes an average of a year behind the other boys in the grades in their studies.

We do not have to go to Sunday-school teachers, to preachers or college professors for our knowledge of the effects of cigarettes on growing boys. There is not an athletic trainer of any kind in the country, perhaps in the world, who will not without any qualification condemn the use of cigarettes and forbid that use to those he is training for any athletic work. One of them says: "No young man who expects to accomplish anything in athletics should touch cigarettes or champagne. Both of these are a curse to man, whether he is an athlete or not. Cigarettes undermine his courage and ruin his nerves, while champagne upsets his stomach and ruins his digestion."

AN AMBITIOUS PROJECT.

Senator Newlands of Nevada is supplementing the waterways policy first launched in a broad way by former President Roosevelt. If we remember aright Mr. Roosevelt's project was the providing of a fund of $50,000,000 to be spent in five equal annual installments upon the waterways of the United States. It is generally understood, of course, that this was to be but a beginning, but it was not thought well to attempt to bind the action of Congresses too far ahead. It is understood that no Congress can bind a succeeding Congress, and each Congress elected by the people passes revenue bills covering the two years of its existence. It should always be kept in mind that the revenue bill must come up annually and each Congress must act according to its own judgment upon the needs of its day and the financial conditions of its time.

Senator Newlands proposes a fund of $50,000,000 a year to be used on the waterways of the country. It is not likely to escape the attention of the reader that there are no waterways in Senator Newlands's State. The Nevada Senator has himself seen the transparency of his proposition and comes out in the open with a declaration that his purpose is to add very largely to the funds for the reclamation of arid lands, and that he proposes to get the money deviously by going into the waterways funds for the purpose. His scheme is to get about $5,000,000, one-tenth of the whole annual appropriation for the improvement of our waterways, as an additional fund for the conservation of water in the mountain regions of the country for use in irrigating the arid lands below.

Now, there are no people in the country more interested in the Reclamation Service than we are. The undertaking is stupendous and the resulting benefits are very great. The subject has been discussed so often that readers of the newspapers are well acquainted with the purposes in mind to safeguard the vegetation upon the mountainsides, both larger timber and undergrowth, in order to store the waters in their own natural reservoirs, thus preventing floods, maintaining the flow of the water more equally all the year around, and providing more amply for the irrigation of the arid lands on the mesas below. The funds for this purpose come from the sale of the lands in the public domain. All moneys coming from this source are already appropriated to the Reclamation Service. This service has been put in the hands of very energetic people who have made so much progress that the funds available are about exhausted. Not only this, but the cost of irrigation works is amounting to a great deal more than was anticipated. The reclaimed lands cannot be sold at the low prices contemplated when this service was taken up. In fact, they will cost at least twice as much as the average price set upon them by the experts who figured out the probable cost of reclamation.

The country is rich beyond all examples in human history, but there is a limit to the ability even of the United States. The appropriating of all sums received from the sale of the public domain seemed a handsome provision for the Reclamation Service when it was begun. If it is not sufficient it will probably be found that the work must be done a little more slowly. The improvement of the waterways is a very important business. The funds for the Reclamation Service all go to the Rocky Mountain States and the great valley between them and the Sierra Nevadas. The waterways improvements will take place mostly in other parts of the country. Remember, it is not the rivers alone that are to be improved; the harbors are also to have attention. There are a great many of these harbors and a great many streams. The contemplation of Mr. Roosevelt was the improving of the waterways for navigation purposes rather than for conserving water for irrigation; it was to furnish the country with a means of transportation of farm products and of heavy material from mills and factories, at the least possible cost to the farmers and the factories, and thus regulate the rates possible for railroads to charge for similar services.

Senator Newlands has shrewdly called together the leading politicians of the States likely to be benefited by this $5,000,000 that he proposes to take out of the waterways appropriation. But it is our opinion that he will find himself confronted by an opposition on the part of the rest of the country which will be difficult, if not impossible, to overcome. When Mr. Roosevelt asked for four battleships, Congress refused to authorize the undertaking of so many, not because the larger number of members of Congress were averse to the rapid increasing of our fleet, but because, as wise financiers, they figured that the undertaking was too vast for the treasury to bear. It is well to be moderate in our demands. It may be possible to get Congress to appropriate $50,000,000 for harbors and rivers in installments of $10,000,000 a year for five years. To get Congress to appropriate $50,000,000 a year for even five years would probably be impossible.

WHY A HANGMAN.

Frank E. Johnson, the "Hangman of New Orleans," enjoys the distinction of being the most famous executioner of the country. He has sent forty-three men down through the drop in "a workmanlike manner," as a newspaper writer says. One is moved to ask what motive has led or pushed Mr. Johnson into following this grim profession. Was it avarice? No. Was it a lust of cruelty? Far from it! Was it the passion that impels some men to shoot zebras and monkeys and squirrels? No, indeed. Mr. Johnson tells us why he became a hangman. It was because of his self-sacrificing and devoted love for his fellow-men. He says, over his own signature:

"I became a hangman from an earnest, sympathetic desire to do this much for the first poor devil I saw about to be subjected to the bungling work of a man who, besides his ignorance of the common sense precautions to take to insure a quick and successful execution, was so nervous that he might have made any horrible mistake."

Perhaps we see here a clew to the motives inducing so many men to become candidates for the Los Angeles City Council. If a hangman is inspired by pure benevolence and unadulterated kindliness—says so himself—why should we suspect the ultimate purposes of a politician out after another man's job?

TAKING THE CURSE OFF.

If it be true that money was once a curse, or that it was used to curse the world, we may now rejoice that we have fallen upon happier times. It is wonderful to contemplate the blessings that money is now bringing down upon the heads of humanity.

In the better and nobler uses to which money is now put, we are proud and happy to say it is our own country which leads all others in the good work. We are spending money for battleships, it is true, and some on our army, although the sums are trifling compared with what European nations are spending in the same direction; and the sums we spend on the sinister institution of armament do not burden the people. But we are spending millions upon millions for irrigation, for waterways, for hospitals, for asylums, for orphanages and in assisting science to find ways and means to both prolong life and to make it [illegible].

Wherefore, if money were cursed, we are fast doing the things that will take the curse away. The man of wealth has come to look upon his wealth more in the light of a trust. He feels that he must use it not selfishly for himself alone, but equally for the benefit of his fellow-man.

With the approach of this new dispensation we see a better world at hand. The dreamer will be given a chance to dream and the doer will be given opportunity to do. The man who has won will devote large portions of his winnings to the cause of the race. In this way we shall really acquire what might be called a sane socialism in which there shall be good guidance and sense, and not the crazy socialism which could only mean chaos.

OPTIMISTIC MR. O'CONNOR.

Hon. T. P. O'Connor is in America campaigning for Ireland. The campaign is not for votes but for money. There are in the House of Commons some eighty nationalist Irish members, mostly poor men, Mr. O'Connor tells us, who must be supported by voluntary subscriptions. It is for this support that he appeals to the Irish in America.

Mr. O'Connor is confident that Ireland's day is near at hand. He may be right, and there are at least 20,000 persons in the world who will earnestly hope that all his aspirations may come true to the letter.

The hopes for Ireland center in the disturbed conditions of politics in Great Britain. There is a crisis now, however it may turn out. On this side of the water we have been led to suppose that should the Lords let the revenue bill, known as the budget, go through, that would end the matter. It appears that the Radicals are determined to have a fight anyway. The member for Liverpool, who is here campaigning for Ireland, informs us that whatever the Lords do with the budget, the Radicals will appeal to the country for indorsement of their plans. This hope for Ireland is in the fact that the present House of Commons would pass a home-rule bill by a handsome majority if they were sure it would not be defeated in the House of Lords. By dissolving Parliament and appealing to the people to elect a stronger majority in the next House of Commons of their party, they hope to show the upper house that their functions must be merely perfunctory. The Commons for some years past have been very restive at the immobility of the upper house. They are an aggressive lot led by this young Welshman, Mr. Lloyd-George. They are determined not only to have a new programme in the way of taxes, but in many other respects. Mr. O'Connor thinks that if a Radical House of Commons with an overwhelming majority should be the result of going to the country, the Lords would be cowed and the whole legislation of the kingdom would be in the hands of the House of Commons. The upper house would simply indorse their approval upon any measure sent up from the house below so overwhelmingly composed of Radical members. By throwing the eighty-odd Irish Nationalist votes to the Liberals Mr. O'Connor thinks it would be an easy thing to pass a home-rule bill for Ireland.

The Irish have become wise of late years in making a more moderate demand upon their English fellow-countrymen. The old Fenian movement was for an absolutely independent Ireland, cut loose in every way from Great Britain and erected into an Irish republic. That was a programme that could never have been carried out except by force; and Ireland with her four and a half million people could never have gained that end against the will of great Britain with a population of ten times that of the island. What they want now is simply an Irish Parliament sitting in Dublin authorized to pass all legislation affecting Ireland singularly. Ireland would still retain seats in both branches of the imperial Parliament sitting at Westminster to take part in legislation affecting the empire.

From our standpoint in America it would seem as if the Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland might be divided into four sections in some respects similar to States in the American Union. This would give England a Legislature to pass laws for things affecting only England. The Scotch Legislature would do the same work for Scotland, and the Welsh Legislature for Wales. The old kingdom of Scotland and the principality of Wales being in the same body of land upon the same island of England, there has been less friction between the different parts of the island than between Great Britain and Ireland.

Until Ireland gets a Parliament of its own, harmony will probably never reign between that island and the larger one on the other side of the channel. One obstacle in the way of Ireland's obtaining her desire has been the lack of unity at home. The northern part of the island is almost as solidly against home rule as the south and west are for it. The eastern portion around Dublin has been very much divided in sentiment. The strong point on which the Irish have made their fight during the last two generations has been the iniquitous treatment of their country by the Parliament, dominated as it was by the members from Great Britain who were hostile to the Irish on racial grounds and inclined to keep the

[illegible] is an extract from the [illegible] report of the fifty-fifth annual [illegible] of the International Typographical Union:

"The Los Angeles Typographical Union made a vigorous attack upon President Lynch and [illegible] Executive Council, alleging [illegible] the fight against the Los Angeles Times had been grossly mismanaged, demanding the [illegible] of the International or[illegible] for that city, and asking that the future conduct of [illegible] fight be given in charge of [illegible] local union. [illegible] in a while some such bulletin, [illegible] on pale pink paper, falls into [illegible] of The Times, and thus are [illegible] that a "furious fight" is [illegible].

[illegible] trouble is, the fury of Mr. [illegible] Lynch, the hell-roaring scab [illegible], is such exceedingly subtle [illegible] that one never finds out about [illegible]. The bulletin, quoted above, says [illegible] was "shown" that $156,000 has [illegible] spent in the "fight;" but The [illegible] would like to be among those [illegible]." Protecting Taft.

During the visit of President Taft, it was a matter of astonishment to me that he was so inefficiently protected. It is shocking to think how easily so valuable a life could have been ended by some crank.

The secret service men were impressive, but not impressive for the protection they gave. I suppose it is utterly impossible to completely hedge about the Chief Executive—especially a Chief Executive who makes such a hopeless job of being protected. Taft seems to think nothing about it. He goes stalking along with big strides and the secret service men come hopping along as best they can beside.

To make a plain matter of it, Taft came here without the strong popular appeal that many Presidents have had preceding them. He went away very dear to the heart of every one who saw or heard him.

The big fat President is simply irresistible. He unquestionably made votes and friends for himself, mainly by not trying to.

Taft is a big man in the very biggest sense of the word. To have observed his splendid mind slicing straight into the heart of every proposition presented to him was an experience that convinced every one who met Taft with this fact: that we have a President who will be great even in the line of our Presidents.

Who's Fresh?

Certainly, the police of this city are getting too fresh, as was pointed out yesterday morning by the friends of Mr. Jack Lankershim.

Having paid his regularly monthly fine like a gentleman, with his father's money, it was an outrage that Mr. Lankershim should have been rudely pinched while running down the crowds on Third street.

Mr. Lankershim seems to be the police problem of Los Angeles. He is an amiable young man, who owns a car with a hard mouth that he can't pull down to a speed slower than an express train.

He pays his fines with a hearty generosity of spirit that is disarming. He forgives the cop who arrests him, and sometimes the judge who fines him.

He prefers Main street for speeding to the open country, because anybody can ride fast in the open road, but it takes classy steering through the jam on Main street. Recently he took part in an auto race from Tenth and Main to the Van Nuys, through the traffic.

If Mr. Lankershim killed anybody he would surely apologize very politely; but he doesn't seem to properly consider the probabilities of annoyance to those killed. And there are others, besides Jack.

MUSTY COUNTY RECORDS.

Old Book of Tax Payers Found in Supervisors' Safe—Names of Early Spanish Families.

While looking through the safe for certain papers, Clerk McPherron, of the Board of Supervisors, came across a little old book of taxpayers, which was compiled in 1850.

The pages are old and musty; the writing dim and sometimes illegible. It reads like a roster of Spanish grandees, for only three or four American taxpayers are found in the list.

On the title page is the following: "A list of all persons and properties subject to taxation, situate in the county of Los Angeles, in the year 1850."

The names of Talamantes, Verdugo, Sepulveda, Lugo, Lopez and others of the early families, appear upon the time-yellowed pages.

The properties were mostly placed under the heading of "ranches," and many a ranch, which now gives name to town or county road, is mentioned in the musty tome.

PUBLIC SERVICE OFFICIAL DOINGSs.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

Log-rolling for the Gamewell Company in the settling of the fire and police systems bids is annoying the Council Committee.

Fifty-five divorce cases will be heard in Judge James's court, this week. On November 1, the divorce calendar will be transferred to Judge Houser's court.

Guy C. Benham told in Judge James's court yesterday how his mother-in-law at Fort Scott, Kan., had done him a good turn by warning him of the drinking habits of her daughter and his wife.

James T. O'Harra, a mining engineer, brought an action yesterday, to recover a one-seventh interest in rich mining claims in Mexico, and $50,000 damages.

The will of Andrew Brown was filed for probate yesterday. It leaves an estate valued at $290,000, to the widow and two children, with a few small bequests for relatives.

AT THE CITY HALL.

LOG-ROLLING FOR GAMEWELL.

COUNCIL COMMITTEE HAS BIG FIGHT ON ITS HANDS.

Complains That Official Circles Are Precommitted to the Fire and Police Alarm "Monopoly" and That the Pulling Ought to Be Stopped to Avoid Scandal.

After another day of investigation of the fire and police-alarm systems and bids intimations of what the report of the "Gamewell" committee will be to the Council tomorrow were gained from some of its members. In the concrete they will probably be:

First—That the city may easily establish an independent manual system for the University district, as designed, without paying the prices asked by the Gamewell system.

Second—That the city may buy fire and police-alarm boxes for a lower price than the Gamewell company charges ($150 for police and $125 for fire,) and obtain just as efficient service.

Those are the main points in contention, and the committee in reaching them realizes, so members say, that it will be able to present its findings so strongly to the Council at the special session tomorrow morning that the low bidder entitled to the award will be sure of it.

Members of the committee say that their efforts to solve what they call the "problem of breaking the Gamewell monopoly" have been resisted by the most indefatigable log-rolling that has been known to the City Hall for a long time in the interest of the Gamewell concern. They say officials of the fire and police departments, high and low, and others not connected with either, have been "pulling" for the Gamewell company, and that the effort to get real benefit of the competition invited has been made most difficult by those who are precommitted to this system, without regard to other considerations. They even say that members of the Council are precommitted to it, and that there may be difficulty in getting an award that would be, in their judgment, the proper result of the competitive tests.

In arranging for the tests and designing the new manual district, the Auditor and the committee were seeking not only to gain equal equipment at lower prices, but to begin the change from the automatic to the manual system of alarm. In the automatic system, now obsolete in some cities, entire dependence is placed on the working of the machinery through a central switchboard. In the manual system the central is operated by men and human intelligence is ever an intermediary in distributing the alarms as they come in from the boxes. The manual system is now advocated, they say, by both the Gamewell company and the fire underwriters, and the underwriters have gone so far as to place important restrictions on the automatic system, the principal one being the limiting of the number of boxes on any one line.

"The tests have conclusively shown us that there is other equipment at about half the price that will perform the same service as the Gamewell, and in connection with its system. The bids have shown us that we can buy a fire-alarm box for $65 that will perform this service. Is any better answer needed than those two facts?" is the way Auditor Mushet put it.

The City Attorney was busy yesterday trying to fulfill the order of the Council to pass on the regularity of all the bids submitted. This proceeding is unusual and is deemed a mistake by many, as had the Council not raised this question a contract might have been let and signed which would have been valid, even if the proposal was not entirely responsive to the specifications, but was not absolutely void. The City Attorney has held that the execution of a contract by the bidder cures the irregularities that would not be absolutely void.

The "log-rolling" for the Gamewell company has been open and aggressive. But it is a feature of fire-alarm competition that is not new to the Gamewell company, for its progress toward monopoly everywhere has been marked by it. Its success has been attended with more or less official bias and its business has been the subject of frequent scandal in other cities.

The "Gamewell" Committee, composed of the Auditor and Councilmen Wallace, Wren and Dromgold, is beginning to understand the fight they have on their hands if they succeed in breaking the hold that the Gamewell company seems to have in official circles.

Members of this committee say they have been working only in two directions. One is to give the city the benefit of the widest competition, and this effort resulted in all the American companies except one sending exhibits and one European concern was interested in the scheme and sent its system from Berlin. They say they do not want all this hue and cry about the Gamewell system to befog the whole situation and defeat the almost accomplished purpose of the scheme.

"In solving this problem," said Dromgold, "we are not only solving it for ourselves, but for a score of cities that have been enduring the cost of a monopoly. It is one of the most progressive things Los Angeles has done and has interested all the genuine competitors in the business. They have met us in absolute good faith and they must be treated with absolute good faith. An array of prejudiced officials must not budge the Council from its duty. That officeholders, from janitors up, must interest themselves like a lot of clacquers at a show for the Gamewell Company, is little less than scandalous, and it ought to be stopped."

In connection with the Mayor's statement that he does not favor buying European goods it is asserted that the Berlin company really expected, if it got the Los Angeles contract, to manufacture the equipment in this city. It has already stated in its proposal that it was negotiating for the manufacture of all its devices in this country, and it is understood it made inquiries of manufacturers here as to their ability to produce the parts needed.

Report had it yesterday that the competition had narrowed down to the Gamewell and Cregier systems, but members of the committee said this was not the case, although they admitted that the Cregier system was the most formidable competitor of the Gamewell. Its chief recommendation is from Chicago, where it is now in use.

INVADER GETS NO DAMAGES.

SCHOOL BOARD WINNER IN SUIT FOR INJURIES.

Boy Who Was Not a Student, But Who Entered High School Grounds and Hurt Himself Severely by Playing With Fire Escape Cannot Collect from Owner.

For what is said to be the first time in the judicial history of California the doctrine that shall obtain in certain cases of damages for personal injuries was enunciated in Judge Conrey's court yesterday.

It was an action brought by Vincent Marsiglia, a minor, through Malkola Marsiglia, his guardian, against the Los Angeles Board of Education, Melville Dozier, et al.

The case was decided by the court sustaining the demurrer to the second amended complaint, without leave to amend, thus disposing of the matter without a hearing, the taking of testimony, etc.

On February 28, last, the boy Marsiglia, with others, went on the Los Angeles High School grounds and started to play on the ladders of the fire escape on the school building. The weight attached to the ladder broke and fell on the lad, inflicting severe injuries, and it was on this account that a damage action asking for $20,000, was instituted.

The points considered by the court were whether a fire escape is a dangerous appliance or instrument, and whether it is attractive to children, the determination of these questions going far to settle the issue of damages.

The court found that the plaintiff was a trespasser upon the schoolgrounds, as he was not even a student of the High School; that the school board has a right to put a fire escape on the building; that it is not an apparatus which should be kept locked. If the plaintiff has a right to recover damages upon the facts here alleged, such right is an exception to the general rule which permits land owners to apply their premises to any lawful uses, and which does not require them to guard their premises from dangerous conditions which may arise in such use of their property, unless by invitation or otherwise they assume a direct obligation toward the stranger who comes upon the land.

Judge Conrey further held that it appears to be clear that the owners of the building upon which a fire escape has been placed, even though it be a movable one, are not responsible for injuries which may result from the breaking down of the appliance while it is being played with by children who have invaded the premises.

The decision of the court is considered an important victory for the Los Angeles school board, and will doubtless go far toward establishing the law in similar cases where damages are prayed for on account of personal injuries. Harley D. Riggin, Deputy City Attorney, represented the school board.

KIND MOTHER.
WHO KNEW DAUGHTER.

A story out of the ordinary was told in Judge James's court yesterday, involving Guy C. Benham, a young business man of this city, and his wife, Annie Benham, from whom he sought a divorce on the ground of extreme cruelty.

The couple were married in Fort Scott, Kan., in 1900. The name of the defendant was Annie Herring, and her father had made his fortune in the beer business at Fort Scott. Young Benham wooed the girl, but the mother objected. After awhile her opposition was mollified, and the ceremony took place. Immediately after the wedding and while they were preparing to start on their wedding trip, Mrs. Herring confided to her new son-in-law the cause of her objection to his marriage to her daughter. In brief, it was that the girl had for years been a hard drinker, and she feared that Benham would have trouble with her.

The mother-in-law thought well of Benham and set him up in business, but in a little while the wife began to have lapses from the paths of sobriety. In order that she might have something to divert her mind from her weakness, the mother started the daughter in a big millinery store in Fort Scott, but Mrs. Benham gave way to her appetite, and the business went to smash. Often, the husband testified, it was necessary to haul her home in a hack, or allow her to sleep off the deep potations.

A baby came to the home, and even that did not straighten up the wife, and finally the husband, unable to stand the disgrace, left her and came to Los Angeles. The mother-in-law took the baby and told Benham that she would see that it was well cared for.

The decree was granted. The plaintiff left last night for Fort Scott, not to see his wife, but to adjust the business affairs of his mother-in-law, who has the greatest confidence in him. Then he will return here, where he expects to make his future home. It is possible that Mrs. Herring will accompany him hither. The unfortunate and unhappy wife is still in Fort Scott, cared for by her family, who recognize her weakness, and will see to it that she wants for nothing.

BROWN FORTUNE.
IT GOES TO FAMILY.

The will of Andrew Brown, who died at the family residence, No. 949 Hoover street, October 12, was filed for probate yesterday. It disposes of an estate estimated in value at $290,000, the annual income of which is in excess of $15,000.

The property consists of improved and unimproved city plots, flats, stores, corporate stocks, bonds, mortgages and notes, and bank deposits. Accompanying the will is the request that the family be allowed $1000 a month for their maintenance from the date of the testator's death.

The following small bequests are made; To a brother, Thomas Brown of Donegal, Ireland, $1000; to a sister, Mrs. Fannie Hurst of Oakland, Cal., $1000; to a niece, Belle Cooper of Melbourne, Australia, $250; to a niece, Miss F. Millikin, same place, $250; to a nephew, S. G. W. Brown, Brooklyn, N. Y., $500; to a niece, Miss Lizzie Bishop, Haverford, Pa., $500, and to Fred R. Belknap, a son of his wife's sister of Kernville, Cal., $500.

The wife, Alice M. Brown, is given the family home. All the remainder of the estate is divided between the wife, a son, P. S. Brown, who resides at No. 731 New Hampshire street, and a daughter, Mrs. Bessie Pallette, No. 2227 West Ninth street, in the following proportions: The wife to have one-half, and the son and daughter one-fourth each.

The wife is nominated as executrix of the estate without bond.

RESTRICTS DIVORCES.
NEW RULE IN COURT.

Under the order adopted by the Superior Court judges of Los Angeles county the divorce docket will be shifted from Department One, where Judge James has presided since May 1, to Department Three, where Judge Houser will take up the cases of unhappy couples, November 1.

The present week will witness a bargain counter rush in Judge James's court, applicants for a severance of the marriage ties being more enamored of the past procedure than the proposed new regulation in Judge Houser's court, where the testimony of the defendant, or his or her deposition, must be submitted in order to secure a decree.

Wednesday of the coming week will be the banner day, for there are twenty-two default cases set for hearing. Tuesday will furnish eight, Thursday nine, Friday eleven, and Saturday one, or a total of fifty-one cases with a single week. If past records go for anything it will be necessary to fumigate Judge James's department when the run of marital filth is over.

With the beginning of divorce hearings in Judge Houser's court, the work will start off with eight cases set for November 2, the first opportunity the court will have of listening to the tales of woe.

Postal cards have been sent out to all of the attorneys of the Los Angeles county bar, signed by Harry Meserve, clerk of Department Three, informing them that under the rule that will hereafter prevail, the testimony of the defendant will be required in all actions for divorce. They are further requested in each case to subpoena the defendant to be present at the time of the trial of actions in which the attorneys are interested, or have a deposition taken. Otherwise, says the card, at the conclusion of the hearing the transcript of testimony may be required, and the matter continued for the purpose of procuring such testimony.

ENGINEER OBJECTS.
DEMANDS SHARE IN MINE.

One side of a story of a trip down into Mexico to locate mining claims, with a bit of cold shoulder for the man who "put the party wise" to the location of valuable ore, is told in a petition filed in the Superior Court yesterday.

The plaintiff in the action is James T. O'Harra, a mining engineer. The defendants are the Santa Cruz Mining and Milling Company, L. M. Sullivan, at one time one of the political powers of Portland, Or.; T. A. Hays, W. W. Watts, Dr. A. C. Thorpe, Julian Kutnow and Charles Cassat Davis, attorney.

The allegation is that on March 11, 1908, the plaintiff and defendants, except the corporation, and Fred Eden joined in a contract in regard to the location of certain mining claims in San Luis, State of Sinaloa, Mex. It is said that Sullivan, Eden and O'Harra were expert miners, and that Hays, Watts, Thorpe, Kutnow and Davis desired to join in the effort to secure certain claims in that territory. Sullivan, Eden and O'Harra visited the country and arranged to acquire the property, which consisted of four valuable claims.

The following amounts of money were contributed for the purpose of raising a purse to prosecute the work: Watts, Thorpe and Kutnow, $250 each; Hays and Davis, $125 each. It was agreed, the petition states, that Eden, O'Harra, Sullivan, Watts, Thorpe and Kutnow were to have six-sevenths of the property, and that Hays and Davis were each to be apportioned one-fourteenth of the claims.

The plaintiff, O'Harra, alleges that his partners have refused to turn over to him one-seventh of the mining property, which he says is very valuable, and he asks for an order of court compelling the transfer to him and $50,000 in damages.

TRICKED BY LOVE.
FORGER KLEIER'S STATEMENT.

Albert Kleier, the young man who forged a check for $150 in order to secure suitable wedding presents for his wife, whom he married about two months ago, was given another chance in Judge Willis's court yesterday. He was released on four years' probation. Kleier is a very lucky individual.

Upon the consummation of the wedding, the wife discovered almost immediately that he had secured the jewelry through crooked means, and this was shortly followed by his arrest on a charge of forgery. She then entered an action against her husband, asking for an annulment of the marriage on the ground that she had been imposed upon, as Kleier made all sorts of promises about the amount of property he had and how royally he proposed to care for her.

"I was in Paradise, lifted there by love, and when I came down I was in the County Jail," he told the court. "Love got me into the trouble," he declared.

Judge Willis expressed the hope that the next time he will not suffer such a serious attack of love.

WEDDED IN BUNCHES.
ARE THE RIEDRICH GIRLS.

Marriage licenses were issued yesterday to John W. Young and Blossom Riedrich, and Sanford A. Thompson and Grace Riedrich. As the reader will at once surmise, the girls are sisters. They are the daughters of Johanna and August Riedrich, the mother residing at No. 1764 East Main street. The father died some years ago.

But that is not all. On March 18, 1902, Annie Riedrich married Joseph E. Roach, Lizzie T. Riedrich wedded Albert H. Crooks, and Laura Reidrich became the wife of Harry P. Augustin. The young ladies were sisters of the two girls who took out licenses to wed yesterday. With the consummation of the double wedding, following the triple ceremony, more than seven years ago, the score will show five Reidrich young ladies married on two days. That is going some—even for Los Angeles.

ANIMAL BAITERS.
GIVEN STIFF SENTENCES.

In Justice Ling's court yesterday Palo Bruscie was fined $100; Curt Akers, $75, and Melbourne Rogers, $150, on the charge, abundantly proven, that they treated mules inhumanely. The accused were employed by city contractors, and the acts complained of were committed while the men were engaged in hauling sand out of the river bed. The testimony against Rogers was of the most barbarous character, indicating that he had whipped his mules within an inch of their lives with a shovel and club.

The men could not pay the fine, of course, and were sent to jail. At the rate of $1 a day, which is the amount allowed under the law in the payment of fines by imprisonment, Bruscie will remain behind the bars 100, Akers 75 and Rogers 150 days. Complaints are frequent of overloading and abuse of animals by the sand haulers. Justice Ling does not make light of these aggravated cases.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.
BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

SEEK TO MORTGAGE. The Congregation Sinai petitioned the Superior Court yesterday for leave to file a mortgage on the church property, lot No. 8, City Center tract, for $12,000. The action is approved by the board of trustees, J. L. Jones, M. S. Kornblum, D. Hirsh, M. Goldsten, J. Rosenberg, Max Cohn, F. Halff and A. Brick. The petition states that the money can be secured of the Security Savings Bank for five years at 10 per cent.

CHARGE DISMISSED. Justice Summerfield yesterday dismissed the embezzlement charge against A. L. Berger, who, it was alleged, had appropriated $60, the property of the Eureka Copper Mining Company.

TIDE-LANDS SUIT. The case of the people of California against Hancock Banning, one of the series of tide-land suits on trial before Judge Bordwell for the past three weeks, was called in Department Nine yesterday. It is understood the testimony will occupy about all of this week.

INCORPORATION. Articles of incorporation were filed yesterday by the Red Gravel Gold Mining Company, capital stock, $75,000; incorporators, J. R. Conlee, Thomas H. Buch, C. E. Poor, Charles Canall, C. A. Neil, M. H. Conlee and Walter L. Krug; amount subscribed, $35.

SMALL ESTATE. By the will of Walter E. Connell, filed for probate yesterday, his home and contents on Stanford street, Santa Monica, were bequeathed to his mother, while his sister, Edwina, gets his diamond scarf pin and money in bank. The estimated value of the estate is about $3000.

DIVISION OF PROPERTY. The entry in the divorce action brought by Effie F. Sheets against Patrolman Sylvester N. Sheets, in relation to the division of the community property, was signed yesterday by Judge Monroe. The court had given the decree to the defendant on his cross-complaint, alleging extreme cruelty, with a division of the property along lines to be hereafter indicated. The order provides that the wife shall take lot 6, block F, of the Moran tract. The husband takes lot 9, block O, Ocean Strand tract, Ocean Park; lot 23, Garbutt tract, and 4 77-100 acres in the McDonald tract, the last two pieces being in Los Angeles. Both parties are ordered to grant deeds to the other for the conveyance of the real estate as indicated.

EXPENSIVE FEELINGS. A. L. Beddeau and A. B. Beddeau brought suit against the Pacific Electric Railway Company in the Superior Court yesterday for $15,000 by reason of being put off a car at Main and Third streets, July 21 last. The first-named plaintiff, who is the wife of A. B. Beddeau, alleges that when she got on the car she tendered her fare, but the conductor refused to take the money, and insisted that she get off, which she did, although she asserts that she begged to be allowed to remain. The car was on the Pasadena Short Line.

GIVEN PROBATION. Frank Patten, who pleaded guilty to burglarizing the residence of Mrs. N. McClintock, December 17, was released on three years' probation by Judge Willis. Patten is one of the young men who robbed the place of a lot of jewelry and then "planted" it in a vacant lot near the Bimini Baths.

YEAR AT SAN QUENTIN.—H. E. Conn pleaded guilty of burglary in Judge Davis's court yesterday, and was given one year in San Quentin. He entered the room of John Yuell, No. 128 East First street, and stole a pair of scissors. Some time before he entered Peniel Hall on Main street, and took several articles.

THE INFERIOR COURTS.

GOES ON TEAR WITH SCISSORS.

IS A REGULAR "CUT-UP" FOR A SHORT TIME.

Police Find Man Making Ribbons Out of Young Woman's Dress—He Offers to Give Back Her Ring and Pay Borrowed Money—Must Stand Trial for Disturbance.

C. Catalano went on a tear with a pair of scissors Friday night, and as a result was committed to jail without bail, by Justice Frederickson, yesterday, to await trial tomorrow on a charge of having disturbed the peace.

The object of Catalano's wrath was Alice Griffin, whose diamond ring he wore, and to whom, it is alleged, he owed $200. He called on her, at her room on East Fifth street, in an ugly mood and attempted to give vent to his feeling by attacking her with a pair of scissors.

When an officer arrived, he had cut her dress into ribbons and was making jibes unpleasantly near her flesh with the instruments.

The man became very penitent when he was told that there was a cot waiting for him at the City Jail. He gave the ring back to its owner and promised to immediately repay the money he owed her. But he was unsuccessful in his attempt to obtain his liberty.

WIFE'S LOVING WAYS.

As a result of a family row Friday night, Bob Emerson and Bertha Emerson, his wife, were taken before Justice Frederickson yesterday on charges of having disturbed the peace. They were fined $15 each.

Beer bottles, which had been full before they were drained by the couple, played an important part in the fracas. When the amber fluid began to take effect, the man and his wife fell out, and made so much noise with their quarreling that persons living near their home, at No. 421 East Fifteenth street, complained.

When Patrolman Claiborne broke in at the front door, he found Mrs. Emerson caressing her husband's head with an empty bottle. Emer-

WE BELIEVE it is a fair statement, to say that we put more thought, more care, more real artistic buying ability into the selection of our lace curtains, draperies and upholstery fabrics than does any other house in Los Angeles. And further, we believe that a comparison of our Autumn selections with what you will find at other stores will bear out the accuracy of our statement.

This information is important to you because it means that for the same money that you would spend for draperies or curtains in any ordinary store, you can buy at the "California" draperies or curtains that will add more beauty and more distinctiveness to your home.

In lace curtains we show a wide assortment of the Arabian, Cluny, Renaissance, Italian Filet, Brussels and Point Venise—in beautiful and attractive patterns. And we make to order—to suit any style of decoration—lace curtains and panels in real lace, hand worked and in all the popular hand-made laces.

Our selections in drapery and upholstery fabrics comprise the very newest materials for every decorative requiremet.

For the Reception and Drawing Room—brocaded silks, satin damasks, silk armures, etc. in all important French Period designs, in soft delicate shades.

For the hall, living room, library and dining room—imported and domestic, cotton and wool tapestries in verdure effects—in dark rich greens, blues and browns. And to match these—plain velours and silks for the hangings.

For the bedroom—foreign and domestic printed stuffs—French and English cretonnes, chintzes, hand block printed linens, delicate shadow prints and toile de jouy in soft rich tones—with borders to match. We invite you to come and see all these beautiful new things and confer with our artists as to how you may attain the greatest degree of art and beauty in your home, at least cost.

Some interesting suggestions from our Drapery Department are offered in one of our windows.

ARIZONA PROJECTS.

TO RELIEVE MAIN LINE TRAFFIC.

WHY ESPEE IS TO USE WICKENBURG-BENGAL BRANCH.

Los Angeles Men Reported Forming Corporation to Build New Line from Winkleman Into Copper Creek and Mammoth Districts Under Southern Pacific Auspices.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Oct. 20.—The information published in The Times that the Southern Pacific had made a traffice agreement with the Santa Fé for the use of its new Wickenburg-Bengal line has confirmed the understanding of local railroad men that the new line was to be used to lighten the burden on the present Southern Pacific road through Los Angeles. It is understood that by next summer practically all the Southern Pacific business originating at San Francisco and in Central California will be routed eastward via Mojave and Parker, regaining the main line at Maricopa. Eventually this traffic will be routed over the new Southern Pacific line up the Gila River to Howie, and still later to Lordsburg, N. M.

Work is being pushed on the Bengal extension westward from Parker, with about 400 laborers, mainly Indians, Mexicans and negroes. According to President Murphy of the Santa Fé branch lines, trains should be running over the new road by the first of next May. There is some talk also of a Santa Fe road from Glendale, near Phoenix, into the Buckeye country. Mr. Murphy has stated that he favors its construction and that it is entirely possible that such a line may be built.

A large amount of construction work is being done at the end of the Phoenix and Eastern Railroad, at the lower end of the Gila River Cañon, though it appears that active extension work has not yet been started. Several gangs are building grade near Winkelman to the new concentrator site of the Ray Consolidated Copper Company. In the new order of things it would appear that the importance of Kelvin will be almost wiped out, and that the principal town along the Gila will be at Winkelman.

LOS ANGELES MEN INTERESTED.

It was reported that a corporation is being formed in Los Angeles to build a road from Winkelman into the Copper Creek and Mammoth districts, under Southern Pacific auspices. The Southern Pacific already has a survey from Winkelman, via Mammoth, to Benson.

Work is being pushed steadily on the Southern Pacific extension from Courtland to Naco. According to President Epes Randolph, "Of course, our line will eventually reach Douglas but just when will be a matter for future consideration." The grading is being done by Grant Brothers of Los Angeles.

There is a report in Tucson that the projected Port Lobos Railroad will be constructed to the Gulf of California from Tucson, instead of Silver Bell. A surveying party is now in the field working on the proposed line from a point near Imperial, on the Silver Bell Railroad. If built, the line, according to Frank Murphy, will be an extension of the Silver Bell road, and assuredly, will be a Santa Fé enterprise.

The City Council of Globe has reached an agreement, after many months of quarreling, with the Gila Valley, Globe and Northern Railroad. The railroad will remove its tracks along the west side of Pinal Creek within the townsite and will be given a right of way along the east side of the creek, together with a number of minor concessions. The railroad is given one year in which to make the changes.

WANT RATES REDUCED.

The Arizona Railroad Commission has taken up the subject of live stock rates and has addressed a communication to twelve railroad companies within the Territory, asking reductions on the basis of a relative distance tariff scheme that will lower the present rates from 10 to 25 per cent.

An appeal is to be made to the Arizona Railway Commission by the Board of Trade of Bisbee against alleged excessive express rates now in force to that town. It is stated that local rates at Bisbee are at least 40 per cent. higher than those in force at Phoenix.

A definite movement has started in Phoenix toward acceptance of Southern Pacific time as the standard for the community. At present the town at large is run on sun time, which is just half way between Pacific and Mountain time, used respectively, by the Southern Pacific and Santa Fé companies.

In future, the Phelps-Dodge system of railroads is to be known as the "Southwestern Route," instead of the "El Paso and Southwestern System." The elaborate trade-mark of an Indian head will also be changed to a plain circle, with the name of the route on a bar across the center.

The commercial bodies at Douglas and Bisbee are moving energetically for through sleeper accommodations between their cities and Los Angeles.

Kind Hearts--Good Deeds

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

The late Col. Thomas H. Swope of Kansas City, promised the directors of the Franklin Institute (a charitable institution) of that city, $50,000 if a similiar amount were raised by November 1. The directors of the institute are now seeking contributions that the Swope offer may not be lost. The institute is one of Kansas City's social enterprises that is seeking to carry on a constructive work among the neglected poor classes. Since its beginning, six years ago, its managers have conducted a day nursery for young children, a dispensary, a pure milk depot, a substation of the public library, a children's playground, clubs for boys and young men and a night school for workng boys and foreigners. When the scope of the work was explained to Col. Swope he said:

"To make this institution what it should be, $100,000 would be required. I will give half that amount if the rest can be collected by public subscription."

Official commendation has been given by the War Department to First Lieut. John McE. Pruyn, Twenty-seventh Infantry, stationed at Fort Sheridan, Ill., for his offer to return company funds which were in his charge while serving in the Philippines last year, and in the preservation of which he used the greatest care. The funds were kept in a steel strong box fastened to the floor of his bedroom, and during his absence the room was entered, the box broken open and the funds stolen. The War Department has held that his care was such as to satisfy the just demands of the service and the necessities of the situation, and has relieved him of responsibility for the loss. Hence the satisfaction over his offer to replace funds, and the department's commendation therefor.

James Fagan, an aged switchman at San Antonio, Tex., has been made happy by the information that a Carnegie pension, of $40,000 was awaiting his disposition. Fagan worked for the Pennsylvania Railroad in the '60's when the iron master was his division superintendent, and the $40,000 is the accumulation of a pension fund put aside for him by Mr. Carnegie years ago when Fagan dropped out of sight.

"Heroing" your way through college, a new method of free scholarship education, gained its third Pittsburgh recruit, when Daniel J. Curtin, Jr., of New York, a Carnegie hero fund medal holder, began a course of study in the apprentice and journeymen section of the Carnegie Technical Schools.

Mr. Curtin, who is 19 years old, is to receive complete technical training in any branch he may select, in return for risking his own life to rescue two girls from drowning in the East River, New York. Curtin's award from the Carnegie fund was a bronze medal and choice of a cash sum of money in the thousands or an education. He spurned the money, but jumped at the chance to improve his mind.

The other medal holders at the Carnegie Technical Schools, are N. S. Gilman, who on August 28, 1906, at Old Orchard, Me., made a rescue from drowning, and Albert W. Simpson, who, on October 9, 1906, at Scottdale, Pa., penetrated a caved-in mine and at great personal risk dragged out a fellow-worker, after he had been warned that it meant death to himself to enter the diggings.

Fifty thousand dollars and his mansion on the Chelsea embankment in London, with all its contents, representing $250,000 more, constitute the bequest of the late Marquis of Ripon to Frederick Simpson St. Quentin, who had lived with him for the last sixteen years of his life, in the capacity of private secretary. Nor is there any likelihood of this singularly generous recognition of unselfish devotion and conscientious loyalty on the part of a private secretary toward his employer, being contested by the late Lord Ripon's only son, the present Marquis. He has always been particularly warm in his expressions of appreciation of the usefulness of St. Quentin to his father and mother.

Mrs. P. S. Peterson of Chicago has presented to Mt. Holyoke College a valuable addition to its college buildings as a home for retired members of the faculty. The living-room of the new building is beautifully finished in mahogany. An upright piano is the gift of Mr. Peterson, son of the donor.

It is said that Mrs. Peterson, while staying at Pearson's Hall, one of the dormitories, was impressed with the need for such a building, and it resulted in her gift.

An estate of $2,000,000 is disposed of, with specific bequests amounting to over $1,000,000, in the will of John Wallace, head of the Stock Exchange firm of John Wallace & Co., of No. 66 Broadway. There are contingent bequests of $500,000 and $250,000 to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and St. Thomas's Protestatnt Episcopal Church, respectively.

The prisoners' aid department of the Episcopal church of Washington has paid out $50,000 in fines for prisoners and transportation to their homes. That the aid has been appreciated and has proved a benefit to those who have received it is proved by the fact that $46,000 of the amount has been returned. The department was organized ten years ago by Bishop Satterlee.

BONANZA FIND AT FOREST CITY.

SOUTH FORK FINDS ALLEGHANY VEINS' EXTENSION?

Litigation Has Made Times Very Quiet at Alleghany—Rainbow Is in Good Ore, But Handicapped by Loss of Tunnel Whose Site Was Jumped Recently.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GRASS VALLEY (Cal.) Oct. 22.—The discovery of bonanza ore in the South Fork mine at Forest City is considered one of the greatest strikes ever made in this district, and if the vein ultimately proves to be the great Tightner ore body, as everything indicates, it will mean the development of a giant property. The South Fork is owned by Los Angeles people and work has been going ahead for several months under the management of Fred W. Kuhnfeld. The tunnel has been crowded ahead for over a mile and several promising ledges intersected. But the last find is far and away the greatest ever made in this section. The extent of the vein is still undetermined but it is known to be several inches wide with very high values. The ore is identical with that found in the Tightner and other Alleghany properties, containing free gold and arsenical sulphurets. Forest is just across a range of hills from Alleghany and it is considered that the strike in the South Fork demonstrates that the veins of Alleghany strike across the hills to the Forest district. The management is pushing developments and, if the find continues to show as well as at present, shipping will soon be under way. The same people are developing a number of other claims in the district, with encouraging results.

The Rainbow mine at Alleghany recently cut a bonanza shoot and is sending out high grade. It is reported that arrangements will be made with G. M. Taylor, who recently jumped the Rainbow tunnel, whereby the company will be enabled to resume extensive work through the adit. The Red Star mill is running on good ore. A large number of claims are receiving attention, but the trouble between the leading companies is greatly holding back the district. With the Sixteen to One, Bonanza King and other mines tied up by litigation, with no early prospect of settlement, with the Rainbow handicapped by the loss of its tunnel, and with winter at hand, Alleghany is not reflecting the activity that characterized it a few months ago. The mines appear to be all right, but the tactics of the warring owners militate against advancement.

GRASS VALLEY.

The Grass Valley district continues to maintain its position as the premier quartz gold producer of the State. The North Star Mines Company is producing at the rate of $100,000 per month with eighty stamps in commission. Extensive work is going on below the 4000 level, where the six-foot vein is running about $12 per ton. At the Empire sinking is about to commence from the 2500 level. The two mammoth electric pumps have been placed in commission and everything is in readiness for rapid work. The Dana Company has resumed work with a small force of men. The Brunswick shaft is progressing steadily, but it will be several months before any depth will be attained. The Kenosha continues to intersect small high-grade bodies with the shaft going down steadily. The Pennsylvania, Sultana, Idaho-Maryland and several smaller properties are producing steadily. Tte Pennsylvania, Sultana, Idaho-Maryland and several smaller properties are producing steadily. The deal for the Eureka has not yet been consummated but it is reported that it will be carried through in the near future.

SIERRA COUNTY.

Two important deals are pending in Sierra county and will probably be consummated before the end of the month. Eastern capitalists are examining the Brush Creek mine and express themselves well pleased with the property. The Brush Creek has a good productive record, but disagreements between the stockholders led to its closing. The property is located near the Kate Hardy, where a bonanza strike was recently made. An English syndicate, headed by W. A. Wood of London, is negotiating for the Phoenix mine, near Sierra City. The Phoenix is a low-grade proposition with immense bodies of such ore developed, and equipped with a stamp mill. The English capitalists already control the Four Hills and Bunker Hill mines, in the Sierra City district, and are well pleased with the success that has attended their efforts.

PLACER COUNTY.

The Ophir district, Placer county, is attracting considerable attention. Operations are to be resumed immediately at the famous Hathaway by a strong company. This was formerly one of the great producers of Central California. Work will be prosecuted on an extensive scale. At the Crater new machinery is being installed and operations conducted systematically. It is reported that the Crandall has been sold to Colorado capitalists for a large consideration. A number of other properties are receiving attention with several showing well. In the Michigan Bluffs section W. H. Fletcher and associates of Los Angeles and Pasadena are preparing for extensive work at the Home Ticket and other properties. These mines are well-known producers and have a bright future.

EL DORADO COUNTY.

Articles of incorporation of the El Dorado Consolidated Mines Company have been filed with the County Clerk of El Dorado county. The capital stock has also been increased from $500,000 to $750,000. The company is organized under the laws of Nevada and is composed of Nevada, San Francisco and Southern California people. It is empowered to engage in all kinds of mining, as well as other lines, such as the operation of power plants, railways, etc. The company expects to operate a number of properties in El Dorado and are arranging to secure numerous holdings.

SHASTA COUNTY.

The Stauffer Chemical Company has bonded the celebrated Oro Fino mine, near Shasta, for $10,000 and will at once commence active work. The ore bodies of this mine carry an excellent gold percentage and give excellent promise of continuing to great depth. The Mammoth Copper Company has concluded to send the double-compartment shaft at the Quartz Hill 100 feet deeper, giving a total depth of 273. Drilling at the Summit group has been retarded by the sticking of the drill in the hole. Efforts to withdraw it have been unavailing. The Bullychoop is about to resume with a large force of workers. This is considered one of the promising properties of the county and has produced considerable gold. The time for the expiration of the truce between the farmers and the smelter operators is rapidly approaching. The Mammoth and Balaklala companies have experts at the plants and botanists in the field. It is expected that the latter will show that much of the damage to the trees has been caused by the neglect of the farmers properly to prune and spray them. November 1, when the truce comes to an end, promises to be an interesting day on the Shasta copper belt.

CALAVERAS COUNTY.

The Reiner mine, near Angels Camp, has entered the bedrock in the ancient channel and has opened an excellent body of pay gravel. Pannings thus far have exceeded the expectations and the outlook for excellent production is good. Many Southern Californians are interested in the company, which has expended a large amount of money in developing and equipping the property. The Calaveras Copper Company, which recently acquired the Union mines at Copperopolis, is arranging to commence extensive operations. The smelter and concentrator can easily handle 1,500,000 pounds of copper per month. The Utica, Lightner, Melones, Etna King and numerous other gold mines are producing steadily. No further talk is heard regarding rumored labor troubles.

MONO, ALPINE, INYO.

The announcement by Senator Newlands of Nevada to the effect that the Virginia and Truckee Railroad will be extended into Mono, Alpine and Inyo counties has been hailed with joy by mining men in these districts. All that has held back splendid districts in these counties has been the lack of transportation facilities, and with the advent of the Virginia and Truckee the greatest boom in the history of these counties will be inaugurated. Connections will be made with the Bodie and Benton and Tonopah and Goldfield lines. A large number of promising Nevada districts will also be opened by the line.

CONTRA COSTA COUNTY.

The farmers of Contra Costa county have requested the Supervisors to pass an ordinance against the Mountain Copper Company's smelter at Martinez, alleging that the escape of fumes is damaging orchards and farms. The board has promised to take steps in the matter, but it is probable that the plant will be incorporated in the expansion plans of the town of Martinez, which will block the plans of the complainants. Considerable bitterness has been aroused by the plan, the farmers maintaining that the town of Martinez will not seek to prevent the escape of the destroying fumes. Accordingly they have filed a protest against the annexation of additional territory by the town. It is unlikely that the protest will be heeded.

GOLDFIELD.

FRACTION HAS A GOOD STRIKE.

CONTINUATION OF SHOOT OPENED SEVERAL WEEKS AGO.

Two-Hundred-Dollar Ore Found in the Daisy, But This Is Not Likely to Save the Property from Final Reorganization—Pasadenans Get a Good Showing.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Oct. 22.—The Combination Fraction is the latest to report a rich strike or rather a continuation of the high grade shoot that was opened several weeks ago and from which shipments have been going out steadily to the smelters. The full extent of the recent find has not been developed but the indications are that it will develop into the best that has been found on the property. Besides this new development the Fraction is in excellent shape, keeping a steady production that runs $50,000 per month.

A very promising bunch of ore running $200 per ton has been encountered in the Daisy, but if the report should prove true, the discovery will not help to save the property from what appears to be the ultimate chance of reorganization. In local circles it is claimed that the Daisy will revert to a syndicate in which George Wingfield will hold the majority stock and that in the eventual round-up that Frank Horton, the original discoverer, will not be forgotten. Two leases that are being worked through No. 2 shaft are producing a small quantity of ore with good prospects for more important developments. On the Golden Daisy or Morrison lease, which is controlled in Pasadena, the ore shoot has been picked up again, after apparently pinching out and now looks about as good as ever. This ore body has been erratic in shape and values, sometimes giving indications and then suddenly changing to disappointment, but eventually opening again into a good pay streak.

There is good indication that the crosscut at the 640 level on the Cherokee lease of the Atlanta is getting close to the vein that the shaft passed through at the 540-foot, and it is not improbable that within a short time that the announcement of finding ore will be made. At the present the formation in the crosscut is similar to what underlaid the vein at 540 feet.

GRIZZLY BEAR WORK.

Determining to find the pay ore zone if sinking will bring the shaft into it, if extensive lateral work at a depth of 1000 feet or more will bring the desired result, the Grizzly Bear lease is pushing the shaft down with two shifts per day and has reached a depth of 750 feet. The bore is going through country rock at the present time, and it is not expected that any important developments will appear for some time yet, but it is the opinion of Wallace McGregor, who is in charge of the work, that the Jumbo and Mohawk veins systems will be eventually struck on this dip.

This work is being done in an energetic and systematic manner, and is based on results in the Clermont shaft, the Jumbo and adjacent properties, with full confidence that continued exploration will uncover a very valuable ore shoot. In this connection it may be well to state that the Consolidated has explored every foot of the estate within its end lines, and that the ore has been traced and established right to its very boundaries. This implies that the vein system continues into the adjoining properties, and that there is no such a thing as a monopoly of the ore in the Goldfield district as many assert. On this theory the outer leasers are sinking, knowing that the trend of the big vein is downward and at such an angel that they cannot hope to catch it at much less than 1000 to 1200 feet. This is the objective point for which all the companies with capital are headed, and the results remain to be seen.

DIADEM LEASE.

The Diadem lease on the Great Bend is asserted to have uncovered high-grade within the past week, but it is a very doubtful proposition if the leasers can retain their hold on the ground, as it is evident that the high-grade contact is not of a durable character. Superintendent Lockhart says the ore that is being sacked resembles that of the Mohawk and carries very high values. The streak is said to be several inches in width, and, if it holds with any persistency, it will run into money very fast. This is the same streak that was opened last spring, but which did not develop to any extent, owing to difficulties with water and other drawbacks that caused a suspension of operations, and during which some extensive cave-ins occurred on the property.

The smelter recently blown in at Lodi is treating ore at a profit of $1800 per day. The plant is only treating sixty tons a day, with a capacity of 100 tons as soon as it is limbered up. The ore of neighboring mines will be used to bring the plant up to capacity.

ARIZONA.

GLOBE'S SECOND SMELTER RUNS.

THE FIRST FIVE HUNDRED TON FURNACE STARTED.

Arizona Commercial Company Has Many Improvements Under Way at Present—Report That the Copper Queen Will Sell Cananea Property to Greene Company.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Oct. 22.—A second reduction plant has been added to the industries of Globe. The Arizona Commercial's first 500-ton furnace is running steadily, successfully treating the ores of the Black Hawk Company's mine. Only a high-grade matte is produced though arrangements are being made to put in a converter plant. As far as built, the smelter is modern, economical in operation and conveniently arranged, with electrical equipment for handling slag. Oil fuel is used. The ore bins have capacity for 2000 tons and there is room for 3000 tons of coke. About 4000 tons of ore are on the surface, ready for smelting, already. The company has done an immense amount of work during the year, both on the surface and underground. It is now installing an immense hoist at the Eureka shaft, capable of handling cages to 1500 feet of depth. The ore now being smelted is understood to be running about 10 per cent. copper and to be almost self-fluxing.

The Black Warrior property near Globe has been formally transferred to the Warrior Development Company, a corporation organized by Hovland & Smith, which lately negotiated for the Black Warrior mines and surface works for a consideration of $1,250,000. The property will remain under charge of E. M. White for at least two years, that being the period over which payments are to be made on the purchase price. High-grade chalcocite in gray schist, an ideal concentrating ore, running about 4 per cent. copper, lately was found in the Warrior in large quantity. Shipments of 100 tons a day are being made to El Paso.

CANANEA SALE.

Many are the rumors of trades and transfers around the Copper Queen interests. It seems generally understood that the company is preparing to leave the Cananea district and to turn its Indiana-Sonora property over to the Greene-Cananea Company. This mine is across a cañon from the noted Capote property, and is almost wholly surrounded by Greene-Cananea ground. It embraces about 400 acres, highly valuable, estimated to be capable of production of about 5,000,000 tons of good copper ore. A report that the Phelps-Dodge interests have sold to the Cananea corporation the Nacozari mines has been contradicted by General Manager Walter Douglas.

PHELPS-DODGE DEALS.

The Phelps-Dodge company has bought all the Burro Mountain Company's mines at Leopold, Grant county, N. M., taking up 65 per cent. of the stock, which had been held by the Leopold Bros. of Chicago. It is said that the price was $2,340,000. The camp is thirty miles from Lordsburg, from which point it is expected there will be built railroad connection, by which the ores can be cheaply transported to the Copper Queen smelter at Douglas. There is report that the Phelps-Dodge company is likely to take over the Black Queen mines in Paradise district in Southeastern Arizona, carrying copper and silver.

Sinking is being continued on the Denn-Arizona shaft at Bisbee, which has reached a depth of 1360 feet.

On the 1250-foot level of the Oliver mines of the Calumet and Arizona company at Bisbee has been found a high-grade deposit of copper oxide, something that has much excited the local geologists. Oxides have never before been found at such depth in Arizona.

The Wolverine property at Bisbee is shipping 150 tons of 12 per cent. ore weekly to the Copper Queen smelter.

RAY'S BIG HOIST.

D. C. Jackling, head of the Ray Consolidated Copper Company, during a visit to Phoenix this week, told that he is preparing to put in a hoist at Ray that will be the largest in the world, capable of holding 400 tons an hour. Work has been begun upon the shaft, which it will adorn, and the shaft and hoist are to be finished within four months.

Though information is given in homeopathic doses from the King of Arizona mine, it is being told that during the past fortnight a magnificent gold body has been found in the lower levels of that famous property. A large share of this property is owned by Epes Randolph, and the balance is held mainly by men connected with the Southern Pacific. All around the King lie rich gold ledges, several of the richest of less than two years' discovery, and the district that lies in Central Yuma county seems to have brighter prospects than any other southwestern section where gold is, considered the principal product.

A twenty-stamp mill is to be placed on the property of the Southwestern Mining and Milling Company, a Phoenix corporation which has gold mines in Ellsworth district, near Vicksburg, on the Arizona and California Railroad. Jerome D. Mitchell has been installed as general manager.

In the Concho mine, in White Picacho district of northern Maricopa county, has been found a considerable deposit of high-grade turquoise, though the property is being developed for gold.

F. A. Compton of Los Angeles has been put in charge of the mines of the Arizona Copper Belt Mining Company in Black Rock district, near Wickenburg.

TONOPAH.

BIGGER FOOTAGE BEING OPENED.

PROGRESS OF DEVELOPMENT ON REGULAR WORKERS.

Yerrington Smelter to Be Blown in by Next April—Mill to Be Built at Ramsey—Nevada Hills Will Increase Greatly Its Shipments at Fairview.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

TONOPAH (Nev.) Oct. 22.—The footage of ground broken by the Tonopah mine is the largest in the history of the company for many months. Last week it amounted to 491 feet, scattered all over the property, extensive operations being carried on in all the drifts from three shafts. Much of this work is being done in virgin territory, which gives every promise of reward, as considerable quartz, some of which shows values, has been encountered thus far.

In the Montana-Tonopah mine the faces that exposed barren values last week disclose an improvement this week. This is one of the reasons why the news of rich ore being encountered in the workings of this company are seldom given any prominence because the values are likely to return to the old grade before the news can even be printed. The tonnage treated by the company's mill for last week amounted to 962 tons, from which an average extraction of 92 per cent. was recorded.

TONOPAH-BELMONT.

The development which has taken place on the Tonopah-Belmont during the past week is surprising. On the east drift on the Belmont vein on the 1100-foot level a body of ore twenty feet wide has been opened with the pay rock continuing. This has added to the determination of the management to have the shaft completed in the shortest possible time, as this big ore body lies about 500 feet west and 125 feet south of it. In fact, all the larger ore bodies are much closer to the new shaft than to the one through which work is being done, known as the Desert Queen shaft. Good progress is being made on the ore bins at the shaft, which will be used as storage for supplying the Crane washer and picker, now being installed, and which will effect a great saving in sorting ore.

THE MACNAMARA.

Strong ore bodies are being opened on all levels of the MacNamara. The extraction of extremely high grade continues in No. 12 stope, where the vein shows a width of seven feet carrying good milling values outside of the hanging wall streak. This streak varies from one to two feet in width and is producing some of the richest ore ever taken out of the mine, being plastered with argentite and showing large quantities of ruby silver. In fact, there are several workings in the mine which are yielding ore of high-grade value, so much so that the average value of the ore shipped is considerably above the ordinary milling grade. During the past week nine carloads of ore were sent to the smelter, totaling 450 tons.

YERRINGTON SMELTER.

Yerrington copper camp is soon to have a smelter, to be in operation by next April, with a guaranteed freight rate of $1 per ton on ore. The new smelter is being built by the Western Nevada Smelters' Corporation, and the site is in Carson Cañon, where the company owns the full water right of the Carson River, also 290 acres on which is a vast tonnage of iron, limestone and volcanic ash, all of the required material for fluxing. Material for the first 250-ton section has been ordered and the foundation is under way. It is the intention to have the first unit in operation by April 1, 1910.

MILL AT RAMSEY.

N. F. Heath has gone to Ramsey to build the Ramsey Comstock Mining Company's mill. The machinery is ready to be installed, and much of it is on the ground. It is believed that the plant will be completed and in operation within ninety days. The Ramsey Comstock has a large ore deposit, and it is thought that it will be a large producing mine. The mill will have a capacity of sixty tons per day, and when it is completed there will be enough ore in the dumps to keep it running for months.

Preparations are being made for greatly increased shipments by the Nevada Hills Mining Company at Fairview. A forty-horse-power gas engine for running the compressor and drills has been ordered. A more energetic campaign of development and production will be inaugurated, and the big body of ore encountered in the winze some time ago exploited. A significant feature of the find was that it was made in the big fault vein, which was barren in the upper levels. The strike was made in a fifty-foot winze sunk from the 350 level in a drift which was sent out from a fault vein. The water came in so rapidly that the miners had no more time than to gather some of the rich boulders which were washed down before making their escape.

DECISION TOMORROW.

Supervisors Will Probably Appoint Meserve, Horticultural Commissioner, and Dingle Chief Deputy.

The meeting of the Board of Supervisors tomorrow, is expected to be a short one, as far as the appointment of the Horticultural Commissioner is concerned. The members informally decided, yesterday, to select A. R. Meserve, and will recommend the appointment of Ervin Dingle as his chief deputy.

Under the new law, each county has but one commissioner instead of three, as at present. Meserve, Dingle and C. E. Bemis have constituted the board, and, in addition, there have been one or more inspectors at work all the time.

Some time ago, an examination was held here, the successful candidates, including Meserve, Dingle, Bemis and Strong. The citrus fruit growers of the county favored Meserve as commissioner. Dingle, who was favored by several of the Supervisors, withdrew from the fight in favor of Meserve.

"THE LEPER'S SQUINT."

"The Leper's Squint" will be the title of a reminiscent talk by Secretary Luther at the Y.M.C.A. this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The story is inspired by Mr. Luther's recent trip to Europe, and is only one of the many interesting things he will have to tell from time to time. This is the usual meeting for men only. Other attractions at the building this afternoon will be the lobby concert by the orchestra; Triangle Club meeting, addressed by E. A. K. Hackett; boys' meeting, personal workers' conference, home hour in the lobby. Strangers in the city are requested to call and spend a pleasant afternoon.

IN THE EARTH.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY AND CHEMISTRY.

To Correspondents:

This department is not conducted for pay. Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public, and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and injunctions contained in the paragraphs below.

(1.) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender, and the general—not exact—locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send, also, with the specimen a clearly-written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wishes done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed.

Letter and specimen must be in one package, not in separate inclosure.

(2.) No attention will be paid to anonymous letters or to letters signed merely with initials.

(3.) No examinations of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times may decide that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4.) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interest will not be answered.

(5.) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6.) It is impossible to return specimens, as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

Address invariably, The Times.

Fahlerz.

CHLORIDE (Ariz.) Sept. 29.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I enclose a piece of metal, it comes from Walapai district two miles south of Chloride, A. T., fifty feet down in the earth. Are any of the metals of use? Thanking you in advance.

Yours truly, J. B.

ANSWER: The sample is a variety of tetrahedrite. It is made up of sulphides chiefly, with zinc present in low percentage.

Usually, the mining boys in the hills believe they have good ore if it be gray copper ore (mineralogically named at the sub-heading) and so they have, if it runs high in silver. Some of the gray-copper ore of the White Pine mine, Boulder county, Colorado, yields 3... ounces of silver per ton ore. There is a variety of tetrahedrite in Spain that carries 10 per cent. of platinum, and, undoubtedly, some gray copper ore of our country will eventually be found to carry platinum. Platinum districts are the places to look for it, too. We have detected platinum present in a sample, recently received, from near Chetco, Or., but in very low per cent. No platinum is present in the sample by you submitted. Sulphides of iron, copper, lead, and arsenic are present in the specimen. We did not test it for gold or silver.

Fairly Good Earth.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] This soil is from government land in southern part of Lassen county. Kindly tell me how much alkali is in it and if any good for farming. Will look for answer in the "In the Earth" columns.

Respectfully yours, C. N.

ANSWER: The sample submitted resembles earth found in dry washes. Alkali contents are low in percentage, but the material—as soil—is lean. It represents earth suitable for ordinary farming, however.

Odd Combinations.

SEARCHLIGHT (Nev.) Sept. 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Local ores for assay numbered 1 and 2, with two vials besides.

SAM Y.

ANSWER: Perhaps in your "honorable" China; "good old United States language" is somewhat unknown. We will therefore do our utmost to decipher the marked tags and to answer your communication intelligently.

Sample No. 1 is simply desert wash with no precious metals present. No. 2 (quite a bunch) is basaltic rock with pyrite. Silver and lead are present in very low percentages. In the separate—newspaper wrapper—package is some trachyte (rock.) No. 3 should be further prospected for silver ores.

In one of the vials we find iron concentrates pyrite and pyrrhotite. In the square vial is a pulverized material which we are shy of, and cannot further pass upon it.

Green Hornblende.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Specimen found about three miles north of Cajon, Cal. Yours truly, A. D.

Cutting Stones.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you please tell me the different wheels, etc., needed in cutting and polishing such stones as moonstones and sardonyx?

Your friend, D. H. T.

ANSWER: As a beginner, one should go slow. Rig up a sort of lathe out of an old sewing machine, with wheel and belt to run shaft, etc. Wheels required are few. One of four-inch diameter made of Russian iron on a small quarter-inch steel shaft and pulley will answer. Start the machine, with stone in place, and use so-called diamond dust and water to facilitate the cutting (sawing.) A burnisher, some rouge, putty powder and oxalic acid can be used (after sawing) to advantage. It would be well for you to see a lathe working before you begin actual operations.

Tellurium Absent.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] No. 1 dyke rock. Please classify. No. 2 ore from under dyke; please try for tellurium. No. 3, classify to settle dispute. From Lee-Echo mining district.

Yours truly, I. L.

ANSWER: You submit no number 3. Samples are tagged 1, 2 and 4. No. 1 is not quartz. It is quartzitic with micaceous seams and aluminum silicate present. Opal silica is also present with iron oxide and zinc traces. No. 2 is impure, banded chalcedony with no tellurium present. No. 4 is, properly, augite, hornblende present.

Siliceous Fuller's Earth.

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) Oct. 2.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Kindly tell me what the inclosed sample consists of. It was taken from boring 350 feet from surface.

Yours truly, R. H. B.

Not Topaz.

PASADENA, Oct. 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I inclose you herewith part of a stone found in Grant county, Oregon. The specimen will cut glass, must be something in the nature of diamonds. I wish to know whether it has any commercial value. This piece may have been exposed for thousands of years to sun and rain. The spot I passed glitters in bright sunshine with small specks.

Yours truly, L. I. M.

ANSWER: The sample is obsidian (volcanic glass.)

Blowpipe Zinc Test.

SAN BERNARDINO, Oct. 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] With this please find five samples, all taken within a distance of fifteen miles from Otis on the Salt Lake Railroad. No. 1 may be some kind of lead ore. No. 2 tin (?) No. 3 zinc (?) No. 4 iron ore of some kind and No. 5 I take to be porphyry.

Please test these samples and give me an answer, and at the same time, I will thank you for a blow pipe test suitable for testing zinc.

Thanking you, etc.,

Yours truly, B. W.

ANSWER: Sample No. 1 is crystallized carbonate of lime. No. 2 is magnetic iron ore, try some of it with a magnet. No. 3 is Smithsonite (carbonate of zinc,) in reniform (kidney) shape; it is a very pure specimen, and carries approximately carbon dioxide (carbonic acid) 35, with zinc oxide 65 percentages. Sample No. 4 is yellow iron oxide (limonite) and No. 5 is pegmatite (graphic granite) a porphyritic—feldspathic rock.

Zinc, and many of its compounds, b. b., on charcoal gives a white coating on the charcoal (of zinc oxide,) when the assay cools. The coating is yellow when hot. By adding cobalt nitrate solution to the oxide coating and heating a second time a green-yellow coating is observable when cold.

Magnetite.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I call this sample tungsten. It comes from the New York range of mountains. If it is not tungsten will you please tell me what it is and how you tell it. I will look for an answer in the "In the Earth."

Yours truly, P. L. S.

ANSWER: Tungsten does not occur native. You probably refer to wolframite—tungstate of iron.

Your sample is high grade magnetite. By breaking small pieces from a mass of similar ore the magnet will pick it up in chunks.

While on the subject of magnets, it may be well to state, that by bringing a pocket knife blade in contact with a horseshoe magnet—or bar magnet—the blade becomes magnetized and will answer for a good field magnet when needed.

Tin Ore and Greisen.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 2.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In this sack please find some ore samples from a claim near Sheridan, Wyo. Please state in your "In the Earth" column what the brown metal is in the rock. What is the rock composed of? Thanking you in advance for your trouble.

Very respectfully, T. K.

ANSWER: We are very greatly surprised to learn of your reported find near Sheridan, Wyo., and would be glad to have further particulars thereon. That's one locality we manifestly missed in 1896 and 1897.

The square prisms imbedded in the matrix of the sample you submit are cassiterite; of brown color and adamantine luster. Streak gray. Hardness 6.6, with specific gravity 7. The prisms—which represent over 50 per cent. of the mass carry 78 per cent. tin. The powdered prisms, mixed with soda, yield globules of metallic tin before the blow pipe on charcoal.

The rock matrix does not possess schistose structure. "It is a mixture of granular quartz and mica, in scales. The mica may be muscovite, lepidolite, or biotite," (your sample carries muscovite.) "It is granite with the feldspar left out, and occurs in regions of gneiss, granite or quartzite, and sometimes graduates into these rocks. Metamorphic.

Can it be possible that the Sheridan coal fields will produce ores of tin?

Hydraulic Limestone.

BAKERSFIELD, Oct. 4.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am mailing you three ore samples, No. A comes from near Lompoc. No. B is from a lead fifteen miles east and south from Bakersfield, and No. C comes from near Caliente, Nev. Please name these minerals or ores in your "In the Earth" columns, and if not too much trouble I would thank you to describe them, also.

Yours truly, A. C. P.

ANSWER. Sample A resembles chalk. When glass is rubbed upon the mineral the glass becomes scratched. It is made up chiefly of silicious shells of diatoms, and hence the name for the mineral, diatomaceous earth. "This soft diatomaceous material is sold in the shops under the name of Silex, electroc-silicon, and polishing powder, and is obtained for commerce in Maine, Massachusetts, Nevada and California. A bed exceeding fifty feet in thickness occurs near Monterey in California; and other large beds in Nevada near Virginia City and elsewhere. It is used as a polishing powder; in the manufacture of "soluble glass," and also mixed with nitro-glycerine to make dynamite. . . . consists of opal in the soluble state."

Sample B is a hydraulic limestone. A native carbonate of lime of compact body and containing clay. This limestone when burnt into quicklime will afford a cement which will "set" under water (hydraulic cement.)

"An analysis of a kind from Romdout, N. Y., afforded carbonic acid, 34.20, lime 25.50, magnesia 12.35, silica 15.37, alumina 9.13, iron sesquioxide 2.25 percentages, respectively."

Sample C is aragonite (calcium carbonate,) in coralloidal shape. Of white color, vitreous luster, hardness, 3.5, and sp. gr., 2.8. Differs from one other calcium carbonate in falling into powder when heated b.b. Its specific gravity, is, also, higher than ordinary calcite.

This coralloidal form of aragonite is found in beds of iron ore, and hence known as "flos ferri" (flowers of iron.) "They look like a loosely intertwined or tangled cord."

HUNGRY.

JUST INCIDENT; EVERY-DAY RISK.

NARROW ESCAPE DOESN'T MAKE APPETITE LESS ACUTE.

Cool Lineman, from Perilous Position, Orders His Supper—Wife Sees Him Slip and Fall, But, When He Regains Place of Safety, She Hurries His Meal.

"Ham and——!",

Clear and strong, the words rang out above the noises of street traffic. Citizens, within sound of the voice, paused and gazed in the direction from which the words came. High up on the top of a telephone pole, straddling a cross-arm at its extreme end, was posed Lineman Jack Davis.

His gaze was in the direction of a tall brick building, a block and a half away, and holding his hands like a trumpet, he bawled:

"Coming!"

At a window, in the third floor of the brick building, was framed the smiling face of a young woman. She was waving a white cloth. Suddenly she lifted a fair-haired child to the window and pointed, for the baby, to the far-off figure on the telephone pole. The child waved his chubby hand, and the man waved his hat.

"Daddy's coming!" he yelled.

Then he swung along the cross-arm toward the pole. He threw his leg over the cross-arm, cast loose a long rope with which he had been working, started to swing himself clear, and then he slipped——

Down he went! On the cross-arm below, his leather belt caught, for an instant, on an insulator peg, and held him, suspended high in the air!

The woman in the window leaned far out, with outstretched, clenched hands. Her face was ghastly pale; her lips moved!

In the momentary suspension of his fall the lineman reached above, and, by an effort grabbed the cross-arm with one hand. Then he slowly drew himself up, until he secured a hold with his other hand. He swung around, until he faced the window, and then nodded his head to signify that he was safe. Hand over hand he moved to the pole.

Winding his legs about the pole he drove his climbing irons deep into the wood, let go with one hand, waved his hat with the other, and shouted:

"Hurry up; I'm hungry!"

The woman waved the white cloth again and disappeared.

Step by step the lineman descended the pole, took the irons from his feet, picked up his tools, and started off down the hill whistling.

The day's work was done, and Lineman Jack Davis was going home to supper.

LIGHT EXPECTED FROM HIM.

Supposed Important Witness in the Salter Case Located by Detectives After Three Weeks' Work.

D. W. Lieb, who is considered by the police as an important witness in the William Salter murder case, was located yesterday by Detectives Jones and Boyd, after a search of three weeks.

Lieb is residing in Hanford. Detective Jones has gone there to interview him, believing he can throw light on the case that will be of valuable assistance in clearing up some of the uncertain features.

Salter, who was a war veteran, and Lieb were close friends, and visited each other nearly every day before the former's death.

When Salter was found dying in Center Place on the night of August 14, the police sought Lieb. They could not locate him, and gave up the search after the Coroner's jury had brought in a verdict of accidental death.

Later evidence was brought to the attention of the police that caused them to implicate Willis Earnsting in the murder of Salter. He was arrested, and will be given a preliminary examination Thursday.

Mrs. Frank Smith, keeper of the rooming-house where Salter resided, told the officers that a man she thought was Lieb was in the veteran's room late on the night of the murder. This caused the police to take interest in locating him.

The detectives had no clew as to where he was living, but after nearly three weeks found his address.

If Lieb was with Salter the night of the murder, he can fill in some missing links in the chain of evidence that has been worked up against Earnsting. The police have not been able to trace all of the movements of Salter a few hours before his death, and desire to do so before the case against Earnsting comes up for trial.

There will be no effort at the preliminary hearing to disprove the finding of the Coroner's jury that a horse stepped on and fatally injured Salter. It was at first thought necessary to do this, but the proof which will be put in will show that Earnsting contributed to the old man's death in whatever manner he was killed.

Detectives Jones and Boyd are convinced that the jury's finding was erroneous, both holding the idea that a horse will not step on a man in the dark. Their theory has been strengthened by the opinion of expert horsemen.

NEW FAST TRAIN.

The Pennsylvania Railroad will put on a twenty-four-hour "limited train" between New York and St. Louis November 7. This marks a new departure; heretofore St. Louis has had no fast train service compared with the Chicago-New York trains. Excess fare on all Chicago-New York fast trains, making the run in less than twenty-eight hours, is on a basis of $1 per hour under that time. The Pennsylvania excess charge on its eighteen-hour limited, between those cities, is $10. The new train from St. Louis will be on this basis making the excess fare $4.

The St. Louis-New York train's running time will be approximately five miles an hour faster than the "Pennsylvania Limited," the twenty-three-hour train between Chicago and New York.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS.

The Los Angeles section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers will meet in Assembly Hall, Blanchard building, on Tuesday evening. Clem A. Copeland will read a paper on "The Life Hazard and Resuscitation," which will be discussed by eminent physicians, with practical demonstrations. Members are privileged to invite their friends.

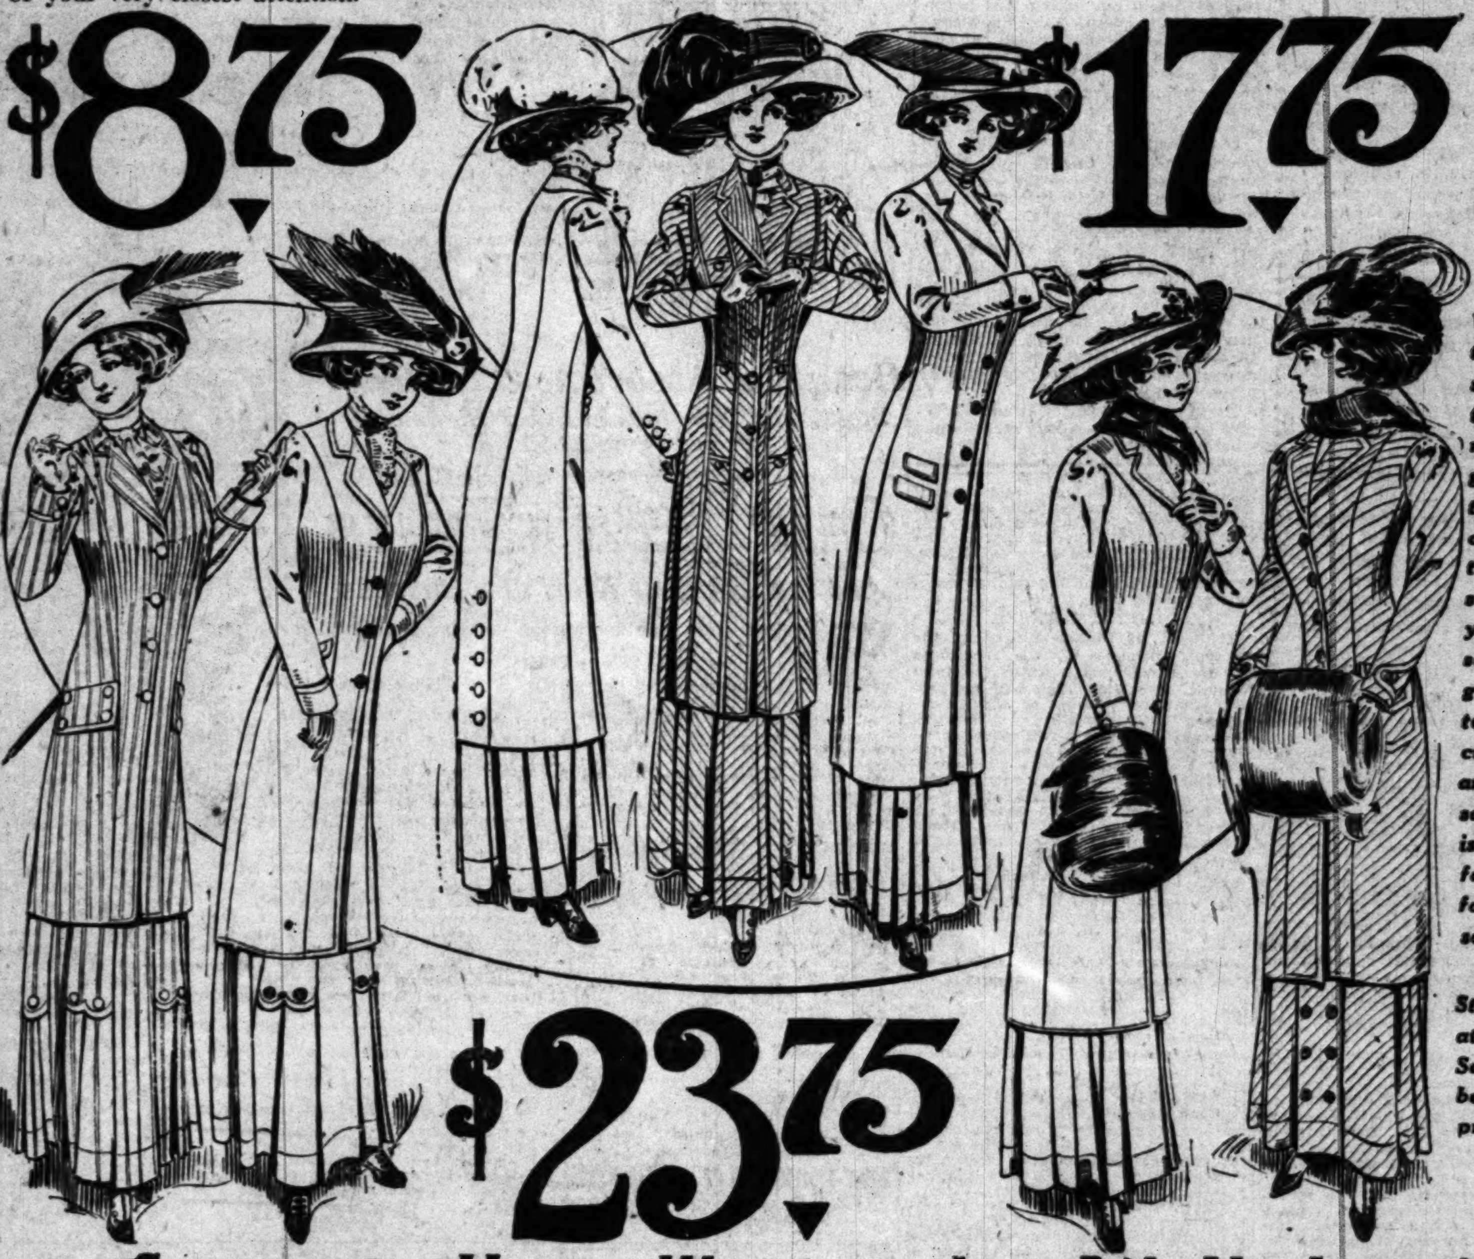
Very Pinnacle of Value-Giving Reached
In This Great Three-Price Tailored Suit Sale
To Begin a Great October Garment Week Monday

We're entering the last week of October in a blaze of value glory. Hundreds of garments have entered into a sale, represented in the three great price lots illustrated. Already sales in this department have reached a height hitherto unapproached, forcing our representative to make several additional trips to the market. Right now he is on an important buying trip to the garment centers with plenty of ready cash to handle the most important deals.

The three-price sale that we set forth in this announcement is one that will be of most intense interest to every woman in Los Angeles. The event is worthy of your very closest attention.

The Broadway makes a specialty of fitting extra size women. A few days since we fitted a woman weighing 325 lbs., and measuring 56 inches in the bust. Moreover no alterations were necessary. The price of the suit was $19.50. These garments range in size from 44 to 56.



We picture only seven of the numerous garments to be included in this suit sale, but you must see these garments to appreciate what an unusual sale this is. Extra facilities for quick service.

Store open at 8 a.m. Sale begins promptly.

Seven Garments Here Illustrated. All Underpriced
In a Way to Make Stirring Activity Monday

This event is going to add another link in the chain of Broadway victories. It is to be another illustration of the supremacy of this store as a garment distributor.

Two Styles Pictured To the Left Each . $8.75
These new fall suits are made of serge, panamas and novelty woolens. The coats are satin lined, pleated and gored skirts. The color range includes blue, gray, green and Alice; no black. While the lot is small, the values are so exceptional that it will be well worth your while to be down early in the day. There will not be enough of these to last full selling time. Second floor.

High Class Garments In the Center Picture . . . $23.75
Distinctive enough to satisfy the most discriminating woman. They're all so carefully tailored, so well lined and finished. Made from the very best of woolens, lined with a guaranteed satin. Here are suits of Lymansville cheviot, English serge, rich broadcloths and the new fancy suitings. All the favorite colors, as well as black. From tight-fitting to the graceful semi-fitting models with kilted and cluster pleated skirts, the garments represent the top notch of fashion's tailoring. Mostly 7-8 length, with the new, mannish pockets and sleeves.

Two Styles To the Right $17.75
Choose blindfolded, if you will and you'll make no mistake, for the material list includes such favorite fabrics as homespuns, tweeds, cheviots and broadcloths as well as the wide wale materials. These garments are in the 42 and 45-inch length, so much favored. They're lined with fine quality satin and peau de cygne. Black and all the new fall colors.

"DIRECT" LAW EATS UP CASH.

November Election Will Cost Thirty Thousand.

Expense Double That of Any Previous Ballot.

New System of Voting Hits Taxpayers Hard.

All records in the cost of Los Angeles city elections will be eclipsed by the expenses of the direct primaries of November 16, when the system will be tried for the first time. The cost to the city will be close to $30,000, double that of the costliest previous election, which was $14,997 for the seating of Alexander. As much more probably will be expended by the managers of the various campaigns, in addition to thousands of dollars that individual candidates are permitted by law to gamble on their chances of securing nomination.

The heaviest cost to the city will be for election officers, of whom there will be eight of each of the 200 precincts in the city. At $10 apiece, the total will be $16,000. Rental of 200 polling places at $10 each will total $2000. Ballot paper and printing will cost $2000.

Election-day supplies will cost $1300.

Notices in the official newspaper will cost about $1000.

Other advertising required by law will cost about $1000.

Clerk hire and other necessary expenses will total about $4000.

Various incidental expenses not yet known probably will total $2000.

The cost of the primaries and that of the ensuing December election will add nearly $45,000 to the city's election expenses for the year, the total of which will fall but little short of $100,000. At the close of the year there will have been eight elections in Los Angeles in twelve months.

Elections since January 1, and the cost of each, have been as follows: School bonds, January 6, $3000; charter amendments, February 2, $8935; recall, March 26, $14,997; consolidation with Wilmington, about $7500; consolidation with San Pedro, about $7500; annexation, about $7500.

The December election probably will cost $15,000.

Consolidation and annexation have added eleven precincts to the city, making a total of 200. This means increased expense for hire of election officers, for supplies, for rental of polling places and for cartage of paraphernalia and for numerous incidentals.

The new system, with its multiplicity of candidates, requires a much larger ballot, and a consequent increase in the amount of paper to be used and printing to be done; the election officers will be on duty much longer than at previous elections because of the large number of names to be handled, and, instead of being paid for one day, as ordinarily in the past, they will be paid for two days.

PETITIONS COME HIGH.

In the matter of nominating petitions alone, of which there were at the outset about 150, the city was put to heavy expense. Each petition had to be checked by deputies of the City Clerk for the purpose of verifying the names. This checking is estimated to have cost $1200.

The ballot for the primaries will be 16x27 inches in size, and will bear the names of 140 candidates. A little more than six tons of ballot paper is required. This must be purchased, under the law, from the Secretary of State. The cost of the plain paper was $1050. As the supply at Sacramento was short at the time the order was placed, it was necessary that the shipment be made by express so it would be here in time; the express charges were $358. Printing of the ballots will cost $365. Paper and printing of sample ballots will cost $300.

ORDINANCE EXPENSIVE.

One of the heavy expenses will be the printing of the election ordinance, in which are given the number and boundaries of each precinct, the names of the election officers, and other information. This will require probably five pages in the official newspaper, and the publication must continue for ten days. The cost will be about $1000.

Under the new law, the names of all candidates also must be published in different papers for a period of five days. This, it is estimated, will add another $1000.

One hundred thousand envelopes are required for the mailing of sample ballots to each of nearly 80,000 registered voters in the city, and to each voter in certain school districts just outside the incorporated limits, these electors balloting only on members of the Board of Education.

Postage on the sample ballots will be between $800 and $900; addressing and "stuffing" of envelopes will be $200 or $300 more.

CARTAGE AND SUPPLIES.

Every time an election is called, a gang of men and teams is engaged to distribute the booths and supplies to the various polling places. The cost usually is about $300. There is an expenditure each time of $6.50 for pens, ink, ink pads, rubber stamps and stationery for each precinct, and with 200 precincts this expense now reaches the total of $1300.

Another outlay at each election is for chairs and tables for the polling places. These are furnished at about $1 for each precinct. Rental of furnished tents is another expense, these shelters being used when barns and storerooms are not available.

Because of the crowded condition of offices in the City Hall, a large force of extra clerks has been housed in the Copp building, engaged in work preliminary to the primary election. This has added several hundred dollars to the city's rent bill.

A hundred dollars here, a thousand there, and thousands more elsewhere, pile up the election cost at a tremendous rate, and as the election fad grows, under the stimulation of the initiative, referendum and recall clauses of the charter, the city now faces a tremendous annual outlay for this diversion. While the cost for the present year will be close to $100,000, it may be doubled next year and tripled in 1911, according to the whims of the recallers.

OTHER EXPENSES.

The cost of the machinery of the election, all borne by the city, does not by any means indicate the total amount of money that will go into circulation by reason of the campaign. Under the purity of election law, candidates are permitted to spend one-tenth of one year's salary of the office sought. In the case of Councilmen this is $120 each. Candidates for Mayor may expend $360, and for other offices from $240 to $300. Candidates for Board of Education, nonsalaried positions, may expend $100 each.

Thus seventy-seven candidates for Council may legitimately expend a total of $9240; seven for Mayor, $2520; twenty-seven for the Board of Education, $2700, and twenty-nine aspirants for various other offices, a total of about $8000, or something like $22,000 that may be laid out in this way.

The campaign committees also are permitted to pay out money for public meetings, for postage and for other purpose. One of the Good Government Organization bosses announced a few days ago that it would cost that machine at least $15,000 to carry on the contest. Granting that a similar amount is expended by the Republican party, this would make $30,000, not to mention the expenses of the Mushet and Farish Campaign Committees, which will add possibly $15,000.

Thirty thousand dollars for the machinery of the election, $22,000 that individual candidates may expend, and $45,000 for committee work—a total of $97,000 for a single election.

YOUR LAME BACK WILL FEEL FINE

OUT-OF-ORDER KIDNEYS ARE REGULATED AND BLADDER MISERY VANISHES.

A few doses of Pape's Diuretic will clean and regulate your Kidneys, ending Backache and Urinary trouble. No man or woman here in Los Angeles, whether young or old, can afford to neglect the slightest Kidney Disorder for a single day.

A real surprise awaits every sufferer from kidney or bladder trouble who takes several doses of Pape's Diuretic. Misery in the back, sides or loins, sick headache, nervousness, rheumatism pains, heart palpitations, dizziness, sleeplessness, inflamed or swollen eyelids, lack of energy and all symptoms of out-of-order kidneys simply vanish.

Uncontrollable urination (especially at night,) smarting, offensive and discolored water and other bladder misery ends.

The moment you suspect kidney or urinary disorder, or feel any rheumatism, begin taking this harmless medicine, with the knowledge that there is no other remedy, at any price, made anywhere else in the world, which will effect so thorough and prompt a cure as a fifty-cent treatment of Pape's Diuretic, which any druggist can supply.

It is needless to feel miserable and worried, because this unusual preparation goes at once to the out-of-order kidneys and urinary system, distributing its cleansing, healing and strengthening influence directly upon the organs and glands affected, and completes the cure before you realize it.

Your physician, pharmacist, banker or any mercantile agency will tell you that Pape, Thompson & Pape, of Cincinnati, is a large and responsible medicine concern, thoroughly worthy of your confidence.

Accept only Pape's Diuretic—fifty-cent treatment—any drug store—anywhere in the world.

Hungry Man, in Luck at Poker, Orders Big Meal, Only to Discover Teeth Are in Pawn.

Of all the things which have deserted him in his strenuous career, there is one thing which has clung like a leech to Bart Rhoades of Las Vegas, Nev., a recent visitor in Los Angeles. According to his own account, that one clinging thing is Hard Luck.

His last woeful experience came here when he "went broke" in a poker game—just between friends. When his money departed his friends also tarried not, and Bart was left entirely without funds. From time to time he pawned his personal possessions until he had only the clothes on his back one evening when he wandered into the rear of a barber shop and came upon a game of draw poker in full progress. He watched a few minutes, and was surprised to see that the players were of mediocre talent and undoubtedly easy marks. To get in was the burning desire of the Nevada man, and he dashed out to try to raise a few dollars.

It was Saturday night and the pawnshops were open, so he decided to pawn something; but he apparently had no asset with which he could part. He remembered his excellent set of false teeth, with one gold tooth in front. "Surely a man can play poker without his teeth," reasoned Bart, and he borrowed $2 on the teeth, rushed back, and "stalled" until he was invited to join the barber-shop game. It was just as he thought, a cinch. He won most of the money in sight, and by 11 o'clock that night had $14.75. "Now for a good old feed. I haven't had a good meal in a week," quoth the lucky poker player.

He rushed to a restaurant and ordered a grand meal. He did not discover any predicament until he tried to eat a large, juicy steak. Depositing some money as a guarantee of his return, Rhoades hastened from the dining-room to the pawnshop where he had left his teeth; it was closed, and would not open again until Monday!

Epileptic Fits

There is nothing more frightful in a happy home than to have one of its members instantly seized with a dreadful attack of Epilepsy or Fits. The many grateful letters from such homes, after the use of Kosine, the remarkable remedy for this dread ailment, testify to the real merit of the preparation.

It is a meritorious article and is sold on a guarantee plan that deserves your confidence. The price, $1.50, will be refunded by the Owl Drug Co., Inc., if not fully satisfied after using a bottle. Mail orders filled by the Kosine Co., Washington, D. C., or the Owl Drug Co., Inc., 320 S. Spring St., Fifth and Broadway, 620 S. Broadway.

BANQUET FOR DRUMMERS.

Pomona Tavern and Merchants Entertain Traveling Men—Speches and Toasts.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

POMONA, Oct. 23.—The new Pomona Tavern was the scene of a merry gathering last night when that hostelry and the Pomona Business Men's Association entertained the members of the United Commercial Travelers' Association, and the drummers in Southern California who make regular trips to this city, at a banquet at 8 o'clock. Albert E. Tate was master of ceremonies, and welcomed "knights of the grip."

Other speakers were Frank W. Balfour, local agent for the Edison Electric Company, who spoke upon "The City Beautiful;" James Slauson of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, "Fellowship and Coöperation;" Joe Sunderland of Los Angeles, "The Traveling Man's Opinion of Pomona;" H. G. Tinsley, W. H. Truitt, C. Lincoln, Morris H. Wilson, G. Galbreath of Los Angeles, F. E. Graham and C. E. Walker.

The dining tables were attractively decorated. The traveling men were also entertained at the Tavern over night and at breakfast. Those from Los Angeles: J. N. Thomas, A. R. Vaughn, A. Hammer, R. E. Corcoran, W. A. Hancock, L. B. McDade, G. E. Wise, A. W. Ellis, Julius Levy, E. D. Burbank, H. A. Greene, James Slauson, J. Vosburg, J. N. Chermiss, E. B. Rooto, James T. Henry, A. B. Gazzolo, C. L. Soyster, J. H. Cox, J. O. Schman, E. A. Talbot, J. Sunderland, G. Galbreath, C. G. Hedenbery, F. M. Couch, C. H. Lincoln, R. E. Sommer, F. B. Westcott, J. Jacoby, F. E. Hughes, W. O. B. Foster, H. L. Aldrich, O. L. Bowman.

There were also present W. G. Shell, Detroit; W. Thomas, St. Paul, and H. M. Hellman, New York.

NEW BAPTIST CHURCH.

The members of the First Baptist Church have decided to begin the construction of their new church at the corner of Garey and Holt avenues. A meeting was called at which the Building Committee was organized thus: T. B. Stone, A. T. Currier, A. H. Witman, F. W. Ritter, D. R. Kelsey, J. M. Paige, Charles Snort, J. W. Bowyer, J. F. Fryer. A. H. Witman has been elected president, and F. W. Ritter, secretary.

The funeral services of the late Thomas Doyle, who was drowned in the reservoir on San Bernardino avenue, this week, were held this morning at the Catholic Church, and were largely attended. The members of the local lodge of Elks, of which Doyle was a member, attended the services in a body.

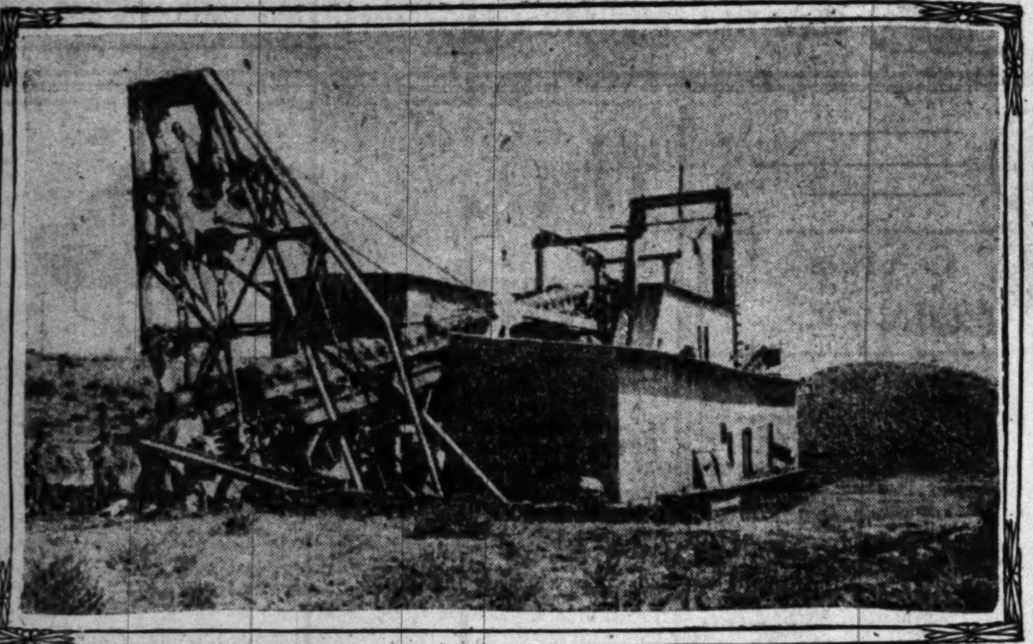
GOLD BOAT MINING NEWEST SYSTEM OF TREASURE-HUNTER.

Keeping Nation's Gold Crop at High-Tide Figures. Disappearance of Old-Time Methods in Quartz and Placer Mining, in Order to Maintain the Nation's Supremacy as a Gold-Producing Country.

Quartz Miners at Home.



A "Gold Ship," the Latest Word in Placer Mining.

DENVER (Colo.) Oct. 16.—Human ingenuity and energy are being exhausted in the West in the effort to make the gold production of the United States this year exceed the production of 1908, which was the highest for many years. In 1908 the gold production of $96,313,300 was something over $6,000,000 in advance of the production of 1907—due, in large measure, to the perfection of new and scientific methods of extracting the precious metal from refractory or low-grade ores.

In the great gold-mining States of the West a revolution is being enacted in the mining camps. Antiquated steam machinery is being replaced by lighter and more efficient electrical equipment. In the placer districts, the old-time methods of hydraulic work, such as panning and sluicing, have given way to "gold boat" mining—great dredges scooping up shovelfuls of the gold-bearing sands and leaving no foot of territory unworked. New processes of treating low-grade or refractory ores have enabled owner to work mines that hitherto have proved failures. Thus, while no new gold mining camps of importance have been opened up in the United States in recent years, since the sensational Goldfield discoveries, the production has kept on steadily increasing until now this country supplies one-fourth of the world's yellow metal.

Last year the five States of Colorado, Alaska, California, South Dakota and Utah supplied 90 per cent. of the total gold production of the United States. Apparently the gold resources of these States are inexhaustible. All of them require different methods of mining, yet the ingenuity of man has met every demand, and every year sees some new triumph accomplished and some new difficulty in mining overcome.

In Colorado it is estimated that the gold mining industry gives employment to over 11,000 people, and the yearly payroll is more than $12,000,000. California has more than 8000 workers, with a high payroll of nearly $12,000,000, and the industry assumes proportionate importance in the other gold-producing States.

The improvement of electrical machinery has done more than anything else to enable American miners to keep the gold crop at its present high figure. The early machinery installed in the great quartz mines of the West was ponderous and tremendously expensive. The equipment of a great mine, where pumping was necessary to keep the lower levels clear of water, would cost in the neighborhood of $500,000 in early days. Today electrical machinery is installed at a fraction of the cost of the old machinery, and the work is much more satisfactory. In hydraulic mining streams are utilized at a mere trifle in comparison with the cost of the earlier methods of placer mining.

In many of the great mining camps of the West, the chief problem—and one that grows as the mines increase in depth—is that of water. In Leadville a pumping association clears all the mines in the district. Fifteen million gallons of water a day are pumped from the mines of Leadville. The charge for pumping is ten cents per thousand gallons. It is estimated that 23.6 tons of water are raised for every ton of ore mined. This makes a tremendous charge on every ton of ore mined in the district, yet mining is being carried on with profit in Leadville and a few of the mines have been abandoned and allowed to fill with water.

In the old Comstock Mine in Nevada, water offered the greatest difficulty, as in the Leadville district, but there was no such success in handling the problem. After twenty years of mining the Comstock reached a depth of 3300 feet, and in 1886 the lower levels had to be abandoned on account of the steady gain of water. The pumping plant at the mine had cost a million, but the water gained steadily, and finally won the fight, causing the abandonment of one of the greatest and richest mines in the world's history.

In Cripple Creek the same fight against water is being carried on. Within a few months there has been completed an immense drainage tunnel, which it is expected will do much to solve the water problem of the camp for years to come. In all these deep mines, the drip of water is constantly heard. Subterranean springs send the water shooting down through tunnel roofs, and the miners generally are compelled to wear rubber clothing while at work. In the earliest days of quartz mining, before powder was used, mines could not be worked to a depth of more than fifty feet in some districts. The water had to be lifted by hand, and generally the first appearance of subterranean flow was a signal for abandoning mines that have since been worked to a depth of thousands of feet at great profit.

The evolution of placer mining has been even more astounding than that of deep mining. One can see the contrasts even today in the United States. In Arizona there is a placer field of 7000 acres that is worked by Mexicans in the most primitive manner, the water being carried on the backs of burros for six or eight miles. This form of "panning" was practiced in early days of placer mining. The old-time placer miner was equipped with a gold pan, "Long Tom" rocker, and pick and shovel, and with these crude instruments succeeded in wresting many millions from the earth. But this form of mining was slow, and only the richest "pockets" could be worked. Something was needed that would work faster and clean up the ground in more economical fashion, so at Yankee Jim, Placer county, California, in 1852, there appeared the first hydraulic machinery. An ingenious miner, whose name is lost to fame, contrived a simple apparatus, the hose being made of cowhide. It proved practical, however, and soon there came into general use the hydraulic machinery that is now a familiar sight in many placer fields—great streams being shot into gold-bearing earth at tremendous pressure and washing the gravel into sluices where it is treated.

Even the hydraulic machinery proved to have its drawbacks, however. It required much water, from running streams, and, as the western country was being settled by ranchmen who needed all the available water for irrigation, suits were instituted, and in many cases the mining interests were losers in court.

The attention of mining men in the placer fields was turned to the gold dredge, a machine that was invented by a New Zealander in the eighties. The gold dredge is a great flat boat, from one end of which projects a giant crane, equipped with a steam shovel. The dredge requires enough water to enable it to float, and that is all. The giant shovel picks up the gold-bearing sand, dumps it into a sluice on the boat, from which it is run to tables, where the gold is scientifically extracted and the refuse is allowed to pass out at the rear of the boat. The dredge keeps cutting a new basin for itself, and soon travels over a vast expanse of placer ground.

In one instance in the West a ranchman found gold "color" in his valuable orchard. He figured that he could make more money gold mining than by fruit raising, so he installed a dredge in his orchard. The trees were cut down as the dredge progressed, and soon all the great orchard had been destroyed by the machine—but the ranchman had been made a millionaire, while it was a matter of ease to replant his orchard.

A giant dredge costs from $50,000 to $75,000. Large tracts of placer ground are bought up by companies or individuals, a dredge is purchased and sometimes the work of mining by these wonderful "gold ships" is carried on for years in one small district.

Old-time prospecting methods have disappeared, in the evolution of mining in the West. The prospector today must trench for his "leads," as most of the country in which there are surface outcroppings has been prospected. Trenches are dug, sometimes hundreds of feet in length, in the hope of uncovering some ledge of gold-bearing rock that has been covered by a few feet of earth. Many valuable discoveries have been made in this way, but it makes prospecting much more difficult than in the old days when the gold hunter simply wandered over a virgin country and picked up the outcroppings that raised their heads above the surface of the ground.

The miner is living better than in the old days. Modern mining camps are equipped with every convenience, and some of the big mines have clubhouses for their men, with library, reading-room, billiard-room, etc. Many of the men are skilled machinists. These run the air drills that have taken the place of the heavy sledges that were swung by hand. The average rate of wages is high, even for the "muckers," who must clean up the débris after the drillers have finished their shift, and the rock has been blown out of the breast of the tunnel. In fact the element of the picturesque has almost entirely disappeared from the mining life of today in the United States, but in place of picturesqueness one finds a higher type of efficiency, that counts heavily in maintaining the nation's gold production at a high figure.

GREETING TO TOYLANDERS.

Over 2000 children of the city responded to invitations issued by the management and attended the elaborate reception which was tendered yesterday afternoon, to the new dollis, just arrived from Toyland, at the Broadway Department Store. The invitations announced that the function would be from 3 to 5, but long before 3 the little guests were crowding in, and it was evident that the reception was to be a "crush," because dollies are such popular folks. The café department of the store, where the reception was held, was converted into a fairylike bower of beauty. Tables were laid, with snowy napery, and bits of the daintiest china and silver. The dollies formed the center-piece of the board, frolicking around a gay Maypole, dressed to represent little English peasant maidens, and each holding a streamer of gaily-colored ribbon. All the while the little guests were served with chocolate and wafers, by a bevy of pretty maids, and, a stringed orchestra, hidden behind tall palms, played selections from "Babes in Toyland." A steady stream of children attended the reception. All were given pretty toys as favors.

SERVED WITHOUT SALARY.

Rev. A. F. Jertberg, for many years a resident of Springfield, Mo., has come to Los Angeles with his family, to make this city his future home, though he does not come to take up a pastorate. His work at Springfield was unique. For twenty-five years he served as pastor of the Swedish Congregational Church in that city, but steadily refused to receive any compensation for his services. He earned his living as a wagonmaker.

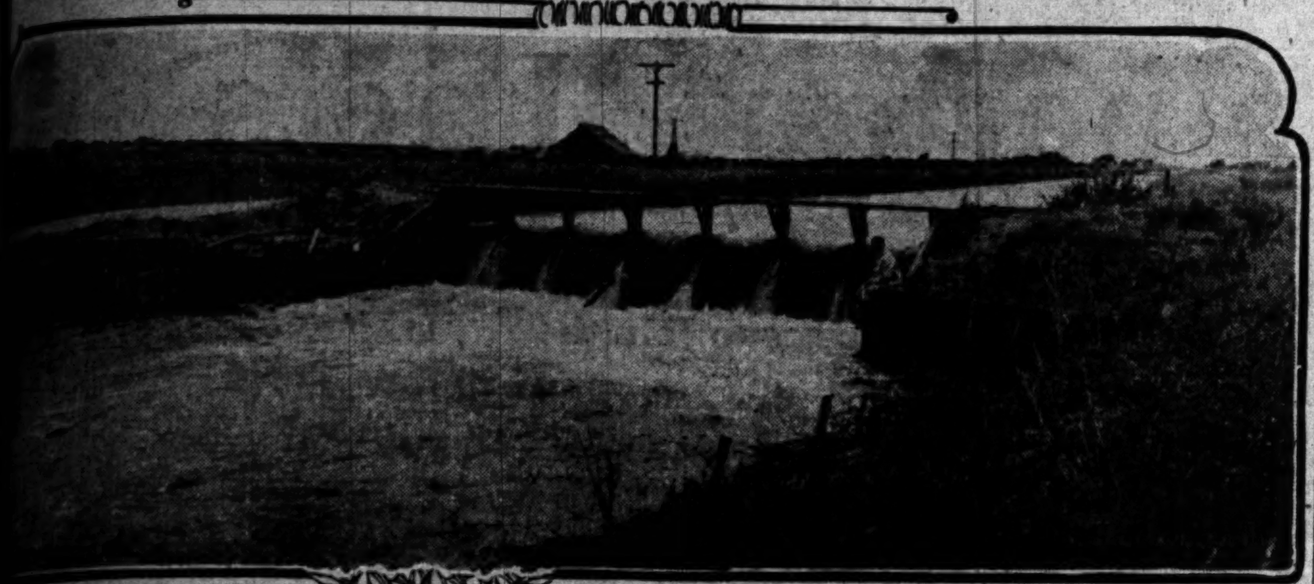
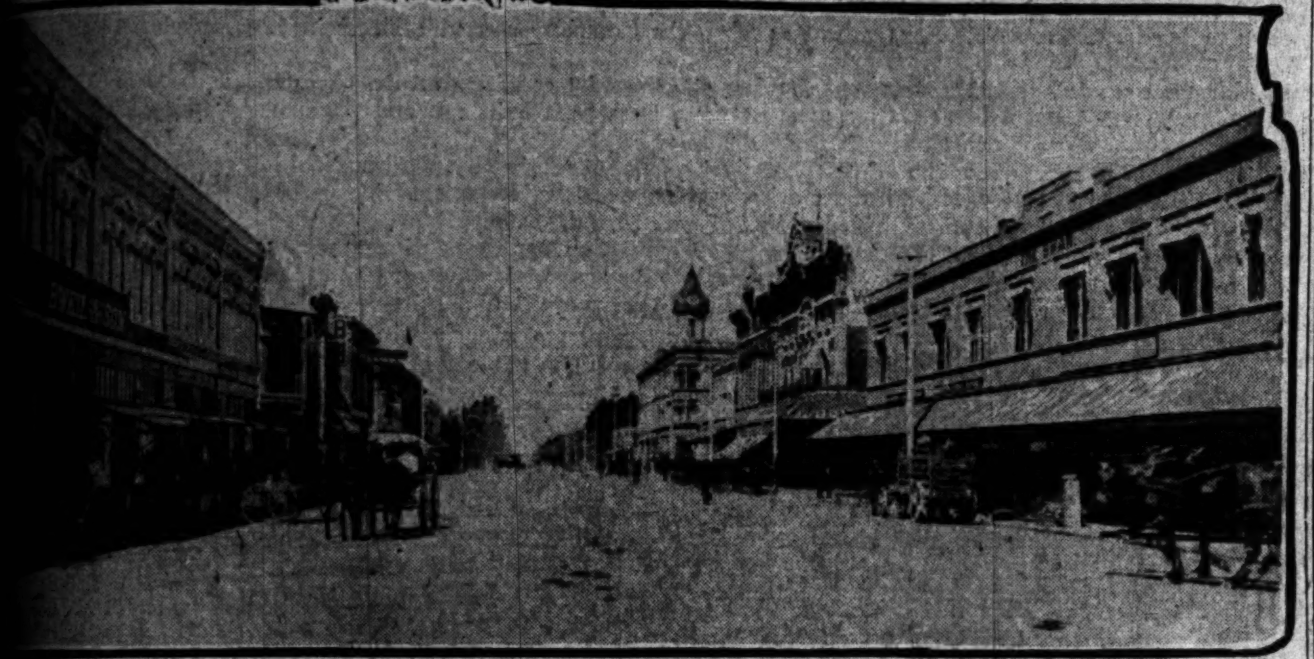
SECTION OF MODESTO AND PART OF HER IRRIGATION SYSTEM.





strations above give glimpses of the Modesto of today. This growing and promising young city lies in the lower end of aquin Valley as the river runs, or the upper end as the points of the compass lie. It is about half way between Fresno and a little more than 100 miles from San Francisco and only thirty miles from tidewater at Stockton. The city is the of Stanislaus, and lies in the center of one of the richest farming countries on the globe. Adjacent to Stanislaus is y on the south, and north is San Joaquin county. This upper end of the San Joaquin Valley is known as among the best fruit-growing and dairy sections of the State of California. Modesto lies upon the main line of the Southern Pacific is at the present time growing with that rapidity which marks everything in the great San Joaquin Valley. It has a ce of water.

ess houses are substantial and the residents indicate a degree of prosperity that will compare favorably with anything in of progressive California. There are about 5000 people now in Modesto, and the population is increasing with great country around is only begun to be developed. It is capable of sustaining an immense population, and as the natural und Modesto are developed the town is sure to grow into one of the handsomest and richest communities in the State of

Before the annexation election the Board of Water Commissioners adopted a resolution making it clear that it could provide no extensions in the new territory until the Owens River water was available, which means the fall of 1912, at the earliest.

Whether the Council will be asked to review the rates established by the Supervisors, a power which it is held to possess, is not determined by the improvement associations in the new territory.

Fire and police protection are also matters that the officials have started on. The Police Commission has asked the Chief to make an estimate of the number of men he will need preparatory to a request to the Council for their provision.

The Chief thinks twenty-five will be needed to meet requirements, but he expects a hard time in convincing the Council of this.

The Fire Chief has been directed by the Fire Commission to make a similar investigation, and will report during the coming week. At least two engine houses are believed necessary, if the city meets the requirements fully. Much will depend on the Chief's investigation of the water supply.

Annexation will make little difference in gas, electric and telephone rates, officials of the companies say, because the territory has been treated in the main as a part of the city, and city rates extended to it. Officials of the telephone companies were not prepared to say whether the city rate is now uniform throughout, or whether it will be made so, these matters being under investigation.

Champe S. Vance, speaking for the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Company, said annexation will have no effect on its business.

"We have been making extensions constantly in the region," said Mr. Vance, "and are now making them in the region south of Prospect avenue and west of Vermont avenue. We have uniform rates wherever we sell gas or electricity, in or out of the city. We will go a little more than half way to meet new business."

He Owned the Flies.

A. J. Singleton of the Burns Hotel says somebody played a mean trick on one of his German customers last week.

"The German had one of those old fashioned fly traps in his place," said Mr. Singleton. "It is about a foot high and about half the diameter at the bottom. The flies get in somehow and then they can't find their way out. A fellow went into the saloon on one of the hot days and the fly trap was full. 'I'll give you half a dollar for them flies,' says he, and the German's face lit up as he accepted it and shoved over the trap. The man looked at it awhile, then loosened the bottom and let the flies out.

"'Vat's der matter mit you?' asked the excited German.

"'Nothing,' replied the man as he neared the door. 'They were my flies and I could do what I wanted with them.'"—[Detroit Free Press.

An Impression.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Sir, as a stranger and a traveler, I am spending the coming winter in your beautiful city. I may say I am charmed with it and also the climate. The pretty homes in the residential parts, with the foliage and well-kept lawns, are most taking. However, there is one unsightly blot; I mean the billboards, with flaming advertisements, and I was most pleased to see by today's issue of your paper that the members of the Improvement Committee of your city intend to mend or end this by getting an ordinance passed to regulate or prohibit this nuisance. This is a step in the right direction, as these billboards are an eyesore everywhere, and not only an eyesore, but, in my judgment, depreciates the value of property. As a stranger and a possible home-seeker, I should certainly avoid the neighborhood of these unsightly boards and would consider property in the vicinity of them of less value than without. At present one may purchase a home at more or less cost; a few vacant lots may be between his and the next home. Up goes a billboard, and the whole street drops in value and respectability. Surely property holders should see this and put an end to it, as I should think it is in the power of combination. Other cities are moving in this matter. STRANGER.

Woman Juror.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I see in The Times this morning a letter from William Crawford, intended to prove that the judge who allowed a woman to be impaneled on the jury "made the error of looking solely to the qualifications of a juror and not into the question of who may be jurors." This seems to me a distinction without a difference, but let that pass. Mr. Crawford then quotes from Blackstone in support of his criticism that the jury must consist of "twelve free and lawful men, liberas et legales homines," and in another place, "twelve good men and true, boni homines." This seems to him to settle the matter. Now, if Mr. Crawford were old enough to have attended one of the old parochial Scottish schools and to have got the length of having Rudiman's Rudiments of Latin put into his hands, he would have known that "homo" does not necessarily signify a man, but frequently a woman, as well—merely a human. The boys had among themselves a little bit of doggerel Latin to keep them in mind of this fact, which runs: "Homo in Italian, natura naturam, visum vitum. This was untranslatable by the tyro until he was informed that "Homo" in this case meant woman instead of man; it then came out easily. The woman is going to sail to Italy to see the nature of the vines.

This is by no means classic Latin, and was not given to them by the teacher, but it served the purpose of preventing the boys from falling into the error made by Mr. Crawford.

I have nothing to say either for or against a female juryman, (or chairman either, for that matter,) but I would be sorry if the lady in question should feel the least annoyance from such illogical reasoning, in an attempt to deprive her of her rights as a "human," which she is vindicating so successfully.

Dr. Hale's Rejoinder.

Doctor Hale and the late Bishop Huntington of New York were fast friends. The latter had been a Unitarian, and his shift caused a sensation. The Episcopalians have saints assigned to the various days in the year. When an Episcopalian minister writes a letter on any day for which there is a saint, he always writes the name of the saint at the close of the letter instead of the date. Bishop Huntington learned all these things quickly, and began to practice them at once. The first time he had occasion to write to his old friend, Doctor Hale, after joining the church, he placed "St. Michael's Day" after his signature. A reply from the doctor came, and after his name he had written in a full, round hand, "Wash day."—[Kansas City Star.

Sinaloa Lands

Now Open for Settlement

Like a magic key, railways and steamship lines have unlocked to the world the wealth that has for countless ages lain hidden in Sinaloa, on the West Coast of Mexico. All eyes are on Sinaloa. The opening of this "Land of Opportunity" means millions to those who get in now—before prices reach their rightful level. Through Sinaloa's ports the great markets of the Orient and Occident will be brought 500 miles nearer together than via heretofore traveled routes. Not in the past 30 years—since early California days—has there been a proposition of such magnitude—so fraught with money-making opportunities—as the development of Sinaloa offers, for investment or settlement. Great as were the opportunities in California a quarter of a century ago, the probable increase in property values, as well as the immense profits from crops, in this new California, offer chances for still greater returns.

"The California of Mexico"

Being surrounded on three sides by hundreds of miles of mountain ranges, and on the fourth by the Pacific Ocean, the State of Sinaloa has until now been practically shut off from the world. The introduction of improved transportation—as soon as it becomes generally known abroad—will do much to induce the investment of capital and labor in Sinaloa—"The California of Mexico." The State of Sinaloa is bound to attract the attention of those in search of farming lands, and offers unprecedented opportunities in the various business ventures that go with the development of any agricultural territory. Industries of every description are new; opportunities for the acquisition and development of natural power are abundant; mining, milling and manufacturing are in their infancy; while there is a ready demand for all kinds of products. As foundations for great fortunes were laid in California 25 or 30 years ago, so will the financial history of the country repeat itself in Sinaloa.

Climate and Health

The State of Sinaloa is exempt from pneumonia, asthma, diptheria and diseases of like character. Very little malaria, or fevers of any kind, are known. Contagious diseases of a serious nature are very rare. Along the lower belt of the State, frost is unknown—while it is of rare occurrence even in the higher sections. Sinaloa's climate during six or eight months of the year is constant, corresponding very closely to that of California in November. During the remaining four months of the year—which constitute the rainy season—the temperature is high, but seldom reaches 100 degrees in the shade. At no time of the year does the thermometer rise as high as it does in the Citrus Belts of California. Although in a tropical latitude, Sinaloa is so affected by the Japanese Current that it presents none of the disagreeable effects of a tropical climate—nor any of the pests common to this latitude. All in all, Sinaloa is as desirable from a residential standpoint as any section of our own country.

Geographical Description

Sinaloa is in the same longitude as El Paso, Texas, and Denver, Colorado, and is no further south than Florida. The distance by water from the port of Mazatlan, Sinaloa, to the city of Los Angeles, is 900 miles—while Culiacan (Sinoloa) is only 500 miles distant by rail from Nogales, Arizona. The State is from 350 to 400 miles in length, and averages 80 miles in width—having about 400 miles of coast line exposure.

Physical Features

The agricultural sections of Sinaloa are comparatively flat—rising only from two to five feet per mile—and are very favorably situated in every respect for cultivation. This belt which is similar to the flat lands of California, varies from one to forty miles in width—embracing about twenty per cent. of the entire area of the State; the remaining eighty per cent. being about equally divided between mountainous and foothill districts.

Land Sold with Water Rights At $25.00 an Acre

The Sinaloa Land Company has under construction an immense Water Sytem, which, when completed, will be more than sufficient to irrigate all of its Colony lands, located south of the Culiacan River. This colony—Colonia de Culiacan—is now forming, and the new townsite of Canada is being laid out. The Company offers for sale a portion of its Colony Lands at $25 gold per acre. One share of Water Stock free with every hectare (2½ acres) of land purchased. Those who make early selection will have the pick of the best lands lying adjacent to the new townsite—land that is almost certain to double in value within the next year or two, and that will eventually be worth several times the present price.

Principal Products of Sinaloa

Farmers from the States who have visited Sinaloa, or who have settled there, were surprised to learn that practically every kind of grain, and the various fruits that are grown in this country, do equally well as in the United States. Aside from these, cotton is fast becoming a staple product of Sinaloa. Sugar cane, sisal rope fiber and all kinds of tropical fruits are leading industries. There are a number of cotton and sugar mills operated in Sinaloa, but the local demand is still far in excess of the supply—a large portion of products consumed being imported from other countries. These conditions offer opportunities for money-making in almost every agricultural line. Labor is cheap, and good prices for all products prevail throughout the year.

Personally-conducted parties leave Los Angeles for Sinaloa on the first and fifteenth of each month. Fare for round trip, $62.70. For further information concerning Sinaloa, and its wonderful opportunities for profit, together with maps and illustrated booklets, apply in person or by letter to the Los Angeles office of the Company.

Young Men's Clothes

There's a big difference between the college models of B. & K. system made-to-measure suits and other clothes that are sometimes sold to young men.

The young man's taste is unlike the man's in many respects. His garments must be cut especially for him. He wants dash and individuality.

There are a great many details the builder of young men's clothes must observe, which may be disregarded in older men's suits.

The young men get everything that's possible to put into clothes when they select their garments here. Our designers and tailors in the young men's department are experts. They specialize on college styles.

All the new rough surfaced fabrics which are proving so popular among college men.

Suits to order, $20 to $50.

IMPROVEMENTS.

ESPEE PLANS EXPENDITURES.

MANY CHANGES IN ITS IMPERIAL VALLEY PROPERTIES.

Prizes Offered for Bug Hunters. County Fair at El Centro Promises to Be Large Event This Year. Oil or Gas Claims Located—Hotel Is Again Open.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

EL CENTRO, Oct. 23.—Information has been made public that the Southern Pacific, within the next three months, will carry on a campaign of improvements and reconstruction on its Imperial Valley properties. Thousands of dollars are to be expended in new trackage and extension of railroad yards at El Centro. Two new storage tracks, each one-half mile in length, are to be laid in the northern part of this city; a team track; a passing track for trains; a side-track for the Imperial Valley Alfalfa Meal Milling Company, and another for the Simons Brick Company are to be laid, while another long track in the southeastern part of town is to have spurs running out for a new industrial district.

Extensive changes are also to be made in the railroad yards at Imperial and at Old Beach. The company has plans made for a station at Heber, and it is probable the entire valley line will be relaid with heavy rails this winter. Railroad men state that as soon as this is accomplished trains Nos. 7 and 8, overland, will be operated through Imperial Valley, by way of the Inter-California Railroad, from Yuma to Calexico, instead of over the desert route.

IMPERIAL COUNTY FAIR.

The Executive Committee of the Imperial County Fair Association has compiled a premium list, and is preparing for a large exhibit on December 8, 9, 10 and 11, at El Centro. Many outside exhibitors will display stock and products and indications are that the valley display will be at least twice as extensive as that of last year.

STIMULATES BUG-HUNTING.

Imperial county's Horticultural Commissioner, W. E. Wilsie, has undertaken to stimulate interest in a study of the insects of this valley by offering a series of cash prizes for the best collections of bugs made before December 1, 1910. He offers $50 for the best collection, $30 for the second best and $20 for the third. These collections are to be turned over eventually to Imperial county.

The second annual reunion of Wisconsin people in Imperial Valley will be held on the 30th inst., at the ranch of W. E. Wilsie, two miles west of here. A programme has been arranged under the auspices of the Imperial Valley Wisconsin Society.

LOCATING OIL CLAIMS

During the last week fifteen submarine oil placer claims have been located on lands in the bed of New River and adjacent thereto, at a bend in the river, about ten miles northwest of here. The erosion of the waters has uncovered portions of a sandstone dike that is supposed to be an extension of the Superstition Mountains. From crevices in this sandstone dike gas issues in sufficient volume to ignite when a lighted match is applied. The locators are sanguine that oil or a large body of gas will be developed. Experts from the Los Angeles oil field have been sent for to make a thorough investigation.

BIG HOTEL REOPENS.

El Centro citizens are rejoicing over the announcement that on Monday next the dining-room of the Oregon Hotel, the largest hotel in Southeastern California, will be reopened by a first-class caterer. This brings all departments of this large hotel into operation and again makes it a center for travelers in Imperial Valley.

Miss Ione Gale as Inya.

WHERE BANKERS WILL SHINE.

"When the Gringo Came" About Ready for Performance by Local Talent Next Week.

"When the Gringo Came," the new comic opera by Charles-Saxby and P. H. Kaufman, which will form the 1909 offering for the Bankers' Show at the Mason Operahouse on November 4, 5 and 6, is practically ready for public performance. Harry Girard is putting the final polishing on the rehearsals and B. C. Kammermeyer's baton has worked wonders with the chorus who now work with a precision and vim rarely found outside of professional singers.

Prominent in the cast will be Miss Ione Gale, whose cultivated soprano will be heard in the music allotted to Inya, the Indian maiden; Miss Gale is a pupil of Shakespeare of London, and her voice is considered a genuine grand opera caliber. Prominent in the comedy work is C. F. Seidel, as Montmorency de Belleville an ex-tragedian, and A. S. McKinnon plays opposite him as Carmencita O'Flaherty, the cook lady. Seidel and McKinnon were stars of the last year's Bankers' Show.

Among the specialty numbers is a double sextette, sung and danced by Misses Florence E. Bartlett, Harriet Candee, Charlotte Leland, Georgia Morton, Lillian Ossing, Edna Spaulding and Messrs. Lance Bolton, A. deBarr, Harry Hunt, Charles Lumpkin, A. M. Sparks and R. T. Van Cleave. With its catchy music, pretty costuming in a color scheme of black and gold and red, and the clever dancing work, this sextette is looked to as one of the hits of the show.

The tickets are on sale at all the local banks and are going rapidly. The box-office sale at the Mason will open on Thursday. The production is under the management of Warren Smith, W. G. Mohr is business manager, with Harry Girard stage director, and E. C. Kammermeyer musical director.

HOLTVILLE BOND ELECTION.

Proposition for Municipal Water System Carries Unanimously—Hay Growers Join in Agreement.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

HOLTVILLE, Oct. 23.—The proposition to issue $37,000 bonds for the acquisition of a municipal water system carried by a unanimous vote. Not a dissenting ballot was cast. The bonds will be sold immediately, and work on the construction of the plant will be undertaken this winter.

Wilbur J. Hall has returned to his ranch, near Holtville, with his bride, née Miss Ruth Radford, of Los Angeles. They were married in San Bernardino on the 20th inst.

Hay growers of this district have received word that the members of the Los Angeles Hay Dealers' Association have agreed to buy hay at Los Angeles scale weights only. The dealers assert that the system heretofore in vogue is unsatisfactory, as they must stand all shrinkage or inaccuracies.

Big Fish Stories.

Notable captures among the pike are reported from some of the loughs, one of thirty-three pounds being captured in the Balina district by Mr. Cutley.

It has been forwarded to London for preservation. Pike are beginning to move well on Loughs Mask and Corrib, Cloubur, and Mr. Sparrows on these waters has captured a fine brace of fish scaling respectively, thirty pounds and twenty-five pounds. It is also reported that a thirty-three pound pike, has been taken on Lough Mask.—[Westminister Gazette.

WOULD PERMIT DEER GO FREE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN BERNARDINO, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Supervisors have been appealed to by hunters to close the deer season for a period of five years. It is asserted that the annual slaughter of deer has caused these creatures to become almost extinct. It is likely that the request will be granted. An effort will be made to arrest persons who are suspected of carrying on a traffic in venison year in and year out.

UNCLE ALECK'S VETO.

with great ceremony. His vest was half unbuttoned to look more like Daniel Webster, and he carried a hair brush in his hand.

"Perhaps you were about to remark that I was brushing up your message a little," he said, suspiciously. "Well, I wasn't. I use this as a gavel. Listener won't let me use the real gavel when he is away. He keeps it locked in the safe and makes me use a hair brush."

"What safe?" cried Uncle Aleck, in alarm. But his panic was groundless.

Mush took up from his office desk a very, very long typewritten document. It looked like a history of the world to Uncle Aleck. He asked Marshall what it might be.

"That's your veto message," said Mr. Slimson, politely.

Uncle Aleck almost screamed. "I must have begun writin' it when I was a baby," he said.

Mush proposed that he read it aloud to Uncle Aleck, in order that they might consider it together.

As he read, in his best oratorical voice, the resounding, double-deck, Dreadnaught, Johnsonian sentences of the message, old Uncle's pride grew almost boundless. He swelled up like a tree frog.

As Slimson rumbled and reverberated on through the majestic pageant of classy language, the old gentleman stuck his thumbs in his armholes and blew into his beard with one eye shut.

As the recital came to a close, he sighed and said: "Gee, I wish I had a had my hat on while you was doin' that."

"When I was at dear old Ha'vard," began Mr. Slimson, tactfully.

Uncle Aleck interrupted him, delightedly.

"Sure," he shouted, at the top of his voice, "you just put in all the Harvard words you know, and if you know any Yale words, put them in, too, and the Vassar words and all of 'em."

Late that day, Uncle Aleck, walking with a new hauteur, went down to see the man who guards the safe. His pocket was bulging with a huge manuscript.

"I wanted to read you something I wrote," he said, coyly.

Whereupon he read the message. Sometimes he coughed over a word, and the guard would say: "What's that?"

"Don't interrupt," Uncle Aleck would growl, and the oration would go stumblingly on.

"What do you think of it?" asked Uncle, proudly, when he had finished.

"Great! What does it mean, anyhow?" asked the safeguard.

"It means you'd better be careful and not let anybody get my hat, that's what," said Uncle Aleck, indignantly.

LINCOLN'S INN COURT.

In the Same Condition as When Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce Was Tried. Another Old Lawsuit.

[London Chronicle:] The 200 years' old lawsuit concerning Sir Robert Geffrey's almshouses, in Shoreditch, which is about to be revived, quite puts into the shade our old friend Jarndyce against Jarndyce, for the famous Jennens litigation, which Dickens had in mind, dated back only to 1798. It was, however, a well-established case when the novelist was a solicitor's clerk in Gray's Inn, little in rank above the office boys he describes as "clubbing together" for saveloys and porter on their way home. His frequent visits to Lincoln's Inn Hall, where the Lord Chancellor sat, gave him an indelible impression of the sleepy old court and its tortuous proceedings, which he afterward reproduced in the wonderful opening chapter of "Bleak House."

Not only is the court in the same condition as when Jarndyce against Jarndyce dragged its weary length, but if one strolls round the corner to Chichester-rents, where Krook, the rag and bone merchant, met his death by spontaneous combustion, and where crazy Miss Elite lived, one can see any day a line of unattached copyists, known to the trade as "waiters," because they prop up the high wall of Lincoln's Inn. They are patiently waiting for a modern Mr. Snagsby, of Took's court, to come along and engage them, when they will work like Mr. Nemo, regardless of time, meals or sleep, until the tale of folios is finished. For the law is very conservative, and type writing is very modern.

Our Advertisements Reflect Our Customers' Opinions

Our customers are responsible for the unusualness of our advertisements. While they do not literally write the copy that goes to the newspapers, they nevertheless furnish the ideas that are incorporated in these announcements. We gladly acknowledge their assistance.

Ever since we opened this store it has been our constant endeavor to find out what people thought regarding "continuous performance sales," "advertised so-called 'leaders'," "50 per cent. off," "every article in the store at cost," and other similar exaggerations. We wanted to know whether the people of Los Angeles and vicinity believed in a strictly ONE-priced house—a house that handled reliable, guaranteed merchandise—that extended rational credit—that sold its goods so low as not to admit of any greater discount than 2 per cent. for cash—and we found out.

We are glad that such a vast number of the people think as we do about this matter. Some say that the death knell of the "special sale" has been sounded. Well, perhaps it has. People are thinking more today than they ever did before.

The demand for better furniture is growing. It pays to buy good goods at a good store.

Our methods of doing business, coupled with the merchandise we sell, makes a proposition that the buyer cannot well ignore. We believe that we have the best furniture store in California. We know that our goods and prices are right, and that the "policy of the house" meets with universal approval among all who have put us to the test.

The best advertisements we have are our patrons—they know, and their opinions we value most highly.

Busy times aren't they? One-third of the day on a SLUMBERLAND will help you keep up. All sizes. Three weights.

FINDS THIEF IN ROOM.

Intruder Escapes After Knocking Motorman Senseless in His Own Apartment.

H. B. Overholitzer, a Los Angeles railway motorman, was assaulted and rendered unconscious by a burglar, discovered by him in his room, No. 2032 Huron street, late yesterday afternoon.

As the motorman entered his apartment, the intruder leaped toward him and brought a heavy instrument down on his head, before he was able to raise his arms in self-defense. Overholitzer rolled to the floor and laid unconscious until discovered by a fellow roomer. A physician was called and administered restoratives. It is thought the man will suffer no ill effects.

The thief made an exit without being seen by any one in the neighborhood. The motorman was unable to give the police a good description of his assailant.

Man Who Is Accused of Issuing Bad Checks Will Be Brought Back for Trial.

Charged with floating bad checks to pay for "joy rides," in at least six cities, C. T. Raymond, alias De Forrest, alias Reynolds, was arrested in Bakersfield by Sheriff Kelly yesterday and will be brought to this city.

Raymond is accused by the local police of having given a bad check for $60 to Freeman & Walker, garage proprietors, for the use of an automobile. After leaving here, the police learned that he was wanted on similar charges in San Francisco, Fresno, San José, Santa Rosa and Oakland.

Sheriff Kelly recognized Raymond from a picture which was published in the Police Daily Bulletin, issued from Chief Dishman's office and sent throughout the State.

Oliver Gruwell, who lives at No. 443 Crocker street, Los Angeles, says: "I have been a great sufferer from HAY FEVER and CATARRH for a great many years with all the usual symptoms. I always had a COLD IN THE HEAD and was always SNEEZING. Some days I would SNEEZE ALL DAY. MY EYES were WEAK and WATERY and at times my HEARING WAS GREATLY IMPAIRED. My nose was always stopped up, and I would HAWK and SPIT in the morning, caused by catarrhal discharges dropping down into my throat at night. My STOMACH WAS ALSO AFFECTED. This was my condition when I began Drs. Shores' treatment. They helped me from the first day and I have improved right along in every way. It gives me great pleasure to speak a good word for Drs. Catarrh, Deafness and Ear Noises

Why not try the treatment that cures? We publish abundance of testimonials from well-known and reliable people, who have been cured of catarrh, deafness and ear noises. If you suffer from any chronic ailment, why not come and see the Doctors who cure?

DON'T GIVE UP HOPE

If you have been previously treated without receiving any benefits, the chances are that your ailment was not correctly diagnosed. We are not experimenters, but our seventeen years' practice as specialists enables us to speak with authority and treat you intelligently—and may be able to cure you in one month.

COME TODAY OR ANY DAY THIS WEEK

Cured Patients Tell the Story

Doctors Shores & Shores take a back seat and let their CURED PATIENTS do the talking. Every day in the week, including Sunday, we publish in the papers testimony of some whom we have cured. We prefer to let our cured patients tell the story. Read the frank, honest statements of your friends and neighbors. They have tried our treatment and know what they are talking about. Now, if we can and do cure others, is it not fair to presume that our treatment would cure you! Investigate! It costs you nothing for a consultation, and only $3 if you decide to take treatment—including medicines. Call any day this week. Remember, we treat all chronic diseases.

HAVE YOU

Investigated our ASTHMA Cure? It is something new and different from all other treatments and cures almost every case. "I sleep like a baby," is a common expression heard among our asthma patients. If you haven't investigated this treatment, DO IT NOW.

FRANK MOLNAR

Recommends Drs. Shores & Shores' Catarrh Treatment

MR. FRANK MOLNAR, WHO LIVES AT 640 SAN JULIAN ST., SAYS: "I have been a great sufferer from catarrh for the past two (2) years. My nose would stop up first one side and then the other and phlegm would gather in my throat, causing irritation and coughing. My nose stopping up at night caused me to sleep with my mouth open, which distressed me greatly. I lost in weight and flesh until I was greatly run down. There was a continual noise and buzzing sound in the ears and my hearing was very dull. At the end of two (2) months' treatment I can truthfully say that I am greatly improved in every way, and I gladly recommend Drs. Shores & Shores' treatment to any one in need of the same.

(Signed) "FRANK MOLNAR."

STOMACH BAD?

If you have distress and bloating after eating don't neglect treatment. Catarrh of the stomach is a most common ailment and can be cured; but remember a cancer of the stomach is incurable. Don't neglect stomach trouble. Consult the doctors who know how to cure.

WE NEVER DECEIVE

We value the reputation we have honestly won in all these years we have practiced medicine in California. We masquerade under no fancy titles, but, as honorable American citizens, we do business in our own name, and you can always meet Drs. Shores face to face. When we take your case we make an honest effort to cure you.

Scientific Control of All the Bugs.

A DREAM OF THE ENTOMOLOGISTS THAT MEANS A SURPRISING AMOUNT OF INVESTIGATION.

From Washington Post.

A DREAM of entomologists is of a day when the scientific expert will control all the bugs that crawl and fly as efficiently as the hydraulic engineer directs water supply or the electrical engineer deploys the currents that transmit power of speech. An era of professional knowledge and skill is foreseen when the entomologist will be able to use the 300,000 existing species of insects as tools of his trade.

Then the Luther Burbank of the bugs by processes of crossing and selecting will add to the number of existing varieties and alter the character of the present species, just as freak insects are already being produced in the Vienna zoölogical laboratories. The economic possibilities will be fully realized.

Is this beetle a cumberer of the earth which would be relieved by its absence? Breed against it a parasitical species which shall leave the world as if the offending bug had never been known. Is a beneficent darning needle lacking in a region where its presence would make for public health and comfort? Introduce and acclimate it.

Are there in any country continual disturbances of the equilibrium among the species due to people's wittingly or unwittingly bringing in insects from other lands? Protect the native bugs against alien intruders. Establish bug quarantine at every port, as San Francisco has already done, and inspect every imported seedling, wicker basket, or piece of fruit that may harbor a colony of the eggs of undesirables.

Somewhat such is the fundamental idea of the new entomology that the specialist, by means of a science that will ultimately be as exact as chemistry or physics, will hold the power of life and death over the almost innumerable species of bugs.

INSECT WORLD UNKNOWN.

Meantime it is rather astonishing to the average person to find that this science, about which so much has been written in the last few years, is still so much in the future. The insect world is not yet thoroughly known, as those, for instance, have discovered who have started in to wage a war of extermination against flies.

It is not recorded that the anti-fly crusade in New York has seriously diminished the size of the swarms that breed about the mouths of the sewers. In Massachusetts, a State from which the universe has frequently been reformed by theorists, an anti-fly commission was constituted last spring on the theory that warfare against the house fly would bring peace to Yankee households. The fight was abandoned before it was begun.

The commissioners on looking into the subject of flies found it complex beyond expectation. Grave doubts even were felt regarding the extent of the injuries caused by the common species, and, admitting the worst that is charged, the methods of eliminating the evil have not been scientifically developed. As Commissioner John Ritchie of the Boston Board of Health, said:

"It is a grave question how to go after flies in a way that will be effective in city and country."

"It was wise of this Massachusetts commission," said a professional dipterist, "to study into the facts a little before launching their thunders against the whole order of flies. There are about 7000 distinct species of diptera in the United States, most of which are harmless and often extremely beneficial little flies.

"Any wholesale destruction among these species, if such were possible in the present state of our knowledge, would cause more disease than it would cure. The broad question of the relationship of the different kinds of flies to each other, the conditions of their development and growth, their habits as regards the bearing of diseases, should be more carefully studied out before plans for extermination are even considered."

IMMENSE NUMBERS OF BUGS.

The enormity of the work ahead of the economic entomologists staggers the human imagination. The wonder is not that there are so many individual flies, fleas, mosquitoes, ants and beetles. Everybody accepts the host of them on faith if not by virtue of their works.

But the immense number of separate species is what astounds most persons to whom all flies look and all wasps sting alike—that and the admitted ignorance even of the experts about the life history of the individuals of many of these species. That is what seems to put the final triumph of bug engineering far in the future.

Rather more than 300,000 species of insects are known to exist, with the reasonable certainly that many more will be discovered. Just to contain brief descriptions of each a small library of books would be needed.

And in no single set of books are they all described. For the most part the accounts are scattered in books and scientific journals printed in various languages and not ordinarily found in the same library. So that whenever in a given locality, as, say, in the valley of the Hackensack, a species is found that was not before known to exist in Northern New Jersey, a long search may be involved if the bug is one that has been described before in connection with the fauna of some other locality or whether, as is likely, something entirely new has been found.

As an example of the labor involved and of the present extent of the unknown insect study take the magnitude of the task of gathering a complete collection of the insects of New England. It is probable that in no other part of North America, with the exception of California, has so much study of insects been carried on, Nnot only by amateurs, but by specialists connected with the great universities and a number of colleges and technical schools.

AGASSIZ ASSOCIATION WORK.

The work of the Agassiz associations was started in Western Massachusetts, and much of the same kind of propaganda has been carried on from a Connecticut suburb of New York City. Collectors young and old have gathered insects in every part of New England. A vast amount of determining and labeling has been done in public and private collections.

Yet some estimates of what the Society of Natural History, whose headquarters are in Boston, will have to do to complete its collection of New England insects, said already to be the largest of its kind extant and to have occupied years in forming, give an impressive idea of the bigness of the bug interests of a single limited section. The following is a summary of the present status of the collection, which is growing rapidly through the coöperation of members of the society and of the Cambridge Entomological Club, together with a conjecture of the number of species ultimately to be found in New England.

Our interesting and easily-determined friends, the beetles (Coleoptera,) have been the most thoroughly studied of the larger orders. The collection at Boston has been largely augmented by additional species. It now contains about 2000 determined species. There are probably upward of 3000 species in the territory.

The Lepidoptera, including moths and butterflies, are perhaps the next best studied group. About 900 species have been determined. There are probably close to 2000 species.

The collection of Diptera, consisting of flies of one kind and another, contains over 1100 named species, with a great many more to determine. The number of species will undoubtedly exceed 2500.

The Hymenoptera, in which wasps, bees and ants are prominent, have as a whole been the least studied, only about 500 species being determined. It is thought that collectors will ultimately turn in as many as 2500 species.

In the Hemiptera, which includes the true bugs, cicadas, aphids and others, the suborder Heteroptera is very well studied and contains over 200 species, while in the suborder Homoptera there are only about 100 species, with a large number to determine. The Hemiptera will probably number about 600 species.

HUNDREDS OF SPECIMENS.

The collection of Orthoptera, comprising cockroaches, crickets, locusts, grasshoppers and katydids, contains about 80 species. There are in New England about 125 species. Under the term Neuropteroid insects there are about 200 determined species, while about 500 are probably represented in the fauna.

Altogether in this collection, which is one to which any professional student of New England insects would naturally turn for accurate and classified information, there are about 5000 determined species, while a conservative estimate for the number of insect species in the six States is 11,000. This, furthermore, includes only the true insects, outside of which type are many creatures which the ordinary man classes among the bugs. There are, for instance, in New England about 400 different spiders, which combined with mites, myriapods and allied creatures would certainly number over 500 species.

The insect fauna of New England is, to be sure, somewhat complex, since it is derived, in part, from four life zones, the Canadian and the transition zone covering, respectively, the greater part of the northern and the southern half of the region, while along the southern shore and for some distance up the Connecticut are traces of the upper Austral, and on the summits of Mt. Washington and Mt. Katahdin remnants of the Arctic.

The pie belt has thus a rather unusual variety of insects as of weathers. At the same time, a detailed analysis of the present condition in the largest insect collection of any other section of the country would probably show as great a discrepancy between what has already been accurately determined and what remains to be determined.

Not only, it is authoritatively stated, have by no means all the actual physical facts about the 50,000 or more insect species that inhabit the United States been recorded, but still less have their relations to the health and comfort of humanity and the domestic animals been investigated with reference to methods of destroying or subjugating those species that are an annoyance or a menace to civilization.

When disease-bearing insects are mentioned, even the expert still means mostly mosquitoes of the genera Stegomyia and Anopheles, and a few of the common flies, such as the house fly. There are, however, hundreds of species of flies whose habits as regards conveyance of germs await investigation, and there are fleas rightly named Siphonaptera, about fifty species of them in this country, some living on and some in the skin of human beings or other creatures, and all, presumably, having certain power of carrying trouble from one individual to another. Some pathologists are said to be considering the likelihood that the rat flea is instrumental in the spread of the bubonic plague.

Comparatively little is known about the activities of many of the other orders of insects in transmitting maladies that afflict man, beast or vegetation. The likelihood that many do this is easily conjectured. Twelve thousand different beetles fly about in North America north of Mexico. There are almost innumerable lice of one kind and another, degenerate descendants of winged ancestors; numerous parasitic rhymenoptera, sometimes with secondary and even tertiary parasites preying on them, as in the time-honored rhyme; shad flies, may flies, and the simple-bodied, simple-souled aptera, many species of which are household presences if not household pets; cockroaches, few in number of species, but numerous as individuals are counted; dragon flies, voracious feeders on mosquitoes, and commonly regarded as among man's best friends. Intimate acquaintance with the ways of these and many other bugs will be prerequisite to anti-fly campaigns of the future.

So that, although it is now nearly thirty years since scientific economic entomology began in this country, when Prof. C. V. Riley, government entomologist, coöperated with California experts in bringing here an Australian ladybird to check a scale that was afflicting the citrus fruit, the evidence continues to accumulate that the new entomology has a big job on its hands. For a long time it will be an experimental science, with many surprises in store for the experimenters.

A typical case of the complexity of the problems of the economic entomologist appeared in the summer's work of a biological expert who was called from the West last spring to Massachusetts to discover, if possible, a disease that would help to sweep off the gypsy moths, which have become a national menace. Apparent success crowned the effort. A malady was found which when let loose among the specimens that were being reared in the laboratory proved to be singularly effective.

All that was necessary was to get the disease at work among the moths, and they died in great numbers. It was, furthermore, a good, safe disease, one warranted not to molest human beings, cattle, dogs, or cats.

Yet when the distemper was turned loose among outdoor moths it appeared—such at least was the experience of the first summer—to be far less effective than in the experimental conditions of the laboratory. The only explanation which the experts can give is that perhaps moths, like men, have greater power of resistance when they spend their sleeping and waking hours in the open air than when they are confined within four walls.

It was found, at all events, that sturdy beggars who seemed immune to the disease germs when assailed in the forest, were easily afflicted if transferred to the laboratory. So, remedies that are potent against an indoor bug may prove worthless when applied out of doors.

Industrial Independence.

OMAHA BUSINESS MEN'S ASSOCIATION HAS DEFEATED THE LABOR UNIONS AT EVERY POINT.

ORGANIZE FOR INDUSTRIAL PEACE.

The failure of the strike of the motormen and conductors of the Omaha street railway has driven another nail in the coffin of union labor in Omaha, where seven strikes have been lost in as many years, and where not a single strike has been successful in that length of time. As a result of these failures, union labor in Omaha, which ten years ago boasted of 16,000 members, today has only a scant 7500 members. And with the decline of the union, prosperity for the workingman, as well as for the business man, has reached a point never before attained in that city.

Ten years ago Omaha was called by the union the "strongest union town" in the country. Business men, however, called the city "the worst union-ridden city" in the United States. From this condition, such changes have been brought about that today, with the excepttion of the plumbing trade, there is no "closed shop" in the town.

Ten years ago, when the unions were in the zenith of their power in that city, not to be a member of a union practically meant no work. Business men, manufacturers and other large employers of labor complained that because of the oppressions of the unions, they were harassed to such a point that they could not continue in business. The "walking delegate" and "business agent" of the unions were "on the job" every hour of the day and the unions were in complete control of the situation.

Finally, as a buffer to union power, the business men got together and formed the Omaha Business Men's Association, a secret organization whose sole purpose was to fight the unions and to stand together in all strikes or other labor difficulties.

Very soon after organizing, the association had an opportunity of testing its strength. The Teamsters' Union called a strike and every wagon in town was tied up. Within one week the strike was broken and the strikers beaten and asking for their old positions back. The union was disrupted and disorganized.

The Business Men's Association had tried its strength and had proven its ability to cope with a strike.

The following year came the big strike of the boilermakers, machinists and blacksmiths on the Union Pacific Railroad, and Omaha, being headquarters of the company and the point at which the big shops were located, was naturally the storm center of the strike.

The Business Men's Association rallied to the support of the railroad and, after a contest lasting six months, the strikers were beaten and all three of the unions "put out of business."

Another year and thousands of men struck at the big packing-houses in South Omaha. The fight lasted two or three weeks. The strikers lost every point and their organization was disrupted. "No closed shops for Omaha" became the slogan of the Business Men's Association.

Then came the strike of the telegraph operators and men in all offices of the country left their keys. In forty-eight hours the Omaha office was fully manned and the strike was broken there before any other city. The union disbanded.

The labor unions voted a boycott on the Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben carnival, in Omaha, because non-union men erected some of the buildings. The Business Men's Association came to the rescue and the undertaking has proven a tremendous success, despite the boycott.

The unions went into politics, and with a most elaborate system, attempted to elect local officials who leaned towards unionism. Union candidates were placed in nomination and efforts were made to control both the old parties. But not a single union nominee was elected and politics was dropped by the unions.

Then the job printers made demands which were refused and a strike resulted. That was in the spring of 1908. The strike is, technically, still in effect, but the shops are all running smoothly. In the spring of 1909 the electrical workers went out on a strike. The usual result followed; the men lost the strike and many of them their "jobs."

The latest strike in Omaha was that of the street railway men, who, when the strike was called, promptly quit work, almost completely tying up the car system.

Forty-eight hours later the company was giving fairly good service and two weeks later normal service had been resumed, with cars running on schedule time. The strikers were badly whipped and 200 of them are out of positions and winter coming on. The strike is, officially, still on, but the strikers are the only ones who know of it. A majority of the strikers deserted the union and returned to work, first agreeing never again to join a union.

In each of the seven big strikes, the men have lost, the unions have been disrupted, (with the exception of the printers,) and not a single concession has ever been secured by the strikers.

So steadily has the contest been waged between the Business Men's Association and the unions, and so repeatedly has the victory been with the former, that the labor unions of Omaha have lost more than one-half their number, and Omaha is becoming known as a "bad" town for the unions.

Unionism Discouraging.

The labor unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor have been thrown into a state of convulsion that is rapidly developing into a widespread internal revolution.

Some 20,000 electrical workers have been outlawed by a decision of the A. F. of L. Executive Council, 5000 machinists have been expelled in the New York district by their chief executive officials, there is a big split in the boot and shoe workers' unions, a secession movement has started among miners in the Canadian Northwest, tailors of San Francisco are endeavoring to start a new national organization, a score of State and city central federations have had their charters revoked, and there are rumblings in every direction.

The contest among the electrical workers has precipitated the most serious crisis that has confronted the labor movement in a decade. The cause of the trouble is that a large majority of the electrical workers desired to change the composition of their national official family, and, being denied the opportunity to vote by referendum upon the question of holding a national conference, a rump convention was held in St. Louis a year ago, and President McNulty of Brooklyn and Secretary Collins of Boston were ousted, and J. J. Reid of Erie, Pa., and J. W. Murphy of Cleveland were elected to fill the vacancies.

The A. F. of L. officials threw their weight to the side of McNulty, although about four-fifths of the membership became allied with the new régime, and orders were issued to State and city central bodies to expel the Reid adherents.

Many of the miners are condemning Mitchell for siding with McNulty, charging that his position has been assumed because the latter is a member of the National Civic Federation, and the cry is going forth that Mitchell will be retired as a representative of the miners because he is now employed by the civic federation.

Duncan, who is first vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, has been publicly charged by the boot and shoe workers with having deliberately espoused the cause of a large manufacturer with whom they are at war, and thus gave encouragement to a secession movement in their trade that has spread from New England to Chicago and St. Louis.

To add to the general confusion, rumors are circulating in union circles that various organizations, some affiliated and others unattached to the A. F. of L., are considering the advisability of forming a new federation, based upon broad industrial principles.—[Louisville Herald.

Personal Rights.

Primarily, the employer's interests are entitled to special consideration. He is supposed to know how to conduct his business in such a way as to serve his own best interests; and that always means that he will not discharge any employé who is loyal and useful to him, since such an act would be foolish and ill advised. But even if such act be shown to be ill advised, if not in violation of contract, he must be allowed his right to discharge, the theory being that he will himself, in the end, suffer for his every act of unfair discrimination. Every citizen in this republic has a personal right to be a fool, with the primary understanding that he must suffer the consequences of his folly—and with the secondary understanding that his irrational conduct must not interfere with the plain rights of other citizens. Any employé may enjoy the same right, or immunity, to make an ass of himself—for example, by ignoring his obligations to his employer; but he certainly should not expect to receive the "fraternal" sympathy of all his brother employés in such unreasonable conduct.—[American Industries.

The Great Mr. Gompers.

Gompers is not as other magnates are. He has managed a boycott that has been decided to be unlawful, and he has been adjudged in contempt of court for keeping it up after the decision. At the reception accorded him as part of the demonstration on his arrival in Washington he referred to the sentence that had been imposed upon him and was suspended under an appeal that had not yet been decided, and said: "I have no hesitation in saying that not only did Justice Wright err, but that he was prejudiced against the men of labor."

If the late Mr. Harriman or Judge Gary or any other magnate of capital were to use similar language under like circumstances it would be quite shocking, but Gompers is to be judged by a different standard. He has great respect for the judiciary and confidence in the intergrity of judges, but if a decision is rendered with which he does not agree he will not be bound by it, as in the boycott case, and a decree forbidding him to keep up the boycott by advising its continuance is a "denial of free speech and a free press." Lightening the sentence of Judge Wright for contempt of court will not "alter the case one jot." There is no other of our magnates who values himself so highly as this one or who is so bold of speech. But his autocracy will probably not overawe the judiciary.—[New York Journal of Commerce.

Boycotters Do Not Kill.

The Butterick company, which has just become the publisher of Everybody's Magazine, is a good example of the inefficiency of boycotts. Three and a half years ago, or early in the winter of 1905, the printers' national body, the Typographical Union, cornered the "eight-hour day" button market, that each member might wear one in the lapel of his coat—the coat he wore to work. Whatever quarrel between employer and employé, this move brought on is not to be considered here. All that is needed to understand the situation is that the Butterick Publishing Company declared for open shop and have maintained it ever since. Many other printing and publishing houses throughout the country took the same step, and have held it, comparatively undisturbed. As the Butterick company started the open-shop movement in New York, the local and national unions have directed their greatest efforts against that house—but the house still stands.

A Costly Strike.

The costliness of street-car strikes is shown by the strike last summer in Philadelphia. The figures showing the business done by the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company for the fiscal year ending June 30 indicate that the strike cost the company fully $300,000. The receipts for the year were $18,306,000, compared with $18,288,763 for the previous year. The increase in earnings of $17,000 was in the face of a traffic decreased by more than 48,500,000 passengers over the year before. The figures that the various fare changes made during the fiscal year resulted in producing an average fare of 3.94 cents per passenger as against 3.57 cents as the average collection from the 512,869,023 passengers carried during the fiscal year 1907-8. Last year 464,364,656 passengers were carried. The present average fare is 4.18 cents.

Large reductions were accomplished by the Rapid Transit Company last year in operating and maintenance expenditures. Much of this came as a result of heavy curtailment in the service. The previously normal car service was cut down heavily, about 200 cars being withdrawn during the time that industrial depression was at its worst.

Transportation expenses during the year just closed were cut down about $409,000, having been, according to unofficial figures, $4,413,000 against $4,822,472 for the previous year.—[New York Journal of Commerce.

Shot a Cherubim.

E. S. Bruce of the United States forest service told at a dinner in Washington a story of the woods.

"Two city boys," said he, "went shooting in a forest. As they passed a ruined house on their way home at dusk a huge owl flew out. One of the boys put up his gun and fired. The owl, with a ghastly shriek, fell fluttering to the ground.

"The awed boys in the twilight peered down at the great, round, white face and outspread wings.

"'We'd better run,' said the younger. 'Dear knows what'll happen to us. We've gone and shot a cherubim.'"—[Washington Star.

SAN PEDRO REEKS TANG O

Deep Water Ships Bring M Cargoes as Argosies to City Are Tales of All Seven Ocea the Ears to Hear.

TIMIDLY she picked her way past the whistling buoy off Point Firmin, turned her nose toward the end of the far-flung breakwater, and began her last reach for port. Of course there was something the matter with her. There always was. This time the trouble was with her gasoline engine.

At the entrance to the harbor she paused and fell off before the wind. There was no apparent cause for this, but she did not need any. For she was, and she still is, a hoodoo ship, and every once in so often she makes that sort of an entry to San Pedro. She swung broadside to her sisters at their docks, and would have drifted back to sea had it not been for her skipper, who dropped his mudhook square in the fairway and brought his eccentric craft to a standstill. There she lay, bobbing about in the ruffles of the sea, just inside the point of the breakwater, until a power launch went out and took her in tow.

It would not be fair to the schooner her owners or her captain, to publish her name broadcast in The Times, but the next time you pay a visit to the city's port, look about you, and, if you see a particularly innocent-looking power schooner, with a pile of lumber fresh stacked on her forward deck, and a red-faced and swearing capatin in command, it is like that you will have solved the riddle for yourself. Only, don't go to her captain for enlightenment. He flies the flag of one of the lumber companies in port, and he is in love with his ship, despite her many little peculiarities. Besides, he's Scotch.

Any one else along the water front, where the city's shipping is banked to load and unload, will be pleased to tell you all about her. And the things that same hoodoo schooner has done and left undone would fill a book. "Whiles," as Kipling's McPhee says, "she'll steer and whiles she'll buttock herself into a dock out of pure spite."

INNATE PERVERSITY.

It's just the perversity of inanimate things one hears so much about on all large water fronts from Golden Gate to Clyde, and San Pedro has her fair share of the stories told in sailors' boarding-houses to illustrate it.

There is the still well-remembered case of the Charles Nelson gasoline schooner. She sailed out of San Pedro with a cargo of dynamite, percussion caps and giant powder for use on the Panama Canal, but blew up off Manzanillo, while her crew, which hardly escaped, found refuge on a desolate rock a couple of hundred miles off shore. Here some of them lived, and some of them—if I remember rightly—died. The survivors suffered hardships that would make a landsman's hair curl with horror merely to hear about them, until at last they made their escape. No one ever discovered the cause of that fire and explosion.

The affair reveals yet another phase of deep-seafaring life that impinges upon the longshore. There are Jonah sailors as well as hoodoo ships—men who take out lucky ships, and, by their own ill luck, bring their vessels into ill repute among the "shell-backs." If the land lubber scoffs at such things, there are plenty of incidents to be picked up about the docks at San Pedro to prove that the strange things he has heard have not been merely guessed at, and that the old ocean still has a few weird tricks up her sleeve, which she can play when the mood is on her.

DEEP SEA YARNS.

Down there on the water front where the shipping of Los Angeles daily comes and goes, like the ebb and flow of the tides, there are hundreds of little stories throbbing with human interest. True, it takes the sympathetic touch of a Robert Louis Stevenson to make them live, and his clear insight and genius to see them at all, hidden, as most of them are, behind the rough exterior of some grizzled dog of the sea. But they are there, and while it is hard to get them, deep digging will bring them to light.

There is, for instance, the yarn that held the water front breathless for a time some years ago. It is nearly forgotten now, but one still hears fragments of it if he puts his ear close enough to the sea and listens—and believes.

A four-masted ship, full rigged, well found, well officered, came into port one day, tied up at the dock—and was deserted. Her men fled from her as if she had had the plague, though her papers showed that she had cleared with a clean bill of health from a northern port, and that no one had been sick during the voyage south.

There she lay, her cargo untouched, while strange stories began floating to and fro in the sailors' resorts on the water front, and even the careless longshoreman looked askance at the big black hull and towering, tapering sticks. Finally her consignees got her cargo out of her, but it was months before a crew could be shipped that would take her out of port in ballast. It was not until she sailed round the Horn for New York that the tale her former crew had to tell leaked out. Stripped of its deep sea lingo, and rendered intelligible to landward ears, it ran something like this.

THE BEGINNING OF THINGS.

Two years before her arrival in San Pedro the man who was then captain had incidentally killed a seaman, by letting go of some tackle while the man was aloft. The fellow fell from the main royal yard, and when they picked him up he was unconscious and dying. He lived several hours, however, but just before he passed he regained consciousness long enough to curse the captain and threaten to haunt him so long as he should live. Three weeks afterward a block fell from aloft and the captain was killed. No man was in the rigging or on the yards at the time, and the breeze that was driving the ship ahead was hardly enough to give her steerage way. So the crew set their captain's death to the credit—or discredit—of the dead sailor's ghost, and refused to stay with the ship.

Two crews were got together, but each one left the ship as soon as she tied up at a dock. No officer and no man could be persuaded to stay on board after making a single voyage. They said she was haunted by two ghosts—the dead sailor, and the captain who had accidentally killed him—and both of them could be heard wailing and whimpering through the rigging when the wind braked up at night. Nobody ever tried to estimate what this ghost story cost the owners of that ship, but their losses must have run well into the thousands.

There is yet another ghost story whispered by seamen over their glass in the saloons on the waterfront, where the smell of tar and gasoline mingle and fight with, and strive to overcome, the odor of bad beer and worse whisky.

This is the tale of "The Swimmer," that in one guise or another, has made its way into every sea of all the seven, and into most ports. It runs back several hundred years, having

BRINY.

SAN PEDRO REEKS WITH TANG OF THE SALT SEA.

Deep Water Ships Bring More Than Their Material Cargoes as Argosies to City's Harbor Docks—There Are Tales of All Seven Oceans for Those Who Have the Ears to Hear.

TIMIDLY she picked her way past the whistling buoy off Point Firmin, turned her nose toward the end of the far-flung breakwater, and began her last reach for port. Of course there was something the matter with her. There always was. This time the trouble was with her gasoline engine.

At the entrance to the harbor she [illegible] and fell off before the wind. There was no apparent cause for this, but she did not need any. For she was, and she still is, a hoodoo ship, and every once in so often she makes that sort of an entry to San Pedro. She swung broadside to her sisters at their docks, and would have drifted back to sea had it not been for her skipper, who dropped his mudhook [illegible] in the fairway and brought his [illegible] craft to a standstill. There she lay, bobbing about in the ruffle of the sea, just inside the point of the breakwater, until a power launch went out and took her in tow.

It would not be fair to the schooner owners or her captain to publish her name broadcast in The Times, but the next time you pay a visit to the city's port, look about you, and, if you see a particularly innocent-looking power schooner, with a pile of lumber fresh stacked on her forward deck, and a red-faced and swearing captain in command, it is like that you will have solved the riddle for yourself. Only, don't go to her captain for enlightenment. He flies the flag of one of the lumber companies in port, and he is in love with his ship, despite her many little peculiarities. Besides, he's Scotch.

Any one else along the water front, where the city's shipping is banked to load and unload, will be pleased to tell you all about her. And the things that same hoodoo schooner has done and left undone would fill a book. "Whiles," as Kipling's McPhee says, "she'll steer and whiles she'll buttock [illegible] into a dock out of pure [illegible]."

INNATE PERVERSITY.

It's just the perversity of inanimate things one hears so much about on all the water fronts from Golden Gate to [illegible], and San Pedro has her fair share of the stories told in sailors' boarding-houses to illustrate it.

There is the still well-remembered case of the Charles Nelson gasoline schooner. She sailed out of San Pedro with a cargo of dynamite, percussion caps and giant powder for use on the Panama Canal, but blew up off Manzanillo, while her crew, which hardly escaped, found refuge on a desolate [illegible] a couple of hundred miles off [illegible]. Here some of them lived, and [illegible] them—if I remember rightly [illegible]. The survivors suffered hardships that would make a landsman's [illegible] with horror merely to hear [illegible] them, until at last they made [illegible]. No one ever discovered [illegible] of that fire and explosion.

[illegible] reveals yet another phase of seafaring life that impinges [illegible] longshore. There are Jonah [illegible] as well as hoodoo ships—[illegible] take out luckly ships, and, [illegible] own ill luck, bring their [illegible] into ill repute among the "[illegible]backs." If the land lubber [illegible] at such things, there are plenty [illegible] to be picked up about the [illegible] at San Pedro to prove that the [illegible] things he has heard have not [illegible] merely guessed at, and that the ocean still has a few weird tricks [illegible] her sleeve, which she can play [illegible] the mood is on her.

[illegible] the tale of "The Swimmer," [illegible] one guise or another, has [illegible] way into every sea of all the [illegible] and [illegible] most ports. It runs [illegible] several hundred years, having its origin in the Spanish wars in Holland, when England, at peace with the dons at home, was doing her best to drive them off the Spanish main, and succeeding fairly well. The original story concerned itself with an Englishman, caught by the Inquisition and tortured to make him renounce his faith.

REACHES PACIFIC.

To escape, he sprung overboard from the ship on which the "question" was being given, and was drowned. It was said that his lifeless body followed the galleon until she was overtaken by an English freebooter, and that it sunk with the treasure ship and its crew. After that, many times it was seen afar, and always trailing a Spaniard, bobbing to and fro in the guttering wake, near where the huge old-fashioned rudder strained and grunted in its chains.

As time wore on the tale began to vary sightly. The "swimmer" attached himself to other vessels, and when he did so, ill luck always came. From the Spanish main he made his way to the North Atlantic, and, slowly, but surely enough, at last to the Pacific Coast. He was first heard of in these waters about thirty years ago. To be exact, when an unknown American brig went aground on February 8, 1876, right off Point Firmin, and within half a mile of the present site of the bath-houses there.

There is a record of the wreck of that brig, told in the terse, bald outline of official reports, at the lighthouse, but unless you dig deep you will gather no information of the "Swimmer." He doesn't appear in official records. But just the same, among the old hands on the water front, you will hear that as that unnamed brig began to break up, the body of a sailor, with long, dripping pigtail, such as seamen used to wear, was seen bobbing about in the boiling surf under her counter.

That same wreck is the first on record at the lighthouse. And that record, by the bye, speaks well for San Pedr oharbor, even without the breakwater. In the years that have elapsed since the foundation of that light but eleven ships have gone ashore anywhere near Point Firmin. The first was the nameless brig, and the last was the steamer Santa Rosa. The Santa Rosa went on the rocks at Portuguese Point, in a thick fog, and got off under her own steam, without other assistance.

STORMS BUT FEW.

Of the remaining nine wrecks, one, at least, was due solely to the carelessness and lack of seamanship of the skipper, which brings the actual casualties of the sea down to a total of nine for thirty-nine years, whigh is going some for a port, and is one of the results of the never to be sufficiently praised climate of Southern California.

The record of these wrecks invariably ends with the brief announcement: "Passengers lost—none. Number of crew saved—all." Still another good word for the aforesaid storm-free climate of the southern coast of California, there was one wreck, however, that came near having a serious ending for the passengers and the captain's wife. The American bark Kennebec, from Liverpool to San Pedro, dropped her anchor near the spot where the mournful-mouthed buoy calls its warning of the sea to passing mariners. The record in the "Journal of Shipwrecks," kept in the tower of the lighthouse, is very brief. It reads something like this:

"The ship (American) Kennebec dropped anchor off Point Firmin in a blow this morning. She commenced dragging her anchor from anchorage San Pedro harbor mouth in violent gale, accompanied by heavy rains. The Kennebec dragged but short time when she went ashore, short distance, striking bottom with crash, and commencing at once to break up under pounding of gale. She soon filled and sank."

For the rest, the lighthouse record is silent, but the unofficial records of the station tell of the hardships the crew endured during the long hours before assistance could reach them, and the heroic conduct of the captain's wife, who went about ministering to the comfort of the others, ignoring her own danger, to cheer the passengers. That was on February 14, 1887, eleven years after the first recorded wreck.

Only one wreck had occurred in the meantime. An American full-rigged ship, commanded by Capt. J. R. Harmon, had gone aground two days before, but all hands were saved without much trouble.

WRECKED IN CLEAR WEATHER.

One of the most sensational and spectacular wrecks this coast has had, from the landsman's point of view, was that of the full-rigged British ship Respicadera, which ran full on the kelp-covered ledge off Point Firmin in clear weather. This was the wreck brought about by the carelessness of the ship's captain. There was a faint mist to seaward, but the landward sights and bearings were clear. The reach into the inner harbor was free and open, and the wind, on a long slant from the southeast, was as fair as captain could desire. Despite these favorable facts, the Respicadera fairly ramped on the rocks and slowly ground to bits in the teeth of the shoreward-racing seas.

The captain also had his wife with him, and she gave him all sorts of trouble, say the unofficial records already referred to. There is a story of how the ship lay all that day, the seas flying over her and her planks grinding and tearing on the rough reef. Her officers and men did their best to stretch a line to the shore, but she was just out of reach, and, all that day and the night following she lay wallowing in the sea, with the captain's "missis" screaming that death was upon them, from the bed they had made for her in the poop. When the lady was finally got off in a small boat, she fainted, and refused to be revived for twenty-four hours, while her harassed husband sat by her side and grieved.

Not so very long ago there came into port a red-faced "Squarehead," or Swede, skipper, Linquist by name, who is not particularly popular with the water front element. He, with the very able assistance of Don Fugit, George McRea and others, is credited with breaking the last big longshore strike that tied up the shipping of the port of San Pedro far weeks. Most Angeleños remember that fight, and how the Rainier, with a scattering crew of strike-breakers, put to sea in a storm, and broke the back of the union. They call Linquist a "scab chaser," and he takes the term as an honor—as, indeed, it is, when you come to think of how he earned it—and calls himself a "squarehead scab chaser" with pride.

FISHERMEN'S WORK.

There is yet another feature of the water front life that has not been touched upon here, simply because it is too big, and is so very important that it deserves an article all by itself. The fishermen of San Pedro are hardy and skillful fishermen and boatmen. Their work demands that of them, and they do a very large part toward feeding the people of the big city, and their own home town. The California Fish Company, the Union Fish Company and others have large smacks and boats that go out daily—nightly, rather—to the different fishing grounds off Santa Barbara and Santa Catalina Island. They bring back barracuda, albacore, sardines, pompano and sand dabs, as well as many other succulent inhabitants of the salt sea to gladden the heart and the palate of him who knows what to eat.

Several times the lighthouse at Point Firmin has been mentioned in this story of the water front life of San Pedro. It is what is known as a "fourth-power light, in charge of a single keeper." I. H. Engels, besides having a world of deep-sea lore tucked away in his brain, is a man who has served the lighthouse service all over the Pacific Coast. He has been stationed at many of the first power lights from Tilamook to Point Concepcion, where the broad Pacific rolls majestically and unbroken from Australia to New Zealand, until it surges against the high cliffs of the California coast. Point Concepcion is the first light that deep-sea ships, bound for San Francisco and other northern points, make on their long voyage north from the Horn. It is the outpost of American civilization in the Pacific, and its beam can be seen for thirty-five miles at sea.

NEED BIGGER LIGHT.

The little light at Point Firmin can be seen for hardly half that distance, even on clear nights, seventeen miles being its extreme radius. It is more than likely, however, that with the improvements which Uncle Sam is going to make in the city's harbor, he will raise the power of the Point Firmin light and make it a revolving or flash light. The increasing number of arc lights on the hills back of the tower, and the fact that they, like the tower light, are stationary, will make it harder and harder for seafarers to pick their way into port after the sun is down and the lights begin to shine out from the bluffs.

When one has heard the stories that are told of bygone days down on the water front, it is wonderful to consider the changes that time has wrought there. The breakwater, like a great sea serpent, has flung its length of 9000 feet in a protecting curve about the entrance to the harbor. The docks are crawling steadily toward the ocean as the demand for wharfage grows, and, back on the bluffs behind the light, once but empty sand dunes and the haunt of the coyote, the government has already made the preliminary inspection for tremendous fortifications.

But while the material aspect of the city's harbor has changed, and is still changing almost daily, the bitter tang of the salt sea remains. The men who have business in the deep waters come and go, in and out of the port, and the flavor of old ocean lingers there unchanged, untainted and unlike anything else in the heavens above, the earth below or the waters under the earth.

EARLY BIRDS WIN.

First Settlers Have Priority Claims on Choice Imperial Valley Lands, Soon to Be Opened.

Settlers beat the government by many weeks in the contest for choice locations in the eastern section of Imperial Valley. Of the 3000 acres near Holtville, to be opened for settlement early in the year, practically every acre is now taken, and a thriving little community is organized.

There will be no grand rush into this strip. The men who are now on it, are determined to stay there and they have first right. News of conditions in the eastern section of the valley reached Gen. Frank C. Prescott, Register of the Los Angeles Land Office, yesterday.

The Department of the Interior brought the land into prominence several days ago in a telegram to Gen. Prescott, advising him that on January 6 it will be open to settlement and subject to entry in February 5, 1910.

The land restored to entry is described as follows: Township 13 south, range 15 east, to township 17 south, range 16 east. The strip is known as high land, running in a northerly and southerly direction, with the center close to Holtville.

Settlers had their eyes on this land long ago. Homesteaders moved on, but there was difficulty in securing patents. The land was just above the reach of the valley irrigation ditches.

The government contemplated the reclamation of this land through the Yuma project. Later, complaints were made by the settlers relative to this project. They did not desire to wait on a water system, that might take many months to complete. They wanted water as quickly as they could get it.

The government contended that the Yuma project was the most feasible method of reclaiming that land, because the strip was out of the reach of the valley irrigation. Nothing daunted, the interested ones arranged to get water by purchase from the valley companies and the strip will probably come in under the outer zone of ditches.

Learning of this arrangement, the government withdrew the strip of 3000 acres from the Yuma project and ordered it open to settlement and reclamation under the desert land laws.

"I understand that practically the entire strip is under settlement now," said Gen. Prescott. "These settlers being in possession of the land will simply enter their claims on the days set down by law. They are there now and will certainly be the first on the land on the day set aside for settlement. The settlers are ahead of the government this time in taking that piece of choice land."

NEW BOULEVARD APPROVED.

Quick Work on First Section, Which Presented Difficult Engineering Problems.

The first graded section of the new harbor boulevard has been inspected and approved by the County Highway Commission. The forty-foot speedway is attractive in appearance and a boon to automobilists. This section was constructed by W. N. Crandall, who has bid on a number of the good roads to be constructed in the county. He considers the difficulties were successfully surmounted.

The grade section will be ready for the finishing touch of macadam in the spring, after the winter rains have packed the roadbed. The length is six miles. The grading was extended over three arms of Nigger Slough, and presented some problems to the engineers. The longest fill was 800 feet. It is divided by a concrete culvert, in order that the waters may flow through. To the south there is another fill of 500 feet and close to Wilmington is the third, 400 feet long.

The contractor turned over the completed job to the Highway Commission within 100 days after the contract was signed. About 150 men and 100 teams were constantly employed. In addition to the fills, there was a cut four feet in depth at one point. As a rule, however, the country between here and the sea is flat.

ONE SEASON FROM RAW SOD AT CORCORAN.

The greatest alfalfa and stock raising opportunity of the year. Rich silt deposit soil—level as a table—ready for the plow. Only 12 miles south of progressive Corcoran on Santa Fe R. R. Right in heart of artesian belt. Water easily developed. Every rancher may have his own FLOWING WELL! Wonderful water supply. Corcoran alfalfa and stock ranchers are becoming wealthy. Demand for alfalfa is becoming tremendous. Supply will never equal the demand. Here's a virgin opportunity. Precisely the same character of land at Corcoran is today valued at $100 to $200 per acre. Remember—$30 per acre—is simply our opening price. It is only the early bird who gets a portion of this absurdly low priced land. Ask any real estate man about Corcoran—the greatest agricultural success of the last 10 years. The man who buys 100 acres or more of this land today, will never have to worry about his financial future. Only one-third cash is required—every dollar of the balance can be paid out of the profits of the land.

Join our big special Pullman excursion party Tuesday evening, October 26th. See Corcoran and this rich land at $30 per acre and up—a big stock ranch—covered with a luxuriant growth of wild grasses—never before subdivided. We also have a few pieces of choice land close to the town of Corcoran. Register tomorrow for excursion accommodations. Fare rebated to land purchasers.

LITTLE GLIMPSES OF LOCAL LIFE.

BY THE GLIMPSER.

A mild-eyed, music-loving, poem-adoring, fashion-plate youth, who clerks in a shoe store downtown, fell desperately in love with a young dame, who passes foodstuffs to customers in a local beanery of considerable class. He had the inside track and the running was good, for him. The odds are that he would have eventually led the young woman to the altar, so some of his pals declare, if the girl had not had the mumps.

But he's down and out now. He has taken the count, and a job-printer, who ought to know, says the invitation he is getting out bear her name and the handle of a street-car motorman, who used to look gloomy when he saw the girl and the shoe clerk pass by.

The shoe clerk is rather sore. He says the mumps racket was a put-up job. The girl denies this emphatically. "I wasn't looking for the mumps," she declared. "I didn't want them. I didn't rub noses with anybody to catch them, and I don't even know where I got them. But," she added, with a toss of her head, "I'm mighty glad I had them."

She rather inferred that, while the mumps were swelling her tonsils, they were also opening her eyes. The tonsils went down finally, but her eyes remained open.

Before this eye-opening incident, the clerk was making a good run while his shoes were good. He had every evening in the week to cater to her whims, and all day on Sundays. His board din't cost him much with the old folks at home, and he was liberal with the margin. This made a hit with the girl. She hadn't got by the age when young women learn to steer shy of the spenders, who never save a cent.

She used to tell the shoe clerk how much she doted on fashionable "guys," and she used to give him braces like: "What good taste you have in selecting your ties."

Sometimes she smiled on the man who runs the front of the street car. Those were bright moments for him; but a lot of times he would stand and scowl when he saw her pass by with the shoe clerk.

The juice-feeder of the railway company never had a chance to hang around on the front porch much. His time was off when the girl was working. He had a late afternoon and evening shift, and had to work every other Sunday. But, while he was restless, he waited patiently for his luck to break—and it did.

When the girl came down with the mumps she sent word to the shoe clerk that he must stay away from her house if he hadn't had the mumps and didn't want to catch them. He hadn't had the mumps; he didn't want to catch the mumps—and he stayed away, you bet. He sent flowers by a messenger boy, and they wilted on the way. And he sent perfumed notes written on a delicately-tinted paper.

The motorman missed the girl; he headed off a messenger boy bound for her front door, and extracted the news from him.

He never had had the mumps, but he had a vacation coming, and he suddenly decided it would be better to have the mumps while he was still young than to wait until he had grown a beard and his hair became thin.

He procured the vacation, bought the biggest bouquet to be had in the town, selected an interesting novel and a few late magazines, and took them to her personally.

She was glad to see him. She was getting lonesome. The tinted, scented notes were getting rather stale. She dumped the wilted flowers and filled her vases with the fresh ones. He read to her a lot and he talked to her a little. He stuck by her during her illness, and she discovered that he had savings in the bank. Just before she got well she tore up a lot of scented sentiment on tinted paper and threw it all in the cook stove.

And he saw her, and——

The date of the wedding has not been announced. It will depend considerably upon how long the street-car man is down with the mumps.

An incident happened here last week which tended to put a wide crimp in a fresh traveling man, and also went to prove that a lady barber may not always be so simple as she may seem—not inferring, at all, that they have been accused of being weak in the belfry; only this man from San Francisco apparently thought that she was "easy," and was shown otherwise.

She wasn't looking for trouble, either in large packages or in tissue-paper wrappers, and incidentally, while they had her going on a standard-gauge track for a short time, she managed to put on the brakes before she struck the open switch, and came into the station with the bells ringing merrily. It all happened like this:

There were two traveling men mixed up in the affair—brothers. And they are twins—couldn't tell them apart with an X-ray machine—unless you know how. One is traveling for a wholesale drug concern in Denver, and the other for a barber's supply house in San Francisco. They both happened to hit this city the same day.

During the course of his rounds, the barber house man got a live tip that a lady barber was figuring on putting in a new chai and a while new cabinet set. He made for the shop, but the prices he quoted were a little too high to suit the proprietress.

He hit the shop with about three day's growth of whiskers, and concluded to get shaved. He was feeling a little sore about losing that order, and his mind was busy trying to evolve some idea how to land it, anyway.

"Pretty stiff brush you've got," remarked the barber, as she spread on the soapsuds.

"Yes," replied the drummer. "I have to shave twice a day to keep it down."

"Twice a day?"

"Sure. I'll need another shave this evening."

"I'll bet you don't. You can't hand me any fairy tales like that."

"What will you bet I don't come back here at 6 o'clock with whiskers almost as long as you're shaving off now? Tell you what I'll do. I'll bet you $50 against that order we were talking about. If I produce the whiskers I get the order; if I don't, the $50 is yours."

"You're on," exclaimed the maid of the shears. "It's a new game, and I want to learn it; I'll fall for anything once." And the bargain was made.

The drummer was elated. He figured that order the same as if it was down in his book. He knew his brother was in town, and he knew his brother needed a shave.

The brother fell for the trick, all right. The two exchanged clothes and the pill seller showed up at the barber shop at the appointed time.

"Well, I'm here with the brush, all right," he announced. "This is where you lose."

The lady barber thought she was tagged, sure enough, but she took her defeat like a game soldier. She invited the man into her chair and began spreading on the lather. While she worked her hands her think tank was also working steadily, and she scarcely replied to his line of tattle. When she got around to scraping his neck her face suddenly wreathed with smiles.

When she got hi mall trimmed up, he stepped from the chair and regarded her expectantly. She didn't say a word. She just handed him a check for his shave, and on the front of it was marked "plus $50."

"Why, I——"

"That's all right," she cut in. "I almost fell, until I remembered that this morning I trimmed off a pimple on the back of that man's neck. You can cash his bet, I guess, and, by the way, it was a good trick, all right, if it did fail. You tell that double of yours to drop around here in the morning and I'll see if I can't give him that order. With this $50, I think I ought to be able to come up to his prices."

CERTAINLY ENDS STOMACH MISERY.

Headache, Heartburn, Gas and Indigestion vanish and you feel fine in five minutes.

Thousands of men and women here and about Los Angeles will be surprised at the prompt relief after taking a little Diapepsin—Get some now and have your stomach trouble over with forever.

You can eat anything your stomach craves without fear of Indigestion or Dyspepsia, or that your food will ferment or sour on your stomach if you will take a little Diapepsin occasionally.

Your meals will taste good, and anything you eat will be digested; nothing can ferment or turn into acid or poison or stomach gas, which causes Belching, Dizziness, a feeling of fullness after eating, Nausea, Indigestion (like a lump of lead in stomach), Billiousness, Heartburn, Water Brash, Pain in Stomach and Intestines or other symptoms.

Headaches from the stomach are absolutely unknown where this effective remedy is used. Diapepsin really does all the work of a healthy stomach. It digests your meals when your stomach can't. A single dose will digest all the food you eat and leave nothing to ferment or sour and upset the stomach.

Get a large 50c case of Pape's Diapepsin from your druggist and start taking now, and in a little while you will actually brag about your healthy, strong Stomach, for you then can eat anything and everything you want without the slightest discomfort or misery, and every particle of impurity and Gas that is in your stomach and intestines is going to be carried away without the use of laxatives or any other assistance.

Should you at this moment be suffering from Indigestion or any stomach disorder, you can get relief within five minutes.

PIG PLIES PAINT.

Porker Neglected by Peon Proceeds to Dye Town Carmine While Owner Passes the Pulque.

A combination of pig, pulque and peon nearly caused a riot on Buena Vista street yesterday, and came within an ace of landing half a dozen or more saffron-hued sons of Mexico in the city bastile.

The peon wasn't much to look upon, and the pig boasted no proud Berkshire or Poland ancestry, but the pulque was beneficent in the quality of beautiful jag it caused, and the combination contained all the ingredients of a "rough-house cocktail" that would have caused a Bowery bartender to blush for shame.

The peon, gazelle eyed and gentle, was ambling along, leading the innocent porker by a rope. A small goatskin of pulque had been brought to him from sunny Mexico by a long lost brother, and Pedro Avilla was upon celebration bent. Ever and anon he would pause, and tying the pig to a post, enter a saloon to assist the more mild pulque with a nip of something stronger.

After several stops he decided he did not care whether the porker was tied or left free. His pigship enjoyed the unwonted liberty and at one "cantina," when Pedro tarried over the flowing bowl longer than usual, the animal joyfully went foraging on his own account.

A grand dame of the Mexican revolution was seated in her doorway peeling potatoes and the redolent chile preparatory to mixing a stew. The porker spied the potatoes, and when her back was turned rooted her pan over. This was the start of the excitement. The señora seized a broom and commenced to belabor the pig, which, in endeavoring to escape her vengeance darted under a ladder on top of which a son of the republic to the south was perched with a paint pot and brush.

This near-painter was dreamily contemplating a rich effect of deep maroon body with trimmings of scarlet with which he was decorating the house, when the pig got in his work. The rope became tangled in the rickety ladder and a tumble followed.

The painter and his pot descended upon the portly form of the grand dame like an avenging thunderbolt. There was an indiscriminate mixture of arms, legs, hair, paint and language. Then all covered with a rich maroon, the lady with the broom put the painter to rout.

At this juncture the peon arrived to claim his own. When his friends finally rescued him from the irate woman, the painter was lying in wait for him, and a second battle was imminent.

The daughter of the revolution has a fine pig on hand.

UNIQUE ENTERTAINMENT.

Every night, from around 7 to 9 o'clock, pedestrians on South Spring and Sixth streets congregate in large numbers in front of the city ticket office of the Southern Pacific to enjoy an automatic stereopticon entertainment, provided by the management for the education of the people of California to the beauties and advantages of farming and fruit growing in the sections reached by the Southern Pacific. The scenes are on a revolving frame, and automatically each is displayed for a short time, then followed by another, illustrating some different section. It is a unique, attractive method of advertising the resources of California and neighboring States to the tourists and home people, and good crowds nightly view the shifting scenes.

"WILD BILL'S" REVIVAL.

"Wild Bill" Evans, a somewhat picturesque evangelist, is holding a series of revival meetings in Marvin Methodist Church, Fifty-fourth street and Hooper avenue. At a young people's mass meeting this afternoon he will talk on the influence of a girl upon the happiness and value of a boy. Tonight he will take the jingling topic: "What Kind of a Church Would any Church Be, if Every Member Was Just Like Me?"

REAL COLOR PHOTOGRAPHY.

A stereopticon lecture on real color photography is to be delivered in Symphony Hall Thursday evening by Stanley McGinnis and George Clifton of Denver. The lecture is to be under arrangement with the Los Angeles Camera Club.

WHAT'S DOING IN SAN FRANCISCO.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 22.—It was all so spontaneous on the part of hundreds of thousands of people and the outpourings of humanity were so enormous that it is hard to realize that a committee has been working for six months to make the Portola festival a success. The newspapers did their share in boosting the crowds. The Call said that 900,000 persons saw Thursday's parade. The Examiner heard about this and made it just one million. Splitting the difference probably half a million people saw the greatest parade ever given here.

Gallantry demands that the Native Daughters be awarded the prize as the most beautiful feature of the great pageant. Next to them came the Jap float, representing a cherry tree in full blossom. And by the way, the Los Angeles Elks were some pumpkins, too.

Don Gaspar de Portola, making his first appearance on earth in 150 years, in the very proper person of Nicolas Covarrubias, was a gallant sight all to himself. His horsemanship was a marvel acquired in long years as a livery stable man of Southern California. It was only a fluke when his horse threw him on Van Ness avenue, and the doughty Gaspar insists on another try-out.

P. H. McCarthy, candidate for Mayor, was in the parade. He rode on a float of the Woodmen of the World. McCarthy did not know at first whether to honor the Native Sons with his presence or the Woodmen, but quickly chose the latter on reading a placard that they had 20,000 men. Near by the Labor Committee was an ax and a tree, but he kept as far away as possible from these symbols of work.

It may be for years and it may be forever, but certainly the nervous strain of the past week argues against a speedy renewal of Portola joy. There is some talk of making it an annual event, but we all have had enough fun to last us for two years, anyway.

Pugilist Jack Johnson, champion of the world barring one, shows his dark contempt for laws Caucasian by defying them. He owns an automobile and runs it himself at a high speed in order to get fast enough to meet Jeffries. He races up and down Market street because of its good pavement and the crowds there to see him. Arrested and fined $100 for speeding he says that he will go as fast as he pleases, when he pleases, and so we may abolish the tax levy and look to Johnson as our governmental meal ticket.

In a moment of forgetfulness Pugilist Johnson hired a lawyer. In another moment of forgetfulness he forgot to pay him. The attorney ducked an uppercut when asking for his fee, and attached Johnson's automobile. The big negro almost wept when he released the attachment and resolved in the future to fight his own battles.

In these crowded days when everybody walks over you in the street car and the platform man insists on collecting your fare, the great heart of the public goes out to Citizen Duskin. He had Conductor Mason arrested for battery, and election is assured the police judge who gives Mason life.

Portola put a temporary quietus on politics, and the citizenry feel grateful for the relaxation. The friends of Dr Leland and William Crocker, candidates for Mayor, are assured of success. They freely state that the other man is going to withdraw. If P. H. McCarthy makes the withdrawal unanimous, Dr. O'Donell is ready at a moment's notice to jump into the breach for good government and a full dinner pail.

(INCORPORATED, 1905.)

Stock in this established and thriving concern is now offered for subscription at FIFTY CENTS a share—par value $1.00. The terms are all cash, or 10 per cent. down and 10 per cent. monthly. Buy now and share in the regular quarterly dividend, payable November 10, 1909. Price of stock will advance November 1.

OUR RECORD

HOME BUILDERS OF LOS ANGELES has been paying dividends since 1906. Your money invested now while stock is below par will not only earn about 12 per cent. in dividends yearly, but shares will steadily increase in value with growth of company. Los Angeles Investment Co., the largest building concern of our kind in the world, has paid to date 561 per cent. in dividends, an average of 41 per cent. a year. Home Builders of Los Angeles, the safest company of its kind in existence, has earned its stockholders to date 165 per cent., an average in excess of 41 per cent. a year. We expect to keep our record ahead of the best of the others.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

We quote from "Homes," the publication of the Los Angeles Investment Company. Its issue of August, 1909, referring to HOME BUILDERS OF LOS ANGELES, reads:

"It gives its stockholders the profits on the real estate (which is the largest part of the earnings of companies of this kind.) as well as the profits on the houses. This company was one of over 500 which started during the epidemic of building companies of 1905, and so far as we know it is the only one which survived, the panic of 1907 having given most of them their quietus. HOME BUILDERS OF LOS ANGELES—we believe to be a good investment—the stockholders will be honestly dealt with."

Remember, we are the original Home Builders of Los Angeles, and do not conflict us with any other concern using our name.

ONE of the most marked differences between our clothing store's and practically all the others in California is that we deliberately do one very important thing which the others are careful to tell you they don't do and wouldn't do. We handle only one line of fine clothing, the exclusive product of one maker--

Hart Schaffner & Marx

We could handle twenty lines if we wanted to; there are a lot of makers who would like to have us. We prefer to buy one line--the best line.

We do business in this way because we think it's best for our customers, and therefore best for us; we'd like to have you know our reason for thinking so.

Copyright Hart Schaffner & Marx

In the first place our stores are run on the theory that we're here to serve you in the matter of clothes, not merely to sell them to you; we're trying to live up to that idea. If we serve, we'll have no trouble in selling.

The best service naturally means the best clothes; and there's only one best in clothes or in anything else; "best" means one; it can't mean two or three, or half a dozen. As long as the average man does not try to be an expert judge in fabrics, weaves, tailoring, style, somebody's got to do the judging for him. And doing it for you is part of our service to you.

We select the best line of clothes made; we handle that alone. It's a line you know about; when you come here for clothes, you know exactly what you're getting; you don't find some unknown label in the garment; and we don't seek to conceal the identity of the maker under our label. We want you to have confidence in us; and giving you Hart Schaffner & Marx goods is one way of cultivating confidence.

You might think that two or three "best lines" might offer you a greater variety for choice. The fact is, the Hart Schaffner & Marx line offers a bigger range of fabrics and weaves than any half dozen lines in the country put together, and we get our pick from it. There's no advantage of variety for choice, unless it's variety of the best; you don't want to choose, say a $25 suit, between the best for the money and the second or third best.

Depend upon it, our different way is the right way to sell clothes--and you'll find it the right way to buy them.

Come in here for your next suit or overcoat.

Come prepared to pay $20 or $25 or more, as you choose, and expect to get the best clothes for the money you ever saw--you'll not be disappointed.

Better clothes if you want them. We sell many suits and overcoats at $30, $35, $40 to men who want the best there is in clothes. It's in these.

FAILS TO KILL HIMSELF.

Mistaking the location of his heart, W. G. Thomas, a negro, inflicted only a painful flesh wound instead of killing himself as he intended, when he placed a revolver against his left breast yesterday and pulled the trigger.

Thomas was despondent because his wife left him and went to Texas to live about a month ago. She did not like California, and he refused to reside any place else.

The attempt at suicide was made in Thomas's room, at No. 726 East Seventeenth street. The University police ambulance took the wounded man to the Receiving Hospital. The surgeons say his condition is not dangerous.

IN JAIL LONG TIME.

The preliminary examination of W. L. Geissinger on a charge of having passed worthless checks in large amounts was postponed until Tuesday by Justice Rose yesterday.

The prisoner has been in jail for more than two months. He was brought here from Texas, after he had been arrested, escaped and was again taken into custody.

The police accuse him of having obtained identification here by imposing on persons who had known him in Berkeley as a man whose word was good. The checks he is accused of having passed were drawn on a Berkeley bank.

Brantverne's Electric Belt Restores Health and Strength

Men and Women STOP!

Don't Take That Drug

Why don't you stop it? You are still doctoring, but changing doctors does not cure you. You are trying one medicine after the other with the same disgusting disappointment. You are a "medicine doser" and the only change in your condition is for the worse. WHY DON'T YOU STOP—THIS MEDICINE HABIT? Why don't you avail yourself of the modern remedy? Proceed on Nature's own lines. Use the life-giving, healing, strengthening forces of Electricity.

When drugs fail to cure and every drug remedy leaves you in a worse condition you learn that dope only deceives the mind and "stimulants" and "tonics" only whip up your tired system to make it more tired. You know or should know that drugs are not real strength. You need strength, but you cannot get something from nothing. When your stomach or other important organs fail to draw strength from your food how do you expect to get strength from medicine?

Pump real strength—real power—Nature's natural force, Electricity, into the body and you will have real strength. The body retains this power and the principal organs begin to do their work right. The electricity makes them work NATURAL and soon they will set the body in such good condition it will not need treatment of any kind.

Fifty years ago they thought bleeding was the only cure for disease of any kind.

Think of draining a man's life blood now. You wouldn't have it done, yet doctors made your ancestors believe in it, just as they have caused you to believe in drugs. Science has made some wonderful discoveries since those days. I don't mean medical science.

The drugs recommended for weakness by medical men today are well known POISONS that are sure killers; they never cure, but they certainly ruin health.

"The electric age is here. Drugs are hard hit on all sides.

"The word health now means a normal supply of electricity in the body, and the word disease means an insufficiency of that power."

The basis of energy in the human body is Electricity. All the organs, every function of the body and the health of the individual depend upon the Electricity possessed by the nerves, and pain, weakness, despondency, lost energy and ambition denote a lack of it. If the stomach fails to digest the food that is given to it, if the nerves are weak, kidneys inactive, or any organ fails to do its work, it can be restored to perfect health by the proper use of it.

The greatest proof of the value of Electricity, and how it is replacing drugs for a weak, broken-down system, is the fact that physicians who a few years ago scoffed at the idea of Electricity as a cure, are today applying it in preference to drugs. The results of experiments conducted by the greatest scientists in the country show that the action of the organs, the basis of life in the body, is Electricity, and where it has been wasted by overwork, indiscretions or disease, it can be replaced by the proper application.

The day of patent medicine is rapidly passing away. The American people have been duped by every conceivable nostrum that could be compounded. There are blood purifiers, liver regulators and tonics and restoratives ad nauseam.

People who have squandered fortunes in search of health and have tried every medium known, have in the end been willing to consider what the electric theory of disease could do for them. No sooner do we explain it to them than they are astonished at the simplicity and the directness of our treatment.

They wonder that it has never occurred to them before that disease was but the result of the disturbance and derangement of the vital force. That the only way to restore an organ of the body to healthy action is to bring to that organ the electro nervous force that shall cause it to discharge its functions without permitting stagnation, decay and consequent death.

Activity is the law of life.

If you have a complaint that has bothered you for years, that medicine does not seem able to cure, and you are still doctoring away, going from one doctor to another, trying one patent medicine and then another, causing your poor stomach to turn in disgust against it all, and are in the same fix that you were at the start, only that you are certainly worse on account of all this drug dosing, we say if you have done this, and are still at it, why don't you stop? Why don't you hesitate before you carry the dose to your mouth, and think, "What is this stuff, what is in it, and what am I taking it for?"

You will find it hard to answer these questions satisfactorily to yourself. There are some eminent men in the medical profession, however, who will answer them for you; men who have, after a lifetime spent in the study of the effect of drugs upon the human body, left as a legacy to humanity their conclusions that all drugs are poisons, and that the taking of them is destructive instead of being beneficial to health. Scientific works are full of these opinions and they tell you that the stuff you are taking is poison, that it does not cure you because it is not what Nature demands, and that you are taking it because you have been told to.

Truly, under such conditions, when you know that you are not getting better, it is time for you to stop and think. First, understand your conditions, know that Nature needs assistance; give it to her in natural manner. There is only one way to do that—Electricity.

If the people who know that they are sick and who are taking drugs with the hope of a cure would give a little study to this subject they would see that the remedy that is going to cure them is one that gives them new strength. Electricity does that; drugs do not. Electricity is a power and gives power, drugs only stimulate. The use of the stomach as the channel for the passage of deleterious "tonics," stimulants and in many cases, poisonous drugs, injures the membranes, ruins the digestive function and leads finally to permanent debility of the entire organic structure.

A course of drug dosing is far more expensive than one of our appliances even though you were to buy one of our best. Drugs cannot cure you. What's the use of paying for prescriptions when there is no drug known that will really and permanently restore vitality and when you consider that nearly all disease results from a weakness of vitality you will easily understand the impossibility of restoring health with drugs. A stimulant soon wears off and leaves you in worse condition than ever. Drugs are dangerous and they give no real strength. The only way to get real strength is to apply electricity in the proper manner to the inactive, weak organs that are supposed to produce strength. The more you dose your system with drugs the more you will require to get the same effect. Drug dosing is unnatural and weakening; it destroys all your chances of ever getting well.

All the FOULEST products of earth's decaying disease matter are raked over to supply the drug shop with drugs. All the deadliest of mineral poisons are kept in the drug store and are prescribed by thousands of doctors and concealed in many innocent looking patent medicines. Many prescriptions if written in civilized English instead of almost illegible Latin scrawls would read like death warrants—slow but certain. DEADLY POISON, that kills the patient before killing the disease. Even the most deadly of weeds are gathered and prepared for the sick man of today and poisonous plants of all descriptions are used to make the vile concoctions that litter the shelves of the drug shop. And this filth of diseased, decaying animal matter and these poisonous weeds of disease-laden swamps and disgusting insect life of plague-stricken lands are all gathered to feed the sick people.

ELECTRICITY WILL PRESERVE YOUR HEALTH.

People who will not receive counsel cannot be helped. We say to weak men and women, electricity is life and without it you cannot exist. If you are run down and have lost your ambition you need electricity. If you are weak you need electricity. For lost womanhood or manhood there is nothing like electricity to restore your health. To the ladies we will say that if you have female weakness and have those awful bearing-down pains, that there is nothing better than an electric belt.

We simply desire to present for your consideration the wonderful effects of electricity upon the human system, when properly applied, the proper mode of its application, and its great curative properties, especially in certain diseases with which men are afflicted. It is a well-known fact that during the past few years wonderful strides have been made in the investigation of the science of electricity. The world is moved by electricity. The whole animal kingdom lives and moves by the power of electricity. In short, electricity is life itself.

The effect of continuous electric currents are:

(1.) It is a powerful stimulant to every part of the nervous system.

(2.) It acts as a sedative in soothing morbidly excited, nervous action.

(3.) It aids and increases nutritive changes, both local and general.

(4.) Its action as a general tonic is marked and very powerful.

(5.) It equalizes the circulation, thus reducing congestion and inflammation.

(6.) It is strongly anti-spasmodic and anti-paralytic in its action.

In olden times people overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that our electric belts will permanently overcome any weakness, well-informed people will not hesitate in saying they have been well rewarded. To those who have battered their stomachs with drugs we want them to exercise their judgment and consider that electricity is the greatest power on earth. Quickly puts life and force into whatever it touches. Gives instant relief and never fails to cure rheumatism, backache, kidney, liver and bladder troubles, early decay, night losses, loss of nerve and vigor, nervous debility, constipation, dyspepsia, undevelopment and lost vitality, and all female complications.

Within the past twenty years no other science has so challenged the attention of the civilized world as that of electricity. Through the entire history of the race this subtle fluid, though pervading the very air we breathe and enveloping myriad worlds in its mystic power, has eluded detection. Today no one can predict what are its possibilities. It is believed by many that every form of energy may be traced back to its origin in electricity.

HOW "VITALIZ" RESTORES NERVE LIFE.

Every organ of your body is covered by a network of nerve wires. These nerves convey the power which runs the human machine. The power is called nerve force. Nerve force is nothing but electricity. The reason any organ becomes weak is because the nerves which control it lack electricity, or nerve force, the motive power of your body. This lack of nerve force is shown by weakness of any kind, whether in the stomach, liver, kidneys, heart or other organs.

If your memory is poor, confidence and nerve all gone; sleep restless; if you suffer frequent headache and your eyes are dull and heavy, it shows that your supply of nerve force is depleted.

So many men try to build up nerve force by doping their stomachs with drugs. It is impossible. What the nerves require is nourishment—nerve food. If there was any nourishment in drugs they might do some good, but you know there is not. Drugs are drugs, stimulants, narcotics, antidotes, poisons, not food—electricity is nerve food—nerve life. It soaks into your nerves and is taken up by them just as a sponge absorbs water. It nourishes and vitalizes the parts which drugs cannot reach.

Every dose of drugs that you put into your stomach weakens your nerves. Every time you kill a pain or an ache by stupefying the nerves with poisonous drugs—you are hurting them, and any one can see that in time, by steady dosing, your nervous system will be completely broken down.

VITALIZ is a scientific body-battery which infuses a steady, unbroken stream of electric life into your nerves and vitals while you sleep. Its influence is powerful, yet soothing and pleasant.

VITALIZ will drive out your pains and aches, renew your strength and ambition and restore your health by giving every organ, every weak or diseased part of your body, power to do its work as nature intended. Where there is plenty of electric energy there can be no pain or disease.

Don't take another dose of drugs. You know they have not helped you. Stop loading your stomach with poisons which eat up your vitality and weaken your heart and nerves.

If you suffer from rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, stomach, kidney, liver or bowel trouble, weakness of any kind, or any nervous or chronic ailment, get VITALIZ—there is health and strength in it for you.

Restoring St. Peters.

An important work at St. Peter's has just been begun and will occupy about ten years. It is the repaving of the vast edifice which the feet of the crowds visiting it during centuries succeeding have worn away. It is estimated that it will cost about £80,000 to restore the 12,000 square meters of pavement damaged, and this only represents about one-half the total surface.

The restoration will be a work of patience, for it is intended to supply the place of each old stone with one precisely similar, but where are the marbles to be obtained?

Many of the species used for the original pavement are no longer obtainable. They came from the ancient Roman temples, from the columns and tablets found buried in the earth, and today such finds are very rare. Nevertheless the Chapter of St. Peter's has been able to acquire some of these rare marbles. The remaining portions will have to be sought from the quarries of Carrara.—[Correspondence New York Sun.

THE CARNEGIE FOUNDATION.

Fund for the Advancement of Teaching in Our Generation.

One of the most efficient educational organizations of the present day is the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. Its purpose is to provide retiring funds or pensions for those teachers in higher institutions of learning who may, through old age or disability, no longer be able to render efficient service.

In April, 1905, Andrew Carnegie selected twenty-five prominent educators in the United States and Canada and asked them to serve as a board of trustees. In a letter addressed to them he said:

"I have reached the conclusion that the least rewarded of all the professions is that of the teacher in higher educational institutions. New York City generously provides retiring pensions for teachers in her public schools and also for her policemen. Very few of our colleges are able to do so. The consequences are grievous. Able men hesitate to adopt teaching as a career, and many old professors whose places should be occupied by younger men cannot be retired.

"I have therefore transferred to you and your successors, as trustees, $10,000,000, 5-per-cent. first-mortgage bonds of the United States Steel Corporation, the revenue of which is to provide retiring pensions for the teachers of universities, colleges and technical schools in our country, Canada and Newfoundland, under such conditions as you may adopt from time to time. Expert calculation shows that the revenue will be ample for the purpose.

"The fund applies to the three classes of schools named without regard to race, sex, creed or color. We have, however, to recognize that State or colonial governments which have established or mainly supported universities, colleges or schools may prefer that their relations shall remain exclusively with the State. I cannot, therefore, presume to include them.

"There is another class that States do not aid, their Constitutions even in some cases forbidding it, viz., sectarian institutions. Many of these established long ago were truly sectarian, but today are free to all men of all creeds or of none. Such are not to be considered sectarian now. Only such as are under the control of a sect, or require trustees (or a majority thereof,) officers, faculty or students to belong to any specified sect, or which impose any theological test, are to be excluded."

The men selected by Mr. Carnegie as trustees organized themselves into a corporate body known as the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching and proceeded to collect information concerning the institutions of higher learning and to make rules governing the eligibility of institutions to partake in the fund. Statistics were collected showing the standard of scholarship in the various colleges and universities, the average salaries paid, the number of students, the annual income and other important facts.

QUALIFICATIONS.

In order to be able to participate in the benefits of the foundation it was ruled that: "An institution to be ranked as a college must have at least six professors giving their entire time to college and university work, a course of four full years in liberal arts and sciences, and should require for admission not less than the usual four years of high-school or academic work in addition to the pre-academic or grammar-school work."

To be ranked as a college it was ruled that an institution must have a productive endowment of not less than $200,000.

A technical school to be eligible must have entrance and graduation requirements equivalent to those of the college, and must offer courses in pure and applied science of equivalent grade.

While in a general way it was agreed that the preparation required by the college must equal the four years' high-school course, certain specifications concerning the studies to be pursued were also made. The standard of admission as demanded is substantially the same as is required by our very best colleges and universities.

It is rather unfortunate that in our American system of education there is no sharp distinction between the college and the university.

Of course I understand that there is a decided trend in favor of making the university work follow the college course. Those who favor this would regard only graduate work as university work, but no such distinction is by any means general.

There are many institutions whose charters designate them as colleges who are doing the same work as chartered universities.

Two distinguished American institutions started in their educational careers taking only graduate students. I refer to Clark and Johns Hopkins, but both of these have added undergraduate departments.

The first annual report of the Foundation was issued in October, 1906. This document shows that at that time fifty-two institutions had been placed on the accepted list and that retiring allowances had been granted to forty-three persons. Among the list of accepted institutions were given many of our strongest universities, such as Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Cornell, Stanford, Amherst, Johns Hopkins and Princeton.

The second annual report, issued October, 1907, shows that the number of accepted institutions had been increased to fifty-five and the number of retiring allowances to 148. A number of retiring allowances have been granted to persons not in accepted institutions. These are granted on the basis of distinguished service in the cause of higher education.

According to the terms of the letter accompanying the donation from Mr. Carnegie, sectarian institutions were excluded from, and tax-supported State institutions not admitted to, the benefits of the Foundation.

It at once became apparent that as long as this fund was administered solely in the interests of the corporation colleges and universities the State institutions would be at a great disadvantage in securing the best men for their service. University professors, like men in other professions, prefer to go where the salaries are most satisfactory. It is a well-known fact that those persons who receive a stated salary for their work are less likely to accumulate savings than those working under other circumstances. This has been especially true in the teaching profession. The accepted institutions of the Carnegie Foundation could not only offer the regular compensation during active service, but guarantee a competency in case of disability from sickness or old age. The tendency of the best men to drift toward the Carnegie institutions was very perceptible.

STATE UNIVERSITIES.

The National Association of State Universities took the matter up and asked the Foundation to add the State university to the list of accepted institutions. There was much discussion. Several meetings were held, both of the National Association of State Universities and of the Foundation board. The principal difficulty seemed to be that if the State institutions were added that the fund would be insufficient. Mr. Carnegie himself came to the rescue and wrote the following letter, addressed to the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching:

NEW YORK, March 31, 1908.—Dear Sir: Your favor of today informs me of the desire of the professors of the State University to be embraced in the pension fund as shown by a resolution unanimously adopted by their National Association.

In my letter of April 16, 1905, handing over the fund to the Trustees, the following occurs:

"We have however to recognize that State and Colonial governments, which have established or mainly supported universities or colleges or schools may prefer that their relations shall remain exclusively with the State. I cannot therefore presume to include them."

I beg now to say that should the governing boards of any State universities apply for participation in the fund and the Legislature and Governor of the State approve such application it will give me great pleasure to increase the fund to the extent necessary to admit them. I understand from you that if all State universities should apply and be admitted five million more of five per cent. bonds would be required, making the fund fifteen million dollars in all.

From the numerous letters I have received from pensioners and their wives, and the warm approval of the press and the public, I am satisfied that the fund is and must be for all time productive of lasting good, not only to the recipients, but to the cause of higher education.

Most grateful am I as trustee of this wealth to devote it to such a cause.

Truly yours,
ANDREW CARNEGIE.

The State university has thus been added to the list of accepted institutions participating in the benefits of the Foundation, the necessary steps being for the Governor of the State and the Legislature to approve the recommendation of the board of control.

"How retiring allowances are computed. A normal retiring allowance is considered to be one awarded to a professor in an accepted university, college or technical school on the ground of either age or length of service. The term professor as here used is understood to include presidents, deans, professors, associate professors and assistant professors in higher institutions of learning.

TERMS OF ALLOWANCE.

"In reckoning the amount of the retiring allowance the average salary for the last five years of active service shall be considered as active pay.

"Any person 65 years of age and who has had not less than fifteen years of service as a professor, and who is at the time a professor in an accepted institution, shall be entitled to an annual retiring allowance computed as follows:

"For an active pay of $1200 or less an allowance of $1000, provided that no retiring allowance shall exceed 90 per cent. of the active pay.

"For an active pay greater than $1200 the retiring allowance shall equal $1000, increased by $50 for each $100 of active pay in excess of $1200.

"Any person who has had a service of twenty-five years as a professor, and who is at the time a professor in an accepted institution, shall be entitled to a retiring allowance computed as follows:

"For an active pay of $1200 or less, a retiring allowance of $800, provided that no retiring allowance shall exceed 80 per cent. of active pay.

"For an active pay greater than $1200 the retiring allowance shall equal $800, increased by $40 for each $100 of active pay in excess of $1200.

"No retiring allowance shall exceed $4000.

"Any person who for ten years has been the wife of a professor in active service may receive during her widowhood one-half of the allowance to which her husband would have been entitled."

The teaching profession is the only one that does not pay a premium on age. A meager salary barely furnishes the means of living while health and activity remain, but when age or infirmity comes on there is a very gloomy outlook for the future. This foundation will provide a competency for all our teach cepted institutions of highe when age makes them no ceptable in the classroo strengthen our college and faculties by bringing in yo and at the same time pro those who have given long ful service. It will attra teaching profession strong women, who, under the ol ments would enter other It has already been very bringing about a uniformity lege entrance requirements in advancing the standard same in many institutions.

This allowance is not a It is not a charity. The pr higher institutions will receive tiring allowance as his right military service, while on the list, he receives his regular pay when he is retired he still to receive his due. The pension he, placed in the retired list, much a part of his contract monthly pay. The foundation the professor on the same basis of the retiring allowance soldier and teacher is the service to the State and nation.

Almost all European univer note provide a retiring allowance their professors, who have their service a certain number years or who have become while in the service of the univ Sometimes this allowance is public funds and sometimes from vate benefaction. In the States a number of the wealth stitutions had made some pr of this kind. Among these were vard, Cornell, Columbia, Cal

Three States—New Jersey, land and California—have laws looking toward the provi retiring funds for teachers public schools. Many cities have ready made such arrang among these New York, Buffalo, Louis, Detroit, Poughkeepsie, C and Minneapolis.

The State institutions without ception are making arrangements accept the proffered aid of the negie Foundation for the Adv ment of Teaching. Not to do to cripple the State's educ forces, for the best men will where there is the best pay.

This action on the part of the institutions is right, for the school in the future, as in the must stand for the best there the educational world.

The last annual report of the dation, October 1, 1908, shows two accepted institutions and the list of those receiving retir lowances. The data concerning institutions admitted and the allowances granted in these tions will appear in the next

No sensible man objects to a lawyer who lends his talents and his learning to the cause of the client that retains him. That is what he was educated for, that is how he makes his living, that is his profession, he is a professional advocate. He may, like Sergt. Buzfuz, drop salt tears over Mrs. Bardell's slighted affections, or thunder at the villain Pickwick and his scoundrelly allusions to chops and tomato sauce, and nobody thinks the worse of him. He may even denounce the dark ways and vain devices of the opposing counsel, and that does not prevent him from joining his legal brother aforesaid at the frugal meal that lawyers affect at midday and spend the time retailing the latest gossip and laughing at the oldest jokes. That is all in the day's work. If it were otherwise, if lawyers had to carry their court feuds into private life, social intercourse would soon become impossible.

OUT FOR HIRE ONLY.

The fact of the matter about Heney is that he is out for hire, and he does not care who the person is that hires him, or what is the cause he is paid to uphold. He was hired by the United States to prosecute the land frauds. He prosecuted them, and now claims to be a patriot for so doing. If the other side had retained him, he would have been just as loud, just as noisy in their defense.

Did Heney think of the rights of labor when in the Danbury hat case he dealt labor a blow from which it still reels? Andrew Furuseth and Walter Macarthur, who are now upholding Heney, characterized that case as a deadly wound to the workingmen's organization. How can they take the hand that delivered the stab? Heney claims he acted simply as a lawyer. Precisely. So he is acting now. He was a hireling then, he is a hireling now. If his attacks on the labor unions were then mere professional insincerity, so now his encomiums of the unions are the veriest kind of buncombe.

SPRECKEL'S PRIVATE AGENT.

Is there any one in San Francisco that doubts that Heney is in the pay of Rudolph Spreckels? The payments to Heney are on record. They may be called office expenses, or tips, or Christmas boxes, what you like—the fact remains that the money passed from Spreckels to Heney, and those who know Heney know that he is not throwing it to the birds.

The plain English of the whole campaign is that Heney is a hireling, and he wants the people to increase his hiring worth. Translated, all his speeches mean, "Elect me District Attorney that I may hire out myself and my office to Rudolph Spreckels." What Rudolph Spreckels wants of the office does not concern us now. All the world knows he doesn't want anything good of it. That family of fakers has never an idea but a selfish idea. But if he were an angel from heaven, he should not be permitted to hire a public official. Yet this is what Heney, the hireling, wants the people to do: "Give me an office that I may rent it out."

NEW EDISON OFFICIAL.

Electrical Engineer of National Reputation Is Appointed Vice-President and General Manager.

W. A. Breckenridge, an electrical engineer of national reputation, has been appointed vice-president and general manager of the Southern California Edison Company, and will take charge tomorrow morning of the general operation of the big company's business. This announcement was made yesterday by John B. Miller, president of the company, who, with Mr. Breckenridge and R. H. Ballard, secretary and assistant general manager, will constitute the new Management Committee.

Mr. Breckenridge recently tendered his resignation to Gov. Hughes of New York as a member of the advisory board of consulting engineers for the improvement of State canals, doing this that he might accept the position tendered him last April in New York by President Miller of the Edison Company. He reached Southern California a few days ago, and has leased the handsome home formerly occupied by Horace M. Dobbins, Orange Grove avenue and State street, Pasadena, where he will reside with Mrs. Breckenridge and their two daughters.

It was through his connection with the Niagara Falls Power Company that Mr. Breckenridge came into prominence as an electrical engineer. As engineer in charge of the work, he supervised the operating of the first installation of machinery at Niagara, and organized the operating force. In 1904, he was appointed to the New York canals advisory board.

His life work as an engineer began in a humble capacity on the survey and construction of the New York elevated railway system; later, he was respectively assistant and resident engineer on the construction of the Lackawanna Railroad from Binghamton to Buffalo. He has been connected, too, with the Brooklyn elevated, the Long Island Railroad Company, holding important positions with both. He spent a year abroad, pursuing engineering studies, and on his return was associated with Clemens Herschel, distinguished hydraulic engineer.

THE PRESIDENT PLEASED.

Sends Letters Expressing His Appreciation of Welcome Accorded Him in Southern California.

Willis H. Booth, chairman of the Executive Committee which had charge of the arrangements for the entertainment of the President during his visit, and Joseph Scott, who organized the boosters, received letters of appreciation yesterday from Mr. Taft's aide. To Mr. Booth he writes as follows:

"The President directs me to express his deep appreciation of the arrangements which were made at Los Angeles for his comfort and for his pleasure. The entire programme was most admirably arranged and was carried out to the greatest gratification of himself and party. He hopes that you will express his thanks to the Mayor, to Mr. Weidner, to Mr. Wankowski, to Mr. Humphreys, to Mr. Callender and Mr. Mott, and through them to the committeemen under them, for their work in making the day such an agreeable memory to him."

In the letter to Mr. Scott he says: "The President directs me to express his deep appreciation to you and your hundred boosters for the pleasure which you gave him and his party during his visit to Southern California. The society of you and your committee was greatly enjoyed by him and formed a diversion in the trip which will be a lasting memory to him. He hopes that you will express to each one of the gentlemen who assisted you in his entertainment his gratitude and thanks."

HE GETS OFF EASY.

Through a misunderstanding between police officers, Jack Lankershim, who spent several hours in the "drunk tank" of the City Jail, Friday night, escaped by paying a fine of $10 in Justice Frederickson's court, having been charged with not having a seal on his automobile. Two officers arrested Lankershim and each expected the other to prefer a more serious charge than was placed against him. The police say they could have charged him with three other offenses, but will not further prosecute him, now that he has been compelled to pay one fine.

RAILROAD INTERESTS.

The first steam railroad in the United States to be electrified was the Baltimore tunnel of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, over ten years ago. The latest large contract is the New York Central at New York, which has not been completed. The operation of electric locomotives has already shown them capable of doing more at less cost than the steam locomotives. Estimates and statistics obtained from the Interstate Commerce Commission show that electrification of every mile of rail road in the United States would result in saving in operating expenses of 18 per cent., or $250,000,000 per year, based on the 1905 statistics. In that year the average operating expenses per mile were $9038, and it was estimated that the use of the high class electrical equipment now available would reduce this amount to $5255. The difference is $1154 per mile, from which must be deducted depreciation, fixed charges and interest on the electric equipment at 5 per cent., leaving a net saving of $638 per mile of road.

An experiment station is to be established at Bacon, Del., by the Pennsylvania Railroad for the benefit of the farmers of the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia Peninsula, with a view of exploiting the agricultural advantages of that region. A farm of fifty acres has been purchased for the station. This is the result of a three days' trip made by President McCrea over the railroad lines on the Delaware, Maryland and Virginia Peninsula in 1908, when he saw thousands of acres of this section—one of the richest agricultural districts in the world—idle, with the adjoining farms flourishing and the products of the latter in great demand in all of the large markets of the Middle and Eastern States.

Owing to the increased price of coal during the last ten years, which in some States has amounted to as much as 56 per cent., it is asserted that for $1 spent for locomotive fuel in 1897 for each $17.25 of gross receipts the ratio has declined in 1907 to $1 for locomotive fuel for each $12.93 of gross receipts. Fuel for locomotives constitutes about 11 per cent. of the cost of railroad operation.

The expense of taxation is shown to have increased from $235.36 a mile of line in 1897 to $353.09 a mile of line in 1907, over 50 per cent. The cost of regulation, both State and national, which is classified akin to taxation, has also added greatly to the expense of the carriers.

A conservative computation discloses that the costs due to increases in expenses or reduction in revenue imposed by statutes or by commissions acting under Federal and State regulatory laws cost the railways of the United States approximately $100,000,000 per annum.

The Kansas City Railroad, which passes through the National Forest of the United States forest service, has undertaken an interesting piece of work with the view of reducing the number of fires in the district. The entire right of way of the railroad will be cleared of all inflammable material for a distance of fifty feet on each side of the tracks, and where advisable the land will be burned off for an additional distance of 100 feet. The work will be supervised by the officials of the forest service. After the work of clearing has been completed the cleared land will remain under government espionage, and employés of the service will be stationed along the length of the line throught he reservation. A telephone plant will be installed for the exclusive use of the forest department.

In Holland all railway locomotives are under the supervision of the government, and under the law, must be provided with an apparatus for the burning of smoke, and also with an apparatus to prevent, as far as possible, the emission of sparks and combustible matter. Every locomotive has to be examined and approved by a government inspector before it can be placed in service. No locomotive would be accepted which was not provided specially with a contrivance for burning the smoke, and the burning by locomotives and stationary furnaces of bituminous coal, which would emit clouds of black smoke, soot and deleterious gases, to the menace of the public health, would not be tolerated. The province of Zuid-Holland has prescribed that only coke is to be used on locomotives.

Julius Caesar at Home.

At the British Authors' Club Banquet in his honor Lieutenant Shackelton told an amusing story of a man who went home one night after a dinner and took with him four or five others.

"Come in, boys," he said, "and have a last drink."

"But your wife might not like it," one of the party replied.

"My wife!" was the answer; "I am Julius Caesar in my house."

On entering they were received by the lady of the house with the words, "Oh, walk in, gentlemen; there is plenty of drink in the dining-room. As for Julius Caesar, he is going to bed."—[Chicago Record Herald.

Why I Invented the ELECTRIC BELT

Twenty-five years ago we invented the first successful electric belt.

We had been treating people for years with drugs and were determined to find a better way of curing disease, for we knew, just as well as every other doctor knows today, that drugs can't actually cure anybody of anything.

Our first belt was a crude affair, compared to the one we make now. Even with all its faults it cured lots of people, and as we improved upon it from year to year, our cured patients increased in greater proportion. Today we make the most perfect electric body appliance known, and our twenty-five years' experience in treating people with electricity enables us to tell just what cases we can cure. If we can't cure you, we'll tell you so.

Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt is known the world over. In every city, town and hamlet of this broad land lives some one whom we have cured, and we can give names of people near you who have found health in our treatment.

Our belt cures weakness of any kind whether in the nerves, stomach, heart, liver or kidneys, rheumatism, weak back, sciatica, lumbago, dyspepsia and all other troubles where new life can restore health.

"I certainly give your belt credit for being a wonderful remedy. It relieved my stomach and kidneys act better and I am stronger than I have been for years."
H. P. BAKER, Covina, Cal.

We want every man to read our book, which tells how we cure with electricity—Nature's way. It is beautifully illustrated and gives a lot of information for every sufferer. We'll send it postpaid, free. If you will mail us this coupon. Office hours, 9 to 8, 10 to 1 Sunday.

Yorba Linda

NOTHING CAN IMPEDE ITS PROGRESS

Yorba Linda has the soil that produces the finest oranges and every crop that is grown in Southern California. The water suply is ample and the rates low. The climate is ideal. A low range of hills on the north keeps the district FREE FROM FROST.

Returns Come at Once—No Long Wait for Profits

It is the custom of Yorba Linda ranchers to grow vegetables between the rows while the orange trees are devloping. This brings an immediate revenue and PROFIT. Leaving this feature out of consideration, an orange grove will clear itself and be worth $2000 per acre in five years—not allowing for any increase in value over present prices in the district.

COLLINS WIRELESS TELEPHONE
AS AN INVESTMENT

You have a perfect right to be very gun-shy of innovations.

You are fully justified in hesitating to take chances with new things—to be cautious and investigate.

That is only good judgment.

But there is such a thing as being over-cautious; in thinking "things that were good enough for father are good enough for me." And there is such a thing as overlooking a great thing because it is new.

Don't be blinded to your own interests because you incorrectly class all new inventions in the same category.

The Collins Wireless Telephone is before the world to do things just as big and vitally important as the Bell Telephone. The wireless telephone comes closer; it is in the home; it will be a household article in five years.

You know how Bell stock soared.

Anyhow, before you dismiss the subject, before you turn your back on getting in right on Collins stock, see us and get right down to the bottom of it and find out for yourself if—for a conservative man—it is not the greatest buy you can make at the price.

If there is money in telephoning with wires, and there is, there certainly is MORE money in telephoning without wires.

The Collins System REQUIRES NO WIRES No Poles, No Franchises

Subsidiary companies have been, and others are being organized throughout the United States for the purpose of installing the Collins Wireless Telephone from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast. All these companies are obliged to pay tribute to this, the parent company, in cash, stock and royalties. This should make the shares of the parent company very valuable.

Call and Talk Over the Collins Wireless Telephone YOURSELF

Come to the office of the undersigned and talk over the telephone without wires. Tut-of-town readers are requested to write immediately for handsome illustrated book entitled. "THE STORY OF THE WIRELESS TELEPHONE," which will be furnished free. Write today. Address:

MONEY FOR GROWERS.

OUR CELERY AND WALNUTS FIGURE MILLIONS THIS YEAR.

TWO of Southern California's important crops are now in process of harvesting, and, with the customary regularity of products of the soil under little varying conditions of climate, are contributing their share of wealth to the growers.

The shipment of 1909 walnuts was begun the 1st inst. with prospects for an average crop at good prices. Last year was an exceptional one for nuts and the total production of Southern California amounted to 10,000 tons. This year it is estimated the yield will be about 8000 tons, which is a fair quantity.

Growers will probably receive an average of 11½ cents a pound for the entire crop. This will mean a return, outside the revenue derived by transportation companies, of about $1,840,000 to the growers.

The nuts this year are of good size and in fine condition. They may bring in the eastern markets, on account of the growing demand for this luxury, a price of 25 cents a pound, especially during the holiday season.

California celery is just ready for the gathering. Shipments to the eastern market will not begin until about November 1. It is estimated that there will be 1800 or 2000 cars this year, coming largely from Orange county and south of Los Angeles. Southern California supplies the winter table of the nation with this luxury, as the Michigan, Ohio and New York crops are off the market by Thanksgiving.

Our celery continues to go East until the end of March. Florida enters the market in February, but with a quality that does not seriously compete with this part of the country.

The Michigan and Ohio crops have been below the usual standard, and Chicago commission merchants are reported to be waiting anxiously for the arrival of the California product, which has never been finer. On account of the size of the stalk, the crispness and sweetness, and the shipping qualities the California celery is always high up in the list.

There are about 3000 acres in Southern California in celery this year. The crop averages 700 or 800 dozen to the acre, and the price to the grower runs from 18 cents to 25 cents a dozen. This brings a return to the grower of $150 an acre and upward. Celery is estimated to produce a net return to the agriculturists of half a million dollars.

THE OIL INDUSTRY.

ELECT SILVER TIP OFFICERS.

ANOTHER HOLE TO BE SUNK ON THE PROPERTY.

Operations Come to Standstill on the Imperial, and the Owners Are Expected to Visit Locality Soon to Determine Whether the Work Shall Be Continued.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

COALINGA, Oct. 21.—The Silver Tip stockholders have elected the following officers and directors: W. R. Guiberson, president; Z. L. Phelps, E. R. Smith of Los Angeles, and Jake Zwang. Claire Auger, secretary, the Bank of Coalinga, treasurer. Another hole will be sunk on the property.

Operations are at a standstill on the Imperial. The men, except the head drillers, have left the property. The owners are expected soon to visit the locality and give their final decision on future operations. It is reported that an effort will be made to get oil from the shallow territory on section 4.

Caribou No. 20 is almost completed at about the 1300-foot mark. The well is finished with ten-inch casing.

The Record has two strings in operation, well No. 1 being redrilled, and No. 6 down about 1000 feet. The company is installing an air compressor in the hope of increasing the production.

The Gold Tip Company has been organized for $1,500,000 to develop the eighty acres comprising the east half of the northwest quarter of 2-20-14. About twenty-five residents of Coalinga are among the original stockholders. W. R. Guiberson is the president of the new company. The other directors and officers are: R. F. Holser, K. R. Eastman, H. A. Stantien and D. P. Walsh.

Tubing is being hauled to the El Cerrito and the water will be pumped instead of baled. The worked will not require long and it is expected that the result will be known within two weeks. The reports which have prevailed for a week or two past to the effect that the sand was barren are unfounded, as there is about 1500 feet of water still in the hole, and the directors themselves know nothing more about the well than they did several weeks ago.

The Cosmo, in the Devil's Den, is making good progress, being down more than 400 feet. A good water well has been completed.

The Silver Tip has been giving a fine production this week, estimated at 2500 barrels a day. Toward the last of the week the flow increased.

The Marion is down about 1970 feet, after having successfully cemented off the water. The well will be drilled into the oil sand, which is expected shortly after the 2000-foot mark. The Fifty-Seven is putting in eight-inch pipe. The Great Western is down more than 600 feet with twelve and one-half-inch casing. Zed Phelps is getting three new companies started—the Coalinga, South Pole, the Coalinga Crystal and the Coalinga Gem. The rig is going on the Pacific States Petroleum Company piece. Commercial Petroleum No. 8, has been cemented in the eight-inch pipe. Within a few days General Manager Warner of the Golden Crest will take the water off and make a test of the sand in which he is drilling. The hole is 2600 feet deep, and has 260 feet of sand, which from time to time has made good showings. The sand layer has shown but two or three slight breaks. The boiler and engine for the Moslem has been hauled out, and operations on this south-of-town property will be begun shortly. Jefferson No. 2 is down more than 950 feet. The Red Top is down around the 1900-foot mark.

The American Petroleum properties present a busy appearance. The rigs for the dozen new wells are fast going up and the management is engaged in providing quarters for the increased working force. Quite a tent city has been established on the properties. Portable houses will be erected.

The Homestake No. 3 will shut off water this week. The well is drilling with cable tools. The rotary was used until a pin, dropped in the hole, prevented further progress. The Esperanza Land and Oil Company is down 2100 feet. It was spudded on June 29. F. E. Winsor, in charge of operations, claims the drilling record of the field. The ten-inch casing is yet to be landed. The W. K. has wells Nos. 1 and 3 producing again at their average rate. Number 2 is still being troubled by sand. Water is being shut off in No. 4 at about 2000 feet. Number 5 is down about 1700 feet and No. 6 not that far. The Hub is down 950 feet with eight and one-quarter-inch casing. The formation, it is asserted, runs with the Blaire. The Zier is rigging No. 13. The new buildings on the east eighty acres of the lease are being erected. The Acorn on 2-20-14 is down 800 feet with five and five-eighths-inch casing. The Standard on 36-19-15 has more than 450 feet of fifteen and one-half-inch pipe in a hole. The Baird on 24-23-18 is more than 1100 feet deep with twelve and one-half-inch casing. At 300 feet a good quality of water sand was encountered, from which the water supply is being obtained. The Echo, a new company on 2-22-17, has material on the ground for derrick and buildings.

The Devil's Den Consolidated is drilling in the shale, and according to report is securing lively showings of oil and gas. Le Parr and Lovelace of Visalia, who are drilling on 27-25-18, have gone into the first oil sand at 325 feet and are said to have an excellent showing. The stratum is about seventy feet in thickness, and the oil tests 14.

FOR CITY BEAUTIFUL.

Northern Section to Have Driveways and Boulevards If Improvement Association Plans Succeed.

Driveways and boulevards that will make the northern section of the city a resort for handsome equipages and automobiles, are planned by the members of the North, Northeast and Northwest Improvement Association.

The details of their plan include the paving of Lake Shore avenue, past Echo Park, making a beautiful driveway into the San Fernando Valley, to Edendale, Tropico and Glendale, the paving of Alvarado street, north, paving of New High street and many other streets and avenues north of First street.

Palms and beautiful shade trees will be planted along these boulevards. It is proposed to make the parkways and lawns, bordering on driveways, as typical of the tropics as possible.

The association has not stopped with the residence district, but has entered upon a campaign to induce the merchants of business streets to keep their sidewalks clean. This clean-up extends as far as Alameda street, and an ordinance is being framed to take in East First street as far as the viaduct.

WOMEN'S CLUBS.

The Ebell Club will hold its annual reception in commemoration of Charter Day tomorrow afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock. Mrs. Willitts J. Hole, president, assisted by the board of directors, will receive the club members and their guests, and the newly-elected officers will be presented.

Song Recital.

Friday Morning Club members enjoyed a delightful song recital, given by Mrs. Mary LeGrand Reed Friday forenoon at the clubhouse. Mrs. Reed is charming and winsome in personality, as well as the possessor of a wonderful voice. Although the programme she arranged was generous, calling for over a dozen songs, Mrs. Reed graciously responded to the applause given with several encores. Mrs. Reed studied with Mme. Marchesi and Sir George Pouer in London, and with Jean de Reszke in Paris. She made her début at the home of the Duchess of Somerset, in London, and for the last two seasons she has been soprano for Damrosche, Emil Paur and Victor Herbert. The beauty and charm of Mrs. Reed's song recital was accented by the perfect accompanying of Miss Mary O'Donoughue.

The annual tea of the Friday Morning Club will be served Tuesday. Mrs. O. P. Clark, the president, and the board of directors will receive.

Under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Hooper-avenue school, a reading by Miss Mildred Gillum will be given Monday evening at Akey's Hall, Vermont and Central avenues. The proceeds are to be devoted to the Children's Hospital.

Shakespearean Section Meets.

The Shakespeare section of the Cosmos Club met Thursday at the Ebell Clubhouse. The feature was an address by Mrs. H. C. Gower on "Grecian Drama." The meeting next Wednesday will be an interesting one, characterized "A Musical Afternoon," in charge of Bruce Gordon Kingsley. An interpretation and illustration of the legend of Tannhausser will be the offering.

Daughters of Veterans Entertain.

Jessie Benton Fremont Tent No. 4, Daughters of Veterans, entertained Thursday evening with a box social at the home of Dr. C. E. Case, No. 2346 Thompson street. The daughters are busy preparing with other patriotic organizations for tag day, next Saturday. An effort will be made to raise a fund sufficient to build a memorial hall to the members of the Grand Army. In addition to this the Daughters and Sons of Veterans, and the auxiliary organizations are preparing for a minstrel show, which will be given at Blanchard Hall Tuesday evening, November 9. The proceeds will also be devoted to the memorial hall fund.

Guest of Local Organization.

Mrs. J. H. Moore of Detroit, Mich., grand president of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Order of Railway Conductors, is the guest of the local organization. Mrs. Moore was tendered a reception during the week at the Walker Theater by the three divisions of the local order, and on Friday was tendered a banquet by Division 111. Mrs. Moore's visit to Los Angeles is for the purpose of instructing members of the auxiliary in lodge work.

Reception to Alumnae and Club.

Complimentary to the Alumnae Association and Marlborough Club, a reception was tendered by Mrs. George Caswell yesterday afternoon from 2:30 to 4 o'clock at Marlborough School. The Japanese decorations for the reception were especially beautiful and effective, the lanterns being brought from Japan by Mrs. Caswell, who has just returned from a vacation spent there.

Mrs. Caswell was assisted in receiving yesterday by Mrs. Eugene Overton, Miss Lindley and Miss Grace Walsh.

CON CHILI.

GUERRERO LOVES PANTOMIMES.

EVEN THOUGH PORTLAND POLICE SAID "TOO MUCHA!"

Famous Dancer Has no Ambition to Appear in the Spoken Drama, and Has Played a Silent Carmen Before England's King—Large Linguistic Difficulties.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

Interviewing the famous La Rosario Guerrero—who is famous, notwithstanding the fact that she seems to "slump" her act considerably nowadays, perhaps from personal weariness or managerial fear of shocks in front—is a good deal like having a long-distance telephone conversation through a relay of operators, all of whom speak different languages.

Guerrero is Spanish, but she says she doesn't get on well with the Castilian hurled around Mexico and Southern California.

Therefore, my interpreter was little M. Emile Girard, who has lived in so many countries that he can speak all tongues, singly or two or three in the same breath. Girard habitually stands between Manager Drown and the foreign celebrities who illumine the Orpheum stage from time to time. He has become so used to picturesque kicks and flamboyant vituperation that a kind word really makes him sad.

I think Guerrero is an Andalusian. In fact, I know it. She told me so—via the linguistic kaleidoscope.

She has liquid eyes—liquid of the Kentucky forty-rod description—a voluptuous figure and a very thin kimono.

When Gale and I entered her dressing-room Guerrero was bursting through the kimono, and paling her lips by putting rouge on them.

I had meditated a discussion of pantomime, but I experienced some difficulty in putting my queries through the question-transfer route.

Our coversation was slow, and it was slow for this reason: Girard has a sort of alchemical mind. He thinks in French. Shoot a question at him in English, and by the time it reaches his brain, it has turned into choice Parisian—and the next moment it is issuing from his lips in the still further form of any language you desire.

This is a wonderful transformation faculty. If, for instance, Providence had withheld the gift of tongues and had bestowed the power to change brass bricks into gold—I should have had to find another interpreter. Also one of the Bryan platforms would have been a joke.

However, I finally sent this question over the road: "Are American audiences appreciative of pantomime?"

"Oh, no mucho!" responded La Guerrero, instantly. I got that, of course, but the translative stamp mill was already grinding in Girard's mind, and I had to wait for the process to exhaust itself.

"En petite!" said he, presently.

There was another garbling between my star and her official voice, and—"She means indifferently," added Girard.

"Americans do not understand the pantomimic art as do Europeans. They want words, more words—much words!

"In Europe, madam has often given full plays without a single sentence being spoken, and she has several times performed in opera that way. Before King Edward VII she thus presented Bizet's 'Carmen.'"

I told madam that we had had a few voiceless Carmens out here. But she didn't get me.

She was, in fact, reaching into a talcum—dusty jewel box, from which she drew a magnificent pair of pigeon-blood ear-rings. Surely no ear could be insulted by any word if it were wearing such an ornament.

Gabble.

"From the Czarina, St. Petersburg. A private soiree."

M. Emile's whisper was properly impressive.

"Ask her," I said at length, "if her present dance is typically Spanish."

She shrugged her shoulders as the query shot out of the far terminal of my subway.

"No! No!" she viciferated vigorously. And through the interpreter I understood that while she has at her finger—toe tips, I mean—all the typically Spanish dances, she was cruelly warned by the Portland police to abate.

Like Mariutch, she must "mova de feet."

The fire and voluptuosity being jarred out of her work in that cold northern city, I was given to understand that she lost interest in life there. In fact, the insult caused her to gasp out a few words in the real dialectic. "Polis say no. Too mucha dis—too mucha dat"—eloquent gesturing—"Too mucha. But I no care. I no go back."

"Next week," added the translator, "she says she will dance a typical Gypsy dance, 'Tsigane.' She would dance the famous 'La Jota,' but it requires an equal partner, and the Italian artist with her does not know the step."

"Where has she presented these pantomimes?" I asked.

"Todo el mundo!" she ejaculated, in answer to Girard's question.

"Tout le Monde—all over the world," echoed Girard. Further remarks upon his part were interrupted by Guerrero, talking large and loosely. Girard caught enough to tell me that she had danced in every country save South America, and that her act had been presented before King Alfonso, for whom she has a great affection and reverence.

At this, I had Girard ask her if she considered Alfonso's job very solid at present.

"She says she never goes home any more, so how can she know anything of politics in her own country?" said Girard, translating six eye rolls and a yard of shrugging.

"Tell her to twist her neck!" broke in Gale, very un-Latinly.

The Guerrero cheek flushed, and she muttered two pouts and a hiss to Girard.

"Ha! ha!" he laughed. "She thought the artist told her she would 'get it in the neck.' That's all she heard in Portland."

After the real meaning was conveyed, and the neck twisted as requested, I asked if she had any ambition toward the regular drama, with spoken words.

"She does not. She speaks French, but not well; English, not at all, except in cheap expressions that she is ashamed to use. Too few people understand Spanish."

The services at this point were interrupted by a dark-faced maid, with a slow clock and fast gestures.

Girard arose. "She says the act is near, and that——" Girard ended in a movement indicating that there might be Venusian revelations if he didn't decamp.

Gale arose, stuffing his sketches in his pocket.

I had nothing to say, because, after all, I had merely been stalling for Gale

The three of us exited left first entrance.

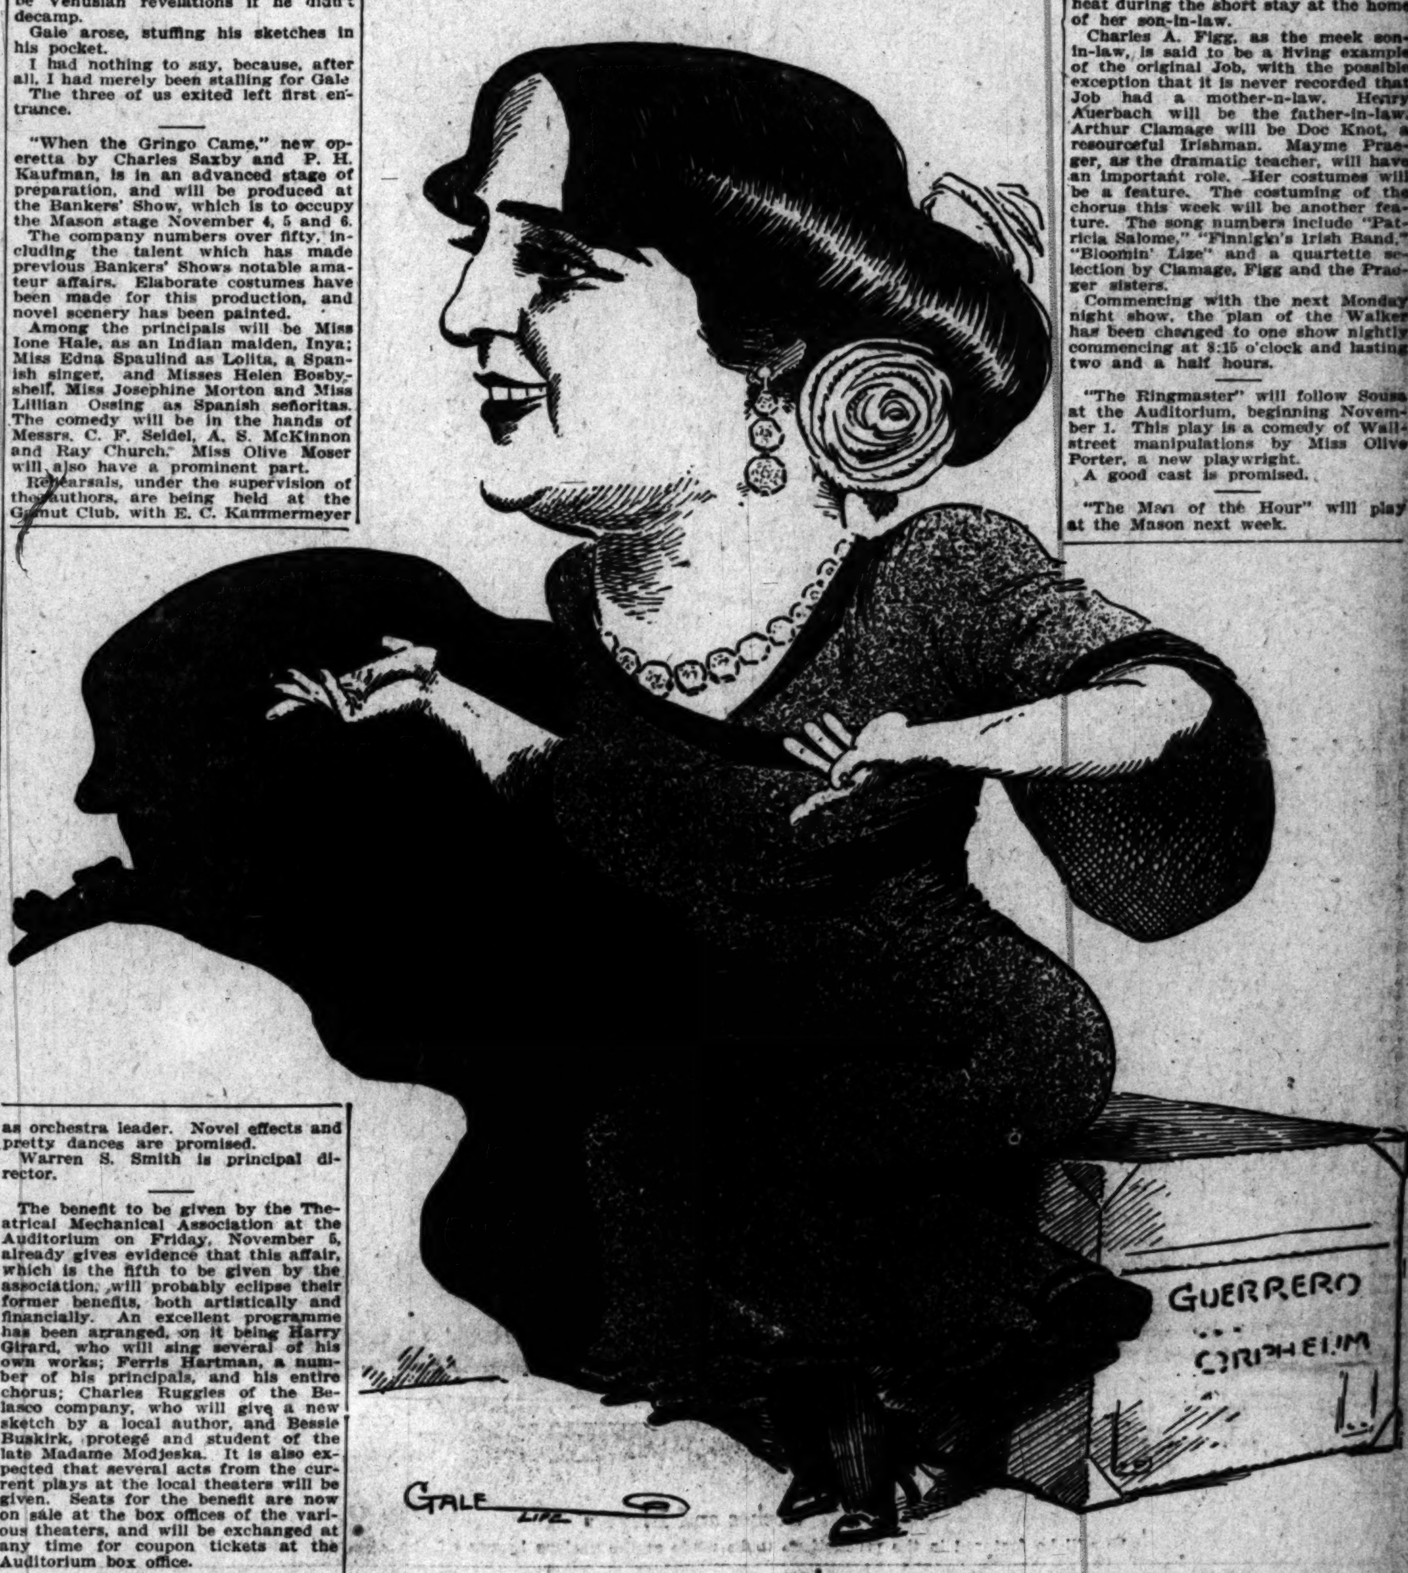
"When the Gringo Came," new operetta by Charles Saxby and P. H. Kaufman, is in an advanced stage of preparation, and will be produced at the Bankers' Show, which is to occupy the Mason stage November 4, 5 and 6.

The company numbers over fifty, including the talent which has made previous Bankers' Shows notable amateur affairs. Elaborate costumes have been made for this production, and novel scenery has been painted.

Among the principals will be Miss Ione Hale, as an Indian maiden, Inya; Miss Edna Spaulind as Lolita, a Spanish singer, and Misses Helen Bosbyshelf, Miss Josephine Morton and Miss Lillian Ossing as Spanish señoritas. The comedy will be in the hands of Messrs. C. F. Seidel, A. S. McKinnon and Ray Church. Miss Olive Moser will also have a prominent part.

Rehearsals, under the supervision of the authors, are being held at the Gamut Club, with E. C. Kammermeyer as orchestra leader. Novel effects and pretty dances are promised.

Warren S. Smith is principal director.



La Guerrero,
who really doesn't need to make up, and who says that she prefers to act whole plays in pantomime, whenever possible.

The benefit to be given by the Theatrical Mechanical Association at the Auditorium on Friday, November 5, already gives evidence that this affair, which is the fifth to be given by the association, will probably eclipse their former benefits, both artistically and financially. An excellent programme has been arranged, on it being Harry Girard, who will sing several of his own works; Ferris Hartman, a number of his principals, and his entire chorus; Charles Ruggles of the Belasco company, who will give a new sketch by a local author, and Bessie Buskirk, protegé and student of the late Madame Modjeska. It is also expected that several acts from the current plays at the local theaters will be given. Seats for the benefit are now on sale at the box offices of the various theaters, and will be exchanged at any time for coupon tickets at the Auditorium box office.

"The Traveling Salesman," James Forbes's comedy, will be seen at the Mason for the week beginning tomorrow night. It is a comedy of character and is distinguished by an abundance of wholesome humor, energetic action, breezy dialogue and sympathetic touches of emotion.

Mark Smith will be seen in the role of Bob Blake, jovial "knight of the road," who finds the romance of his life in the Grand Crossing railroad station, where he has been marooned on a cheerless Christmas Day.

Miss Miriam Nesbitt will appear in the part of the sympathetic operator and ticket agent, who shares her meager Christmas lunch with the persuasive stranger, and presently finds her heart enmeshed in the tendrils of his love.

The first act is a characterization of daily occurrences in a typical "tank" town.

The story of "The Traveling Salesman" is simple and to the point. Beth Elliott is about to lose an apparently worthless piece of land through a tax sale. A professed lover, Franklyn Royce, enters into a plan with a millionaire sharper to buy it in, knowing that the railroad wants it and will pay any price to acquire it. During a poker game in the second act, which incidentally is most laughable, Royce becomes intoxicated and babbles about the scheme to Blake, who is already head over heels in love with the girl. Blake anticipates the intended flank movement of the enemy and plans to block it. This impetuous action on his part involves him in all sorts of predicaments, and imperils his position with his firm. His motive is misconstrued by the girl, and for a while his affair of the heart is in danger, although before the final curtain falls everything is straightened out and the pair are happily married.

Lewis S. Stone and the Belasco company will this week make use of George Ade's "The County Chairman," with Mr. Stone in the role of Jim Hackler, the central figure of the play.

Howard Scott will be seen in the role of Sasafras Livingston, a darky, who was aptly described by Mr. Ade as "a touch of local color." Mr. Giblyn, Mr. Camp, Mr. Ruggles, Mr. Vivian, Mr. Applebee, Mr. Freeman and the other men of the Belasco organization will be found in roles of congenial sort, while Thais Magrane, Adele Farrington and Ida Lewis will contribute their usual work.

The production of "The County Chairman" will serve to introduce Miss Beth Taylor, the new ingenue of the Belasco company. Miss Taylor is a beautiful young actress, who comes to California with the prestige of four seasons of successful engagements in the East.

Following "The County Chairman," the Belasco will present for the first time in the West, Arnold Daly's artistic success, "The Regeneration," with Mr. Stone in the role created by Mr. Daly.

Oliver Morosco announces "The Silver Girl" for presentation at the Burbank Theater today. The play has never been seen in Los Angeles. It is by Edward Peple, author of "The Prince Chap," which was presented at the Burbank a few months ago.

In its original production in New York, "The Silver Girl" enlisted the services of George Fawcett and Lillian Albertson. Moreover, it marked the turning point in the careers of both players, making Fawcett a star and making Miss Albertson's reputation in the East, so that subsequently she was chosen to create the part of the wife in Eugene Walter's "Paid In Full." All of which is important only so far as it goes to prove that "The Silver Girl" will provide at least two members of the Burbank company with exceptionally strong acting opportunities.

"The Silver Girl" is a mine, not a young woman. The play is presented in four acts, the first three of which transpire in New York City, while the scene of the last is a mining claim in the West. Its central figure is Jefferson Hunter, who goes to New York with millions won in the West, taking his family with him. Gradually he and his wife drift apart, until finally Hunter's millions, supposedly lost in speculation, the wife plans to elope with a polished man of the world who has turned her pretty but silly head by his flattery. The husband intercepts them, drives his wife from the house and fights a duel with the man, who shoots first, missing, whereupon Hunter cries:

"Man, man, why didn't you shoot straight?"

At the Burbank, A. Byron Beasley will play Jefferson Hunter. Miss Blanche Hall will be seen as Julia Raymond, the character created by Miss Albertson, and Lovell Alice Taylor, as Hunter's erring wife. Others in the cast will include Harry Mestayer, Henry Stockbridge, David M. Hartford, Willis Marks, John W. Burton, Frederick Gilbert, Wayland Trask and Margo Duffet.

"The Girl Question" will begin its week's engagement at the Majestic Theater tonight.

The principal role is in the hands of John L. Kearney, whose portrayal of the part of Con Ryan won him recognition for his clever conception of that character. As manager of the restaurant, Con has ample opportunities for displaying his natural Irish wit. Con is in love (or thinks he is) with his pretty cashier, Elsie Davs, played by Miss Dorothy Maynard, who is a very handsome young woman who does not see any harm in indulging in a quiet, artistic flirtation. When she realizes that Con is serious, however, her true womanly instincts assert themselves and she tells him, in a very delicate manner, that "you haven't got a look-in with me, Con, so far as furnishing a happy, happy home."

There is a serious part in all this conglomeration of hilariousness and singing—that of "Joe Forster," the head waitress in this same restaurant with Con and Elsie Davis. She loves Con, and loves him very dearly.

There are thirty-two chorus girls in this production. The show this season is better staged.

George Ade's "The Sultan of Sulu" will be the second of the productions of Ferris Hartman and his company, opening at the Grand Operahouse this afternoon.

In the role of Ki-Ram, Sultan of Sulu, one of the chief islands of the Philippines, Hartman has a role that gives him unlimited opportunities for his style of tomfoolery. Mr. Hartman will sing the ballad, "Remorse," with its concluding lines, "There is no time for mirth and laughter on the cold, gray dawn of the morning after," which will give him opportunity to interpolate many verses with local application.

Josephine Islieb as Heinretta Budd will have several songs and will be heard in a duet with Oscar Walch as Lieut. Hardy in "The Message of the Red, Red Rose." Walter Catlett will this week play Hadji Tantung, private secretary to the Sultan, and Walter De Leon will be seen as Wakeful M. Jones, the insurance agent. Josie Hart will play the role of Pamela Francis Jackson, judge advocate, and "Muggins" Davis will be seen as Chiquita, wife number one. The Hartman chorus will be well to the front in a number of ensembles with numerous changes of costume.

Following "The Sultan of Sulu," Ferris Hartman will be seen in the first production by a stock organization of James T. Powers's "The Blue Moon."

Commencing Monday, Sullivan and Considine will offer a bill at the Los Angeles headed by Hall and Stark's "Miniature Minstrel Mimics," which was brought direct from New York to open the New Majestic Theater in Seattle three weeks ago. The minstrel show is made up of eighteen young singers and dancers and two girls, besides a musical director with the usual end men, bones and interlocutor. Besides the regular first part of a minstrel show they present imitations of famous minstrel stars, such as George Evans, Eddy Leonard, Julian Eltinge, George Primrose and Lew Dockstader.

Another feature on the new bill will be the appearance of Bothwell Browne, female impersonator. With his company of four, Mr. Browne will present a travesty on Cleopatra, during which he will introduce "The Live Snake Dance." The act carries elaborate stage settings, light effects and many costumes.

Blanche Sloan, sister of Tod Sloan, will appear in a gymnastic exhibition, while much of the comedy and music on the new bill will be furnished by Johan and Matt. Completing the bill will be Mondane Phillips and Will Morrisey, college boy comedian.

Entertaining Edna Aug will be the Orpheum's head-liner tomorrow, in a series of her portraitures, "Types." Miss Aug has not been out this way for a good while, but her "Stupid Scrubwoman" is well remembered. Since her last visit, Miss Aug has been abroad, and she brings back on this occasion not only gowns, but many new eccentricities.

Another act which will be welcomed is the "Big City Quartette," who come next week on their annual tour. These young chaps, Messrs. Rover, Reed, Emerson and Bates, were here a year ago, and their personalities, bright songs, and manners set them apart from similar organizations. They appear in conventional attire, with no comedian in atrocious make-up.

Henry Clive announces that he is an "entertainer." With the aid of Mai Sturges Walker, he does a bit of burlesque with his so-called "magic," he being not a real magician at all. He also does some sleight-of-hand on the same order.

Les Myosotis are two premier dancers, brought over from the Grand Opera, Munich, by Martin Beck. They will illustrate that almost-forgotten art on this side—true ballet dancing. Both are young, pretty and skillful.

Rosario Guerrero and her pantomime stay another week; so do Murray and Mack, Tom Waters and Spaulding and Riego.

The machinations of a mother-in-law are often provocative of laughter when they are hatched and bred upon the stage, and that is why Allen Curtis is producing at the Walker this week, "My Wife's Family." It has an irrepressible, suffragist mother-in-law as a principal, in the person of Annie Bauman. She contrives the plot, keeps it alive and has the final hand in its execution. She makes things lively for those who cross her pathway and she keeps the temperature at boiling heat during the short stay at the home of her son-in-law.

Charles A. Figg, as the meek son-in-law, is said to be a living example of the original Job, with the possible exception that it is never recorded that Job had a mother-n-law. Henry Auerbach will be the father-in-law. Arthur Clamage will be Doc Knot, a resourceful Irishman. Mayme Praeger, as the dramatic teacher, will have an important role. Her costumes will be a feature. The costuming of the chorus this week will be another feature. The song numbers include "Patricia Salome," "Finnigin's Irish Band," "Bloomin' Lize" and a quartette selection by Clamage, Figg and the Praeger sisters.

Commencing with the next Monday night show, the plan of the Walker has been changed to one show nightly commencing at 8:15 o'clock and lasting two and a half hours.

"The Ringmaster" will follow Sousa at the Auditorium, beginning November 1. This play is a comedy of Wall-street manipulations by Miss Olive Porter, a new playwright.

A good cast is promised.

"The Man of the Hour" will play at the Mason next week.

In the Spotlight.

"After the Deluge" is the title of the new play to be written by Henri Bernstein for the Comedie Francaise. It will be produced in this country.

Edmund Breese's venture into stellar regions will take place in Chicago November 7, "The Earth" being the terrestrial vehicle for celestial flights.

Henry Arthur Jones has written a one-act play for London's leading variety theater, the Palace, and an American moving-picture man has put Browning's "Pippa Passes" on his latest films.

William Gillett's idleness is said to be palling upon him. When a friend asked him the other day how he was enjoying his rest he said that he was tired of being retired.

Nat Goodwin isn't much of a financier. From Paris he writes a letter scorning the offer of a vaudeville house of $3000 a week in exchange for "Lend Me Five Shillings" ten weeks.

Klaw & Erlanger now announce that Laura Nelson Hall will be seen in "Through a Window." This was the play in which it was hoped that the public would get a glimpse of Lillian Albertson as a star, Miss Albertson having distinguished herself in "Paid in Full."

The story of "Chanticleer," Rostand's new drama, in which Guitry will take the part that Coquelin would have played had he lived, is to be kept secret from the public until the first performance. Actors, stage hands and all concerned are bound not to divulge any particulars.

Arnold Daly will appear this season in Paul Hervieu's play, "Know Thyself." Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson have been commissioned to write a play which Mr. Daly will present after he has finished with the Hervieu play.

It transpires that the late Clyde Fitch had made the preliminary sketches of a play for Miss Maude Adams, the chief figure in which was to be that son of Louis XVI, who was imprisoned in the Temple during the French revolution and whose subsequent fate has vexed history, fed legend and busied conjecture.

The Shubert management proffers the following statement and query: "Encouraged by the success of his one serious scene in 'The Girl and the Wizard,' 'Sam' Bernard is ambitious to forsake musical comedy and play only straight parts. What will musical comedy be without Sam Bernard?" It might also be asked what "Sam" Bernard will be without musical comedy?

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

Sousa and his band will occupy the Auditorium during the entire coming week, under the local management of the Fitzgerald company, and without any doubt at all a very large public interest will be manifested through the whole series of concerts.

Sousa occupies an individual place in American music life, a place which he has won through a score of years of ceaseless endeavor. Not a colossal interpretative genius, nor yet a great composer, he has established his foremost position by a steadily-maintained American band of reliable caliber, by honest, conscientious presentation of the best in art according to his ideals, and by a happy faculty for the creation of highly original popular and descriptive music.

Sousa was one of the earliest directors to introduce the real classic into the programme of the military band. Wagner, the German symphonists and the masters of France and Italy he has interpreted from year to year—if not with positive brilliance, at least with generally good effect.

Sousa represents the triumph of "constantly keeping at it." As an educator, even the ultra-particular judge must accord him a place; his station as an entertainer is conceded by the whole civilized world. I believe this is Sousa's thirty-sixth semi-annual tour.

The Sousa band is the most famous band in the world. It is well managed. Its personnel is clean, and there is a professional and business-like air about it, as there is about any Sousa venture.

It numbers fifty men. Chief of the soloists within the band is Herbert L. Clarke, one of the first living cornet virtuosi. Mr. Clarke is and has been for many seasons assistant director.

Other soloists are Misses Frances and Grace Hoyt, vocalists, and Miss Florence Hardeman, violinist.

Mr. Sousa's opening concert, tomorrow afternoon, is expected to have a large attendance of school children, for whom arrangements have been made.

His programme will include Predotte's "All in Mask" overture, a cornet solo by Mr. Clarke, Sousa's own "Looking Upward" suite, Bizet's "The Women of Arles" intermezzo, variations on a German folk-song, Lincke's "The Glowworm," Chabrier's "Rhapsody Espagnole," and solos by the Misses Hoyt and Mis Hardeman.

The evening programme is of somewhat more serious caliber, and bears out Sousa's reputation for constantly presenting new material. It will include Goldmark's "Showers of Spring" overture, a new solo by Mr. Clarke, a duet by the Misses Hoyt, Rachmaninoff's prelude to "Crime and Punishment," the Allegro from Tschaikowsky's Foruth Symphony, a solo by Miss Hardeman, Friedman's Slavonic Rhapsody, and Sousa's new march, "The Glory of the Yankee Navy," and his new suite, "People Who Live in Glass Houses," the four parts of which are quaintly named "The Champagnes," "The Rhine Wines," "The Whiskies" and "The Cordials."

Miss Minnie Jenkins will give an organ recital at the First United Presbyterian Church, corner of Ninth and Figueroa streets, next Thursday evening.

She will be assisted by R. D. Evans, basso.

Miss Marie Elliott of No. 316 East Colorado street, Pasadena, proposes to give interpretative lectures on the symphony programme this year, and as well to define, in an interesting and not too technical manner, the instruments of the modern orchestra.

She gave an entertaining talk recently, at the home of Mrs. F. W. Hawkes, San Pasquale street, on "The Flute Family." She was assisted by Mrs. Beatrice Hubbell Plummer and Miss Elfreda Peycke.

If interest warrants, as there is every present indication, Miss Elliott will begin her lectures November 15 or thereabouts.

Our indefatigable promulgator of organ concerts, Mr. Kingsley, is about to undertake a new interpretative campaign, at the Auditorium.

The first of his series will be given on Friday afternoon, November 12—the first of a series of five.

First soloists will be Messrs. Roland Paul and Harry Girard, also Violinist Oskar Seiling, and Miss Helen Louise Davis and Mrs. W. J. Kirkpatrick, soprani.

Mr. Kingsley's programmes will include operatic and other master-selections. His talks upon Wagnerian subjects in the past have proven exceptionally interesting.

That Los Angeles is a musical center will certainly remain undisputed after glancing at the present arrangement of dates taken at the various halls in this city:

On Novermber 9 the Ellis Club will give its opening concert of the season, the first of four events, at Simpson's Auditorium, with Mrs. Mary LeGrand Reed as soloist.

At the Auditorium, November 10, 11, 12 and 13, with a Saturday matinée, will be given the extravaganza, "Prof. Napoleon."

Thursday, November 11, at the Gamut Club auditorium, Jules Koopman, violinist, from Hempstead, Eng., and Maurice Koopman, 'cellist, from London, both members of the London Philharmonic Orchestra, with Mrs. Harry Lott at the piano and Harry Lott, baritone soloist, will be heard in a reception recital.

On Thursday evening, November 18, at Simpson Auditorium, the first of the six events constituting the Philharmonic course will open with Mme. Jeanne Jomeli, dramatic soprano, dividing the honors with Miss Marie Nichols, violinist, and Miss Magdalene Worden, pianist.

On Friday afternoon, November 19, at Temple Auditorium, the first of the six concerts constituting the Symphony series will be given by the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Harley Hamilton.

Tuesday, November 23, at Simpson Auditorium, Mrs. Bertha Baruch will present a musical lecture, on "The Ministry of Music," assisted by Mrs. Vaughan, soprano, in interpretative songs; William Edson Strowbridge at the piano.

On Tuesday evening, November 30, at Simpson Auditorium, the second event of the Philharmonic course will introduce for the first time in this city George Hamlin, tenor.

On Thursday, December 2, at Simpson's, the first concert of the three of the season, to be given by the Los Angeles Center of the American Music Society, will present a programme of American composers, introducing a number of our local composers, as well as numbers by Chadwick, MacDowell, Arthur Foote and Horatio Parker, all given by local instrumentalists and vocalists.

On Friday, December 3, at Simpson Auditorium, will be heard for the first time on the Pacific Coast, Dr. Ludwig Wullner, the celebrated lieder singer of Berlin.

The general sale of Philharmonic course tickets will commence at the Bartlett music house tomorrow morning. This course will be opened by Mme. Jeanne Jomelli, at Simpson Auditorium, on the evening of November 18.

The Monday Musicale will be in its seventeenth year with a programme of new compositions on the afternoon of November 1, at the residence of Mrs. L. F. Doolittle, No. 1621 Orange street. Mmes. G. S. Marygold, Mary Schallert, Henry Green and Miss Aileen Northrup will be among the musicians contributing to the programme.

A Yiddish opera company is due to appear at the Gamut Auditorium this evening, presenting a four-act music-drama of the characteristic sort.

Misses Grace and Frances Hoyt
Herbert L. Clark
Miss Florence Hardeman

Sousa Solists,
to be heard at the Auditorium in the twelve concerts scheduled for this week. Herbert L. Clark is one of the world's foremost cornetists. Misses Grace and Frances Hoyt, vocalists, and Miss Florence Hardeman, violinist, have been heard throughout this season's tour.

DUDLEY BUCK.

Late Composer Splendid Example of Progressive American Artist.

In the death on October 5 of Dudley Buck, America lost one of its most eminent organists and composers, whose career of fame began when an "American school" of music was still unthought of. An ardent worker throughout his long and busy life, says Musical America, Mr. Buck's compositions were many and of varied description, and were included on concert and choral programmes oftener, perhaps, than those of any other American composer. Death occurred suddenly at the home in West Orange, N. J., of his son, Dudley Buck, Jr., the violinist. The composer was born at Hartford, Ct., March 10, 1839, and celebrated his seventieth birthday last spring in Dresden. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Mary E. Van Wagner, and to whom he was married in 1865 at Hartford; two sons, Dr. Edward T. Buck of Indianapolis, Ind., and Dudley Buck, Jr., who has a studio in Carnegie Hall, and one daughter, Mrs. Francis Blossom of Orange, N. J.

Buck's father was a shipping merchant, and planned a similar career for his son. One day a youthful schoolfellow lent Dudley a flute. There is a legend that the boy musician's thoughtfulness for others ran to the extreme of doing his practice on the flute high up on the branch of a cherry tree, so that his first false notes would not annoy the family as much as they annoyed himself. Evidently he progressed rapidly, for on his twelfth birthday he got a flute of his own as a present. Later he was given a melodeon, upon which he practised the masses of Mozart and Haydn and Handel's choruses.

The piano that came to him when he was sixteen drove from the boy's head any last thoughts he may have had of shipping and accounts. A music teacher in Hartford named Babcock took Dudley in charge then to give him his first lessons. About this time he entered Trinity College, Hartford, and soon afterward took up his studies as organist of St. John's Episcopal Church, Hartford.

It was evident to his parents by this time that the youth's life work was music, and they determined that his training should be of the best. Wherefore he was taken out of Trinity in his junior year and sent to the Leipsic Conservatory when 19 years old. There he met as fellow-students Sir Arthur Sullivan, Carl Rosa, John Francis Barnett, S. B. Mills, Madeline Schiller, after whom he named his daughter, and others who later became famous.

Mr. Buck's early teachers included Moritz Hauptman in harmony and Ernst Friedrich Rietz, friend of Mendelssohn, instructed him in orchestration, and his piano instructions were directed by Moscheles and Plaidy. The student later went to Dresden to study the organ under the noted organist, Johann Gottlob Schneider. About the same time Dr. Rietz, his old instructor at Leipsic, moved to Dresden and continued to watch over the young American's musical training. After his three years of German training Mr. Buck (characteristically modest, he never wanted to be called Dr. Buck) studied for a year in Paris.

He returned to America in 1862, and after the death of his parents went to Chicago as organist, composer and teacher. The Chicago fire destroyed his effects, including the manuscripts of several unfinished compositions. After the fire Mr. Buck went to Boston as organist of St. Paul's Church there. Later he became organist of Boston's Music Hall, the highest honor a Boston musician could attain at that time.

While he was adding to his reputation in Boston he attracted the attention of the late Theodore Thomas, who was then conducting the concerts at the Central Park Garden in this city. Mr. Thomas in 1875 invited Mr. Buck to become his assistant conductor. The young composer accepted, but not until he had first gone to Cincinnati as organist of the May festival.

Mr. Buck's fame became international when he was invited to compose the cantata for the opening of the Centennial Exposition. He took Sidney Lanier's poem, "The Centennial Meditation of Columbia," and set it to music. Upon the opening of the exposition Mr. Thomas mounted the platform before a chorus of 800 and an orchestra of 150 and conducted the work. Public, musicians and critics praised the cantata highly, and Mr. Buck's fame was established.

Harry Scheeline of San Francisco will stand with the groom.

Winter Plans.

Mrs. Dwight Hart will be one of the interesting hostesses this winter, and many informal evenings will be enjoyed in her apartments. This week Mrs. Hart will be among the guests at a large bridge party to be given by Mrs. Ralph Hagan at her home on Lake street.

PAST EVENTS.

In the presence of immediate relatives only Miss Frances Shields, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry K. Shields of No. 815 Green street, was married Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the family home, to Ralph Pelton Edwards, only son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Edwards. Dr. Charles Edward Locke, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church performed the ceremony. The news will be read with interest by friends of the young people, as an elaborate wedding after the holidays was the previous arrangements. The bride is daintily pretty. She is a graduate of the Girls' Collegiate School, and wealthy in her own right. She is a niece of the late William Ziegler, the New York baking powder king. Mr. Edwards is well known and popular among his many friends. He is associated in business with his father. Miss Shields wore a navy blue imported broadcloth tailored suit, with a large velvet hat to match. With this she wore a handsome set of mink furs, and carried an arm bouquet of long stemmed chrysanthemums. Her only ornament was a crescent of pearls and sapphires. The wedding trip will include stops at Del Monte, San Francisco, Sacramento and other northern points. Among the gifts was a chest of silver from the groom's parents, and a check for $6000 from the bride's father and mother.

Tuesday Wedding.

At the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Ervin of No. 240 West Fifty-second street, occurred the wedding Tuesday evening of Miss Rhea Estelle Ervin to Fritz W. Flack. Miss Mae Ervin, sister of the bride, assisted as maid, and Fred Espe, Jr., stood with the groom. Rev. C. V. La Fontaine was the officiating minister. The bride wore a gown of pale gray material and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mr. and Mrs. Flack will make their home in Fresno at the conclusion of their wedding trip.

Off for the North.

Miss Rose Cohen of No. 1232 South Grand avenue left Tuesday for San Francisco, where she will visit friends and relatives.

Shamrock Shower.

"Showering the bride" was the feature of an enjoyable afternoon given Wednesday by Mrs. Theodore M. Bulson, No. 440 Avenue 53, Highland Park, in honor of Miss Fern Nicoll Gordon, whose marriage to Gardener Wheeler will take place tomorrow. It was a kitchen shower of the lovely shamrock ware. The cobblestones of the big fireplace in the Bulson living-room were half hidden by trailing green vines and maidenhair ferns, making a background for wreaths and garlands of scarlet geraniums. In the center of the chimney place hung an old-fashioned "dinner pot." The other gifts were tastefully arranged about the fireplace in a way that would suggest their use or bring out their special attraction. After "A Flora Wooing," a game in which the

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever

DR. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S ORIENTAL CREAM OR MAGICAL BEAUTIFIER

PURIFIES as well as beautifies the skin. No other cosmetic will do it.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth Patches, Rash, and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of 60 years, and is so harmless we taste it to be sure it is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. Dr. L. A. Sayre said to a lady of the haut-ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the skin preparations." For sale by all druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers in the United States, Canada and Europe.

How to Nip a Cold or Cough in the Bud.

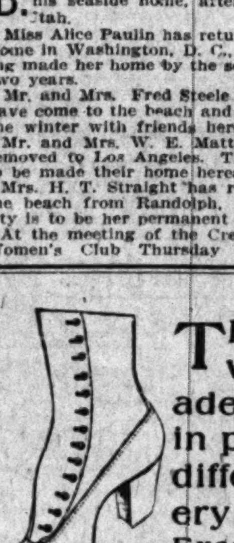
To let a cold or cough "wear itself out" is both needless and dangerous. If you will take five minutes and make up the simple remedy described below, you can wipe out a cold or cough as soon as it appears. Even deep-seated coughs yield to it very quickly. A whole pint of it costs only 54 cents, but there is no better remedy at any price.

Take a pint of Granulated Sugar, add ½ pint of warm water and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ozs. of Pinex in a pint bottle and fill up with the Sugar Syrup. This keeps perfectly and lasts a family a long time. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. The taste is pleasing.

Use the ingredients as given here. Granulated sugar makes the best syrup. None of the weaker pine preparations will take the place of the real Pinex itself, which is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway White Pine Extract. Your druggist has it or can easily order it for you.

This mixture is also excellent for whooping cough, bronchitis, chest pains, etc.

Strained honey can be used instead of the syrup, and makes a very fine honey and pine tar cough syrup.



Tailored Boot smart for street carriage or motor wear $6.00

THERE are some things which words seem inadequate to express. One in particular, is the subtile difference indicating Bootery smart shoes for women. Excellence of design, advance style ideas, beautiful fabrics, superiority of workmanship and value characterize all merchandise of this---a better shoe shop for women.

Oriental Rugs Sacrificed

Coming from a house of known integrity and established reputation—and at this time of the year when new fall stocks are complete—this is a most remarkable and rare Oriental Rug opportunity.

The frequency of "Oriental Rug Sales" of questionable sincerity in Los Angeles has caused us to hesitate somewhat in taking this step. But it is a matter of necessity. We must convert a part of our stock into actual cash at once, and to do so, we will offer our entire stock, including all our new fall importations at genuine, bona fide reductions—such as, we believe, have never been offered before by any reputable Los Angeles house. We quote here a few sample reductions merely to show you how every rug in our enormous stock is reduced.

$175 Mahal 8.6x12	$100	$120 Khiva-Bokhara 10x6.6	$65
$125 Iran 7x10.6	$68	$135 Antique Feraghan 10x5	$75

For the benefit of those who may not be familiar with this house and its standing—it must be distinctly understood that we do not deal in imitations. We have perhaps the most notable collection of rare specimens in genuine Oriental rugs in the West. Our buyer has just returned from Constantinople—and his purchases there make it all the more imperative that we reduce our present stock. If you have ever had your mind set on an Oriental rug—this is surely your opportunity—this week only.

GARMENT OFFERINGS

THAT WILL CREATE A STIR AT LANE'S ON MONDAY

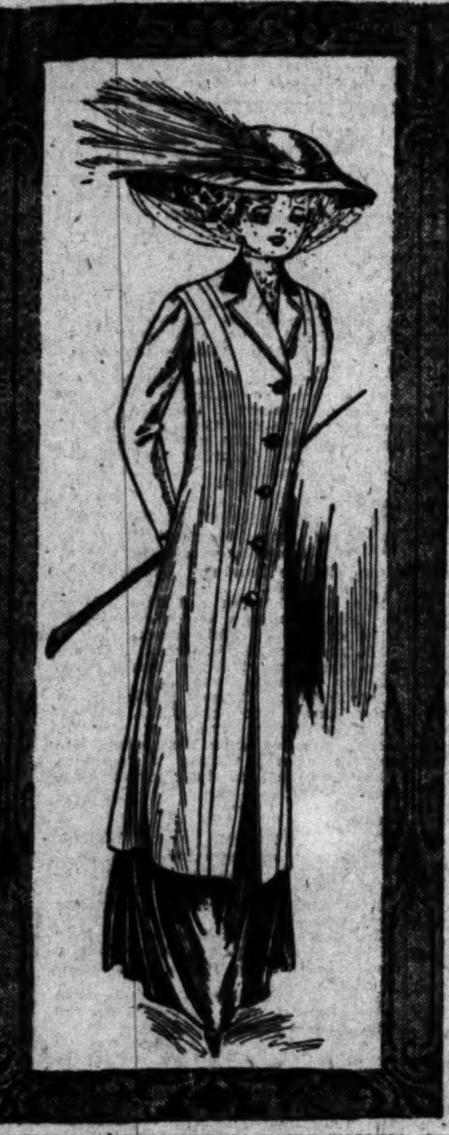
THE Suit Offering of the Season $22.50

Nothing short of a personal inspection of these splendid suits can give you the right idea of their value and genuine worth. We could call them $35.00, yet they were never marked that. Bought to make a special run at about $25.00 they will certainly accomplish the purpose. On Monday at $22.50.

Made of splendidly finished materials in black, smoke, navy and artichoke green. The coats are tight-fitting, 50-inch, lined throughout with guaranteed Skinner linings. The skirts are latest pleated Trotteur effects. The workmanship is very superior to the usual run of $25.00 garments and will go a long way in making this a most unusual offering at the price. $22.50 for Monday.

Broadcloth Coats $18.50

Black broadcloth coats; the stylish 52 and 54-inch coats, lined throughout with guaranteed satin. An ideal garment for street and general wear.



New Military Capes $10.00

Handsome broadcloth capes are now so much in demand that these two numbers will get more than usual welcome. We announce to a large number of patrons who have waited for these that they will be well repaid by the unusual value of either lot.

The $10.00 capes are of fine broadcloth in blue, black, red, tan or gray; 54 inches long and most effectively trimmed with large brass buttons. This cape can be worn plain or draped from shoulder. We've seen nothing to equal it at $10.00.

Military Capes $15.00

A favorite of the season; made of very finest chiffon broadcloth, trimmed with black silk frogs and brass buttons; finished with fatigue collar of gold braid. A wonderful value—$15.

Our Sweaters at $7.95

Are superior to most you'll find in this city. Here's the reason—they were purchased from a manufacturer who makes nothing but sweaters. Now most sweaters are made by underwear makers whose equipment consists of coarse needled underwear machines. The finer sweater machines make a closer knit garment, more elastic and less liable to shrink. At $7.95 we're showing the pony coat styles finished with two large pockets. Come in white, red, green, navy and gray.

An Alpine Picture.

Stand here and look, and softly hold your breath,
Lest the vast avalanche come crashing down.
How many miles away is yonder
town,
Set flower-wise in the valley? Far beneath—
A scimitar half-drawn from out its sheath—
The river curves through meadows newly mown;
The ancient water courses are all
strown
With drifts of snow, fantastic wreath on wreath;
And peak on peak against the turquoise blue,
The Alps like towering campanili stand,
Wondrous with pinnacles of frozen
rain,
Silvery, crystal, like the prism in hue.
Oh, tell me, Love, if this be Switzerland—
Or is it but the frost-work on the pane?

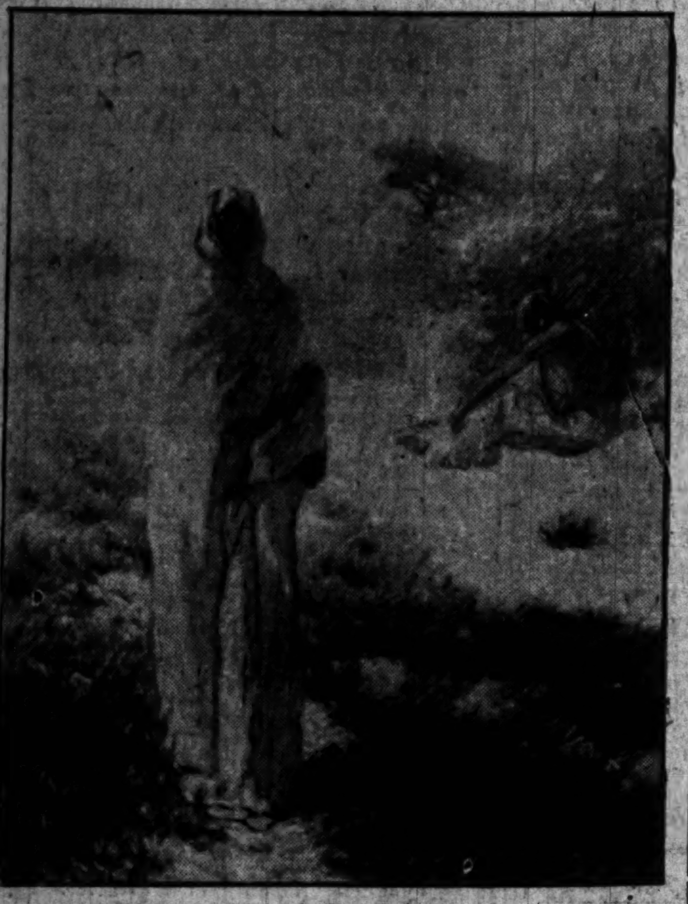
Pictures by Warren E. Rollins.

An exhibition of pictures by Warren E. Rollins opened at the Steckel gallery last Monday, to continue till the end of the month. Thirty-seven canvases are shown, studies of Indian and Mexican life, as well as a number of excellent landscapes.



Mystery Man.

From an oil painting by Warren E. Rollins. One of the thirty-six pictures that this painter is showing at the Steckel gallery. The exhibition will remain open till the end of the month.

Mr. Rollins is a Californian by adoption. He was born in Carson City, Nev., in 1861, and removed with his parents to California when he was 3 years old. He received his early art education under Virgil Williams, of the old School of Design, in San Francisco, and four years after his start he received the Avery gold medal for general excellence in painting. He was afterward appointed director of the school under Virgil Williams, and the late Thomas Hill.

In 1887, and continuously for the succeeding ten years, Mr. Rollins was one of the best marine painters on the Coast, having inherited a love for the sea from his forebears.

It was while in Boston, some years later, where he had gone in quest of further study, that the painter decided to throw aside all teachers, go back West, and work it out for himself. He began his study of Indian life among the Crows of Montana; also the Sioux and other tribes.

For the last seven years Mr. Rollins has devoted his life to the Pueblo tribes of the Southwest, living for two years at a time in the ancient pueblo of Oraibi, leading the life of the Indians, partaking of their food, occupying one of their houses on the mesa, thereby learning much of their history and traditions—information which he is now compiling and putting into book form with illustrations.

The Hopis are a peaceful, kindly people, as the very name itself implies. Their devotion to their religion is beautiful. All their ceremonies and dances are of prayerful earnestness. Last summer, in obedience to a call from a number of our eastern Indian painters—J. H. Sharp, Irving Couse and others—Mr. Rollins joined them at Taos, N. M., the present Mecca for artists in search of the ideal Indian. It was there that Mr. Rollins found most of his subjects, some of which he is now shewing us at the Steckel gallery. These pictures are only a small part of an exhibit which recently returned from Boston, where an exhibition was held in January. A goodly number of the paintings found appreciative purchasers among the art lovers of the New England city.

The artist's present home is at Arrowhead Springs. After painting some of the wonderful land. ipe bits to be found on every hand in Southern California, it is Mr. Rollins's intention to visit again the artists' paradise in Northern Arizona and New Mexico. His wife will accompany him on a trip to Europe in the autumn following the work in the Indian field. The painter intends to show his pictures in the Old World, and paint new ones there.

In all the Indain subjects he is now showing at the Steckel gallery Mr. Rollins gives evidence of a wide and sympathetic understanding and appreciation. He has painted the Hopis from the human viewpoint as well as from the artistic. The homely, every-day aspects of their life are given here, as well as the subtler, more complicated ones connected with their expression of religion. We have the "Hopi Snake Priest," "The Navajo," "The Arrowmaker," "The Breadmaker," "The Musician," "A Maiden of Taos"—all painted with the simplicity and directness that comes from absolute acquaintance with materials as well as subjects. In color, too, many of the paintings are very fine.

The largest, as well as the most beautiful of the paintings, is "Mystery Man," combining rare technical skill with an imaginative insight equally rare. The mystery of the medicine man's calling is shown in the very landscape in which he stands invoking the aid of the gods for the stricken youth bending over a waning fire in the background. The picture has a wonderful spiritual quality. The mystery man calling to his gods is as nobly august as was Abraham when appearing before his. For the things of the spirit are one, whether a man be red or white. The soul's need is expressed pretty much the same everywhere and at all times.

In the little group of "studies" made in Mexico and New Mexico, Mr. Rollins always shows a painter's true instinct. He has come upon the colorful and the picturesque, and has put them before us with happy ease. Not one of them is labored or overworked. Each—"Sunlit Wall," "Pueblo de Taos," "Portal," "Old Spanish Home," "In the Patio"—tells us of the particular beauty pertaining to itself, and no more. Restraint is one of the painter's strong virtues.

Mr. Rollins is markedly successful in his rendering of the subtleties of moonlight—as witness his "Prehistoric Ruin, Arizona," "Moonlight, Oraibi," "Moonlit Wall, New Mexico." The picture of Oraibi by moonlight is full of mystic beauty. Some of the artist's smaller landscapes, too, have much charm, "Autumn," "Gray Day," etc.

ART NOTES.

The Arroyo Guild gave an interesting Indian and Spanish pageant on the campus of the College of Fine Arts, Garvanza, on the evenings of Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of the past week. The Arroyo Guild, now housed in its spacious new quarters, is an association of expert workers in the applied arts. One of its main objects is to encourage a pure democratic art by making useful things that are beautiful and beautiful things that are useful. Its scope of work can be understood when it is asserted that the Guild will plan a house, on the purest architectural basis, will design the interior, and then build and equip it completely, with artistic harmony and pleasing effectiveness, so as to give its owner the maximum of pleasure and comfort. It would seem, therefore, that everything inspiration can suggest and loving toil produce for use in a house, comes within the scope of the workers of the Arroyo Guild.

Heinrich Rymer Schneider, a German sculptor, came from Brussels last week, with the intention of remaining in Los Angeles, whose climate and artistic possibilities appeal very strongly to him. Mr. Schneider, who is only 26 years old, has studied in Brussels, Paris and Florence. He is a member of the Royal Academy of Belgium, and was a pupil of Julian Dillens, the famous Belgian sculptor. Mr. Schneider won the Prix de Rome at the age of 19, and was sent for three years to Italy by the Belgian government. In 1908 he executed, in completion, a monument to Leo Errera, the Belgian botanist; this, a bronze eight feet high, is now in the Botanical Gardens at Brussels. In 1907 the Brussels Museum bought his Beethoven, a bust in marble, highly spoken of by European critics. In 1906, in the International Exhibition at Liege, he won the second prize in sculpture for his statue of David. Last February the Dublin Museum bought his bronze bust of a peasant, which was exhibited in the International Art Exhibition in London.

At the last meeting of the Painters' Club, held at the studio of Charles Rogers, Walker building, last Tuesday evening, thirty posters for the coming fall exhibit of the club were shown. These beautiful posters will be distributed over the city. After the exhibition, which will be held during the first two weeks n November, the posters will all be sold at auction at the Blanchard gallery.

Twenty ladies, members of the Ramblers' section of the Highland Park Ebell Club, met at the studios of William Wendt and Julia Bracken Wendt on Wednesday evening of last week. They spent an hour looking at the landscapes of Mr. Wendt, and another hour among the sculptures of Mrs. Wendt.

Elizabeth E. Burton of Santa Barbara, is holding an exhibit and sale of artistic leather and metal novelties in the Blanchard gallery. The exhibition will remain till the beginning of 1910. In the meantime, Mrs. Burton, whose originality in design is well known all over the country, will look about for a permanent arts-craft home in Los Angeles. It is her intention to remain here, with branches in Santa Barbara and other places.

On Thursday an exhibition of the beautiful colored mezzotints of F. G. Stevenson of London, opened at the Gould gallery on West Fifth street, to continue till the 29th. These mezzotints come to Los Angeles direct from London. After being shown here, they will go to San Francisco, Portland, Minneapolis, St. Paul, St. Louis, Boston, New York and Philadelphia. The mezzotints are from celebrated paintings (mostly portraits) by Hoppner, Lawrence, Boucher, VanDyke, Romney, Reynolds, Gainsborough, Moreland, etc.

The Palette Club held its first meeting for the season last Monday evening at the School of Art and Design. Florence Parker, a member of the club, who recently returned from a visit to the art galleries of Europe, gave a talk on the subject and showed over a hundred fine reproductions of the best pictures she had seen.

Hobart Bosworth, who spent some months in Ramona's country, recently returned to Los Angeles, bringing with him some excellent sketches. They are strong and simple, the best that have yet come from his brush.

Granville Redmond visited his Los Angeles friends last week, returning to Parkville, Monterey county, last Friday. A number of small but very good canvases from his brush are shown at the Kanst gallery.

An exhibition of the works of Ralph Davison Miller is now being held at the Kanst gallery, to continue till November 8. A few of the sunsets that this artist loves to paint are especially rich in color.

The Arts and Crafts Order Shop announces the opening of its rooms in the Copp building, No. 218 South Broadway.

An article entitled "Hanson Puthuff and His Work," with many illustrations, appears in the first number of the Arroyo Craftsman.

The opening lecture at the Blanchard gallery, to be given next Friday afternoon by Mr. Montgomery, will be on "Impressionism in Painting."

BITS OF VERSE.

Looking on the Bright Side.

A heart without a trace of guile,
A countenance with sun in it,
A merry song, a merry smile,
And quip with lots of fun in it.

Gloom, you know, is sure to come,
Pain, and all the rest of it;
I have known it—all have some—
Let us make the best of it.

Then keep ahead of all your care,
They're fools who walk abreast of it.
So give the fling to fell despair
And always make the best of it.
—[La Touche Hancock, in New York Sun.

Missions.

Ah! yes, we each have a mission in life,
Some a mission of joy, some a mission of strife,
Some are hoarding up gold, casting
love aside,
Some labor for art, and are satisfied.
But the one whose mission is love and cheer,
Whether skies be dark or skies be clear,
And he who lends a helping hand,
Serves a mission, welcomed in any land.
GERTRUDE ALLYN LONG.

The Lady of Dreams.

She leads me away, away, away—this wonderful Lady of Dreams,
And I follow content wherever she goes,
While odor of lily and breath of the rose
And beam of the firefly around us streams,
A star is bound on her high, white brow,
And it gleams thro' the smoke of her dusky hair,
The scarlet poppies around her bow
And bend and blush
In the still night hush
And nod and dream in the sleepy air.

She leads me away, away, away—and I follow the gleam of her gown,
Over the meadows wet with dew,
By dusky streamlets gliding thro'
Gray bridges of a shadow town,
Black dream-hills rise and pathways steep,
And the rain drops down on the weighted grass,
The curling dream mists 'round us
creep,
And twist and rise
To the gray bent skies,
And elf lights glimmer as we pass.

And the days that are gone away,
away, and the traces of long ago
Come back through the mists and shadows gray,
Blessing and curse of the bygone day,
Glow or chill as the dream winds blow,
And the things that were are the things that are,
Shadow is life where the poppies glow,
The white beams of my Lady's star
Gleam soft on a world
In dew mists pearled,
Where my soul glides free to my loved Lenore.
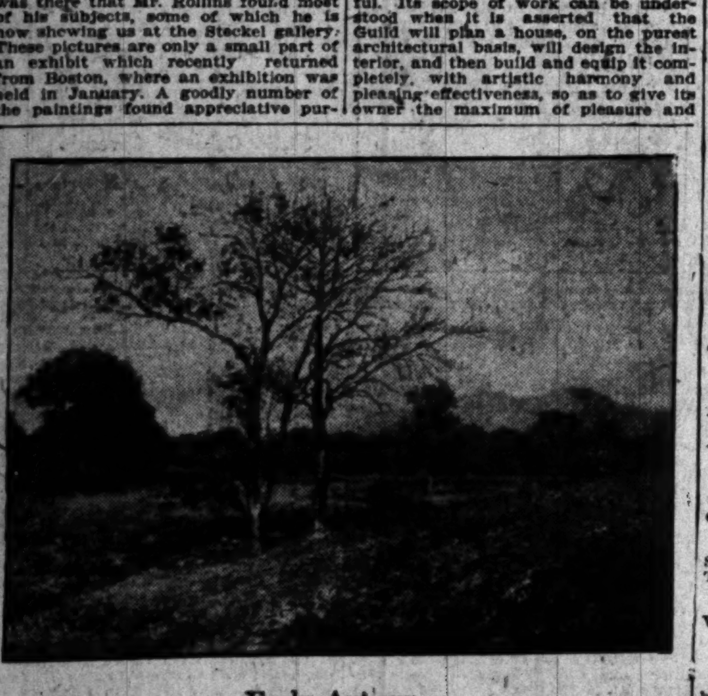
—[Smart Set.

Miss Margaret Anglin is a-weary of being a Lady of Sorrows and says that when she is through with the sobbing and emotional Helena Ritchie she will hie herself to the most frivolous farce comedy she can find.



Early Autumn.

From an oil painting by John W. Nicoll. One of the eighty pictures now being shown in the Eleventh Annual Exhibition of the Works of Southern California Artists, Blanchard Gallery.

If It Disappears, It's Eczema

How to Tell Whether a Skin Affection is an Inherited Blood Disease or Not.

Sometimes it is hard to determine whether a skin affection is a sign of a blood disorder or simply a form of eczema. Even physicians are often puzzled in their diagnosis. The best way for any one afflicted is to go to The Owl Drug Co., or any good druggist who handles pure drugs and obtain 50c worth of poslam. Apply this, and if the itching stops at once and the trouble is cured in a few days it may be set down as having been eczema, as this is the way poslam acts in the worst cases of eczema, and in curing acne, herpes, blotches, tetter, piles, salt rheum, rash, barber's and other forms of itch, scaly scalp, and all surface skin affections.

Any one who will write to the Emergency Laboratories, 32 West Twenty-fifth street, New York, can secure, by mail free of charge, a supply sufficient to cure a small eczema surface or clear a complexion overnight and remove pimples in twenty-four hours.

$6.75 to $10.00

An incomparable collection. The season's very latest productions—from the style-centers of the East. The shops of the swellest makers in New York have contributed to the exhibit. Fifth Avenue effects are here—hundreds of them. Every style that smacked of the commonplace was avoided. The collection is unique—matchless in its entirety. Compare this showing with that of any other house in Los Angeles—price for price, and value for value. We know beforehand what the decision will be.

Every Hat a Model

Not only is the showing unique in its entirety, but every hat is a distinctive model. Few have duplicates—here or elsewhere. Toques and Turbans are shown in great variety, as are the new side-roll effects. French Fur Felts are prime favorites—Hatter's Plush, Moire and Bengaline shapes are also popular. Every Hat in the sale is effectively trimmed—many of them quite elaborate. Prices range $6.75, $8.50 and $10.00. Values positively a third more.

The King is at him because he Lord Randolph one of King Ed- when he was a Edward feels almost and sorrow at what he regards as the betrayal of his friends by the young politician. He has caused it to be known in society that he will be pleased to hear that Winston is rigidly boycotted, and a word from the King in such matters has all the force of law. Winston walked into the Turf Club—one of the most exclusive social organizations of London—the other night, and when he entered the smoking-room every man in it got up and went out. At the Marlborough Club, of which the King is a member, he was also snubbed, and I am told that he has not dared to visit his other clubs, for fear of an even more unpleasant scene.

The King has gone even farther than that, and nothing could show his irritation more clearly than what he has done. A couple of weeks ago Winston made a speech in which he sneered at the followers of Mr. Balfour, the leader of the Conservative party, and remarked that they were obeying their leader in expectation of the peerages which he would confer on them. Now it is almost an axiom in English public life that the King takes no part in political affairs, but in this case he was goaded into a reply. The next day every newspaper in the kingdom contained an official letter from Lord Knollys, the King's private secretary, stating that the creation of peers was still an attribute of the Crown, and was exercised by no other person.

English politicians are asking themselves what Winston hopes to gain by his course in politics, but few of them have been able to supply the answer. I am able to give it from his own lips as he gave it to a member of the present Liberal Cabinet a few days ago. He believes that a great wave of socialism and democracy is coming over the country, and is going to submerge all the ancient institutions.

WHEN THE TIME COMES.

"The people will want a first-class man to lead them when the time comes," said Winston, "and I intend to be that man." In other words, this young English aristocrat thinks that there is going to be a commune in England, and he intends to be its Robespierre. He has carefully paved the way for this by courting the labor and socialist party in the House of Commons. In fact, he declared not long ago in a public speech that he saw nothing improbable in the suggestion that he might at some future date hold a portfolio in a socialist ministry.

But the thing that has stirred up his old associates most of all is his vigorous denunciation—they call it vulgar abuse—of the dukes and other aristocrats. He has referred to them during the budget fight as a "miserable, cringing minority of titled nobodies," and he has sneered at the protests of the Tory party against the present budget, declaring that all they could do was to "put up their dukes against it." The Tories have not failed to comment on the facts that Winston is the grandson of one duke, the nephew of another, and the cousin of a third, not to speak of being related by ties of blood and marriage to half the peerage.

In many ways Winston resembles his father the late Lord Randolph Churchill. Lord Randolph was erratic in politics and he, too, had a tendency toward democracy, but he called it Tory Democracy and wanted to capture the working-class vote for the party of the dukes. He also had a gift of vigorous expression, but in his days politicians of all parties were more dignified in their choice of language than they are today. There is no doubt that Winston inherits a good part of his brains from his clever mother, now Mrs. Cornwallis West, who was Jennie Jerome of New York, and in a good many ways he resembles his cousin, William Travers Jerome, the fighting District Attorney of New York. Like Mr. Jerome he has the gift of coining striking phrases and he is a fearless fighter. Like his father, Winston is today, the most cartooned politician in England.

IN A HOLE?

Some of Winston's enemies are chuckling over the plight in which he will find himself when his party goes out of office as it must do before long. Winston is penniless, except for his salary as president of the Board of Trade, and he married an equally penniless girl about a year ago.

Under ordinary circumstances—that is to say if he were a quiet, respectable Tory politician, his cousin the Duke of Marlborough might be expected to finance him for a few years, until he found some lucrative office or until his party came back to power, but Winston has included his cousin by name in his denunciations of the dukes and his Grace of Marlborough does not speak to him. I am told, however, by a well-informed politician that Winston need have no fear for his future.

"There are two ways in which he may secure an income," said this man. "One is that the Liberal party may finance him and this would be no new thing. He is a valuable asset to them and in any case they would have to pay his political expenses. Now in the case of an active politician like Winston it would be hard to separate his political expenses from his personal outlay, and he would be well worth a modest allowance to the party. Winston, what ever else one may think or say about him, is not an extravagant man. He has no bad habits. He doesn't race and he doesn't play cards. Ten or fifteen thousand dollars a year would keep him very comfortably.

"The other way is that some rich man might be found to finance him, and that, too, is no new thing. I imagine his father, Lord Randolph, found Lord Rothschild very useful at one period of his career, and everyone knows that Lord Wolverhampton placed his purse for years at the disposal of Mr. Gladstone. Of course you will ask what these men got. Well, Lord Wolverhampton got his peerage, didn't he, and Lord Rothschild might have got something he wanted if 'Randy' had lived and become the figure in politics we all expected him to be.

SWAYTHLING.

"Now Lord Swaythling has been suggested as a possible financial backer of Winston when that young politician is temporarily in eclipse. Mind you, I don't say he will be, but we all know that he is a great admirer of the young man, and he is very wealthy. It is hard to say what he would expect in return, for he has his peerage already, and he is a very old man."

Lord Swaythling who is thus referred to is a great Jewish banker in the City of London. He is an enthusiastic radical and has been a generous contributor to the party chest. He retired from active business only a few weeks ago.

In the meantime the situation in the Liberal cabinet is decidedly interesting. The two men who absolutely dominate its policies now are Lloyd George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, whose "socialistic budget" is causing all the trouble and Winston, who is credited with having had a good deal to do with the framing of that budget. The Prime Minister is said to be wax in their hands, and Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Minister, who was the hope of the Conservative faction in the party, has given up the fight in disgust and is confining himself strictly to the duties of his office. Mr. Haldane, the War Minister, who is also a Conservative, is not a political fighter and is also confining himself to administration.

But a most amazing situation has developed. The two men in all the cabinet who were most feared by the Conservatives are now their idols, and are making a gallant fight for the preservation of the old Liberal traditions, which are threatened by the rising tide of radical and socialist thought. These two men are Lord Morley of Blackburn, known to all the world as John Morley, the famous literary man who began life as an extreme radical and even republican, and John Burns, ex-socialist and labor leader. They alone of all the cabinet have refused to accept the new principles and are fighting at every step against the proposals of the faction led by Winston and Lloyd George.

OVER AMBITIOUS.

One danger to Winston's career, which even his friends see is that he may be in too much of a hurry to get to the top. At present Lloyd George stands between him and the leadership of the Liberal party, and Lloyd George is only 44 years old and in vigorous health. The political prophets declare, however, that if it ever comes to a fight for supremacy between Winston and Lloyd. George Winston will win. Winston himself thinks so, and I am told that he has declared that his aristocratic birth and connections will stand him in good stead in any struggle for the leadership.

One consolation remains to him to offset the social boycott. He is still the friend of the German Emperor, who invited him specially to attend the German army maneuvers this year. But spiteful people in England say that William did it to annoy his Uncle Edward whom he cordially dislikes.

1000 Yards Fine 52-inch Broadcloth, all the Favorite Sh and Black. A Wonderful Purchase and Sale

Several weeks ago we featured a purchase and sale of Broadcloths at 85c. We thought the quantity sufficient to last for several days, but the offering was so unusual that the lot was almost exhausted the first day was over.

Well, here's even better news, although the price is 95c the quality is superior to that in the last offer and the width is 52 inches. Not only that but we have 1000 yards of it. We're going to place this on sale beginning Monday. The offer will continue Tuesday if there is any of it left.

This merchandise comes from one of the greatest dress goods houses in the country and it is only because of our great buying prestige that we are able to secure it to sell at such a ridiculous price.

The color range is remarkable, containing Copenhagen, Alice, navy, Atlantic, wistaria, mulberry, raisin, the very much desired tans, brown, olive, reseda, royal cardinal, wine, gendarme, old rose and gray.

See them in the window, be one of the first to take advantage of them Monday, for at such a price it's going to fairly melt away. Aisle 4.

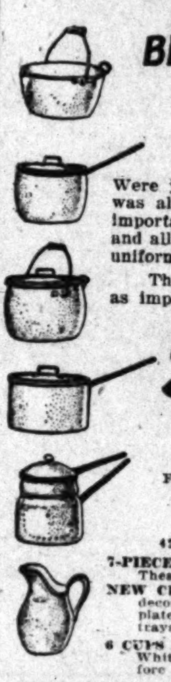
Another Enamelware Sale



Blue and White and All White, Double Coated 1770 Pieces Represented in the Eleven Articles Pictured Here

Were you here to the big enamelware sale last Monday? The entire lot on sale was almost entirely exhausted before the day was over. Well, here's even more important bargain news—a second shipment of the same splendid blue and white and all white ware, but larger articles, each and every one of them to be sold at the uniform price of 59c.

The woman who appreciates good enamelware will recognize in this sale just as important news as we featured last week, for if you have ever paid the real value of these articles you'll appreciate what it means to be able to buy them at 59c. The picture tells what articles are included, but you'll have to see the window and merchandise to realize what this sale means. (Basement and main floor.)

BUILT HIM UP.

WHAT PHYSICAL TRAINING DID FOR TAFT.

Man Who Put the President Into Condition for His Arduous Western Trip, Tells of His Work and the President's.

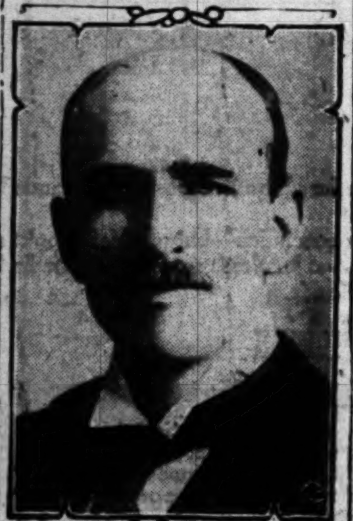
BY JAMES B. MORROW.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Bodily, President Taft was trained for his long tour of the West by Dr. Charles E. Barker, physical culture specialist. Boxing, wrestling and throwing a ten-pound medicine bag formed a part of his daily exercises.

More than the tour of the West, Dr. Barker put Mr. Taft into condition, corporeally, of course, for the Presidency, and, even further, for the speaking, traveling, and handshaking campaign by which he gained his election. Behind the scenes and out of sight, Barker is, nevertheless, a national character.

When the President went to the Capitol during the last hours of the recent session of Congress to sign the tariff bill, men who see him but rarely noted the new spring in his stride and his improved appearance personally. He said himself that he was in better health than for many years. Oral testimony worth, at current rates, almost any sum of money, thus fortified the visible facts of a case that interested the whole country.

Hard as granite, standing about five feet nine in his shoes, and weighing 150 pounds, Dr. Barker moves nervously, gracefully, and strongly. In his conversation he is energetic, philosophic, and intelligent because he is a man of action, reflection, observation, and education. His father was a Baptist clergyman in Southern Ohio. An elder brother is also a preacher. Two of his sisters are teaching in colleges. There are, likewise, several physicians in the Barker family. Dr. Barker, the President's physical trainer, was a student at Denison University, in Ohio, and afterward at the University of Chicago. Leaving college, he preached until he was thirty. Then he broke down, and temporarily, as he thought, quit the pulpit.



Dr. Charles E. Barker.

BECAME A NERVOUS WRECK.

"I had always been as slim as a string, at best," he said to me, talking as much with his gray eyes as with his tongue and lips. "Still, while at college I was active in the various kinds of athletics, and had no trouble whatever with my health. As a professional man, however, I lived a sedentary life. I ate when and what I pleased. Before I realized my condition I was a nervous wreck. I went from one physician to another. Finally somebody suggested physical exercise, or culture, as it was called, and a rational diet. The combination seemed to contain the elements of common sense. I took it up and stuck to it, and in six months was again in fine health. That was nine years ago. Since then I have not known a single bad day. I can truly say that I have almost forgotten how it feels to be sick.

"My own experience, together with what I learned in other directions, convinced me that physical culture, then little known as a means of restoring and conserving sound health, was based on scientific principals. I spent the next few years in studying and experimenting. There are several systems of exercise for the development of the human body. Some are sensible and some are not. I eliminated, adopted, and invented, and became a specialist on my own account."

"How did President Taft hear about you in the first place?" I asked.

"I was practicing at Madison, in Wisconsin. Through a member of Congress, who had been under my care, Frank M. Murphy, the big railway man of Arizona, learned of me and my methods. He had been in poor health for a long time, and had about concluded that he could not be helped. I met him by appointment in Chicago. We talked, and he seemed to think that my theories were reasonable. However, he could not locate in Madison. I did not fancy Arizona. The city of Washington was satisfactory to both of us.

INTRODUCED TO MR TAFT.

"After coming here I got acquainted with Hon. John C. Spooner, then a member of the United States Senate. He knew about me, because his home is also in Madison. Moreover, he wasn't feeling first rate. So I became his physical director. In a short time, realizing that he was being benefited, he spoke of me to Mr. Taft, then Secretary of War in Mr. Roosevelt's Cabinet. Mr. Taft asked me to call on him and explain the principles of my practice. I saw him, and he said he would try the experiment. That was the winter of 1905-06."

"What was his weight?" I inquired.

"It was considerably more than 300 pounds. I found that he had been working very hard without any physical exercise; nor had he given necessary thought to his diet. He understood at the start that I should require an hour of his time each morning of the week before breakfast.

"'But my days are too short already,' he replied.

"'Still, you will feel so much better inside a fortnight,' I said, 'and will be doing so much more work that time will be gained instead of lost.'

"I went to his house every morning and gave him exercises that brought all the muscles of his body into use and started a good flow of perspiration. At the end of three months he weighed 260 pounds. He was free to say that he felt fine, and that he could do his work without fatigue—an experience that was new to him."

"Your second engagement began after he was President?"

"Yes; I returned to Washington last June at his invitation. After I left him in the spring of 1906 he traveled in Cuba, Panama and Porto Rico. The year following he returned to the Philippine Islands. Then the campaign for the Presidency came on, and he had no regular time either for eating or sleeping. Naturally, his weight increased. I suppose he thought it prudent to get back to his exercise and diet again."

EXERCISE IN EARLY MORNING.

"What did you tell him?"

"All that I told him before; that he could work as hard as he pleased in his office, but that he must sleep eight hours a day and change his diet. He understood, and there was no delay in beginning the second course of treatment. A room in the White House was set apart for the exercises. The President was invariably there at 7 o'clock in the morning.

"At first, the exercises were prudently moderate, and considerable time was spent in resting. Mr. Taft was no longer Secretary of War, but President of the United States, and I realized the changed relations he bore to the nation. As before, my object was to bring all the muscles of the body into action, especially those of the abdomen and chest. As the days went by we worked harder and rested less.

"By and by we did some wrestling, an admirable form of exercise at which the President excelled while a student at Yale. I have heard it said that he was never thrown in his life. He is a big man, and my weight is only 150 pounds, and I think I got as much out of the exercise as he did—probably more. But what I lacked in size I tried to make up in other ways, and so the contests were not always humorously one-sided.

"At the logical stage of the training we did some boxing. The first part of the daily exercises to reduce the abdomen was serious work for the President. Wrestling and boxing were work and fun as well. I am not a professional boxer. If a man asked me to develop his arms until the muscles looked like ropes or rods of iron, I should tell him to consult Robert Fitzsimmons or John L. Sullivan.

BOXING GOOD FOR THE "WIND."

"But boxing is the best of all exercises for the 'wind.' By 'wind' I mean lung capacity and the ability to breathe easily under rapid and strenuous physical exertion. It is not a technical word, but it plainly expresses what I mean. Therefore I occasionally recommend putting on the gloves.

"The President readily accepted the suggestion. It was understood that we were not to hit each other in the face, and that when we started a blow it should be toward the chest. Nothing was said, but I realized how an accidental black eye might look in the White House. I am slender and rather quick, I hope, on my feet, but when the President caught me in a corner, I confess that he landed pretty heavily and often for a man of his bulk.

"Ultimately, Mr. Taft worked for an hour and a half every morning. He breathed as deeply as an athlete, and rpidly improved his speed in wrestling and boxing. At the end of his exercises he took a bath and had breakfast. Late in the afternoon he usully went to the golf links, or else for a horseback ride. The tremendous strain to which the President of the United States is subjected practically necessitates such diversions."

"What restrictions did you put on him in the matter of diet?"

"Now, diet with me is a vital matter," Dr. Barker replied; "but I have no fads to exploit or prejudices to be defended. Each man and each woman is a separate physical entity. What is nourishing for one person is not recklessly to be recommended for another person. Food that is harmful to you may be healthful to your brother or your neighbor. Meat, for instance, and plenty of it, is good for some and bad for others. Diet is a problem that must be taken up with an open mind. Nor do I draw a line rigidly against alcoholic beverages, but I have learned that they are not beneficial except in cases hardly ever to be met with, and only then in small quanities. The President does not drink a drop of wine or any other kind of liquor.

EAT WRONG KIND OF FOOD.

"The ordinary man," Dr. Barker went on to say, "eats too much. I refer, of course, to persons engaged in sedentary pursuits. Food taken above the actual requirements of one's work is an injury to sound health. Undernutrition is equally dangerous. The man and his task are the elements to be considered. A farmer, for example, can eat pie and dispose of it. Yet pastry may be poison for the man at a desk.

"Physical culture," Dr. Barker observed, "is unlike ready-to-wear clothing or shoes from a big factory. A coat of a standard size will fit the normal customer of the average dealer. It is the same with collars and hats; practically every No. 7 hat will feel comfortable on every No. 7 head. Neither medicine nor physical culture is governed by absolute rules with respect to the individual. No two stomachs are exactly alike.

"When discussing diet with the President I told him that a drastic limitation upon one's food, in quantity and kind, resulted in a chronic state of weakness and a craving that was out of joint with nature. Slow starvation means irritability and the devil's tattoo upon the nerves. I thought that Mr. Taft ought to approach all matters of business, great and small, in the kindliness and the cheer that have endeared him to the American people. He should have fire enough in the form of food, I said, to maintain the usual balance of his strength and temper. The President agreed with me, and accepted my bill of fare."

"What was it?" I asked.

NO STARCHY OR SWEET FOOD.

"A chop or a piece of beefsteak, gluten crackers and a cup of coffee for breakfast; only fruit for luncheon, and soup, meat, green vegetables and a light dessert—custard, for instance, without much sugar—for dinner. Starchy, greasy and sweet foods increase fat, and I put them on the blacklist."

"Had the President any fear that what he was doing for good health would get into the newspapers?"

"Oh, no. He supposed that articles would be written describing with more or less detail the form of his physical exercises and he had no particular objection to such publicity so long as the writers would keep within the truth. Mr. Taft understands that the President is a public officer and that he cannot shut himself away from general interest and journalistic comment. Moreover, he believes that what he is doing to help himself would, if imitated, be of value to others."

"Has he ever taken his exercises with any show of impatience or ill-humor?"

"Never. The President thinks over every act of his life. When he does anything it is because he deems it to be necessary, and being necessary he goes about it cheerfully. He has never made me feel that I was bothering or encroaching upon the time of the President. He makes play of his exercises, when it is possible, and so far as he can is careful to follow directions as to diet."

"In these days," Dr. Barker continued to say, "we hear materialistic preachments about 'getting results' and obtaining 'the highest efficiency.' But machinery is meant and not man. Tracks are torn up and relaid, roadbeds are covered with broken stone, cars are doubled in capacity, and locomotives are built so heavy that they threaten all the bridges unless they are made of iron. What for? Results and the highest efficiency. And the man who originated the work and finished it goes to pieces through criminal neglect of his own body. Was not he worth something? Wall street may be in some doubt about it, but ask the man's family and the hospitals and the churches and the orphan asylums that enjoyed his secret bounty. Anyway, and let us look at his case commercially, he was cut down in his prime, and his ability, energy, and power are buried in the grave along with his worn-out and lifeless body. The world, in the sordid matter of dollars and cents, sustained a real loss when he died.

LIFE OF GREATER VALUE.

"Results and the highest efficiency both as appealing phrases and in daily practice should be applied to human beings as well as to mills and factories. If we were philosophers, we would see that life is the equivalent of money—is money, in fact—and we would safeguard life and thus make more money. I am stating a cold business proposition. When a great financier, managing millions, a human key in the arch of public prosperity, insists upon working fourteen or sixteen or eighteen hours a day without physical exercise, sufficient rest, or food that he can digest, he slowly traces his name at the bottom of his own death warrant and becomes a serious menace to the world at large. And let me tell you that no physician on earth can keep him in health, or even alive, for long, as a matter of fact.

"Men will exercise their heads, but not their bodies, and then wonder why they can't sleep at night. Suppose the procedure were reversed—plenty of physical activity, but a practical paralyzation of the mind? We should be a nation of blockheads in time. Mind and body must be kept alive and keen. Hence both must be used, not periodically, but regularly and systematically. I say, and I make the statement with positiveness, that exercise in the open air—which with Mr. Taft means an open window—together with rational and moderate eating, if followed persistently, will cure or prevent stomach troubles, intestinal disturbances, liver, heart and kidney diseases, and consumption as well. And the busy man, sallow, all nerves and wakeful, who complains and says that he can't spare the time, should remember that hours are really gained by exercise instead of being thrown away. He will do more and better work, going to it with zest and increased steam pressure. Moreover, he will meet the world in a buoyancy of spirit that in itself produces 'results' and 'the highest efficiency,' if those are the words on which he plans and builds his life."

FAT A KIND OF DISEASE.

"Is fat the sign of sound health?" I asked.

"Fat, in my opinion, is a kind of disease. When a man or a woman gets heavy around the abdomen and puffs and blows while going upstairs or while taking some little and unusual exercise, it is an indication of a poor condition of health. Corpulency is one of the protests of nature against an unnatural state of living. The octogenarian, generally, has been lean, both as boy and man. Go over the very old persons whom you know and you will see that I am right. I am not one of the apostles of starvation, you understand, but of physical exercise and sensible eating. A well-nourished body is neither too heavy nor too thin, and is an assurance of life in itself. The man who cannot tie his shoes without discomfort in the region of his heart may be sure that nature is ringing an alarm bell and calling on him to limber up his muscles and to modify his diet."

FAVORS WALKING AND RIDING.

"Is walking good exercise?" I asked.

"Fine, and so is horseback riding. Walking is good for the arms and legs and gently massages the stomach, but the muscles of the back, chest and abdomen remain undeveloped. Horseback riding shakes and stimulates the upper part of the body. But the man whose circumference is anywhere from six inches to a foot beyond the limits of health and symmetry cannot walk it off or ride it off. He must get near to the floor and engage in serious business. Golf, however, is the best of all exercises in which there are any of the elements of pleasure. One gets out of doors and walks leisurely. Too much exertion is almost as foolish as an oversupply of food. Moderation should become a national word, a warning universal to save life, health and nerves."

OUR NATIONAL GREATNESS.

Our Banking Power.

The banking power of the United States is the greatest in the world, writes the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune. By banking power is meant the sum of the capital, surplus, undivided profit, deposits and circulation of the banks. At the date of the last report in 1908 there was, including national, State, savings and other banks a total of about 25,000.

The figures show an aggregate capital of $1,833,805,203; of surplus, etc., $1,794,470,084; with deposits of $13,400,766,024, and circulation of $613,663,963. When these items are added together they give the staggering total of $17,642,705,274. This, then, is the banking power of the United States.

At the same time, in 1908, the total banking power of all the rest of the world was set down as $28,107,600,000. Thus it will be seen that the United States now holds more than one-third of the banking power of the whole world, our nearest competitor, the British empire, being represented by only $11,157,000,000.

In the last twenty years, the United States has increased its banking power something like 250 per cent., so that any legislation which purposes remodeling our currency and banking system will have an effect here vastly important to our own people, but scarcely less so to the great financial centers in London, Paris, Berlin and every other great capital in the world.

A Billion and Half of Corn.

American farmers are about to husk and put into their granaries $1,500,000,000 worth of corn. While not the very biggest, this is among the banner crops ever grown, says the Philadelphia Press.

Corn is distinctly American. Wheat and rye grow all around the world, above and below the equator.

With the potato and tobacco it is one of our debts to the Indians. True some "maize" is cultivated in other lands, but nowhere else, except perhaps in Argentina, does it constitute an important part of any country's agricultural product.

Pile all the cotton and wheat in one grand heap and they will only equal the value of our corn. As it requires less than 150 days to plant, grow and mature this crop it will be seen that since May 1 last each day has contributed about $10,000,000 to the production of wealth that never existed before.

The Indian can afford to have his head taken from the American cent. He has given his name to the world's premier harvest and to this country's source of greatest wealth.

Savings by the People.

From statistics which have just been compiled by William Hanhart, secretary of the savings bank section of the American Bankers' Association, it appears that the "banked" savings in the United States amount to $5,600,837,016, as against the report of the Comptroller of the Currency showing only $3,660,553,945. Including the savings in building loan associations and life insurance companies, Mr. Hanhart places the actual and visible savings of the people at the enormous total of $9,466,411,488, or ever $118 for every man, woman and child in the country.

It is stated that the figures are without a parallel in Europe.

Land of Telephones and Telegraphs.

Of more than 15,000,000 miles of wire in the telegraph and telephone systems of this country, the telephones use nearly 13,000,000, says the Washington Herald. One year's telegraph messages number 368,470,509, of which 5,869,217 were cablegrams. The capital of the telegraph and cable companies was $244,607,900, yielding an income of $244,607,900. The capital of the telephone systems was $814,616,004, yielding $184,461,747. In 1907 the telephone business was eight times as great as that of the telegraph. Wireless stations in 1907 were operated at a loss of $47,628, on a capital, in six systems, of $32,726,242. But there have been marked developments during the past two years. The railroad telegraphs number 625 and operate 860,000 miles of single telegraph wire. These systems paid out in 1907 $37,242,479 in salaries and wages, maintained 33,441 offices and 30,115 telephones; transmitted 5,923,453 commercial messages and 258,598,333 messages in connection with railroad business.

Longest Wagon Bridge.

"In my State we are building the longest wagon bridge in the world," said J. A. McCurdy of Boise, Idaho. "This tremendously long bridge, located at Sandpoint, Idaho, is a county bridge and is 10,360 feet long, or nearly two miles. The structure will cross the Pend d'Oreille River and the lower end of a big lake. It will be completed by the end of this month, and will be open for traffic by October 15. More than 400 piles were driven, extending 1500 feet. When I saw it the bridge was completed almost into the bed of the river channel. The draw across the middle of the river will be eighty-five feet long, one of the longest in the world. It will have a rise of seventy-five feet above low water mark.

One Single State's Area.

The twenty-five States which compose the home land of the German empire, including Alsace-Lorraine, have an area of 208,270 square miles with a population of 60,641,278. Texas has an area of 265,780 square miles. After the German empire had been laid down upon Texas in the remainder space of 57,510 square miles it would be feasible to tuck in all of England and Wales, with the exception of the tiny county of Rutland. Or if that arrangement should promise to impose too much work upon the Texas rangers, it would be possible to include the Netherlands, Belgium and Denmark and Switzerland. Still Texas would have room for a few stragglers. —[New York Sun.

EDUCATIONAL DRIFT.

President Hadley tells the freshmen of Yale not to follow the crowd. The probabilities are that the crowd will not do anything very bad the first time nor the second. But the harm shows sooner or later; and on the whole the boy is more fortunate who is called to account promptly and brought face to face with the real character of what he is doing than the one who escapes so long that he fixes upon himself the habit of mental irresponsibility. The practice of taking one's ease and going with the crowd may or may not bring its penalty today. It must bring its penalty sooner or later. The leader of men becomes a leader of men by not following the crowd on lines of least resistance; by thinking where he goes and making a path for others to follow.

A brief note from Amherst College says that in many ways the curriculum is being made more rigid. The number of electives has been reduced and scholarship requirements are stricter. "The trustees have become convinced that upon scholarship only can the college stand." Other institutions are offering new courses. Cornell announces one on "sanitary science and public health." Wisconsin one on "methods of discovering and prosecuting crime, the functions of the police, prosecuting officers, and jury, the defects in the administration of criminal laws."

Wisconsin, too, offers "American colonies and the imperial system," and "Latin American political institutions," two practical subjects of much value. Harvard has a course on "municipal government in the United States, with special reference to Massachusetts cities," and one on "psychological conditions of modern government."

President O. H. Longwell of Highland Park College, Ill., in answering the question whether it pays for a young man or woman to make an effort to get a good, general education, says: "Thirty-two per cent. of the Congressmen of the United States have been college graduates, 46 per cent. of the Senators, 50 per cent. of the Vice-Presidents, 65 per cent. of the Presidents, 73 per cent. of the justices of the Supreme Court, and 83 per cent. of the chief justices of the Supreme Court of the United States have been college graduates. In addition to the above you must also include the large number of literary, business and professional men. Less than one-half of 1 per cent. of the people of the United States have been college graduates, so you see that all of these have been chosen out of the very small number that have finished college courses. The fact that some men, as Abraham Lincoln, have risen to such eminence without a college education is no argument against college courses for young people. They are geniuses—men of much more than natural ability—and could see their way clear to accomplish great things."

A new health law enacted by the Michigan Legislature bars consumptive school-teachers, and requires that sanitary drinking fountains be installed at all schools.

A "night school of philanthropy" has been started in New York City. The school has nearly 100 pupils during the winter and about seventy lecturers, each giving one or more lectures. And unlike most schools the lecturers are drawn right from active life to tell of their experiences. For instance, the manager of an institution will come from his daily work, the superintendent of a prison from his administration building, the settlement-worker from the settlement in some crowded part of the city where his work is. In short, this training-school in New York is similar to a medical school or a law school, in that it gives specialized training for a definite profession. Students come from all over the country. And what is true of New York is practically true of all the schools of philanthropy.

UTZERATH GIVES ALARM.

When Vasquez assembled his gang for the "get away," he gave orders that every horse in Tres Piños should be driven out. This action was decided upon as a precaution against pursuit and the early giving of an alarm. But in this way the bandits fooled themselves. Had they left any horses in Tres Piños, Utzerath would beyond a doubt have saddled one and left direct for Hollister over the traveled road. Had he done so he would have been killed at the river crossing, where Vasquez stationed a man for several hours to guard against any one making their way into Hollister. As it was, Utzerath, after finding no horse available in the town, walked to the home of John McPhail, and there was accommodated with an animal to ride to Hollister. He kept along the foothills, and arrived in Hollister about 11:30 o'clock that night, after a ride of about twelve miles. Jack Speegle, now dead, but well known to the people of San Miguel and Paso Robles, where he resided in after years, was then conducting a saloon in Hollister. Hisplace happened to be the only one open in Hollister at the hour when Mr. Utzerath arrived with the news of the awful tragedy. Mr. Speegle at once interested himself with Mr. Utzerath in spreading the alarm. Dr. Robert Rankin was awakened and sent out to Tres Piños to attend Mrs. Davidson, who was prostrated with grief over the killing of her husband. Mr. Utzerath, who had recognized Moreno as a member of the gang, appeared before Justice of the Peace Hunt and swore to a warrant for Moreno's arrest. Then Justice Hunt left for Tres Piños to officiate as Coroner. City Marshal Orson Lyons of Hollister was awakened, and he organized the first posse which started in pursuit of the bandit gang. About midnight, Mr. Utzerath went to the depot in Hollister and awakened the telegraph operator, and sent to the San Francisco Chronicle the news of the night's awful tragedy. This account did not appear in the Chronicle until the morning of August 28, the robbery and murders being on the night of August 26. For years Mr. Utzerath had a copy of the Chronicle with the news of the event, but he has long since lost it. The agent who sent the dispatch from Hollister for Mr. Utzerath the night of August 26 afterward died at San Lucas, in Monterey county.

The news of the murders aroused the State to a high pitch of excitement, and officers organized in all sections to hunt to the death the bandits.

The warrant which Mr. Utzerath swore out in Hollister for the arrest of Theodore Moreno was served in a few days at the Bitterwater sheep ranch of Judge E. C. Tully. He was at work in the shearing pen when the warrant was served. He had no thoughts of being arrested, supposing that no one would ever know of his participation in the Tres Piños affair. He had always borne a good reputation at home. When he appeared in the store at Tres Piños he wore a mask, but Mr. Utzerath, being well acquainted with him, recognized him in a moment, particularly when he spoke.

Moreno was tried in November, 1873, and was convicted and sentenced to San Quentin for life. He died behind the bars in 1891. Abdon Leiva, one of the gang, turned State's evidence, and with the testimony of Mr. Utzerath, conviction was an easy matter. At the trial Robert Tully of Gilroy defended Moreno. He asked Mr. Utzerath the question, "How long was the barrel of the pistol, which you say was flourished in your face?" Utzerath's reply was, "There was no yard stick long enough to measure it at that time."

Sheriffs' Thomas Cunningham of San Joaquin, Ben Thorne of Calaveras, Rollins of Los Angeles, Adams of Santa Clara, Morse of Alameda and Wasson of Monterey were among those who joined in the hunt for Vasquez. The arrest of Vasquez was made in June, 1874, near Los Angeles. He was taken to San José, and tried for the Tres Piños murders, the trial commencing January 5, 1875. He was convicted and hanged at San José March 19, 1875, Sheriff Adams of Santa Clara county swinging him off into eternity. Mr. Utzerath was given an invitation and permit to attend the hanging, but he did not attend. He lost this permit while in Virginia City, Nev., some years later.

Those who made up the gang which committed the murders and robbery at Tres Piños were Tiburcio Vasquez, the leader; Theodore Moreno, C. Chavez, Romaldo Gonzales and Abdon Leiva. Some years after Mr. Utzerath met two brothers of Moreno on a lonely county road in the San Benito section, and while he felt the fear of some action on their part, they rode by in silence.

The horses driven away from Tres Piños by the Vasquez gang were afterward found at Elizabeth Lake, jaded and worn after hard driving.

The shooting and robbery in Tres Piños took but a few minutes, but it left many interesting things to tell.

WARREN M. JOHN.

At Sea.

When the great autumn gales rush up the coast,
 Rending their canopies of driven cloud,
And, answering to their touch, an endless host
 Of northward storming billows cry aloud.
How shall he fear who sails the sea?
 Though death come very nigh,
 He cannot fear to die,
Enarmed in this immense vitality.

When mystic haze of autumn lulls the deep
 To visions of unending peacefulness,
And wide its argent acres swing and sleep,
 Unruffled by the dim air's slow ca-
 ress.
How shall he fear who sails the sea?
 Whate'er the day may give,
 He cannot fear to live
Wrapped in this measureless tranquillity.
—[Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer, in the Century for October.

The Pioneers.

A toast to all the pioneers
Who press through dangers, doubts and fears
To be with their achievements great,
The playthings of a tricksy fate.
And come victorious to stand,
But enter not the promised land.

In every field of human thought
Their skirmish battles have been fought:
They are the scouts who forward go
And draw the fire of all the foe.
Their failures are our beacon lights,
And their successes point our heights.

Their names are not on any tongue,
They seldom hear their glories sung;
Rebuffs are theirs, instead of praise—
The later comers wear their bays.
No costly piles surmount their bones,
Their monuments are stepping stones.
—[McLandburgh Wilson, in New York Sun.

She Was Sensitive.

"Your hair is a beautiful chestnut," says the admirer.

With a quick expression of discomfiture flashing for the instant upon her finely chiseled features, the young woman lifts a hand to the luxuriant tresses under discussion, and says:

"Well, I have worn that switch for a long time, but I should not have thought you would be so unkind as to mention it."—[Chicago Post.

UNIQUE CALIFORNIA IDEA IN WEEK-END ENTERTAINING.

The decorated barn.

Open air sleeping rooms.

Beefsteak grill out of doors.

Scenes of the house party al fresco.

WEEK-END house parties at the palatial summer homes up the Hudson, across in the New Jersey hills, or as far away as the Adirondacks, at which from a score to a hundred guests are gathered under one hospitable roof form a favorite diversion of the ultra-monde in Gotham. In the East, this is the pastime of millionaires only, for it requires a residence with the capacity of a summer hotel, unstinted resources and a retinue of servants under careful organization.

It remained for a young California hostess to invent the "House Party al Fresco," or a week-end event for a party of twenty-four young women, with only such resources as the simplest of country homes would offer. California climate, absolutely dependable, is, of course, the first essential. After that, it is merely a matter of the ingenuity of the hostess.

These twenty-four guests were entertained from Friday until Monday, and on Saturday the number was swelled to fifty by the arrival of the young men from town for a beefsteak barbecue and dance, and all this magnificent hospitality was dispensed from a modest little one-story cottage, tucked away like a nest in the orange groves along the Verdugo foothills.

Miss Emma Williams, a University of Southern California senior, was the hostess of the occasion, and the residence of Menzo Williams, near Kenneth road, north of Glendale, the scene. Mr. Williams has one of the model "five acres and plenty" ranches of Southern California, and this fact also explains a measure of the success of the house party.

To begin with the problematical end of such a social function, the first question of the hostess will be as to the provision of sleeping quarters.

"Now, as a matter of fact," Miss Williams explains, "the girls really didn't care to sleep at all."

A characteristically feminine answer and one that will bear further investigation. There were sleeping quarters for the twenty-four guests, of course, and they really did retire for a part of the time. And this was managed smoothly and comfortably in spite of the fact that the Williams cottage contains but five rooms. The secret is contained in the fact that the regular sleeping apartments of the family are two commodious outdoor enclosures, securely roofed, floored and buttressed and filled in above with screens and canvas curtains, and that there is also a fine barn and carriage and tool-house close by. Spread out through these quarters, the house party might easily have been a foraging detail from the army of the Amazons. Foraging was easily first in the order of occupation when this gay party was not in bivouac.

To begin at the beginning of this festive affair, the Williams family, pater, mater, filia et al., were posted off to Coronado for a week. Then, like a battleship going into an engagement, the decks were cleared for action. There is in all homes a certain amount of encumbrance not necessary at all when the place is to be furnished by pretty summer girls in stunning summer frocks.

"Supply merely the utilities, let the guests be the decoration," is one of Miss Williams's rules for the house party al fresco. This will develop unexpected capacity in even a small home.

After extending the capacity of the house to its extreme limit, the barn was attacked. This is a new building with a cement floor, and it was only necessary to roll out the trap and wagonette to secure something like a hospital ward for sleeping accommodations, a magnificent dining-room for daylight hours and the ideal spot for a barn dance when the gentlemen came out for the evening. The walls were obscured by corn stalks, vines and other autumn decorations, while huge pumpkin sentinels guarded the portals.

So jolly were the arrangements in the barn that sleeping quarters there went as prizes to the winners in various games and contests. The barn is equipped with shower baths and luxuries which even a country home might not afford. The horse corral and stable is much farther from the house. The barn must be given a large share of credit.

As for the eating arrangements, they were as simple as the rest. A simple bill of fare, with the zest of a good appetite, made keener by the unique surroundings, is far better than the menu a French chef would provide on such an occasion. And here comes in another California feature of this style of entertaining—the little ranch provides the luxuries. Here are some of the menus:

BREAKFAST.

Casaba melons (Williams garden.)
Smyrna figs (Williams orchard)
With cream (Williams Jersey.)
Eggs (Williams poultry yards.)
Bacon.
Toast. Coffee.

LUNCHEON.

Salad tomatoes (Williams garden) and cress (fresh from river bed.)
Olives (Williams ranch.)
Fried chicken (Williams poultry yards.)
Lettuce sandwiches, de jardin.
Fancy table grapes. Melons.
(From vineyard and garden.)

DINNER.

Barbecued beefsteaks.
Fried onions (Williams Bermudas.)
Roasted sweet potatoes (Williams garden.)
Guava jelly (home-made.)
Walnuts and raisins (from orchard and vineyard.)
Fruits (Williams garden.) Coffee.

Beefsteak for the big dinners, it will be observed, with a few simple items like bread and butter, were the only additional supplies to be provided in addition to the resources of the well-stocked gardens. This meant not only simplicity, but a quality that is quickly appreciated by city guests accustomed to products which have lost their delicacy in market-handling.

The method of providing a dinner for fifty with a kitchen equipment calculate dfor five or six is an interesting one. The gardener (who, by the way, furnished all the outside service employed for the occasion, without even the assistance of a domestic,) built a broiler of cobble stones. This, with an iron grating over the top, broiled the steaks to a turn. At the same time, the sweet potatoes were roasted in the ashes below. A portable oil-burning stove moved to the barn served to keep the coffee hot during the meal. The other viands were spread out upon the long tables and the service became a very simple matter of a few trips between the broiler and the table.

Dinner, on the night of the barbecue, was prolonged by many impromptu ceremonies. There were toasts and songs, jokes and jibes, with an undertow of laughter that threatened to carry under some of the strongest. There followed the barn dance, a rollicking, decorous, informal, infectious outburst of gay spirits. The orchestra, like the other features, was improvised. Several of the girls brought their mandolins and guitars, and they were given a cosy-corner behind a shock of corn and a pile of pumpkins in the barn, and the floor was quickly cleared for the dancing.

At 11:30 o'clock the gentlemen were escorted to the trolley line by their hostess and her score of guests with the essential chaperones. Midnight found the house party in preparations to retire. This does not mean that all was quiet on the Williams ranch when the cock first crew. It takes a long time for a house party of twenty-four girls to succumb. In the first place, it had to be settled who should submit to sleeping calmly in comfortable beds, when the mow, with its fragrant ne w hay and its tempting row of "shake-downs," called to experiences new. In the second place, there were dozens of unfinished conversations that would not wait until morning, and in some cases one of the participants had been lodged in the barn and another in the house, so that wireless telephoning was the only means of communication.

When all was at last quiet enough so that the mocking birds had begun to sing their plaintive songs from the eucalyptus trees near by, some wakeful member of the party heard the heavy footstep of a man on the gravel driveway. Shrill whispers followed, a smothered scream or two, and a scene. Miss Williams assured her guests that the dog asleep on the front porch would not allow a stranger on the place after dark without giving an alarm. When quiet was again restored, a rosy light was flushing the sky above the Sierra Madre peaks in the east. And with the passing of the morning dew the guests flocked out as fresh as the Shasta daisies that lined the driveways.

Such was the character of the "house party al fresco," which might almost be entitled a house party without a house, for the Williams roof, taken by itself, would hardly make an umbrella for a party of that size. It was one of the most successful, simple and at the same time imposing functions that have been chronicled. There is an increasing tendency in society to feel that entertaining is not to be thought of without unlimited resources at hand. Miss Williams's house party recalled the fact that the spirit of hospitality is of purer gold than are the gilded halls of palaces.

INSURANCE WORLD.

The latest aspirant for the insurance success is the People's Anthracite Insurance Company, of Scranton, Pa., which, according to its advertisements, is now being organized. Its projector states to the public: "You need a Cave-in Insurance Company," and he purposes that the Anthracite shall insure not only against fire, but also against mine caves. The capital of the company is to be $1,000,000, and the surplus $1,000,000.

The Travelers' has tabulated its experience with automobile accidents for the year ending September 1, 1909, the claims being for owners and occupants, and excluding those paid to pedestrians or occupants of teams struck by autos. The claims number 525, with a total of $96,114, of which $29,600 was paid for death claims, with an average amount of $7400. The average amount of accidental claims was $111.16. The largest indemnity paid for one accident was $7700. Since September 1, the company has paid four additional fatal claims, with a total of $25,750 accident insurance and $20,000 life insurance.

Much interest is being taken in Tennessee in the suit begun against the Individual Underwriters of New York and the large Tennessee concerns which have been taking insurance in that organization, as it holds out to the agents a chance to recover the large lines they have lost to Lloyds and inter-insurance concerns. The Tennessee law provides that all companies operating in the State must pay a premium tax of 2½ per cent. and that if a property owner insures in a company not licensed in the State the tax can be assessed against him. The Individual Underwriters has been operating in Tennessee for a number of years, controlling several large lines, but has paid no taxes, and demand has now been made on its customers. It is probable that the entire insurance tax law will be tested before the matter is settled.

Sickness insurance for all students of the University of Wisconsin is a plan advocated by Prof. Edward Kremers, head of the department of pharmacy, in a talk to a class of students in pharmacy. Dr. Kremers proposes to assess a fee of $1 a head against all students registering at the university. There would be a physician, or two if necessary, employed by the university to attend only to students who may be ill or who suffer accidents.

The Massachusetts annual insurance report now lists the official salaries of the life companies doing business in this State, and this includes most or all of those of any consequence. By this report it appears that the Equitable pays its president $80,000; the Metropolitan $90,000, and the Prudential $65,000, and these are the only companies which pay more than $50,000. Such a salary is high even for the big companies, and the higher ones in the cases mentioned are indefensible and particularly discreditable for the Metropolitan and Prudential, which do a large industrial or 10-cent-a-week insurance among the very poor, says the Springfield Republican. It may be of interest to record the salaries paid at present to the heads of the more important companies. Of the Massachusetts companies the Massachusetts Mutual now pays $20,000, the New England Mutual apparently the same, though $22,708 is given for the 1908 average; the State Mutual, $14,000; the Berkshire, $12,000, and the John Hancock, $15,000. The National Life of Montpelier, which ranks with the largest Massachusetts companies, pays $15,000; the Union Mutual of Portland, $15,000; the Aetna, $29,340 (average for 1908;) Connecticut General, $7500; Connecticut Mutual, $15,000; Phoenix, $17,500; Travelers, $25,000; Union Central of Cincinnati, $25,000; Provident Life, $20,000; Pennsylvania Mutual, $25,000; Northwestern, $26,000; Mutual Benefit of New Jersey, $25,000; Fidelity, $26,000, and Manhattan, $20,000.

Beautiful Hands With Housework

A dainty little housewife who does all her own work entertained a few neighbors at luncheon the other day, and the conversation turned, as it frequently does when she is present, upon the remarkable beauty of her soft, white, clear-skinned hands. "I don't see how you do it," sighed one of the guests, with a despairing glance at her own rough, red hands. "It's simple enough," laughed the hostess in reply. "It's only a matter of soap. The woman who does housework needs a healing, soothing, balmy soap that prevents irritation and roughness and keeps the skin soft and healthy—that's all. My hands are as you see them, because I've used Harfina Soap for years, and never use anything else." A good thing for all women who prize beautiful hands to remember. Ask your druggist or any of the following druggists for this splendid soap. 25c a cake, or sent by mail on receipt of 25c. Send for book, "The Care of the Skin."

But came out she just shot up. She was like these bulbs you keep in the cellar which take root and get ready to grow down there, and then when you put them out in the sun they just shoot up. That's the way she did when the sun came.

"My brother came up the next September and she was then not quite a year old, but she weighed twenty-seven pounds, and ran around everywhere and was perfectly well. He couldn't seem to bet over it. He just sat there and watched her, and every now and then he'd say, 'Just look at her head. Just look at those legs.'"

Even if Mrs. Peary had not been there to tell me, I should have known that it was healthy to be born in the frozen North the minute the man who brought me across to the island told me that the pretty, outdoors-y, hearty, healthy sixteen-year-old girl who came out of the house to greet us was Marie Aghnito Peary, the snow baby.

Marie is very enthusiastic with regard to all things that have anything to do with the land of the Eskimo. The last time she was up there she was 10 years old, and she says she never had a better time in her life than she did playing with those Eskimos, and she wants to go up and meet them all over again.

"Every time he goes up," she said, "papa takes messages from me to them, and then he tells me how they all are when he comes back. And this time he says that the little girl I used to play with the most is married and has three children. And she was two years younger than I am.

"I suppose if I should go up there now I'd be regarded as a regular old maid," laughed the snow baby.

MISS PEARY.

Miss Peary, when she is at home, goes to school in Washington, but she has not absorbed any of the southern languidness of manner. Apparently a compound of being born in the North and brought up in the South makes a westerner, for that, if you didn't know, is what you would certainly think Miss Peary was.

Her description of the way the Peary family received the great news had a very western breeziness about it.

"Mother had gone upstairs with a sick headache," she said, "and had told me if any reporters came—you know they were bothering us to pieces about that Cook business—to tell them she couldn't see them.

"Well, a reporter came to the door and I told him and he looked kind of queer and he said: 'I have news from your father.' Well, I had been standing with the screen door between us, but with that I just flung it open and fairly seized him by the lapel and I said, 'What is it?' and he held out the telegram and I read it: 'Have nailed the Stars and Stripes to the pole!' Well, I just made one dash up the stairs for mother. Half way across the living-room floor I had a funny little recollection—the way you remember things when you're terribly excited—that I had left that man standing up, and I called back over my shoulder, 'Won't you sit down?' and I could hear him laugh as I dashed up the stairs."

"What did your mother say?" I asked.

"She said, 'Isn't it glorious? I don't believe it.'" answered Marie.

Mrs. Peary laughed a bit at that. "Yes," she said, "I was so afraid it might be some hoax, coming just as it did right after the other news."

Robert, aged 6, a yellow-haired, sturdy youngster, is the latest member of the Peary family and I thought I ought not to leave him out, so I asked what he said when he heard the news.

"I just said 'Bully!'" responded Master Robert, promptly. "I was standing on a great big rock when sister called out: 'Robert, father's found the pole!' and I just yelled 'Bully!' and I was so glad I most fell right off that rock."

"I am afraid Robert doesn't understand a great deal about it," said Mrs. Peary. "He's glad his father is back and he's glad he got what he wanted, but he is awfully disappointed that Mr. Peary didn't bring the pole back with him. He thought he was going to and he had planned to have it used for a flagpole on the island."

EXCITING.

Perhaps the most exciting of Mrs. Peary's northern experiences was in the year 1900. Commander Peary went north in the year 1898, not expecting to be back for four years and not expecting to see his wife during that time.

A few months after he went a little girl was born. The news of his daughter's birth went to him on the next supply ship, but by the time it reached him the little girl had died, so that by the time he knew it was born it was dead.

"I knew that," said Mrs. Peary, "and it made me so crazy that I felt I had simply got to see him and talk things over, so I went north on the next supply ship, intending to spend the summer with him.

"But, instead of finding him, we found letters from him that said he would not be down until fall. You see, he had no idea that I would be on the ship. Well, we started in the direction in which he was, but it took us a week to go twenty-five miles, and when we got that far the ocean froze up and we had to stay there all winter.

"I didn't mind until it got time for the commander to come in the fall and he didn't come. I tried to send Eskimos to go and hunt for him, but they said he was dead—that they would find the whole party dead and they weren't willing to go on that account, for all Eskimos are terribly afraid of dead people.

"They insisted that if the party were alive the Esquimo men would have come back to their wives, who were near us, because they would know that their families wouldn't have any way of providing for themselves.

"Cheerful, wasn't it?

"Of course, I took all the families on board with me and fed them, but that didn't bring the commander back."

It was not until the next May, when the ice broke up, that the commander reached his supply ship. In the meantime, his wife had to stay there alone with Marie and just one other person who could read and write—Capt. Bartlett.

"I brought a woman with me to help with the work and take care of Marie," said Mrs. Peary, "but in October, when the darkness began, she went crazy and was out of her head all winter.

"Oh, they often do," in answer to my look of horror. "The darkness, you know, is the worst thing about it all. You simply can't imagine it here. Just think how it would be if all day and all the next night and the next day and so on for weeks it should be just as dark as it is outdoors in the country on a good dark night. Of course, we had the moon some of the time, but no more than you do here, and then it was often cloudy. We were too far north for the northern lights. Sounds funny, doesn't it, but it is a fact, we were too far from the magnetic pole to get much of any display of that sort.

"And besides the lonesomeness and the darkness, I had the uncertainty about the commander, and then my other baby having just died, I was worried all the time about Marie, and not intending to stay, we had no doctor. And then my mother had expected me back in the fall, and there was absolutely no way to get any word to her, of course, so it wasn't the happiest of winters."

"But you are repaid for everything now, aren't you?" I asked.

"Oh, yes," said Mrs. Peary, while the crooked smile outdid itself. "Only——" and then a sigh followed: "You see what we have been through. Of course, they were experiences of our own seeking. Of course, no one asked the commander to find the pole. It was just in his system and had to be gotten out, I guess. But he did it, you know, and it is terrible not to have things perfect now when we ought to be absolutely happy.

"You see," with sudden intensity, and infinitely more feeling than she had shown when she spoke of her own experiences, even the most terrible of them, "if Cook had really reached the pole first, I don't believe any one would have been quicker to go to him and shake him by the hand than Commander Peary. He would know what it meant, what Cook had accomplished. But when the commander knows he didn't, how can he, how can he?

"Of course," proudly, "I know it will be proven to the scientists—and very soon, too—but I want the whole world to know."

If the whole world could have only been a jury, and that cottage the jury box, and Mrs. Peary could have pleaded for her client with the splendidly convincing conviction with which she spoke to me, I am sure the verdict would have been brought in in ten minutes.

An Awkward Moment.

A young man named Johnson married, and for the honeymoon he arranged to take his bride to a town which he knew well. He was fond of visiting this town, he told his wife, because at the hotel where he intended staying "they served such delicious honey at every meal."

"That will be delightful," said his bride.

The couple arrived at the hotel just in time for tea. Johnson escorted his bride to a table, and looked quizzically at it.

There was no honey on the table, and none in the room. Johnson was surprised, and called a waiter.

"See here!" said he. "Where's my honey?"

The waiter thought deeply for a few moments. Then suddenly his face brightened as he remembered the favour in which a certain barmaid had been held by several customers.

"She don't work here no more," he said.—[London Home Weekly.

Orrine Does Cure Drunkenness

This is a positive fact known to tens of thousands of wives and mothers of this land. They know Orrine is a reliable remedy for the cure of drunkenness, because it has restored their loved ones to lives of sobriety and usefulness. Every one of these women bought Orrine with full confidence that it would effect a cure or their money would be refunded to them if it failed. This guarantee is in each box. No other remedy for the cure of drunkenness is sold with this liberal guarantee, but Orrine has been so uniformly successful that the makers want the buyers to know that they have full protection if it should fail in any instance. We never publish letters of patients but recently this letter came to us from Dr. Nolte, 8th and Race Sts., Philadelphia, Pa. Read it and you will readily appreciate why Orrine is so well thought of:

"I have had a remarkable case of inebriacy under my personal observation. The patient drank heavily for fifteen years and reached a degraded condition, which caused the breaking up of his family and separation from his wife. Every hope was given up of ever saving the man from his strong desire for drink, and only a mother's interest finally persuaded him to voluntarily take treatment for his diseased condition. It was my pleasure to recommend Orrine, your liquor habit cure, and the treatment was taken faithfully. This was two years ago and the patient is now in a healthy condition and still abstains from the use of stimulants. I have sold Orrine for a number of years and have always found it to be satisfactory. I believe you have an exceptionally good treatment for this disease."

Orrine is prepared in two forms. No. 1, a powder, absolutely tasteless and odorless, given secretly in food or drink. Orrine No. 2, in pill form, is for those who wish to cure themselves. Orrine costs only $1 a box. The guarantee is in each box. Write for Free Orrine Booklet (mailed in plain sealed envelope) to Orrine Co., 913 Orrine Building, Washington, D. C. Orrine is for sale in this city by The Owl Drug Co., 320 S. Spring, Fifth and Broadway, 625 S. Spring.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE BLASPHEMER.

Two days after the railway accident Laura and her husband returned to Tankerlane Court, and brought with them the body of their child. Long before they arrived the whole district was in possession of the news, but the people did not know that the information had been concealed from them. It was reported that the unfortunate victim had died some hours after the disaster.

When the train reached the station it was dark, and the platform was deserted, save for the station master, a porter, Mr. Danby, the agent, and four stolid-looking men dressed in black. It was drizzling with rain, and the water ran from the roof of the building in tiny streams that sparkled in the light of the oil lamps.

Danby came forward to meet them, hat in hand, murmured a few words to Sir William, and then led the four somber-visaged men to a carriage, where the guard and porter stood with bared heads.

Then the men took out the tiny coffin—any one of them could have lifted it with one hand—and they slowly carried it to the hearse, which was waiting outside. The two parents followed, and not till they had disappeared, did the guard blow his whistle. Then several of the passengers, who had been looking out of the window, withdrew their heads, and the train proceeded on its way. The porter turned out the lights, and then went off to his supper.

Such was the home coming of the Tankerlanes, rulers of all the land as far as a man might ride in a single day, yet in their sorrow less to be envied than the poorest tenant on their estate. For the grief of the laborer is short, and is lightened by the knowledge that there is one less mouth to feed. But the grief of these two was hard, silent, and terrible. They could not even turn to one another for sympathy. Each had to bear the burden alone.

They had spoken but little to each other since they had first looked on the dead body of their child, and only the most commonplace remarks had passed between them. And the saddest thing of all was that an event which should have drawn them together with bonds of common sorrow, had apparently only set them further apart.

Laura had not shed a single tear since the first wild outburst of weeping. But her white, hard face, and the silent agony in her eyes had testified to the awful strength of her grief. She had even refused to see her father till after the funeral.

But when the quiet and simple ceremony was over, she allowed her husband to return to Tankerlane Court alone, and she drove back with Sam Vane to the farmhouse, where she had been born.

"Poor thing," said the wife of a laborer, as she watched the carriages leave the gate of the churchyard. "It's comfort she's waanting with that hard face. It's a good cry'd do her good."

"Seems to me," replied her husband slowly, "as it's the judgment of the Almighty. Nothing good ever came of them secret marriages. I don't hold with hidin' things up."

"Then you bain't a Christian," his wife retorted hotly. "Them thoughts didn't come to you fete time, when you drunk more of his beer than was good for you, and I had to lead you home like a dog. That's not Christian charity. If I were you, I'd pray for 'em both next Sunday in church, and ask pardon at same time, for un-Christian back-biting."

The man spat on the ground, and followed his wife meekly up the village. But his words had voiced the common sentiment. The death of the child was the "Judgment of God." Somehow, it had transpired that the two bereaved parents had not been united in a church, and a registry office, to those who had never seen one, savored of actual immorality.

But Laura, who neither knew nor cared anything for the popular verdict on her bereavement, drove back in silence to the farmhouse under the hill, and when she and her father were alone in the same room, where she had sung Tosti's "Good-by" more than two years ago, her grief found vent at last in tears, and she broke out into a storm of weeping that convulsed her whole body.

Old Sam Vane took her in his arms, and spoke to her as he had often spoken in the days of her childhood, when some tiny grief had brought tears to her eyes.

"There, there, Laurie," he said gently, "'twill all be well yith 'ee, see if it won't. 'Tis the Lord's will, little one, the Lord's will, and 'tain't for us to cry out."

"Oh, you do not know," she moaned, "you do not know." And then, thrusting her hands together in a wild fury of grief. "Oh, God," she cried, "What have I done? Where was the sin? Where was the sin?"

Her father looked at her in terror. Her eyes glittered with the light of madness, and a tress of her glorious auburn hair, loosened by a wild thrust of her hand, had fallen over her shoulders. She looked like some fallen angel breathing out rebellion against God.

"Laurie, Laurie," cried her father, "you must be yourself, child: you must not look like that. 'Tis the will of the Lord, the will of the Lord."

"There is no God," she answered coldly, and her voice was more terrible in its calmness than in its fury. "No God would suffer such things in this world. I say that there is no God, and I mean it from the bottom of my heart."

Alas, poor soul, like many a one before her, she fancied for the moment that she was the central fact in the scheme of creation, and that the Justice of the Universe must stand or fall on the merits of her own individual case.

"Silence, child," said her father sternly, "are you seeking the portion of the blasphemer? I will not listen to 'ee, Laurie, and if you talks like that in my hearin', you leave my house. I thought 'ee had more grit. 'Twarn't thus I spoke when your mother died—my dear old comrade of twenty year'n more. 'Tis the Lord's will that those we love shall leave us."

He spoke harshly, though his heart ached for his daughter's misery. His shrewd mind already guessed that there was something more in the girl's heart than sorrow for the loss of her child, but he forebore to aggravate her grief with any attempt to learn the cause of it.

"'Tis the Lord's will, Laurie," he repeated more gently, and these words represented all the philosophy of his simple life.

She did not answer him, but, seating herself in a chair, she gazed round the room, as though trying to find something which might divert her thoughts from her present sorrow. Her father watched her anxiously.

"It all looks the same," she said, after a long pause. "Tell me all about yourself, father. I did not come here to make you miserable. I came to receive your forgiveness."

"You've had that a long time, child," the old man answered, "though I don't deny as it were hard at first and mortal lonely."

"I know, I know," she cried. "I am ashamed of myself. But he would not let me write. Old Sir Robert——" She paused. She had no wish to utter the lie in so many words, and her father would understand.

"Ay, he were a proud man," Sam Vane said grimly. "But tell me, Laurie——"

"There is nothing to tell," she interrupted quickly. "I want to hear all about yourself."

He told her the story of his quiet, hard-lived life during the past two years. It was dull, monotonous, and unrelieved by any event of importance. The death of a favorite horse, the failure of a potato crop, the incompetency of the women who had succeeded Laura in the dairy work, these were the tragedies of the story. But Laura did not smile as she listened to them. She knew the great tragedy of his life had been real enough, and, though he did not speak of it, she could see the marks of it on his face. And the thought of it was yet another burden that she had to bear, yet another cause of self-reproach, yet another instance of the cruelty of fate.

When he had finished his dull little narrative, they were both silent. Then Laura rose to her feet, and, crossing over to his chair, placed her arms around his neck, and kissed him.

"Dear old father," she said tenderly, "you seem to be the only sure and constant thing in the world. Everything else changes, and slips away from under one's feet, but in spite of all my sins your love remains—only your love remains."

"Tush, tush, child!" he replied. "You've a great and fine life before you. You'll have the power of doin' good to a lot of folk as needs it. And you've your husband, and I know well he loves you. Men in his position don't marry farmers' daughters unless they love them. God has given you a good husband, lass, and, if He has thought fit to take the little one from 'ee—well, that is for the best; sure sartin that is for the best. You must think of your husband, lass. You need each other now." There was a power of sorrow in that hard face of his. "Your place is by his side."

"My place is by his side," she repeated mechanically, like a parrot trying to learn some set form of words.

The old man rose to his feet and looked hard in her face.

"Is he not good to 'ee, lass?" he asked.

"He is very good."

"And he loves 'ee, too; I know it."

"Yes, father, he loves me."

"And it is to him you'll go and find comfort, lass?"

She was silent and turned away her head.

"Don't you love him, lass?" he asked sadly.

She was still silent.

"Don't you love him as you've sworn to love and honor and obey?"

"We were married in a registry office," replied Laura coldly; "I did not swear to love him."

"Then you've sold yourself to him for his money, his broad lands, his name—and your heart—oh, Laurie, may the Lord have pity on you!"

"He has punished me," she replied in a dull voice.

Sam Vane placed his hands on her shoulders and looked gravely into her white face.

"Go home, lass," he said sternly, "and God forgive you. Go to your husband and give him the love he needs. Now is the time, Laurie—in the hour of sorrow when the heart is sore and tender. Go to him, lass. He will welcome you. I've seen it in his face. You should be all in all to each other at a time like this."

"I will go," she said wearily. "Good-by, father, dear."

"Good-by, child," he said gently, "and remember 'tis all the Lord's will."

He kissed her tenderly, and saw her into the cariage which was waiting at the door. And a quarter of an hour afterward she was at Tankerlane Court.

"Where is Sir William?" she asked a footman, as she crossed the threshold of her home.

"In the library, my lady," the man replied.

She made her way to the library door, and then, turning back, went up to her bedroom. She had resolved to make peace with her husband, and give him the sympathy of a loving wife. It would not come from the heart, but, glossed over with the emotion of the moment, it would pass for the real thing. It was the only course open to her. Life would be unbearable without a better and kindlier understanding between them. This was the hour, the appointed time. If she let this opportunity slip it would never come again. And yet she was afraid to enter the library, and went up to her bedroom to pray for strength.

Long and earnestly she prayed, asking for forgiveness and help in her difficulties.

"Oh, God!" she cried, "if I have blasphemed Thee, I ask for pardon. If I have sinned, forgive me. But keep me from temptation; teach me, too, to forgive and forget. Let me do my duty as a wife and the mother of the child Thou hast taken from me."

She bowed her head in silence, and then, moved by a swift impulse, that came as if in answer to her prayer, she hurried downstairs, and opened the library door.

Her husband was sitting in a chair by one of the windows. On a small table by his side was a half-empty bottle of brandy. His flushed cheeks and the dull, stupid look in his eyes told Laura the truth. He was drunk, within an hour of his child's funeral.

But Laura, brave in the strength of her resolution, crossed fearlessly to his side. He did not even look at her.

"I have come back, dear," she said nervously, and then paused.

"Very kind of you," he growled, in a thick voice. "Well, you can clear out, and be damned to you!"

She looked for a moment into his bloodshot eyes. Then she left the room and closed the door behind her.

CHAPTER XXIII.

THE LONG, GRAY NIGHT.

For two days, Laura Tankerlane refused to see her husband, and had all her meals sent up to her room; and during these two days her mind sank back into the darkness from which one brief moment of brave resolve had lifted it. And the darkness was more terrible and overwhelming than it had ever been.

"There is no God," was again the bitter cry of her heart, "or, if there is a God, He has forsaken me. I am alone, and there is no one to help me."

Her mind, already clouded by her long sufferings, by her useless sacrifice, and by the death of her child, was now plunged in a still deeper shadow. She had made an effort at reconciliation, and had been repulsed. For the first time in her life she had used a term of endearment to her husband, and he had answered it with a brutal oath. A woman in a more reasonable frame of mind would have remembered that Sir William Tankerlane, who was also distraught with grief, and who still smarted under his wife's previous coldness, was in no fit state to control either his language or his actions. He had drunk heavily to drown his sorrow, and was ashamed of his words as soon as they had left his lips.

But Laura remembered none of this; she only recalled the brutality of his language, and the disgusting spectacle which had greeted her eyes as she had entered the room. She had made up her mind to have no more to do with him; to live with him at Tankerlane Court, so as to avoid a public scandal, but to live her own life apart.

If this state of mind had continued, it would merely have concerned herself and her husband. It would have implied a certain resignation to the blows of fate; it would have shown a certain dogged courage which had marked out a dreary path for itself, and had resolved to follow it to the end—a path beset with difficulty, but which could be trodden alone through all the long, gray night.

But a more selfish and more evil thought had already come into the mind of the distracted woman. "Why," she argued to herself, "should I let myself be broken on the wheel? Have I no strength to resist? Am I too weak to control my own destiny? Why should I be crushed without an effort to get some happiness out of life? Why should I not rebel, take my fate in my own hands, and defy all the powers that wish to destroy me?"

These wild, and reckless thoughts leapt through her brain like fire, and cast lurid pictures on the dark background of her future life. She saw the face of John Shil, and the fierce passion in his eyes. She saw a home in some distant land, where none could interfere with their happiness. She saw peace, and all the quiet content of love. And, as she saw these pictures—mere phantoms of the brain—she realized that all the realities were within her reach, if she dared to stretch out her hand and grasp them. She saw that a single word would bring John Shil to her side, and that he would care nothing for public scandal; that he would count the world well lost for love. She had but to lift her finger, and light would stream through the darkness over her head, the past would shrink away from her into the gloom behind, and the future would lie clear and sweet in the sunshine.

And the price? What would it cost to turn this dream of happiness into an actual fact? A broken oath? Not even that, for she had only sworn to marry Tankerlane, and she had already married him. A stain on her honor? Tankerlane himself had dishonored her. The life and happiness of the man she loved? Ah, there was the difficulty: there was the crux of the whole problem. It was to save her lover that she had sacrificed herself in the first instance. Perhaps if she deserted her husband, she would undo all the good she had done. She knew nothing of the oath he had sworn to Leonore.

And through all the dreary hours the visions of future happiness flashed up and disappeared like the gleams of a revolving light. She had thrust aside the distinction between good and evil. She did not wish to know what religion or morality or honor required of her. All thoughts of duty to either God or man had been buried in that tiny grave in the Laverstone churchyard. She only wanted to know what would bring most happiness to herself and the man she loved.

But at the end of the two days she had come to no definite decision. The wheel of her thoughts revolved continually, and she always came back to the point from which she had started.

On the third day, however, Sir William Tankerlane asserted his authority as master of the house, and insisted on an interview with his wife.

"Laura," he said humbly, as he entered her room and closed the door behind him, "I am sorry that I had to insist on seeing you. But it is impossible for us to go on like this. I behaved like a brute the other night. But I was not in my right senses at the time. The way you left me after the funeral to return here alone, the thought of the poor, little kid—I had to stupefy my brain with drink. I don't excuse myself, but I ask for your forgiveness."

Laura did not answer him, and she did not even turn her head toward him. She was seated in a large armchair facing the window, and she stared out at the trees in the park; her hands were folded listlessly in her lap, and her whole attitude was one of dreamy indifference. She seemed singuarly beautiful in her deep mourning. The black dress set off the whiteness of her skin, and the glinting copper of her hair.

The man paused for a second, and bit his lips with vexation. Then he crossed the room to her side.

"Laurie," he said gently, "have you nothing to say to me?"

"Nothing," she replied, without turning her head.

"Does that mean you refuse to forgive me?"

"It means that I cannot forget."

He seated himself in a chair facing her, and looked into her hard, pitiless eyes.

"Laurie," he said slowly, "we cannot go on like this. It will make life unbearable for both of us."

"You knew what to expect," she replied. "You can hardly have expected me to love you."

"I knew what to expect," he said gravely, "but when the child died, I thought that perhaps—oh, can't you understand, Laurie? It was our child—not yours, not mine, but ours. And I hoped that the loss might bring us nearer together."

"It has set us farther apart," she answered coldly. "It was for the sake of the child that I married you. And now—" She looked at him for a moment in hatred, and then rose to her feet. "You see how God has approved of my sacrifice," she cried fiercely. "But I am not crushed yet. I still have strength to live my own life. All the better part of me is dead. It was buried yonder—in the churchyard. I gave myself to you for the sake of my son. There is no reason now why I should stay with you."

"Only your duty as a wife," the man replied.

"Duty!" she exclaimed. "I have done my duty, and see how acceptable it has been in the sight of God. I can promise you that henceforth duty will not trouble me; that I have no conscience, no honor, no regard for anyone but myself. My whole life has been a sacrifice—and it has been all in vain."

"May I ask what you intend to do?" he said calmly. "What does all this high-flown speech boil down to? Tell me plainly what you are going to do? We may as well be honest with each other."

"I do not know yet what I am going to do," she replied. "It is possible that I may leave you, and find the happiness that I can never find here."

"In other words," said Tankerlane, "you are thinking of John Shil."

She did not answer, but, moving closer to the window, she looked out across the park. In the distance the spire of the village church was plainly visible through a network of leafless trees.

"I shouldn't go to John Shil, if I were you," he continued. "It would not be to his advantage."

She turned on him savagely. "Ah, you'd speak, would you," she cried. "But your oath holds good."

"I am not sure that it does," he replied, "but, even if I break it, I shall only be following your example. Perhaps I, too, am in that frame of mind which can fling honor and morality to the four winds of heaven."

"Please leave me," she said faintly; "I did not seek this interview. It is cruel at such a time as this. It is an insult to our dead child. Please leave me. I shall do nothing yet. I must have time to think."

"Laurie!" he cried passionately. "You know how I love you!"

She was silent, and, walking away from him, picked up a book, and opened it.

He glanced at her for a moment, then the look of entreaty on his face changed to a hard smile, and he left the room.

For a whole month Laura remained at Tankerlane Court. She was rarely seen outside the house, and never outside the grounds. Her father was the only visitor that she ever received, and, though she welcomed his visits as a relief from the monotony of her life, she never opened her heart to him, and the old man prayed in vain for some softening influence on the apparent hardness of her nature.

In the neighborhood it was rumored that Lady Tankerlane's mind had become unhinged by the death of her child. It was only natural that she should cut herself off from all society; but the servants' gossip had revealed a most unnatural state of affairs at Tankerlane Court. It was reported that Sir William Tankerlane and his wife never met, and lived separate lives in the same house. That this should be the case, in the face of the recent sad event which ought to have drawn husband and wife more closely together, set many tongues wagging. And Lady Tankerlane formed a staple subject of conversation, both at the dinner tables of the rich and in the public houses of the entire district.

"There's something at the bottom of all this," was the verdict among her social equals.

"'Tis the judgment of the Lord," was the opinion of the lower classes, who are always well informed as to the intentions of the Almighty.

"My poor child," cried old Sam Vane, in the silence and solitude of his home, "Oh Lord, have mercy on her in her hour of trouble."

But Laura herself lived her own dull monotonous life, as though every minute of it were a task that she had to perform against her will. Dreary day succeeded dreary day, and the only hours of peace were the hours of sleep. Remorse, regret, bitterness of spirit, rebellion against the world and Him who made it—these were the devils that had taken up their abode in her heart. And their voices shrieked and babbled through all the long gray night.

Then one evening she found a newspaper laid upon her dinner table. A small paragraph was carefully marked in blue pencil, and as she read it, the hot blood rushed to her cheeks and the paper trembled in her hands. The paragraph, which was part of a column of society news, announced the engagement of Mr. John Shil to the well-known actress, Miss Leonore Jackson.

For a few moments Laura stood motionless. Her powers of thought and movement were paralysed. The lines of print danced before her eyes against a crimson background, like devils dancing in the flames of hell.

Then she walked unsteadily to the bell and rang it.

"Who sent this paper up here?" she asked the maid who answered the bell.

"Sir William sent it, my lady."

"Thank you," Laura said curtly. "You can go."

And when the girl left the room, Laura Tankerlane laughed, and, going to a sideboard, poured herself out a tumbler full of wine, and drank half of it at a single gulp. The news, instead of reconciling her to her marriage with Sir William, had fired her mind into a white hot flame of fury. So long as John Shil was free she could wait, she could drag out the weary hours in the hope that time would set all things right at last. But if John Shil once married this other woman, he would be lost to her forever.

"I will take him from her," she cried; "I have no pity. What a fool I was to listen to her pleadings! Yet who could imagine that any woman would be so vile? I will take him. I will live my own life. All else can go to the wall. Here's an end to the long gray night, an end to sorrow, an end to dull respectability and honor, and prudence, and all the words that men have coined to make slaves of their womenkind. Here's an end to it all, I say, an end to the night; and here's to the health of the dawn—the dawn of love."

She raised the glass to her lips, and then, as though seized with a sudden madness, she flung it on the table, and the red wine spurted up from the cloth like blood.

Speaker Cannon's Extravagance.

Some years ago, when Speaker Cannon was a plain member, he took one of his constituents to dine with him at rather a good hotel in Washington. It was in the fall and Mr. Cannon ate very heartily of that American edible, Indian corn; in fact, almost his entire dinner consisted of corn. The Westerner looked at him and said: "Say, Mr. Cannon, what does it cost you to board here?" "About $5 a day," said Mr. Cannon. "I'll be durned," drawled his constituent, "ef I don't think it would be cheaper fer you to board at a livery stable!"—[The Argonaut.

DEVELOPING BUST and CHEST

Deep breathing helps greatly in developing. Every morning upon arising and at night before retiring; afterward massage with Melorose Cream, and three times a day take Willard White Co.'s Vaucaire tablets. The Vaucaire treatment is said not only to enlarge the bust, but also fill out the other portions of the body which are undeveloped. It is really necessary to continue taking the tablets for at least six weeks before any decided change is noted, although exceptional cases have been recorded where one or two weeks have caused a wonderful transformation in the way of adding flesh. One thing must be borne in mind, that Dr. Vaucaire advises drinking quantities of water between meals while the galega is being used. It is essential that the genuine imported galega be used. Such as Willard White Co.'s Vaucaire tablets contains.—Mlle. Merlyn, America's greatest authority on Health and Beauty Culture.

Willard White Company, Chicago, Ill.:

Dear Sirs—Am in receipt of your letter asking to use my letter as testimonial. Indeed, I have no objection, for I really think your Vaucaire Tablets are almost magical. I can't say too much in praise of them. I have improved wonderfully in every way, especially my female health and my nervous system. The two dollars I have spent for the Vaucaire Galega Tablets have done me more good than hundreds I have spent in the past with physicians who did me very little good, if any. I feel so well now and enjoy every moment of my life. My daily duties are a pleasure instead of a task. I will gladly and conscientiously recommend your Vaucaire Galega Tablets. Am enclosing order for another box of them. Please send them at once, as I am almost out. Very sincerely,

MRS. J. M. PUGH.

Gossip of Interesting People.

HEREABOUTS.

H. S. McCARTEY, one of the most energetic boosters for the Alberta district of Canada, who arrived in this city, has been a guest at the Lankershim the past week. Reasons for his boosting are obvious when it becomes known that McCartey for several years has been representative of the Alberta district in the Canadian Parliament. He is a [illegible] barrister, with a smile that won't come off. His speech is often enthusiastic and always carries with it assurance of strict truth. "More wheat will grow in the Alberta country in the coming five years than could be consumed by the entire population of the continent of America," he said. "It is bringing fortunes to farmers who were starving in other parts of the world. People from the United States are in the greatest measure responsible for the rapid growth of Alberta. They make the best citizens Canada has, and are just as loyal to their adopted country as to the one they came from. Railroads are also to be thanked for the development of Alberta. They have come to the assistance of the farmer every year when the immense crops were in the harvest and have hauled them out without any serious delays." McCartey declared for California also. "It seems rather good to be in a warm, sunny place at this time of the year, after many seasons spent where the winter begins with October," he announced.

"Rubber." That's the pet word of H. S. Firestone. It should be, since Firestone owes his wealth to rubber. He is a manufacturer of automobile tires and other rubber goods, and has been a guest at the Alexandria a few days. "Just a tour of inspection, to see whether my products are as well known in the far West as in the East, has brought me to Los Angeles and will take me to all of the other large cities of the Coast," said Firestone. Asked where the future rubber supply would come from, Firestone declared that Central and South America will probably furnish a great part of it. "Only in the last five years, the cultivation of rubber has been taken up in a scientific manner," said he. "It [illegible] for Americans to go to Mexico and Central America and set out thousands of rubber trees, many of which are already in bearing, and are therefore a factor in the rubber market. No matter how great the production becomes, there will never be sufficient rubber in the market to cause it to become cheap. The demand for tires, heels, for plumbing supplies and other uses grows each year, while the production or supply of crude rubber is almost at a standstill."

Known as one of the principal mine owners of Western Mexico, is the name of Otto Kuch, a German banker and formerly an extensive [illegible] in the republic of the south, who was at the Van Nuys the past week. "Western Mexico is in a greater period of development than ever before, and much of the work of development is being done in the Chihuahua district," said Mr. Kuch. "The progress is due to American capital. Mine operations are extended and many valuable properties are actually being worked for all there is in them, for the mineral that is in them, not just for the purpose of disposing of them to men who know nothing of mining and are as a result frequently stuck with worthless property." Accompanying the banker are his wife, a young daughter and a [illegible]. They have just returned from a sojourn in Germany, the land in which Mr. Kuch was born.

Los Angeles is not the only place in which people are purchasing real estate, according to K. J. Vawter, manager of the Great Eastern Realty Company of Philadelphia, who has been at the Van Nuys for several days. "More money is going into realty now than into any other manner of investments," said Vawter. "People feel assured of the absolute safety of realty investments. They receive a tangible asset when they buy a farm or any kind of property, something they can actually stand on, look at or point out as being their own, as against nothing but a piece of paper when they purchase some stock in a large corporation, railroad or bank. A number of panics has shown that property can always be turned into cash when other stocks cannot be purchased. They have also shown that real estate seldomly if ever depreciates in value for any length of time."

"Americans form the greatest nation of smokers in the world," said [illegible] de la Barra, one of the most extensive cigar manufacturers in this country, yesterday. "It is a habit that will never be stamped out, this smoking habit. Every year finds a larger production of cigars and cigarettes despite the anti-tobacco crusades throughout the United States. As it is now, the smokers are asking better grades of cigars. The 5-cent cigars are not nearly as popular as the three-for-a-quarter brands, or the 10-cent straights. Naturally a greater consumption of tobacco has militated against the quality of cheaper cigars in so far as prices of the weed have increased." Mr. de la Barra is accompanied by his wife on his western trip, and has rooms at the Alexandria. From here he will return to his New York

"The actual progression of Los Angeles is one little dreamed of by staid Easterners," said T. J. Falvey, president of the Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance Company of Boston, who is spending a few days at the [illegible] while here looking to the establishment of a branch of his corporation. He is not only prominently identified in the insurance business, but has other interests of varied nature and of extensive character. Through the agency of the Hibernia Bank of San Francisco he has established the first branch of the bonding company on the Pacific Coast. "To conservative business men of the East the growth of Los Angeles and other cities of the West seems almost an impossibility," he declared. "I believe that Los Angeles is more metropolitan than many of the cities that lay claim to that title, and that its financial institutions are comparable with any in the country." Mrs. Falvey accompanies her husband, and she has been visiting a number of Los Angeles friends.

[illegible] Miller, one of the largest men physically as well as in the business interests of Omaha, Neb., has been in the city for a number of days, and is staying at the Alexandria. While it has been no task to discover him in the hotel lobby when present, he is always the center of a group of enthusiastic friends, frequently [illegible], for he himself is owner of the Rome Hotel and the [illegible] of Omaha. His interest in step with the hotel business [illegible] president of the Miller Investment Company, vice-president of the Promotion Committee, [illegible] in a measure with the local Chamber of Commerce, and has many other irons in the fire, so to speak. At San Francisco, he was elected to a vice-presidency in the Western Hotel Men's Association, and was a speaker at the banquet. "Tell no one, for fear it might get back home, but I really think a lot of Los Angeles," he remarked, facetiously. "This is a great town and it takes the newcomer to find it out. I am glad to know that the hotel men of the United States will have such an excellent place to hold their annual convention this coming summer, and I certainly have pledged myself to boost for Los Angeles on all future occasions."

At the hotels during the past week have been many railroad officials from various parts of the country. Among the more prominent of these the name of J. W. Kelly of Denver stands out. He is a special representative of the Denver, Northwestern and Pacific Railroad and with his wife, has been a guest at the Lankershim. "Traffic to the West? Why, it has been better this season than ever known before," replied Kelly to a query regarding travel conditions through Colorado toward the Coast. "The books of all the railroads show an increase of business across the country, due partly to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition at Seattle, the Portola celebration in San Francisco and earlier in the season, the Elks' convention in Los Angeles. All of these have brought larger numbers to see what the great West really is." Another prominent railroad man, who for several days was a guest at the Alexandria, was E. H. Fitzhugh, an official of the Canadian Pacific. His headquarters is Montreal, Can., and he has been on a vacation trip. His wife, daughter and a secretary accompanied him.

PEOPLE OF THE COAST.

THOMAS SAMMONS, Consul-General for the United States at Yokohama, at present in Tacoma, has presented to the Ferry Museum of that city a twelve-shot crossbow used in the Korean army more than seventy-five years ago. The weapon is of a pattern in use more than a century and a half ago, and fires with the rapidity of a modern magazine rifle. About seventy-five years ago the weapon was discarded, a better style taking its place.

Harry S. Swarth, assistant curator of the California Museum of Vertebrate Zoölogy, at Berkeley, has returned from a six months' trip among the islands of Southeastern Alaska with more than 1100 specimens of vertebrates of every description. Swarth was particularly successful in his exploration, having been equipped with a high-power launch, which allowed travel between the islands. While the main object of the trip was to discover the higher types of vertebrates of the islands and to note their geographical distribution, animals of all kinds were trapped, and in the collection brought back are birds, muskrats, porcupines, mink, otter, deer, mountain goats and bears. Among the new specimens found was that of the black wolf, which inhabits Prince of Wales Island and is only found there. This will be a subject for investigation by the department. On Coronation Island, adjacent, were found two new species of mice.

John Driver of San Leandro holds to the theory that life may be prolonged as an individual grows older by going without a hat. By this method, declares Driver, the light is permitted to enter the brain and draw the blood up to the head. For the past four years Driver has not worn a hat of any description, and says he is now reaping the benefit of the practice of going bare-headed. He is a strong advocate of an establishment of no-hat clubs in all parts of the county. Driver has reached the age of 63, and says that he will live to be 140 or 150 years of age if he continues to gain in strength as he has since he commenced going without a hat.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

MISS IVY E. WOODWARD, M. D., has been admitted to full membership in the Royal College of Physicians of London. It is the first time in its history that this body has conferred the coveted M.R.C.P. upon a woman, although some women have obtained the L.R.C.P., which latter indicates that the holder has been licensed to practice the medical profession.

Maria Maglieseo, arrested in Naples for pawning jewels belonging to another, is the only woman who ever followed the profession of bullfighting. She was born in Algeria. Her father was a shipowner and her mother an Arab. She ran away from home when 15 years old, and after several years spent in vagabondage she disguised herself as a man and fought as a matador in Spain.

Mrs. Sophia Lichtenfield, who ekes out a living by taking washings, contributed $80 at the annual convention of the Christian Missionary Alliance which was held at the Gospel Tabernacle in New York.

Mrs. Josephine Sullivan is the first policewoman of Chicago. She was sworn in the other day and invested with all the authority and privileges given to special policemen of that city.

Mrs. Bessie Laythe Scovell of Minnesota has completed a course of lectures in the summer schools for teachers by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction for Minnesota to visit these schools and talk to them on "Temperance Science, Why and How." Mrs. Scovell is the president of the Minnesota Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Mrs. Richard Watson Gilder, president of the National League for the Civic Education of Women, has written a letter against woman suffrage, which the anti-suffragists have published and are distributing as a tract.

Frau Hedwig Wanger, one of the most famous of German actresses, announces that she will abandon the stage for religious life. Her determination has followed her attendance recently at a Salvation Army meeting.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

LEOPOLD BRACONY, an Italian sculptor, has made a marble bust of the late Bishop Patton, which is considered by the friends of the bishop a good likeness and an admirable work of art. It is now at the Diocesan House, in Lafayette street, and will be placed in Synod Hall of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine before the meeting of the diocesan convention on November 10.

George L. Campen, assistant city engineer of Omaha, has just received a medal in acknowledgment of his services as superintendent of public works in the Canal Zone during 1905 to 1907. The medal is one which President Roosevelt, on his trip to Panama, promised the government representatives in the Canal Zone who served the government for two or more years. The disk, which is of beautiful design, is made from the brass taken from the old engines abandoned by the French company and found on the zone when the United States took possession.

Hector Apollinaire is the name of a negro who was admitted to the bar in Paris a few weeks ago. He is a native of Guadeloupe, about 30 years old, tall, muscular and very black. He enjoys the distinction of being the only one of his race among the recognized lawyers of Paris.

Fred Baker, while climbing the rocky side of a mountain in the Olympic range, near Lake Cushman, Washington, in company with several others, lost his footing and fell a distance of fully 500 feet without suffering serious injury. When he fell he plunged over a precipice and was rendered unconscious by the fall, in which condition his body rolled down the mountain until finally caught by a bunch of shrubs.

M. S. Hershey, who owns a chocolate factory and dairy, a bank and a park; in fact, practically dictates the whole ideal town of Hershey, in Dauphin county, intends to transform the whole surrounding region into a great stock-grazing ranch. Hershey is the biggest man in the Hershey family. Years ago he was one of the poorest members peddling his chocolates and caramels about the streets of New York in a small basket. Now he is worth his millions.

Collector Loeb of New York has inaugurated a custom of serving tea and wafers to the ladies who come to attend the auction sales of smuggled goods.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN.

GEN. F. D. GRANT, at present in command of the Department of the Lakes, is slated as the successor of Gen. Bell as chief of the staff of the army. His rivals for the position are Gen. Leonard Wood and Gen. William H. Carter.

Col. Frank L. Denny of Washington, chief quartermaster of the Marine Corps, has been to Seattle in connection with the erection of barracks at Bremerton, provided for by the last Congress. When the quarters are provided, he says, the Bremerton garrison will be a battalion post, with a colonel in command, having under him a post adjutant, post quartermaster, medical officer, four captains, four first and four second lieutenants.

Col. William R. Morrison, at his death, left on the books of the Pension Office an account of $2700. It represents a Mexican War pension, which had accrued for twenty-two years, but which the colonel steadfastly had refused to draw. Mr. Morrison, having his attention again called to it several years ago, he asked if it could be paid to his wife in case she survived him. He was given an affirmative answer, and the pension continued to accrue. Col. Morrison, however, survived his wife.

Explorer Peary's real army title is civil engineer. He belongs to the civil engineers of the navy, the duties of which are mainly the superintendence of construction and repair of dry docks, seawalls and other permanent improvements in navy yard and naval stations. He has the rank, but not the title of commander, and is no more entitled to the appellation of commander than has a surgeon, a paymaster, a chaplain or a professor of mathematics in the navy.

OVER THE SEA.

SIR WILLIAM PFOLKES has been elected president of the King's Lynn Sons of Reffley, Eng., a most exclusive social society, which has been in existence for nearly a century and a half.

Mrs. Katherine Scott, wife of the British captain who will seek the South Pole, is a talented woman sculptor. She will go with her husband to New Zealand, the last civilized spot at which the Scott expedition will touch before striking into the ice fields for the pole. Mrs. Scott has medals for exhibits both from Paris and London.

M. P. Remlinger, director of the Pasteur Institute at Constantinople, writes to the Lancet to point out the danger of spreading disease by allowing domestic animals to enter the sick room.

The wife of the Mayor of Southport, Eng., a popular seashore resort, has opened the first nursery of its kind in the world. It is a series of comfortable canvas tents supplied with cots, trained nurses and all necessaries where women visiting the resort may leave their babies to be cared for while they are enjoying their holiday. The babies are fed and tended free of charge.

The Dowager Duchess D'Uzes is, in spite of her age, one of the most energetic women in France. She is president of the Lyceum Club, a women's club with clubhouses in London, Paris and Berlin; a sculptor, a social leader and a devoted huntress. Beside her numerous other duties she works in her studio for many hours daily. Though she is rich she sells her statues in order that her work may have the hall mark of being serious.

He was for two years the Berlin correspondent for the Morning Post, subsequently joined the staff of the publishing house of John Murray, and is now managing director at Routledge's.

A Fat Woman Hates Society

Fat people have to get into clothes that are designed for people of normal physique. The men wear dress suits and look like comic pictures. The women wear low-necked dresses to their evident humiliation. This is why it is often said that a fat woman hates society. Fat is as much the mistake of poor health as anything else. The things that make fat should be making good blood, bone and nerves. The secret is that the digestive machinery is out of gear. The juices make fat in too large quantities. This fat impedes circulation, cramps the heart, suppresses the liver, crowds the lungs and interferes with the stomach. Marmola Tablets are harmless. They are taken after each meal. They help digest that meal as nature intended it should be digested. They remove the fat already made at the rate of from 12 to 15 ounces a day, and they leave no flabby skin or wrinkles. They are sold wherever drugs are sold, or in the same category with harmful patent fat reducers. They contain Marmola, Cascara Aromatic and Peppermint water. If you do not care to call upon your druggist, send 75c to The Marmola Co., Dept. 235, Detroit, Mich., and they will send you a large, full size case by return mail in plain package, postage paid.

A Wonderful Piano Selling Record

During the month ending October 20th, we sold right here in our store no less than two hundred and forty-five pianos. This was done without outside solicitors and canvassers, and does not include our large mail order business.

This establishes a new record in piano selling in the Southwest.

Piano buyers who select their instruments on merit alone are coming to this store.

We have been selling pianos for twenty years, gradually building up to the point where we are the largest buyers and sellers of pianos in the Southwest.

You will understand why we do such an enormous amount of business when you come and learn about our fair selling methods, our easy payment plan, and our prompt and efficient service. Come in and see our line tomorrow.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

Goes to Every Corner of the Globe

Herpicide is found in every country, among every people. It is shipped in quantites to all European countries, Japan, India, Australia, South Africa, the Philippine Islands and South America.

To supply this widespread and constantly increasing demand three large manufacturing laboratories are maintained, one in Detroit, Mich., another in Windsor, Can., and a third in Monterey, Mex.

The fame of Herpicide in foreign countries is in no sense due to advertising, but rather to the sterling worth of the preparation. Upon every user its great merit has created a deep and lasting impression. So astonishing have been the results that Herpicide has become a sensation, especially among the ladies.

This story of germ destruction, hair saving and hair growing has passed from mouth to mouth until the reputation of Newbro's Herpicide spread from country to country and now users are found under every flag and speaking every language.

The wide distribution enjoyed by this remarkable prophylactic enables everybody, everywhere to obtain it. Imitations are frequently offered and preparations recommended to be just as good. Don't take them. Accept nothing but genuine Herpicide, the original remedy that kills the dandruff germ and stops falling of the hair—the remedy that has saved and is saving the hair of thousands in all parts of the world.

This amazing popularity of Herpicide is the greatest tribute to its value as an application for hair and scalp.

Fresh Literature: Reviews of Books.

NEW BOOKS REVIEWED.

[BY THE TIMES REVIEWER.]

Meritorious.

IT NEVER CAN HAPPEN AGAIN. By William De Morgan. Henry Holt & Company, New York.

John Morley in his book on Diderot has said: "The modern novel essentially depends on the interest of the private life of ordinary men and women." If we consider this statement in all its aspects, we shall find it true, for it applies to nearly every great English novelist. It is true of Fielding, Sterne, Smollett, Jane Austen, Thackeray, the Brontes (although the character of Rochester may come outside the category) to Dickens, in a very marked manner; in fact very nearly every great modern English novelist has portrayed ordinary folk under ordinary conditions, and the author of "Joseph Vance" is surely building by the side of the great ones. He, too, tells stories of ordinary men and women—men and women who live, for I cannot read one of his works without realizing that his characters are true to life. Many of them you have met, and you probably realized it when you read "Joseph Vance," "Alice for Short" or "Somehow Good."

Mr. De Morgan's new work is in some respects a greater novel than any of his earlier ones; its aspect is as sound, and the book is more subtle. Three distinct stories thread their way through it, and at the end the skeins are all unravelled with skill.

There is ag grip in the characters which no hero or heroine of the romantic novel can convey—the people are real and induce real sensations.

The plot itself holds the attention; the stage is full; the actors are many. The classes represented include every scale of English society brought together with dexterity. There are two main themes. One is the love of Blind Jim for his little daughter, Lizarann; and here Mr. De Morgan is at his best—few can depict as he can the lower orders of cockney society; few understand so well their language, or convey so well that cockneys are ordinary human beings, worthy or unworthy of consideration and sympathy. Lizarann is a delightful creature; she creeps into your heart and your memory will always hold a place for her just as it does for Dr. Thorpe in "Joseph Vance."

The second main theme is the account of the doings of Titus Scroop, afterward Sir Titus Scroop, novelist; Marianne, his wife, and Judith Ankroyd, daughter of a wealthy baronet, who has become obsessed by the feudal system. This phase of the book is more subtle in its development than anything Mr. de Morgan has yet accomplished. The story is well told and the intricacies of the web do not interfere with the continuity of the story. The plot turns on the relationship of Scroop to his deceased wife's sister, to whom he is married, and on his infatuation for Julia. The problem of the eternal triangle is presented in a new manner, and is solved with cunning.

In the background the cause of temporary disaster—the serpent of the book—is a person of curious temperament and insidious habit, who manages to upset everything possible without the principal actors being aware of it. The psychological side of the book is restrained, and at best in the drawing of Julia Ackroyd, the most complex and at the same time the most interesting character in the novel.

The local coloring is ably put in. You are annoyed when you leave Royal Hall, the country seat of the wealthy baronet, to go to the dreary slums in Tallack street inhabited by Bling Jim and his daughter, but you are equally annoyed when you have to leave Tallack street to go back to Royal, such is the fascination of Mr. De Morgan's pen.

The book is convincing—it is Mr. De Morgan at his best, and will be read when most of the fictional productions of the day have been long forgotten.

Detective Thriller.

THROUGH THE WALL. By Cleveland Moffett. D. Appleton & Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)

Can you lose yourself in a yarn of the old three-ply, yard-wide, dyed-in-the-wool variety? If so, you will find relaxation and amusement in this French detective story. I take it for granted that you still retain enough of the youngster in your make-up to let the author carry you away with him, unprotesting, into the land of his fancy's creation. Mr. Moffett will transport you at once to Paris—don't mistake me; not the Paris of Gautier and de Maupassant, but a Paris that makes us all feel at home—that entrancing city with which the special correspondent and the American tourist have made us familiar.

It is in Paris that you are lost in a maze of mystery that surrounds the murder of a well-known professional gambler, committed in a fashionable restaurant under the most romantic circumstances. Breathlessly (I speak advisedly, for it is a very breathless sort of story,) you follow the bungling attempts of the regular police and the singularly precise and far-seeing essays of M. Coqueniel, "greatest of Parisian detectives," to fathom this crime.

The plot of the story is worthy of some special mention. It involves a wealthy, feather-brained, feminine member of the American colony; an impecunious and impetuous young man of the same nationality; a girl who sells candles in Notre Dame, and who, incidentally, has the gift of second sight and a mysterious past, to say nothing of her innocent, gazelle-like eyes. There are also the jealous police detective; the imperturbable and incredibly resourceful Paul Coqueniel, with his wonderful dog. Then let us look to the villian—gadzooks, what a one!—rich, proud, reckless, disdainful. . . . You see for yourself that the story is made up of the old-fashioned dramatis personae who have figured in such tales since the days of Poe. There are two ways of looking upon these people—as bores or as guarantees of a good old-fashioned thriller. In the present book they belong to the latter class, for there is much new interest here. The very latest psycho-physical methods in the detection of crime (involving the use of a cineometagraph in connection with a third-degree sweat-box examination) are introduced in a wholly commendable, blood-curdling manner, satisfactorily creating the titillations of horror for which the adolescent spine is ever longing. The book on the whole is first-rate reading for those who care for stuff of the sort, and compares not unfavorably with many English translations of the French detective stories with which we have of late been regaled. There is a pretty love story meandering through the blood and thunder (charming figure!) which is intended more for a concession to women readers, I ween, than for an integral part of the story.

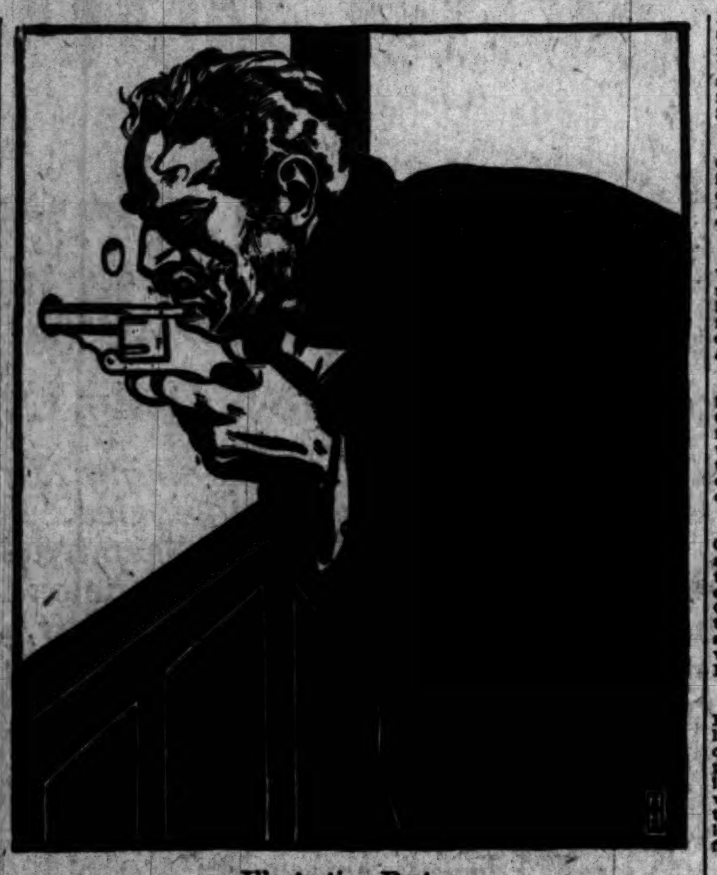

Illustration Poster,
from "Through the Wall."

Concerning the book from a literary standpoint I shall say nothing—at the risk of being called a Dutchman; but assuming an attitude of cold impartiality, like that of Mrs. Sniggs, I might remark "for those who like that sort of thing, that's just the sort of thing they like." One criticism, however, it is open, too; the villian is so Mephistophelian and is so uncannily clever in his manoeuvers that we have quite a respect for him, and are a little disappointed at his being thwarted. The illustrations have the dubious merit of depicting with some verve the melodramatic portions of the story.

. . . .

Mr. Moffett is in process of becoming a playwright, I have been told. There is nothing remarkable in this inasmuch as the majority of Americans I understand are also in that stage of development. But Mr. Moffett's "The Battle," is in its second winter in New York, and he has four more plays to be produced there during the coming season, one at the "New Theater."

With the Fleet.

BACK TO HAMPTON ROADS. Cruise of the United States Atlantic Fleet. By Franklin Matthews. B. W. Huebsch, Publishers, New York. (Price $1.50, postpaid.)

This book aims to describe and narrate, more or less in detail, the leading events that marked the homeward cruise of the United States Atlantic fleet from San Francisco to Hampton Roads, by way of New Zealand, Australia, Japan and the Suez Canal, a cruise that extended from July 7, 1908, to February 22, 1909. It is intended to supplement the author's account of the cruise of the Atlantic fleet from Hampton Roads to San Francisco, published in the book "With the Battle Fleet." These two complete the story of a naval cruise without parallel.

The fleet visited every continent on the globe. It crossed every navigable ocean and nearly every known sea. It crossed the equator four times, and almost touched it a fifth time, when it passed by Singapore. Four Presidents, Roosevelt of the United States, Penna of Brazil, Montt of Chile, and Pardo of Peru, reviewed the fleet. The Emperor of Japan received the admirals and captains in audience, and gave them a luncheon. Prince Lang of China entertained the officers of the second squadron at luncheon and dinner repeatedly at Amoy. The Khedive of Egypt entertained a few of the officers in Cairo. The King and Queen of Greece dined on one of the battleships at Piraeus. The King of Italy received Admiral Sperry and staff in Rome in appreciation of the succor given by the fleet to the stricken people at the Messina earthquake. The Governor-General of Australia, the Governors of New Zealand, Ceylon and Gibraltar also visited the fleet.

It has been universally conceded that Mr. Matthews's record of his observations on the voyage, he having been one of the few civilians to make it from beginning to end, will survive as the authoritative history of the unprecedented cruise. Rarely has travel been described so entertainingly. His is a wizard pen; it will prompt more enlistments in our navy than all the recruiting stations in the country, and will do more to stimulate interest in foreign lands than tons of consular reports.

SOME BRIEF NOTICES OF RECENT NOVELS.

"Trespass." By Mrs. Henry Dudeney. In this novel the "eternal triangle" involves a man of affairs in a small English village, a brilliant London artist, and a woman who has returned from two years in London to view her village home with something of disdain. Small, Maynard & Co., $1.25 net.

"The City of Beautiful Nonsense." By E. Temple Thurston. A man frightfully impractical, who is not rising in the world and is contented not to rise meets a girl in one of London's parks. They become acquainted, they fall in love, and thus form the basis of a delightful story in lighter vein than has heretofore been characteristic of Mr. Thurston's books. Dodd, Mead & Co. $1.50.

"Priscilla of the Good Intent." By Halliwell Sutcliffe. In this story of English north country life the setting is a small moorland village, and the central theme is the gradual growth of Reuben Gaunt from a careless youngster into a man of self-reliance and character. Little, Brown & Co., $1.50.

"Cardillac." By Robert Barr. A romance of the time of Louis XIII, in France. The hero, after fighting and ingenious plotting, rescues the Queen from the Castle of Blois and his future bride from the nunnery of the Sacred Heart. Frederick A. Stokes Co., $1.50.

"The Rescuer." By Percy White. An impostor poses as the discoverer of "thought photography," claiming that the human brain, in moments of tension, is capable of throwing out rays which, like the famous X-rays, will affect photographic plates. The setting of the story is English. G. W. Dillingham Co. $1.50.

"The Dominant Dollar." By Will Lillibridge. The last novel written by the author of "Ben Blair" and "The Eternal Question" before his death. It is a vivid and dramatic western story which approaches the problem of the man and the dollar from a distinctly new viewpoint. A. C. McClurg & Co., $1.50.

"The Redemption of Kenneth Galt." By Will N. Harben. Rural Georgia forms the background of this story of struggle between two men, one brilliant and able with a theory of life which allows human beings to make their own laws, the other reckless and dissolute, but with a determination to live down his past and "make good." Harper & Bros., $1.50.

"The Golden Season." By Myra Kelly. Elizabeth is "tall and slim and young, with a gentle voice, a provocative eye, and a genius for mischief." The story tells of her escapades in a coeducational collegeñ from her invention—and murder—of a mythical aunt to the final climax, when she is unjustly pilloried as being a "cribber" in examination. Doubleday, Page & Co. $1.20 net.

"The Man on the Tower." By Rupert S. Holland. The idea of this novel originated in the fact, which is authenticated in many current reports, that a certain prince living in one of the small countries of Eastern Europe, has sat upon his throne for more than twenty years, and yet has never been seen by his subjects. J. B. Lippincott Co., $1.50.

"A Court of Injury." By Grace S. Richmond. Althea, Azalea, Camellia, Dahlia, Hepatica and their several entanglements with the Promoter, the Cashier, the Skeptic, the Judge and the Professor, constitute the chief characters in an entertaining love story by the author of "The Indifference of Juliet." Doubleday, Page & Co. $1 net.

"In Ambush." By Marie Van Vorst. Portrays a hero with an unsavory past, whose fortunes lead from an Alaskan mining camp to Egypt and back to Kentucky, U.S.A. The story of his repentance and redemption makes interesting reading. J. B. Lippincott Company. $1.50.

"Veronica Playfair." By Maud Wilder Goodwin. England of the eighteenth century is the background, and among the characters are Swift, Pope, Lady Mary Montague, Lord Bolingbroke, Beau Nash and Benjamin Franklin. "Veronica" is a beautiful girl, the reigning belle of Bath. Little, Brown & Co. $1.50.

"Julia Bride." By Henry James. The scene is laid in New York and the action covers only a few days. Julia Bride is a pronounced beauty. Also, she has been engaged six times. But when she really wishes to marry, at the beginning of the story, many complications ensue. Harper & Bros. $1.25.

"The Greater Power." By Harold Bindloss. A well-nurtured Englishman goes into the Canadian Northwest, where he finds the hardships too much for him and would succumb but for the encouragement of a wonderful girl, who helps him to triumph over an engineering difficulty and foil a syndicate of thieves. Frederick A. Stokes & Co. $1.50.

"The Man in the Corner." By Baroness Orczy. Tells of a series of mysterious crimes which are finally solved by the "Old Man's" wonderful inductive method of reasoning—written much in the manner of fascinating Sherlock Holmes stories. Dodd, Mead & Co. $1.50.

"Diamonds Cut Paste." By Agnes and Egerton Castle. The manner in which a wife destroys her husband's sentimental attachment for a pretty widow forms the basis of this clever and vivacious novel. Dodd, Mead & Co. $1.50.

"The Lonely Guard." By Norman Innes. The scene is laid in Austria and one of the smaller German principalities, the "lonely guard" being an Austrian captain sent to guard a castle in the mountains, where two high-spirited girls of rank are held as prisoners by the Austrian government. George W. Jacobs & Co. $1.20, net.

"The Island of Regeneration." By Cyrus Townsend Brady. A young woman adrift in an open boat in the Pacific is cast ashore upon a lonely island where she finds a solitary inhabitant—a man of European appearance, clothed like a savage. From this point the development of the action is intensely dramatic and original. Dodd, Mead & Co. $1.50.

"The Trimming of Goosie." By James Hopper. "Goosie" is an adoring young husband, who, nevertheless, "grows wings" and flies away. His charming wife undertakes the clipping of the wings, and, in the end, "Goosie" is trimmed very thoroughly, indeed. Moffat, Yard & Co. $1.10 net.

"Zandrie." By Marian Edwards Richards. The heroine is a girl, "half angel and half bird," who, as a child, falls in love with a dashing horseman. Unlike most early affairs, hers proves an enduring one and develops into a fascinating story. Century Company. $1.50.

"The Wistful Years." By Roy Rolfe Gilson. An idyl of young love, divided into a series of twelve connected incidents, by the author of "Katrina" and "In the Morning Glow." Baker and Taylor Company. $1.50.

"The Homesteaders." By Kate and Virgil D. Boyles. A story of the free-range cattle country in which two homesteaders—one a young woman—fight for possession with a band of desperate "rustlers." A. C. McClurg & Co. $1.50.

"The Moccasin Ranch." By Hamlin Garland. In his latest novel Mr. Garland takes a man who has made a failure back in Illinois, and his young wife, out on the prairie trail and sets them to make a home in a fresh pine cabin, in a lonely country far from civilization. Harper & Bros. $1.

"Peter Homunculus." By Gilbert Cannan. Peter Davies goes to London and finds employment with an eccentric old bookseller, who leaves him enough money to go through King's College. From that time Peter begins to rise in the social scale, and his love affair with a beautiful actress provides the chief interest in the story. Duffield & Co. $1.50.

"Sir Guy and Lady Rannard." By H. N. Dickinson. A novel of English life, full of love, politics and shrewd character-drawing. The heroine, a poor girl who makes a rich marriage, is confronted with the problem of whether she has won happiness by the transaction, but in the end gains love and loyalty for her husband. Duffield & Co. $1.50.

"The Castle By the Sea." By H. B. Marriott Watson. A tale of love and romantic adventure built around a fascinating old castle on the English coast. Hither comes the hero with his books and his work; and to the village below comes the heroine in holiday humor, with her dreams of romance. Little, Brown & Co. $1.50.

LITERARY GOSSIP.

"The Danger Mark" is out at last. September 17, saw the publication of this new novel by Robert W. Chambers, which has created more of a sensation while running serially than any other book this autumn. The trouble started because the situation that Mr. Chambers chose for the opening scenes of his book has a near parallel in real life. Some prominent New York people claimed that relatives of theirs had been portrayed and libeled by the novelist. Mr. Chambers was, no doubt, quite unconscious that the central idea of his plot was not original with him. Two very wealthy orphan children being brought up in ignorance of their riches, with a machine—a trust company—instead of a human guardian as arbiter of their destinies, seemed to him fraught with dramatic possibilities. Mr. Chambers made the most of these possibilities, and so lifelike was his work that the officers of a trust company, which has the guardianship of a young girl and boy, heirs to a large fortune, took offense at the story and claimed that their wards were being caricatured by the novelist. Anent all this, the New York Times said, in an editorial, not long ago, "The great ado made about the fancied likeness of this boy and girl to two living children, well known in New York social circles, naturally advertises the book. Yet we do not doubt that the author sincerely resents the charge of taking something of his subject from real life."

The best of all the many things that have been said in prose and verse about the city of New York have been collected in "The Wayfarer in New York." Under this title the MacMillan Company publishes this week an entertaining anthology of the ever-varying city, to which Edward S. Martin has contributed a characteristically graceful introduction. Outwardly the book bears a strong resemblance to "The Gentlest Art" by E. V. Lucas, and the work of compilation has been done in much the same spirit. Mr. Lucas's success has already demonstrated how much interest there may be in a well-selected compilation, and New York is unquestionably a field rich enough for any editor to work in. A long number of years with the many changes they have wrought in the life and appearance of the city are covered in "The Wayfarer." Designed primarily for entertainment, the little book is nevertheless a mine of valuable information. It will do much to make New York better understood, and New York is worth the understanding.

The following quotation from Schopenhauer is the motto that appears on the title page of Edward Howard Grigg's "Human Equipment: Its Use and Abuse," which B. W. Huebsch publishes this month:

"The technical work of our time, which is done to an unprecedented perfection, has, by increasing and multiplying objects of luxury, given the favorites of fortune a choice between more leisure and culture upon the one side, and additional luxury and good living, but with increased activity, upon the other; and, true to their character, they choose the latter, and prefer champagne to freedom."

Prof. Griggs's little volume, one of The Art of Life Series, which he edits, deals with the right use of things—the relation of man to the tools and equipment of civilization, and is a tranchant criticism of the superstition that expenditure in careless luxury benefits society. The author shows that all use of the power money represents for what is either useless or harmful forces someone to work harder somewhere in the social structure, and, unchecked, is paid for at a terrible price in the end. There is an illuminating discussion of the causes of panics—those "clearinghouses in which we pay our bad debts."

Sudermann's "The Song of Songs," the novel which has been the sensation of Germany for the past season, will be published here late in October by F. W. Huebsch. Every part of the country is represented in the advance orders and the first edition originally planned is to be considerably enlarged.

Prof. Lounsbury has issued a new book, "English Spelling and Spelling Reform," on the Harper list, which is to be noted as one of the first presentments of this much misunderstood subject which has emanated from a scholar to the public. The hope of Prof. Lounsbury is to remove what he terms the "unintelligent opposition of the intelligent," yet he refused to be a partisan, preferring a consideration of both sides, and the consequent recommendation of some things new and some things old. Of course the philologist may expect to find here whole pages of interest only to himself, but we are inclined to think that even more than that of the phililogist will be the enlightenment of "the man on the street," who never yet, perhaps, has quite known what spelling reform was all about.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN
If I could show you how to make yourself more attractive at very little expenditure of time and money, would you be interested? Women properly give much time and thought to dress and to the improvement of their complexion, hands, arms and body, but are often thoughtless regarding the one element of beauty that can be easily and quickly improved—and that is woman's crowning glory, her hair. Nothing commands greater admiration than a wealth of lustrous, beautiful hair. If you desire to improve your hair, or if you want to permanently retain the present beauty of your hair, send a postal to-day for a little book, free, published by the great Paris Parfumeur, ED. PINAUD, which tells much about hair culture and contains many beauty hints of great value to refined women.

Writes Another Letter to Her Sisters in Each and All Society.

Dear Girls: You will recall it, that in my last letter I said of the Each and All should so live our pledge that we become character builders, world builders.

Perhaps you thought that a rather ambition, and, indeed, it is; the ambition that humanity can be builders of that wonderful beautiful character, which is, but the reflection of the soul, in man.

You have not forgotten, I am sure, the wonderful glimpse that Marguerite Winnifred gave us, of the evolution of life through the plant and animal to the human and, finally, into the divine. It was a lesson for each not to despise the material, however small and seemingly useless, for the means by which—if appropriately developed to the utmost extent of its nature—we shall come into the greater possibilities of future development.

I wonder if we realize how many we have right here on this page for the building of our spiritual if we would but select and into our thought and life would meet our particular by utilizing the timber which is at hand. It might then become "beams" to help carry the burden of our trials; "girders" to our faith; "flooring" that as a smooth pathway as about our daily tasks; "upright" supporting the windows, which we shall look out on of beauty that shall give us hope for the future; "lathing" shall take on and hold together bits of knowledge we from day to day; roofing in its parts, under which we shall shelter from the heat, and wind, storms of life, that so often wither us, and we fall, too much in spirit and heart, to be raised to usefulness.

EACH AND ALL MOTTO.

Golden thoughts, golden deeds,
Rid life's garden of its weeds.

OUR PLEDGE.

"To make one another happy, to lighten one another's burdens, to share one another's cares, to be lifters, not leaners, to make the world a little sweeter place to live in, to be mutual encouragers, never discouragers of any one, to start songs, not complainings, and to do every day something beautiful, some kindness which will cheer and strengthen another."

And scatter again all along your way
For many are from the sunlight apart
And from your sunshine may take heart.

One word as to the second part of my "text," world-makers. Do not for one moment think that all this effort to perfect your own character shall benefit you only. "Man liveth not to himself alone." The influence of your life will be absorbed into the life of others, and shall go into the formation and evolution of some leader of mankind, who shall guide many into the pathway of the world's unceasing progress—which the sons of time are slowly but surely evolving—toward that Mecca of the universe, the All Good in material, mental, spiritual.

For the Lonely Girls.

Mrs. M. W. L. of Hollywood has a heart for the lonely girls, and would form a chapter for them. Her letter follows:

"Dear President, Each and All Society: I think your society is doing a noble work and I would like to be enrolled on the suffrage list if you please.

"There is a class of girls and women whose loneliness and isolation have my sympathy, and I would like to do something to bring them in touch with one another and with other workers as well. This class is the domestics. My heart has often ached for many housegirls whom I have seen in the homes of my friends, and I believe that it is this isolation that prevents girls from desiring to work in homes, although the remuneration is more than that paid for other work they take up. I believe that often girls are driven from the path of rectitude for want of social companionship. Now, if we can enroll some of these lonely ones I am willing to give freely my services, and I am sure some of my club friends as well as members from other women's clubs will be glad to help provide suitable and instructive recreation for any that would like to enroll in such a chapter.

"A cordial invitation is extended to this class of girls and women, and if they respond I will be heartily pleased, for I know there is a vast field of good to be done along this line. This chapter could include all working girls, shop girls, factory girls and any lonely girls."

The address of the above writer will be given to "Lonely Girls" upon request.

Broadface and Longface.

Down the street comes Mr. Broadface,
Smiling like the summer sun;
Bows and nods to all around him—
Greets the boys with eyes of fun.
E'en the dogs seem glad to see him—
Wag their tails in canine glee.
All the air is full of sunshine
When is passing Mr. B.

Right behind comes Mr. Longface,
Looking like a thunder-cloud;
Greets no one unless to grumble;
Gets no smile from all the crowd—
People call him proud and selfish—
Say, "He must live in a cell"
And the air grows chilly, gloomy,
While is passing Mr. L.

Mr. B., so kind and loving; Mr. L., with cares oppressed—
I can tell without much trouble which of them we all like best.

SUNSHINE SOCIETY.

Christmas Plans of Sunshiners—News of Executive Board—Places to Send Good Cheer.

The Tropico branch of the Sunshine Society, the latest branch organized in the State, is faithful in sending in reports to the State organizer and the members are thoroughly in earnest about their work. They do not wait for sunshine work to come to them, but go out after it, and have already accomplished much, although the membership is small. The ladies have made a number of nightgowns and some baby clothes for Maternity Cottage, and are now piecing comforts. Last week they sent a donation of $5 to the blind babies.

The executive board of the Los Angeles branch of the International Sunshine Society met last Thursday morning. All sunshiners are welcome to attend these meetings. It was a pleasure to greet two or three members of the Each and All Society. In order to accommodate all the chairmen of committees it was decided to hold the meeting hereafter on the third Friday morning, instead of the third Thursday, with the first vice-president, Mrs. James Fox of No. 2801 La Salle avenue. Miss Lulu A. Crawford was appointed chairman of the Christmas-box Committee, to make all arrangements necessary for brightening the holidays for the Navajo Indians, near Needles, Cal. As the box is to be sent by freight, it will be necessary to send it about the middle of November. All interested in this branch of sunshine work can send donations to Miss Crawford, No. 1645 Orange street, mornings. Blankets, calicoes and percale for dresses, handkerchiefs, beads to be used in making beadwork to sell at the trains and, in fact, anything that a poor Indian could find use for, will be very gratefully received.

The chief work of the Los Angeles branch of the Sunshine Society is the loaning of wheel-chairs to "shut-ins" who cannot afford to buy or rent chairs to take them out into the sunshine. It is a beautiful work, but sometimes invalids move, and neglect to inform the chairman of the Wheel-chair Committee of their changed address. This makes it difficult to trace the chairs. At present, the chairman has lost track of several chairs, although she has spent much time in looking them up. If any one having a Sunshine chair happens to read this article, please communicate with the wheel-chair chairman, Mrs. E. B. Crowder, No. 1414 West Fourth street. (Home 'Phone 52691.)

Those having the chairs and wishing to keep them longer, can do so; but if they are no longer needed, there are several "shut-ins" now on the waiting list, who are anxious to get out into the sunshine.

At the meeting Thursday one of the ladies exhibited some very nice clothes for children, which she had made for the Christmas bundles. From now on, preparations for Christmas "good cheer" will go on right merrily. If you have anything to gladden the heart of a child, send it in, and let the sunshiners help you "pass it on."

Far away on a lonely southern farm are two young girls who have a sick mother, a discouraged father, who has lost most of his crop, and a number of brothers and sisters. These girls have worked out in the fields, doing all they can to help. They have no whole shoes, and cold weather is at hand. Any one wishing to "pass on" clothing or help of any kind can get their address from Mrs. McLeod.

Miss Laura Doescher of Petaluma, Cal., would like to take orders for collars, belts and embroidered corset covers and waists.

Lillie May Hinson, care Mrs. Della Hinson, Heath Springs, S. C., is an invalid child who would be delighted to receive letters from other children. Send her postal cards of California, children, or write her about the good times you have at school. "Pass on" to this little "shut-in" some of the joys of your outdoor life. And don't forget to inclose a stamp for reply.

Lena Martin is a little cripple girl, only 10 years old. Her address is Central Valley, N. Y., R.F.D., box 21. Through the mails, strong, happy children in Los Angeles can get to be good friends of this sick child way off in New York.

"Just a dainty basket filled with autumn bloom,
Yet it brought the sunshine to a darkened room;
All the week seemed brighter for those shining hours,
Laden with the sweetness of the smiling flowers.
Just a glad 'good-morning' on a day so dear,
Yet as if by magic, skies seemed bright and clear;
And the one who heard it, passed along her way,
Smiling at the prospect of a happy day."

WOMAN'S WORK.

Her Influence Would Be Far-Reaching If She Would Take Up Work Which Calls to Her.

"Beaver" of Santa Monica writes to the Each and All girls and points out what she considers woman's work.

The Beaver is eagerly watching the page and the mails for news concerning that contemplated chapter for esoteric study. She is desirous of learning something of the applied science of that psychic law in relation to a certain election held in her neighborhood.

The proposition of the election was this: Shall two towns (within ten miles of Los Angeles,) each making a modest living, consolidate into one city? Consolidation would give the honor, the name, to one town and remove nearly all the business to the other. The subject was debated by the Beaver's household. The voter said "consolidate." The Beaver objected, "because, in a few years, Los Angeles will claim us by natural growth." The question was debated soberly and jokingly. Neither party would give in. On the morning of election the voter said, "I must go down and vote." "So must I," she retorted. He stared, a light in his eyes that was not good to see. "Oh, you can't; you haven't registered," said he. She airily retorted: "I'll go and kill your vote. I can talk." He stared again. She laughed. "Go and vote; I'm going to consolidate a package of sugar and some peaches." The look upon his face now was good to see.

Now, before giving the result of that election, the Beaver will make three quotations. The first is a Chinese proverb, "A thought once it is spoken echoes through all eternity." The second is a line by Edwin Markham: "Love will outwatch the stars and light the world when the last star falls." The third is a stanza from a soul-stirring poem by Mrs. Otis, "Today," the second under that title in "California, Where Sets the Sun."

"Today! It fills the chalices of time,
It makes the largeness of the years to be,
It holds the seed of every thought sublime,
It is the rootlet of eternity."

Turn, now, back to the first Today—the beginning of time when the Over-all set the stars in their places and created the earth and peopled it with living creatures, and put man and woman to rule over the other creatures. A bounteous, beautiful world! To keep the grand scheme going, the living creatures must reproduce their kind. Surely the mothers of the ruler class are of a higher order than those under them, and the highest point reached by that class is the era of Christian civilization—marriage and home.

Suppose we use a homely comparison? Civilization is a railroad. The husband and the wife are the two rails of the track, each rail is of exactly as much value as the other; yet does its separate share of work. The road has ballast and trestles and embankment, and there absolutely must be a certain amount of space between the rails to preserve the equilibrium of the train.

Return to the town election. The proposed "consolidation" was voted down. The woman's vote was not needed. Suppose that suffrage obtained and the Beaver had voted. The atmosphere of her home that might have been like that of a certain one in Denver after Gov. Buchtel publicly announced "my wife and daughter shun politics," and the daughter retorted, "My mother and I vote and have not missed an election."

It has been said that suffrage has effected good along humane lines. What does that count if the harmony of the fireside is disturbed?

Women may get the ballot. 'Tis no proof that she should have it. "A vote is power"—a dangerous big stick in the hands of a class of beings who not only tolerate, but many adopt, such irrational apparel as the health-ruining hipless corset, the enormous hat, the hideous pack rat's-nest chignon of the present fashions.

"Fifteen minutes once a year to cast a vote," and how much time for "posting up," or, as a Colorado woman wrote to the Beaver, "listening to petty politics of ward-heelers trying to pick out the truth." How much time for winning votes—it's a prerogative, is it not?—to influence one's neighbor, or her neighbor's son, or her son-in-law, or her daughter's betrothed. One authority says that Napoleon's downfall was caused by his women relatives.

The daily papers tell us that England will spend fifty-two millions upon warships this year; Germany, America, France, Russia—nearly all countries are doing their best along the same line. China will soon have an army of twenty million trained warriors. Sounds terrifying. And yet, "the most disturbing feature of the present age is woman's revolt against her womanhood."

Up in a northern State the level-headed in office passed a law, "Physical examination before marriage license." The young couples have resented it, and are going to other States to be married. We have men and women doctors everywhere. Is such an examination any different from or of less importance than the same wise rule for high school students?

If all women were as truly womanly and as thoughtful as dear Ernestine, whose splendid letter appeared in another section of The Times! If all women were only as observing as she and as sensitive to the work to be done near at hand! How far-reaching woman's influence would be! Conan Doyle has appealed in behalf of King Leopold's victims of the Congo. Stackpoole calls to children and to women for the same victims. Queen Victoria is trying to abolish the brutal sport of bullfighting in Spain. Our Chairman Deardorff has set before us a practice of cruelties which we can help to abolish, or at least restrict to a minimum.

May Sutton has made an excellent proposition, "Woman's marriage age at twenty-five."

Why cannot women of the United States work for universal law for physical examination before marriage, and for the "May Sutton" marriage age, for universal divorce law, and for all such things which do really concern her? And surely a unanimous call would be heeded, and other coveted benefits along the same line be granted in the bargain; but let man keep to himself his voter's rights.

REPORT OF AUTHORS.

Proceedings of the First Meeting of the "Would-Bes" After the Summer Vacation.

The first meeting for the winter of the poetry, song and dramatic composition sections of the Each and All Authors' Chapter was held Wednesday afternoon, October 20, with the chairman, Marguerite Winnifred, in the parlors of Hotel Chickasaw.

The regular secretary being absent, "Faith" was appointed secretary pro tem. The secretary-treasurer's report of the previous meeting, which was the last one held before adjournment for the summer, was read and approved.

A motion was made by President Ariel and carried by the members that Marguerite Winnifred's mother, who met with the members of the chapter for the first time, be elected to honorary membership in the chapter.

Announcement was made by "Mona," the secretary of the short story section, of the next meeting of that chapter for Tuesday afternoon, November 2, at the home of the chairman, Miss Ellis. "Mona" briefly outlined the assignments of study work to be prepared.

Ariel announced that the California State library had offered to lend the Each and All Society any books that members might desire, and requested that lists of books should be prepared and handed or sent to secretary of the general society, Mrs. Lucy Sherman Mitchell, No. 345 Clay street, Los Angeles, as soon as possible.

Marguerite Winnifred outlined the work for the poetry, song and dramatic composition sections, for the year of 1909-10, and the members discussed the plans in detail. The chairman was requested to prepare a resumé of the study work planned for publication in this department, so that those not in attendance might know what studies would be undertaken. In this resumé, the chairman will announce her appointments of curators of various divisions of the study work.

Ariel was appointed a committee of one to secure criticism by a professional playwright of the dramatic sketches written by members of, the chapter.

It was voted that the journalist section, together with the poetry, song and dramatic composition sections, should meet once a month, on the fourth Monday, for an all-day meeting.

A special programme devoted to the poets, Riley and Field, with brief mention of Carrie Jacobs-Bond, will be a feature of the November meeting.

The chairman announced that Mrs. M. A. Calkins, dramatic reader, had kindly consented to speak to the members on "Characteristics of Riley and Field," and would give a number of illustrative readings from these poets.

Mrs. Elizabeth Strong also consented to talk to the members on "Riley and Field as Masters of Pathos and Humor," and to read several poems in illustration.

It was stated that Gertrude Allyn Long, the author of the operetta "Golden Thoughts," would speak on the work of Carrie Jacobs-Bond, and give several readings from Mrs. Bond's writings and sing one or two of her songs.

The afternoon programme for November 22 will be an open one, and a cordial invitation is extended to all women to attend.

A feature of the Wednesday afternoon meeting was a trio of original vocal and instrumental numbers given by Miss Eleanor Strong, a talented young musical composer. Miss Strong will assist the verse writers of the Authors' Chapter during the winter by writing the musical scores to verses composed by the poet members of the chapter, and she will assist in the parlor recitals which the chapter will give throughout the winter. The three numbers given by Miss Strong were: "Doris," a pretty original song fancy; the dirge march from "The Viking Hero," an original musical study of the early barbarian Norwegian heroic spirit, and "His Song at Twilight."

A number of new members were enrolled with the author girls. The four sections of the authors will meet again November 22.

Plans of A.H.A.

The American Humane Association, with which many of the members of the Each and All are intimately associated, is devising plans for the betterment of children and animals to give them a better chance in life. The following suggestions have already been well worked out: Children's clubs, children's hospitals, children's playgrounds, summer vacations, child-labor regulation, sanitary inspection, juvenile courts, juvenile protection, child probation, juvenile reformatories, free trade schools, junior republics. Animal shelters, animal ambulances, drinking fountains, free dispensaries, veterinary lectures, rest homes, humane education, work-horse parades, humane books, traveling humane agents, horse vacations, bands of mercy, etc.

Dr. William O. Stillman, president of the association, said in a recent address: "What we ask of the world is a broader conception of human duty. We ask all men to feel more intensely universal justice, universal compassion and the right of all the children of God to life and happiness. Our forefathers fought for these principles for us, and we, without confession of sentimentality, buoyed by a belief in man's highest and noblest mission, ask for the same rights and the same privileges for all those who love, and live, and suffer, by and through man.

"'Be noble! and the nobleness that lies
In other men, sleeping but never dead,
Will rise in majesty to meet thine own!'"

Would Be "Would-Be."

One who signs her letter "Rojean" asks permission to join the Would-be Authors' Chapter. She writes:

"Your call of last Sunday to the Would-be Authors struck a responsive chord. 'Would-be,' I said, 'would be,' that means life, that means aspiration, that means growth, that means the possibility of doing something that will live on and on, and make the world purer and better, that will be a part of God's great plan for the development of righteousness in His universe. I would like to be one of the 'Would-be Authors.'

"I hail from the 'Hub'—is there a place for me?"

If you will kindly send your name and address to the president of the society, care of Mrs. Mitchell, No. 345 Clay street, Los Angeles, you will be placed in communication with the chairman of the author girls. We gladly welcome all girls of any age to our society. Send your application for membership and a card will be sent you, entitling you to the benefits of the society.

A New Member.

Mrs. J. C. McL. is interested in the work of Each and All Society, and asks to join the Health Chapter. She writes:

"Dear Each and All Girls: Will you allow an old married girl to join your society? I saw the kind offer in regard to Heath Chapter class No. 2, and would be glad to learn about it, as I feel it is just what I need. I have had poor health for several years and would like to try your method of treatment. I am interested in the noble work of the society, and a constant reader of your interesting page. I hope I may be of some little help to you. Please send me a list of your Shut-In members. Wishing you all success in the good work for humanity."

abies and School Children---Striking Pictures and Points Here and There.

FRIEND OF CHILDREN.

Senator W. A. Clark Entertains Little Folks at His Columbia Gardens.

every week during the summer vacation of the schools all the children of Butte and Silver county, are the guests of former United States Senator W. A. Clark at the Columbia Gardens, a summer resort owned by the copper king three miles from Butte, and the only pleasure park this mining city enjoys. This occasion is known as "children's day," and upon that time every child in the county is carried without cost to and from the gardens. Senator Clark owns the street car system and practically turns it over to the children upon their day. Children living in the outlying districts are provided with transportation over the railroads to Butte. Carriages are provided for those children who live remote from the railroads. No opportunity is overlooked to afford every child in the county a chance to romp and play and among the flowers of the Columbia Gardens.

The gardens lie on the slope of an immense range of mountains, forming the continental divide of the Rocky Mountains, nestling picturesquely in a spot that has been made famous by its flowers. Large hothouses are maintained during the winter and the summer sees the most beautiful blooms transplanted in the beds. Into this mass of floral beauty Mr. Clark's tiny guests are turned with no restrictions other than each child is limited to one good-sized bouquet and must be careful not to trample the flowers. Pansies flourish particularly well on the mountain side, several acres being devoted to their cultivation. These flowers seem to strike the fancy of the children more than any others, and the onslaught of the youngsters apparently has no appreciable effect on the appearance of the beds. This pretty custom of permitting the children to pick flowers has become a fixed one and throughout the summer months the children of the miners bear fragrant bouquets as mementos of the children's holiday.

Upon a recent visit of Senator Clark to the gardens upon the occasion of a children's holiday, he observed a number of little folks gazing wistfully at a bed of clover being nursed into bloom. The Senator immediately ordered the gates of the inclosure opened and then stood by and watched his little guests roll on the grass.

Everything at the gardens is at the disposal of the children, even an athletic instructor being maintained on the grounds to coach the children in athletics.

The street car records show that children are handled by the traction company on children's day.

Single Purpose.

Oh, how shall any one acquire
Opinions safe and sane,
When friends too generous admire
And foes too fierce complain.
Whene'er a man starts in to make
A record in the State
One side declares he is a "fake;"
The other that he's great.

The one who gets somewhere worth while
Must simply keep his stride,
Nor let the sneer, nor yet the smile,
Tempt him to turn aside.
No matter what his aim may be,
He goes his chosen way,
While Envy harshly shouts "N. G!"
And Flattery cries "O. K!"

Traveling Conveniences.

A long railroad journey, such as that soon to be undertaken by many girls returning to school and college, does not entail the discomfort which might have existed some years ago. The air pillow will save many a head and backache, while the compact medicine case containing the "ounce of prevention" or cure and the small drinking glass in its leather case are always close companions. The new "Pullman sleeper" of soft dark silk serves ideally as wrapper and sleeping gown, with its hood to protect the hair from cinders and dust. Turkish slippers are convenient and require but little space, being flat and without heels. Cases of lawn for the extra blouse and nightdress will keep these garments fresh and sweet.—[Delineator.

A RESOURCEFUL MOTHER.

Novel Method of Teaching Her Children to Be Kind and to Save Their Money.

A clever and resourceful mother living in the suburbs of New York City has hit upon a happy way of teaching her children to be merciful to animals, and the method is also showing them the value of money. It is by permitting them to raise guinea pigs and rabbits.

This mother explains that by the value of money, she does not mean so much what money will buy, but rather the amount of effort required to earned money honestly. She says that from personal observation, she believes that children demand so much from their parents in the way of clothes, amusements and other things that cost money because they have no idea of what effort is required for their parents to earn the money. She intends that her son and daughter shall know what it costs their father to give them comforts and luxuries.

This mother began her object lesson when her boy was 5 and her girl 3. She gave her son a pair of white Angora rabbits and her daughter a pair of Abyssinian cavies. The children were impressed with the fact that these little creatures were their exclusive property so long as they treated them kindly.

They were taught how to feed and care for their pets. Of course the children took great pleasure in the little creatures at once, but as soon as the newness wore off the little boy began to neglect his rabbits. The mother took care of them until the first litter of baby rabbits made their appearance, then the boy's enthusiasm was again aroused.

It was not long after the arrival of the young rabbits, that the boy one day went to his father and demanded 5 cents to buy a top. It was the top season and all the boys had tops. This was the mother's opportunity, so she told him he was old enough to earn his own money to buy his tops, that he could sell his rabbits, and all the money he received for them would be his own to do with as he wished. This served very well, for an offer was made to him for his rabbits from a friend, so he had only to close the bargain. He now got his top and still had more money than he ever had in his life before. He was cautioned against spending it all, and he was told that he would have to wait a long time before there would be more rabbits to sell. Still as the money was his very own, he was not actually forbidden to spend it, so it was not very long before he was quite penniless again. He appealed again to his father for money. But mother stepped in here and said father could now only give him the money as a loan. He was told that when father needed more money than what he really made, he had to borrow it from the bank, and then he had to pay a small sum besides for the use of it. Now if he wished it father would lend him the money, if he was willing to pay it back with the very next money which he received, with a little added for interest.

The boy seemed to think that he needed the money badly, so he was delighted to get it so easily. He gave his father a written promise to return the amount with an additional cent. This borrowing went on until the day of the sale of the second litter of rabbits brought paying-back time. It was then that the little fellow began to see the lesson his mother was trying to teach him.

After paying his father and receiving back all his notes, the little fellow had only four brown cents of his own. He was disappointed and it was awfully hard to keep back the tears; indeed, his mother found traces of them on his pillow, when she gave him the good-night kiss, that evening.

It was two days before the little boy could trust himself to talk about his bankrupt condition, and then he was heard trying to get his sister to open her bank and heart to his needs. Although she had always been generous in dividing other property, she refused to give him any of the contents of her bank. She was saving up to buy a long-coveted toy.

Failing to move his sister, the boy again went to his mother, and here is where she got in a nicely timed little talk, which warned against a boy ever borrowing from girls, especially girls younger than himself. Mother included herself, too, among the girls, so there was nothing to do again but to go to his father.

It is reported that this lesson was not lost, for when the third batch of baby rabbits was sold, he had half of the amount left for himself, and he soon thought of increasing his stock for the sake of getting more money. So the next step was to get finer stock.

He had now come to the point where it seemed as natural for him to earn his own spending money as it did at first for him to go to his father for it.

The little girl's experience was not quite as hard. Maybe it was because she did not have the temptations that come to a boy to spend money, or perhaps she profited by her brother's experience. Her bank account kept steadily ahead of her brother's. In her devotion to her pets she had had less time for her dolls and other toys, so she had only spent her money for an occasional sweet or treating her little friends.

It was the mother's watchful eye that kept them from neglecting the little animals at first, but now it is pure love on the girl's part, and partly love and partly self-interest on the part of the boy.

Not long ago the little girl attended her first animal show, and begged to add a pair of white Peruvian cavies to her stock. The pair were for sale, but because they were prize winners the price was rather high, just $15 for the pair. Although the mother was not quite sure the little daughter was getting her money's worth, she let her buy the cavies, because the money was her own. She took the tenderest care of all of her pets, but was most devoted to the Peruvian cavies, putting their long hair in curl papers every night before going to bed, and was up an hour earlier than she ever was in her life to take the curls down and brush them. The boy averages about $2 a pair for his rabbits, and the cavies go for about $1.50 a pair. The expense of such pets is next to nothing. As a special Sunday dinner the little girl treats her cavies to a large bowl of bread and milk, and they seem to know when Sunday comes around just as much as their little mistress, for when she returns from Sunday-school they set up a great whistling, and never stop until she places the treat before them.

Fun from the Tots.

Teacher: Johnnie, how many poles are there?

Johnnie: Two. The South Pole and the new American flagpole.

"Mamma," said little May, "I'm afraid I'm naughty, because I've got an awful stomach ache."

"It was the pie you ate, I think, May."

"Oh, no, mamma, the pie was too good to behave like that. It must be me."

Teacher: Tommy Figg, what is the meaning of "truculent?"

Tommy: It's when a man talks sassy, like a truck driver.

One night we were in a dense crowd watching a parade, when, during one of those unaccountable lulls which so often occur in large crowds, a little fellow who was perched high up on his father's shoulder, shouted, "Oh, papa, you ought to see! 'Way in the street they are just squirting light all over the people."—[The Delineator.

IN AND ABOUT PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The illness of Prof. Francis has cast a gloom over the Polytechnic High School throughout the week. The bulletins from the hospital, posted in the entrance hall, from time to time, are anxiously scanned by teachers and pupils. Mr. Dunn, vice-principal, is at the head of affairs during the absence of Prof. Francis.

Several fine pieces of statuary, purchased by the board of control from the Seattle Exposition, for the Polytechnic, have arrived and will soon be in place. A committee, headed by Miss Parsons and Miss Smith, has been appointed, upon permanent decoration of the school buildings and grounds. Concerts and other entertainments will be given from time to time, for which a small admission will be charged, and the proceeds will go toward the embellishment of the school. The first of this series was given last week, at which an Irish programme was rendered. There were readings and songs typical of the Emerald Isle, by Harry Clifford Lott and Miss Cavanaugh. Next Wednesday morning the string quartette, consisting of two violins, a viola and a 'cello, will give a concert. This will be a musical day, as all public school pupils will be admitted, at a special price, to the Sousa concert on Wednesday.

The girl's gymnasium department of the Polytechnic has developed a new feature, in the swimming class, organized by Miss Gilbert and Miss Meredith. This exercise has been selected by fifty-eight of the girls, in place of other outside gymnasium work. Once a week the class goes to Bimini, and not only is the exercise much enjoyed, but the girls are equipped for any emergency which is likely to occur at seaside or in ocean travel, for the teaching is thoroughly practical. In fact, it is the aim of the girls' gymnasium department to make all the exercises not merely recreative, but to so conduct them in connection with the departments of physiology and hygiene that a systematic physical development shall be carried out during the important growing-up period. With this end in view, an especial class has been instituted for pupils who are, for any physical reason, unable to take part in the more violent sports. Outdoor and indoor sports and exercises are quite evenly balanced in the girls' gymnastics, tennis and basketball alternating with the indoor work. Miss Mary Browne, who last season distinguished herself in the tennis contests with the Misses Sutton, is a pupil at the Polytechnic High School.

Miss Kate Smith, with her usual originality, has introduced into the oral English classes the study of conversation. She believes that one of the most embarrassing situations in which two young persons can be placed is that of the first few minutes after being introduced to each other. In order to preclude the possibility of such embarrassment, a novel plan has been adopted. Two members of the class are introduced to each other and must at once begin and carry on an ordinary conversation for a certain length of time. By this practice, it is hoped that the students will be assisted in overcoming one of the most common predicaments of social life.

A class in Latin-German has been formed, in the German department, in response to an urgent request from the pupils. Owing to the fact that no Latin is taught at the Polytechnic at the beginning of the term, several members of Miss Meyeri's advanced German classes pleaded that she teach them Latin. After talking the matter over, the consent of the officers was obtained, and the class in Latin-German was organized. It meets three times a week, and has a membership of seven. As the work is not required and no credit is given, only those pupils most interested in the subject have joined the class. "This," said Miss Meyerl, "makes the teaching especially interesting and delightful." Owing to the fact that Latin is much less difficult, after the study of German, the pupils are able, without undue exertion, to cover in three days the ground covered by most classes in five. Unable to procure Latin text-books written in German, the class uses the regular English books, translating from Latin into German, and from German into Latin. In the oral German class, which is conducted entirely in German, articles from real German magazines, published in the "Fadderland," are read and commented upon. Later in the term Parliamentary law is to be studied in this class. It will not be the Parliamentary law of the Reichstag, but the same which rules our own Senate, and the women's clubs of the United States.

The Olive-street school, transformed last spring into a High School, is the natural place for faculty meetings and general offices, owing to its central location, between Fourth and Fifth streets, on Olive. The library of all the public schools, comprising over 40,000 volumes, is here housed, being distributed from this point, upon requisition, to the other schools. The library, which occupies one of the largest rooms in the building, forms an ideal study hall.

Dr. Wilson, the principal, is a graduate of the University of Berlin, with the degree of Ph. D. "Until such time as we shall have more commodious quarters in the new High School at Vermont avenue and Fortieth street," said Dr. Wilson, "we are utilizing every inch of space in our present location." This seems literally true. There are 470 pupils in attendance at this small building, which is wedged in between two big apartment houses. The fact that athletics can be indulged in at all is a triumph of ingenuity. A space 100x25 feet, at the rear of the building, is utilized as a handball court, and also as an "indoor baseball field." The "gymnasium" occupies 25x30 feet, at the side of the building, which leaves a spot 25x20 for an additional ball court; and a small corner adjacent is used for pitching quoits. In the basement of the building are dressing rooms and showers. "We are so small and so young," said Mr. Fulton, in charge of athletics, "that we have as yet attained only to practice games; but we hope for distinction later. We have had practice games with Polytechnic, and on Saturday shall engage with San Pedro. Indoor baseball and quoits are really our favorite sports here, because of restricted space."

The first of a series of Friday-afternoon entertainments was given this week under the direction of Miss Grant. The programme consisted of piano and violin solos and humorous readings. Mr. Goodenow has organized an orchestra, consisting of twelve pieces; and a glee club of twenty-two voices, which will, doubtless, add much to the season's entertainments.

Los Angeles High School was treated to a fine entertainment on Wednesday by George B. Williams, the Shakespearean reader. Selections from "Henry IV" were given. Prof. Housh has planned to have, during the season, prominent readers, speakers and musicians, come before the school.

On Wednesday afternoon the faculty tendered a reception to the new members of the Los Angeles High School. The affair was in charge of Miss Kathryn Carr, as chairman of the Library Committee. Musical numbers of especial interest were given. A vocal solo by Arthur T. Merrill was much appreciated. Mr. Merrill is a recent addition to the history department, coming here from Stanford. He has a tenor voice of exceptional merit. Mrs. Travers bride of Mr. Travers of the science department, rendered two fine piano solos. In addition to the faculty and their wives, other guests were Mrs. Mary L. Cheney, appointment secretary of the University of Southern California, J. W. Henry, former vice-principal, and Mrs. Edna Owens Henton, a former member of the faculty.

Mr. Gilbert of the natural science department is setting up a fine skeleton of a mastodon discovered by him in the fossil beds of La Brea ranch. This specimen is said to be one of the most perfect on record.

WOMAN WINS AS RAILROAD SURGEON.

BRAZORIA (Tex.) October 14.—Dr. Sofie Herzog of Brazoria, Tex., is said to be the only woman railroad surgeon in the world. She has held the position of surgeon for the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Railroad ever since that line was built, several years ago. In addition to her duties in connection with the railroad she has a large private practice. As surgeon for the railroad Dr. Herzog has gone through many trying experiences, but in no instance was there the slightest falter in the quick and effective performance of her work. She was born in Vienna, Austria, and came to the United States in 1886. She studied medicine and surgery, and after her graduation she practiced the profession in the State of New York for nine years. Believing that a wider field for her endeavors existed in Texas, she moved to Brazoria, where she has lived ever since. During the construction of the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Railroad she was called to attend the injuries of laborers hurt in accidents, and the skill which she showed in these cases caused her fame as a surgeon to quickly spread, with the result that she was appointed surgeon for the road upon its completion.

Dr. Sofie Herzog.

More for the Seller.

"Whisky drops two cents a gallon," remarked a man, scanning a newspaper in a café yesterday. "Lots of good that'll do me," he went on. "Two cents a gallon in the wholesale price at Cincinnati! Why, do you know that bartender just told me he figured on fifteen highballs to each bottle of whisky he opened? And there are five bottles to the gallon. You can see from that how much the price by the glass is likely to drop."—[Kansas City Star.

VERMONT SQUARE

Comprising 52 City Blocks—A Town in Itself.

Public Improvements That Enhance Values

The new $250,000 high school is to be built only two short blocks from Vermont Square.

A majority of property owners have signed up to pave Vermont avenue with asphalt from Santa Monica avenue to Santa Barbara avenue.

A petition is being freely signed for the paving of Vermont avenue with asphalt from Santa Barbara avenue to Slauson avenue.

This will make continuous asphalt paving, eighty feet wide, from Washington street to Slauson avenue, a distance of four miles, on the longest street in the city and second longest city street in the United States.

On this street the new high school will be erected; on this street Vermont Square has a frontage of half a mile.

Crossing Vermont avenue at right angles is Vernon avenue, the second longest street in the city, on which Vermont Square has a frontage of one mile. Vernon avenue will soon be improved similarly to Vermont avenue.

Agricultural Park, with one of its main entrances from Vermont avenue, where $625,000 is to be spent in public improvements, is in the same district with Vermont Square, THE NEW SOUTHWEST.

A total of 45 building permits was taken out Saturday, Oct. 16, of which 30 were in Vermont Square and its immediate vicinity.

THE REST CAN SAFELY BE LEFT TO THE HOMEBUILDER AND INVESTOR OF INTELLIGENCE AND SOUND JUDGMENT.

Discounts For the Home Builder's Benefit 5% for cash; 5% to the builders of the first houses in any block completed within six months from date of purchase.

Vermont Square is on Vernon, Normandie and Western avenues. Take Grand avenue car on Broadway marked "Dalton Avenue" and get off at Forty-fifth street, or take Grand avenue car on Broadway marked "West Forty-eighth Street" and get off at Normandie avenue. Agents in waiting to show the property.

GO THERE FOR THE BEST READINGS BY THE GREATEST READER.

WOULD YOU LIFT THE CURTAINS TO THE MYSTERIES OF THE VEILED BEYOND? IF SO, CONSULT THIS GREAT PSYCHIC.

DIRECT FROM INDIA.

DOES EVERYTHING GO ALL WRONG? IF SO, THERE IS A CAUSE. DO YOU WISH TO CONTINUE ON THE DOWNWARD TRAIL OR DO YOU DESIRE TO CHANGE AND CLAIM WHAT GOD INTENDED YOU TO HAVE? IF YOU WOULD RISE TO YOUR NATURAL SPHERE AND ENJOY LIFE AS OTHERS DO, SEE MUNDO.

HE WILL TELL YOU OF THE CAUSE OF YOUR WOE AND HOW TO OVERCOME IT. HE IS THE MAN THE SAN FRANCISCO PAPERS SAID SO MUCH ABOUT FOR PREDICTING THE GREAT QUAKE AND FIRE.

THIS MAN OF MYSTERY HAS RIGHTFULLY GAINED THE TITLE, THE WIZARD SEER, THE NAME SO OFTEN APPLIED TO HIM, AND WE RECOMMEND HIM TO YOU FOR DEAD TRANCE READINGS AND DEEP PSYCHIC WORK OF ALL KINDS, AND TO BE THE MOST THOROUGH, CONSISTENT, CONCISE AND COMPLETE LIFE READER BEFORE THE PUBLIC TODAY. THE PEER OF ALL PSYCHICS, THE ONLY GRADUATE OF THE ORDOO COLLEGE OF OCCULTISM TO EVER LEAVE HIS NATIVE LAND. A HERALD OF THE MYSTERIES OF THE PROPHETS OF OLDEN TIMES.

THIS GREAT PSYCHIC HAS SPENT ALL THE YEARS OF HIS ACTIVE LIFE IN THE STUDY AND PURSUIT OF THIS, HIS NATURALLY ENDOWED SCIENCE, AND STANDS ALONE AT THE HEAD OF A VAST ARMY OF SEERS AND PROPHETS, MANY OF WHOM HE HAS TAUGHT AND PREPARED FOR THE PURSUIT OF THIS GRAND CALLING. SEE HIM TODAY. HE MAY CHANGE THE COURSE OF YOUR WHOLE EXISTENCE. MANY A SAD HEART HAS BEEN GLADDENED, MANY A WEARY LIFE MADE BRIGHT BY THE ADVICE AND MAGNETISM OF THIS WONDERFUL MAN. HE IS UNLIKE ANY YOU EVER SAW, DOES POSITIVELY ALL THAT OTHERS CLAIM TO DO AND DEMONSTRATES THE POWER OF MIND OVER MATTER FREE TO EVERY PATRON. THE ONLY MAN IN AMERICA POSSESSING THIS POWER. SEEING IS BELIEVING. TRY HIM, THEN TRY OTHERS AND SEE IF THEY CAN DO THE SAME. A CAPABLE MAN HAS CONFIDENCE IN HIS ABILITY AND WILL NOT REQUIRE YOU TO DEPOSIT YOUR MONEY BEFORE HIS WORK IS DONE. MUNDO HAS READ FOR MANY OF AMERICA'S LEADING CITIZENS AND A FEW TITLED FOREIGNERS, BUT HE HAS MORE RESPECT FOR HIS PATRONS AND MORE CONSIDERATION FOR THEIR FEELINGS THAN TO PUBLISH THEIR NAMES BROADCAST FOR THE SAKE OF ADVERTISEMENT, NOR DOES HE CLAIM TO HAVE READ FOR DOZENS OF PROMINENT PEOPLE THAT COMMON SENSE W... TELL YOU HE NEVER SAW. IF YOU NEED ADVICE AND WANT A READING FROM A REAL LIFE READER WHO DOES NOT SPEND HALF HIS TIME SLANDERING HIS COMPETITORS, SEE MUNDO, THE REAL LIFE READER WHO REALLY TELLS WHAT YOU DESIRE TO KNOW OR NO CHARGE. A FOOLISH WEAKLING ONLY WILL PAY FOR A READING THAT GIVES NO BENEFIT. STOP AND THINK, THEN SEE MUNDO, THE INDIAN SEER. SPECIAL READING, 50c.

WORLD'S GREATEST PSYCHIC, a

PROF.

STANLEY,

247—S. HILL ST.—247

LOOK FOR NAME AND NUMBER.

"TRUTHFUL IN HIS PREDICTIONS, RELIABLE IN HIS ADVICE."

NO MATTER WHAT TROUBLES YOU MAY HAVE WITH YOURSELF OR OTHERS, COME AND HE WILL GUIDE YOU TO SUCCESS AND HAPPINESS.

PROF. STANLEY HAS NO AUCTION PRICES. YOU KNOW WHAT YOU HAVE TO PAY. DOES THIS APPEAL TO YOU?

$1—READINGS TO ALL—$1

ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST. IT IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END. IT IS BETTER TO CONSULT NO PSYCHIC THAN ONE WHO IS NOT ABLE TO HELP YOU.

He believes that he has passed the experimental stage and finds no one who is not willing to pay the small fee of $1.00, providing they receive reliable advice. If after the reading is over and you are not perfectly satisfied, he will not accept one penny of your money. IS THIS NOT HONEST AND FAIR?

IF THE TELLING OF YOUR NAME WILL SATISFY YOU, HE WILL DO SO FREE OF CHARGE. ALSO SHOW YOU HOW IT IS DONE.

What is of most importance is, facts and figures.

Without your writing or even speaking, he will give you names, dates and figures.

If you want the truth, with reliable advice, you will consult BYRON STANLEY on past, present and future. Also remember what has been told you, which too often is not the case.

NO NEED TO TELL HIM.

There is no need to tell Stanley your story. There will be no "quizzing" or asking of questions. His talents enable him to instinctively know your wants and troubles. Without any attempt at mystification, but with unerring sight into the inner nature of things, he reveals that which you most wish to know. His advice on all matters, business, lawsuits, marriage, health, is invaluable. It is exact and correct—not guesswork. He gives names, dates, facts and figures and shows clearly and distinctly the road to success in business as well as in domestic and family affairs.

Before you go into anything of importance—or undertake anything serious—in business, or love, or marriage, or before you make any change—you should consult the master mind of clairvoyance.

DON'T STRUGGLE WITH A BURDEN YOU CAN DIVIDE. A TROUBLED MIND BEGETS A MORBID CONSCIENCE. SYMPATHY, CONSOLATION AND TIMELY ADVICE HEALS THE WORST OF WOUNDS. BE ADVISED AND RELIEVED OF ANXIETY.

If you have already made a mistake, thrown away your money and lost confidence through dealing with much-advertised and self-styled palmists and clairvoyants and their cheap methods, start anew and consult Prof. Stanley. He will tell you frankly your condition and what you may expect.

PROF. STANLEY IS THE OLDEST PSYCHIC in experience, the richest in knowledge and skill, crowned with years of unparalleled success. His advice has saved and made thousands happy. It will benefit you. Readings daily and Sunday, 10 to 8. Permanently located.

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,

305½ S. SPRING, NEAR THIRD ST.
EXPERT ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST.

A resident of Los Angeles 26 years.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE calculated from the PLANETS at your birth will show what a powerful influence they have in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, domestic affairs, financial affairs; your talents; your environments, tells about children; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when in danger of illness, accidents, death, losses, troubles, etc., etc., also your good periods coming—GIVING DATES OF THESE EVENTS FOR THE FUTURE. In fact, the HOROSCOPE gives ACCURATE AND RELIABLE information on ALL AFFAIRS OF LIFE. He read E. H. Sothern, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Sousa, Modjeska, Lillian Russell, Calve, Admiral Evans, Jefferson, Anna Held, Annie Besant, Joaquin Miller, etc. These are a few of the many NOTED PUBLIC persons—and for this reason only are they here mentioned—all positively read by Prof. Althouse, besides hundreds of the best people of Los Angeles, with whom all his readings are STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S skilled work must in no wise be classed with that of other readers; therefore beware of HUMBUG astrologers, palmists, psychics, clairvoyants, etc.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING GIVES ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.

PROF. ALTHOUSE, in September, 1908, PUBLICLY predicted—by the PLANETS—the election of TAFT and the defeat of BRYAN.

DR. J. A. LARSON writes: "I want to say that your reading was the most satisfactory thing I have ever had in my life. I know a great deal about these sciences and I consider your work as the most thorough and reliable of any reader in the United States."

PAPINTA, actress, writes and says: "Everything has turned out just as you predicted, when reading my hand and Horoscope. YOU ARE WONDERFUL, and I cannot express myself of what I think about your WONDERFUL TRUE READINGS."

MME. BALDWIN writes: "The Horoscope you wrote for me is absolutely CORRECT. My friend, MME. NORDICA, the singer, first showed me her Horoscope, and recommended your work to me. Inclosed find check for four more Horoscopes—all friends of mine."

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK says: "I was greatly surprised to find how many of your warnings were well founded. YOUR READING WAS MOST MARVELOUS."

DR. ALEX. J. McIVOR TYNDALL SAYS: "Your work along the lines of Astrology and Palmistry is highly spoken of on all sides."

FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your reading was MOST SATISFACTORY."

LOUIS JAMES, actor, says: "Your reading was ENTIRELY SATISFACTORY."

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of horoscopes and hand reading has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.

HIGHEST GRADE OF WORK that skill and experience can produce; therefore, HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

MILBURN.

WHEN CONSIDERING A PSYCHIC,

CONSULT THE BEST.

Milburn is the acknowledged reader of them all. Permanently located in Los Angeles. He advises you with a power higher than human. He brings sunshine and success in your life. Work guaranteed. New location, 911 S. HILL ST. Home 10 to 8, daily and Sundays. 24

PERSONAL—

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 321 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store,) by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions, and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

WANTED—A FEW YEARS SPENT IN the navy are years of valuable experience. Habits of regularity are formed. Healthy exercise, regular drills, and growing responsibility develop quickness and self reliance. Many large employers prefer men who have had naval training because more capable and efficient.

Young men with mechanical knowledge have greater opportunities. They master their trade instead of being mere helpers.

Go to a recruiting office and learn about the fine chances in the different branches of the service to save money, the hours of duty, cruises, sports, promotion, etc. You are not urged to enlist. Individuality will be developed, not suppressed, in the navy. Ask any one in the service about it.

The navy hanger in postoffice, and navy posters will give you an idea of the appearance of a bluejacket. Apply at NAVY RECRUITING OFFICE, San Fernando Bldg. 4th and Main streets. San Francisco. x*

OIL PROPERTY—

SIMONEAU & COMPANY,
Oil Lands. Leases. Stocks.
210 Security Bldg.

20 acres producing 100,000 barrels—$300,000.
20 acres producing 200,000 barrels—$400,000.
10 acres producing 140,000 barrels—$200,000.
10 acres producing 100,000 barrels—$100,000.

These properties adjoin. Will sell separately, but prefer to deliver all in one deal. Note that the production will return your investment in four years. Half cash for first payment. This is the most attractive oil proposition on the market.

20-year lease on 20 acres in Kern field, one-fifth royalty; one well down now doing 40 barrels. Price for lease and well $10,000.

Some very choice oil lands in the Newhall field, side-lining proven ground.

Attractive oil lease in Midway field, no cash bonus, absolutely proven ground. This is the best thing of the kind in that field; 1200 feet territory, 200-barrel wells. You better get busy.

We have the best proposition in the market in prospective oil-bearing property where big money can be made. Easy plan and takes very little cash to swing.

SIMONEAU & COMPANY,

OPPORTUNITY—UINTA COUNTY, WYOMING, oil, coal and agricultural lands near Evanston; Wyoming is coming into its own now and offers great opportunity for an expenditure of little money. Prices of land in California are high now and the early bird got the worm. Be the early bird in Wyoming, we can put you in right. Uinta county oil is contracted for at $2 per barrel and more wanted. Coal underlies fine agricultural land with plenty of water that can be bought now for from $3 to $7 per acre. See me at once and select best. Here is the chance for the man with a few hundred dollars to make money. H. F. CALVERT, 522 H. W. Hellman Bldg. 24

OIL—
I want to meet party who has complete oil drilling outfit, and sufficient capital to drill two wells immediately, on section 25, MIDWAY. Almost 100 wells on this "mile square" of land, pumping from 200 to 1000 bbls. per day. Will show land. It is positively "proven." One well drilled in 29 days, 400 feet away on adjoining land yielding 350 bbls. daily. Want to pay in oil. ½ first production and give 10 per cent. interest on money advanced for casing, drilling and all cost of wells, and generous stock bonus. Principals only. Address H, box 111, TIMES OFFICE. x24

WANTED—FEW MEN JOIN FEW OTHERS IN OIL COMPANY NOW FORMED TO DRILL ON THEIR OWN LAND, WHICH IS PROVEN TERRITORY AND BELIEVED BY ALL SURE OF SUCCESS. EACH PERSON PUTS IN $100, AND ALL SHARE ALIKE. THIS MAY NOT BE OFFERED AGAIN. INVESTIGATION SOLICITED. ADDRESS G, BOX 169, TIMES OFFICE. x24

Port Items.

The steamer Carmel arrived today with 695,000 feet of lumber. The steamer Fulton called to discharge 30,000 feet and proceeded to San Diego with 380,000 feet, balance of cargo.

The steamers Francis H. Leggett, William H. Murphy and J. B. Stetson and the schooners Honolpu and Wawona sailed north today in ballast to reload lumber. The schooner Honolpu will load at British Columbia ports for the South Sea Islands.

Three passenger steamers sailed north today with all accommodations sold. These were the admiral Sampson of the Alaska-Pacific line, the St. Croix of the Schuback-Hamilton line, whose entry into Southern California waters brought on the present rate war, and the West Coast lumber steamer, J. B. Stetson. Not only do the regular passenger steamers come and go loaded to the guards but even the steamer lumber schooners having passenger accommodations are doing well and most of them come and go with their cabins full.

Another steamer is to be added to the fleet of freight and passenger vessels calling here. The Jebsen & Ostrander Company has chartered the Norwegian steamer Transit of 1179 tons to run regularly between British Columbia and Central American ports in conjunction with the German steamers Ella and Erna, now on the route. The line receives a subsidy from the Mexican government for carrying mail to and from Manzanillo, where rail connection is made with the city of Mexico.

The steamer Chehalis is due to arrive here tomorrow from Gray's Harbor. On her return North the Chehalis will attempt to get the schooner Ensign off the beach at Naples, north of Santa Barbara. The insurance companies have sold the beached schooner to Charles Foster and if weather conditions are favorable, it is expected that she will be floated.

ANOTHER BLOW TO WALSH.

Chicago Banker Had Arranged to Sell Big Railroad Properties When Wall Street Intervened.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The sale of the Walsh railroad properties to the United States Steel Corporation, which, it is reported today, was ready to pay John R. Walsh of Chicago $35,000,000 for the Southern Indiana, Illinois Southern and Chicago Southern, was averted by Wall-street kings of finance. At the moment when it seemed certain that Walsh would be able, through disposing of his two best railroad properties to liquidate his indebtedness to the Chicago Clearinghouse Association banks and wipe out a myriad of debts and still save about $10,000,000, the Moore, Vanderbilt and Rockefeller interests and groups in control of the Pennsylvania Railroad intervened. The railroad companies controlled by the Rockefellers, Moores, Vanderbilts and the Pennsylvania, while coveting the Walsh lines, now prefer to see them go on the auction block, where they will be slaughtered and parcel them among themselves.

ARIZONA BANKERS ELECT.

GLOBE (Ariz.) Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In its last business session today, the sixth annual convention of the Arizona Bankers' Association this morning elected officers. An address on "Bank Taxation," by Charles L. Rawlins of Globe, was heard. It was voted to hold the next convention at El Tovar Hotel, Grand Cañon, Ariz., and that the date of the convention be left to the direction to the secretary of the association. In the motion for deciding the next meeting place, it was resolved that the Arizona bankers' convention should rest a sufficient number of days to allow the Arizona bankers to be present at the opening of the American Bankers' Convention at Los Angeles in 1910.

The list of officers are C. O. Ellis of Douglas, president; J. G. Spangler of Mesa, vice-president; L. B. Christy of Phoenix, treasurer; Morris Goldwater of Prescott, secretary. Executive council for three years, J. M. Ormsby of Tucson and A. G. Smith of Globe; for two years, R. H. Bunnister of Phoenix; for one year, T. R. Brant of Tombstone.

Vice-president of Arizona in the American Bankers' Association, 1910-1911, R. N. Frederickson of Prescott.

Delegate to nomination committee of American Bankers' Convention, 1910, J. N. Robinson of Globe.

Ex-Judge Frederick S. Nave, who was to have spoken on "How the Outsider Looks At the Banks," was prevented by illness from being present. Tonight the business men of Globe gave a banquet in honor of the visiting bankers at the Dominion Hotel. The members of the association will leave Globe tomorrow.

W.C.T.U. Convention Declares It Will Not Fight Bill Pending in Nebraska.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

OMAHA (Neb.) Oct. 23.—The National W.C.T.U. meeting in annual convention here today, adopted the following resolution, after considerable debate:

"While the W.C.T.U. stands for State-wide prohibition and cannot ask for anything else, we do not wish to be understood as being opposed to the federated forces of the State that are working for the passage of the Anti-Saloon League county option bill. We will be pleased to have this measure become a law and will consider its passage an advance step in the right direction, and under its operation we will most heartily coöperate to make this a saloonless State."

BATTLESHIP SPEEDY.

Delaware, Latest and Most Powerful of the Nation's Marine Fighters, Shatters Records.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

ROCKLAND (Me.) Oct. 23.—American shipbuilders demonstrated their ability to push the battleship Delaware, the highest developed marine fighter in the world, in a standardization test over a measured mile course today at a speed of 21.98 knots an hour, subject to tidal corrections.

In accomplishing this feat, 30,000 horse power, the greatest ever attained by a first-class battleship, commonly known as the Dreadnaught class, was developed.

The mean speed of the Delaware's maximum runs today was 21.44 knots an hour, a margin of .44 of a knot over the contract with her builders, the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Company.

"SOME SHOOTING."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—A new record has been established by the great coast defense guns at Fort Hancock, N. J., a report of which has just reached the War Department. With ten-inch disappearing rifles, the battery there fired four shots a minute at a target thirty feet high and sixty feet long, which was being towed by a tug, and every shot told. Four shots fired in one minute all struck within a space on the material target exactly 24 feet by 53 feet. This record never before has been approacehd by the coast artillery.

No heavy gun battery above six-inch caliber has attained the speed of firing or the hits per minute made in this practice. The distance at which the record was made was more than seven thousand yards, or about four miles. The Eighteenth Company, Coast Artillery Corps, is credited with this new mark in gunnery.

Young Girl Accuses Opium Smoker With Crime.

Declares Man Drugged Her in His Room.

Admits She Ran Away from Delaware Home.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Sixteen-year-old Ethel Gilmore Sims, a niece of Judge James Joslyn of Wilmington, Del., appeared in the West Side Police Court today against Harry Mason, a self-confessed opium smoker, whom she accused of having forced her to marry him.

The girl, who does not look more than 14, ran away from the home of her grandfather, Dr. John Sims of Wilmington, four weeks ago, to "go on the stage." She made the rounds of the New York theaters and booking offices, and when all hope had fled, encountered Mason. She told Magistrate Butts she had been forced by Mason to smoke opium in Mason's room at No. 266 West Thirty-ninth street, and while under the influence of the drug last Thursday had been taken by him to the City Hall, and against her will made his wife.

Mason, a sallow-faced man of 23, said he had married the girl, but not against her will. Magistrate Butts held him in $2000 bail for further examination tomorrow.

SECRETARY OF WAR NOT JOY'S SAVIOR AFTER ALL.

Letter of Thanks from Rescued Man to Captain of Yacht, Declares Dickinson Was Too Poor a Swimmer to Accomplish Feat—Gives Credit to Skipper.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DETROIT (Mich.) Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The reason why Secretary of War Dickinson is so reticent regarding the rescuing from the Detroit River of J. F. Joy, who fell from a gangplank of ex-Secretary of Navy Newberry's yacht Truant, in 1895, and for which rescue Secretary Dickinson recently received a medal, has leaked out here. The leak is to the Secretary's credit, for it shows he jumped overboard to rescue Joy, although a poor swimmer himself.

He did not rescue Mr. Joy at all. Capt. Moses Redmond, who has been in command of various yachts of the Newberry family for thirty years, performed that feat himself.

Redmond remembered something about helping Mr. Joy out of the river, but he had one medal for life-saving already, and, what was more, the letter written by Mr. Joy shortly after his ducking, thanking him for his prompt action. This letter he had treasured, and when the original copy accidentally was destroyed he went to Mr. Joy's office, and was given a copy from the letter file. After much delving among papers in a chest in his winter quarters, No. 672 Atwater street, East, yesterday afternoon, Capt. Redmond brought to view this letter:

"Sept. 15, 1895.

"Dear Sir: Will you allow me to make you a present of the inclosed $25? It is, of course, no compensation, nor is it intended as such, for very efficient prompt aid you and the men on the Truant gave me the evening I took a bath by stepping from the gangplank. Nothing I could do would be compensation to you for such aid, and you would not take compensation for an act of humanity on your part. I make this little present, and write you this letter and give you my cordial thanks, all to show you that I appreciate fully the prompt and careful means adopted by you for rescuing myself and my friend, Dickinson, who, not knowing I was an expert swimmer, had immediately followed me into the water to hold me up if necessary, until both could be rescued from it.

"When next I take a bath of this kind, if I ever do, I hope it may be from the Truant with yourself and the men with you in management.

"Yours truly,
[Signed] J. F. JOY."

Mrs. Eliza Plunket Declares Husband Keeps Her in Sanatorium to Get Fortune.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NASHVILLE (Tenn.) Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Eliza Plunkett, wife of Dr. J. D. Plunkett, alleges in an application for a writ of habeas corpus filed in the Circuit Court that she is illegally confined in the City View Sanatorium, through the scheming of her husband and others who have obtained some of her property and expect to obtain the remainder by keeping her in illegal confinement.

At the conclusion of a brief hearing this morning Judge Mathews continued the matter for final hearing till 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, November 6, and ordered that Mrs. Plunkett be removed from the sanatorium, and placed at the home of Mrs. Janie M. Baker on South Spruce street.

Mrs. Plunkett is well-known in Nashville and elsewhere. She is a sister of the late Thomas Swope, multi-millionaire of Kansas City, Mo. Only a few days ago a copy of his will probated in Kansas City was put on record in the Davidson county [illegible]. Mrs. Plunkett is one of the beneficiaries under the will, the property left her being of great value, probably $100,000.

John W. Stevens, superintendent of the City View Sanatorium, is named as defendant. She claims the sanatorium is nothing more or less than an insane asylum.

Warned to Quit Town or Die, Man Shoots on Sight.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

JACKSONVILLE (Fla.) Oct. 23.—Charles A. Husband, who had been given until this morning to leave Jacksonville or die, by J. H. Smith, shot and killed Smith when the two met today. Smith had ordered Husband to leave town because he saw the latter with Mrs. Smith yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have been separated since 1907, when Smith killed John Milton for alleged attentions to Mrs. Smith. Husband was arrested.

MOTHER OF A HOST.

Woman, More Than Century Old, Has at Least Four Hundred Descendants.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In a comfortable apartment on the second floor of No. 1655 Lexington avenue, a woman, so weighted with years that age now deals gently in leaving its imprints, spent today in prayer. She is Mrs. Shaine Rachel Rosenthal, mother of twenty children, grandmother of more than 150, great-grandmother of perhaps two score and great-great-grandmother of three or four.

In the absence of proof to the contrary she claims to have more descendants than any woman living today. The last census made by members of her family gives 400 as the number of Mrs. Rosenthal's descendants.

Mrs. Rosenthal cannot be prevailed upon to tell her age, and her children have no records to establish it accurately.

Family tradition has it that she is 109.

Mrs. Rosenthal was married when she was 9 years old, and when her husband was 12.

Private Danos of Twenty-second Infantry Wins Hand of Miss Frances Brooks.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SPRINGFIELD (Ill.) Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The ending of a courtship began in the Philippine Islands two years ago when Private Henry J. Danos of the Twenty-second United States Infantry laid siege to the heart of Miss Frances W. Brooks, daughter of Maj.-Gen. H. J. Brooks, U.S.A. (retired,) of San Antonio, Tex., culminated in the marriage of the couple today in this city. Rev. Timothy Hickey, vicar-general of the diocese of Alton and rector of the church, officiated. The bride says she has been in the Red Cross work for a number of years, and has served in Cuba, the Philippines and in the Boxer uprising in China. She has been with the Second United States Artillery. Danos has served for several years in the United States Army as a private. He is now employed in this city.

BOSTON WELCOMES JAPANESE.

Commercial and Industrial Institutions of the "Hub" Thrown Open to Visiting Commissioners.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—The important commercial and industrial institutions of Boston and the surrounding towns were thrown open today for inspection by the honorable commercial commissioners of Japan, who are making a tour of the United States.

The commissioners, escorted by various commercial representatives of the Pacific Coast, arrived by special train from Providence. They were met at the South station by a delegation from the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and a tour of points of historical, industrial and commercial interest in this section of the State was begun.

The delegates were formed into three sections. The first and largest was taken to Quincy, to see the plant of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company. The second section motored out to Walhtam, after which the party went to Harbard.

The five Japanese women, who are accompanying their husbands, were taken to the home of Henry W. Longfellow, in Cambridge, where they were entertained by the poet's daughter, Miss Alice Longfellow.

All three sections met at Harvard, after luncheon. They spent the afternoon at the football game between Harvard and Brown.

FACT AND COMMENT.

It is a worn-out truism to say that among the most important factors of a city are its streets. Another [illegible] less important is the general appearance of the city. These things are important for the comfort and enjoyment of those who already live in [illegible] and scarcely less so in the impression they produce upon the minds of newcomers. In proportion to the [illegible] of the city is the importance of its streets and in proportion [illegible] the growth of the city is the appearance of the city. Los Angeles has, [illegible] the new additions made to it during recent months, a population of at [illegible] 320,000. It stretches over an area of ninety square miles. The increase in population by from 15,000 [illegible] a year. There is a big problem here in the making and maintenance of the streets in such a vast [illegible] geographically, and in its appearance in the favorable or unfavorable impression made on the minds of these newcomers. The addition to the population does not embrace the whole of [illegible] subject. We have visiting us here during the twelve months of a year [illegible] to 100,000 tourists or pos[illegible] others.

—o—

Of the Paved Streets.

The most important portion of the city is that included in the thoroughfares that are paved. These are in the business center or in the thickly-populated residence sections. They are the most used by pedestrians and by vehicles of various kinds. The cost of a paved street to the property holders is a very considerable sum [illegible] for each lot abutting on the thoroughfare. After they are built the [illegible] undertakes to keep them clean. [illegible] people are public-spirited [illegible] progressive. There are few property holders in the city who oppose [illegible] improvements. They generally [illegible] initiative themselves and go [illegible] the Council to have a street [illegible] sidewalked and curbed, and [illegible] to have it paved. When [illegible] are turned over to the city [illegible] natural expectation that the [illegible] shall keep its contract [illegible] property holders by cleaning [illegible] thoroughfares properly. The work [illegible] well done in the business [illegible] sweepers are kept on the [illegible] all the hours of the day, continually picking up all the filth [illegible] is dropped along the roadway. [illegible] would be a pleasant thing [illegible] commendation could be [illegible] the paved streets in the [illegible] portions of the city. [illegible] constrains the writer from [illegible]dation. A natural soil [illegible]ly better than a paved [illegible] the thoroughfare is kept [illegible] soft natural soil permits [illegible] of the filth that is [illegible] it, and the soil is a na[illegible]fectant. The paved street [illegible] hard asphalt surface spread [illegible] will absorb nothing. Sixth [illegible] recently been paved at large [illegible] by the property owners along [illegible] thoroughfare. Before the paving [illegible] the natural soil street was [illegible] several times a day. Since [illegible] thoroughfare was paved the [illegible] has been suspended almost [illegible] excepting along between the [illegible] car tracks where the paving [illegible] yet been done. It is a good [illegible] weeks since the roadway each [illegible] the tracks was paved, and during [illegible] these weeks there has not been [illegible] on Sixth street from Fremont [illegible] westward to the city limits, so [illegible] any one has been able to observe. The dust is 100 per cent. worse [illegible] street since it was paved than [illegible] before. It has become the favorite thoroughfare for people living in the western end of the city, and all day and far into the night automobiles and horse-drawn vehicles whirl along there thick and fast. The dust is often stifling. There may be a reason for its not being sprinkled or not being swept, but we hardly think there is a good reason.

—o—

Oiled Streets.

In the less thickly populated portions of the city some of the streets are treated to a coat of crude oil. Whether this is done under the direct control of the municipal authorities or by contractors, there is a very gross mistake made, often resulting in great inconvenience to those who live along the thoroughfare. The oil is poured over the street, and that seems to be the end of the process. In the first place when the crude oil is left on the top of the street all the volatile matter therein evaporates rapidly, leaving nothing but the solid substance behind. Now the volatile substances are of as much, if not more importance than the solid in keeping the natural soil bound together and thus making a good roadway. When these substances evaporate the solid matter becomes about as friable as the dirt and scarcely any good results from the oil. Another thing: This oil poured thickly over the surface, running in every little depression into a pool, sticks to every person's feet who crosses the street. It is tracked up steps and into houses, oftentimes damaging, sometimes ruining, costly rugs and carpets. The proper way to apply the oil is immediately after it is spread over the surface to go over it with some kind of a cultivator and scratch it in, not too deep, and then roll the surface down solid. In this way the oil becomes a binder to the natural soil, holding it together and making a smooth and moderately hard surface. Then pedestrians may traverse the street without tracking the oil all over doorsteps and into parlors, spoiling carpets and rugs.

—o—

Sign-board Nuisance.

When we come to the appearance of the city, perhaps the thing that creates the biggest eyesore throughout Los Angeles is the altogether too frequent and also altogether too high signboards that cover vacant lots. One would think that property owners in their own defense would be wise enough to stop this. No outdoor advertising concern can put a sign upon any person's lot without the owner's permission. It is undoubtedly a great detriment to the city to have these great signboards stuck up at so many places and running so high, cutting off the view of everything behind the tall boards. The miserable income that is derived from it is so insignificant that the property holder who will permit the disfigurement of the landscape for such a paltry sum must have the heart of a miser. For two or three or five dollars a month is all these sign advertisers pay for the use of an ordinary lot. It is nothing compared with the effect upon the minds of all who live in the city and all who visit it. Sometimes there are three or four lots contiguous and vacant. When you get a piece of property 150 by 150 feet and run these ten-foot signboards around two sides of it, you have a disfigurement of the landscape that is shocking, and yet property holders, blind to the general interests of all property holders in the city, for the sake of four or five dollars a month will permit the defacement of the city by these tall signboards. The matter has been called to the attention of the Council over and over again, and that body has taken some action in limiting the height of these disfigurements. We can scarcely expect city officials to take more interest in a matter of this nature than the property owners themselves. There are tens of thousands of vacant lots all over the city owned by almost as many individuals. Thousands upon thousands of these are now occupied by these tall signboards, grossly disfiguring the looks of the city and creating a most unhappy impression upon the minds of those who live here and particularly upon those who visit us. The writer during his lifetime has seen a great many cities, but he has yet to find one anywhere he has ever visited that compares at all with Los Angeles in this matter of signboards. It is his impression that there are a hundred here for the one in any other city he has ever visited, that they are higher and occupy longer distances in places than he has ever seen elsewhere. He takes his own medicine, forbidding a real estate agent to place a "For Sale" sign on any property he owns. To his knowledge he has never had a real estate sign on any piece of property he has held for sale. Sometimes an agent puts a sign up without his permission, and it is very promptly consigned to the kindling-wood pile in his back yard. The subject might well be taken up by the real estate board and some action taken to suppress the nuisance.

—o—

The Rainy Season at Hand.

The rains may come down now any time and recur periodically for the next five or six months. The vacant lots that rise above the sidewalks and are not held up by retaining walls are subject to washing at every big rain that falls. This wash runs over the sidewalk and makes it very difficult for pedestrians to get about in any kind of comfort. It is competent for the city officials to take cognizance of this matter, and enforce from time to time the cleaning up of the sidewalks. Action is occasionally taken, but not at all frequently enough. After every rain it should be exacted of all property holders to see that the sidewalks are cleared of the mud that is carried down from the unprotected lot abutting on the particular spot. It might be a good thing for the street department to take charge of this matter and see that the sidewalks were cleaned by the employés of the city, making the cost a lien upon the property. Perhaps the work will never be thoroughly well done until some such action as this is taken.

BUYS ON EAST FIRST.

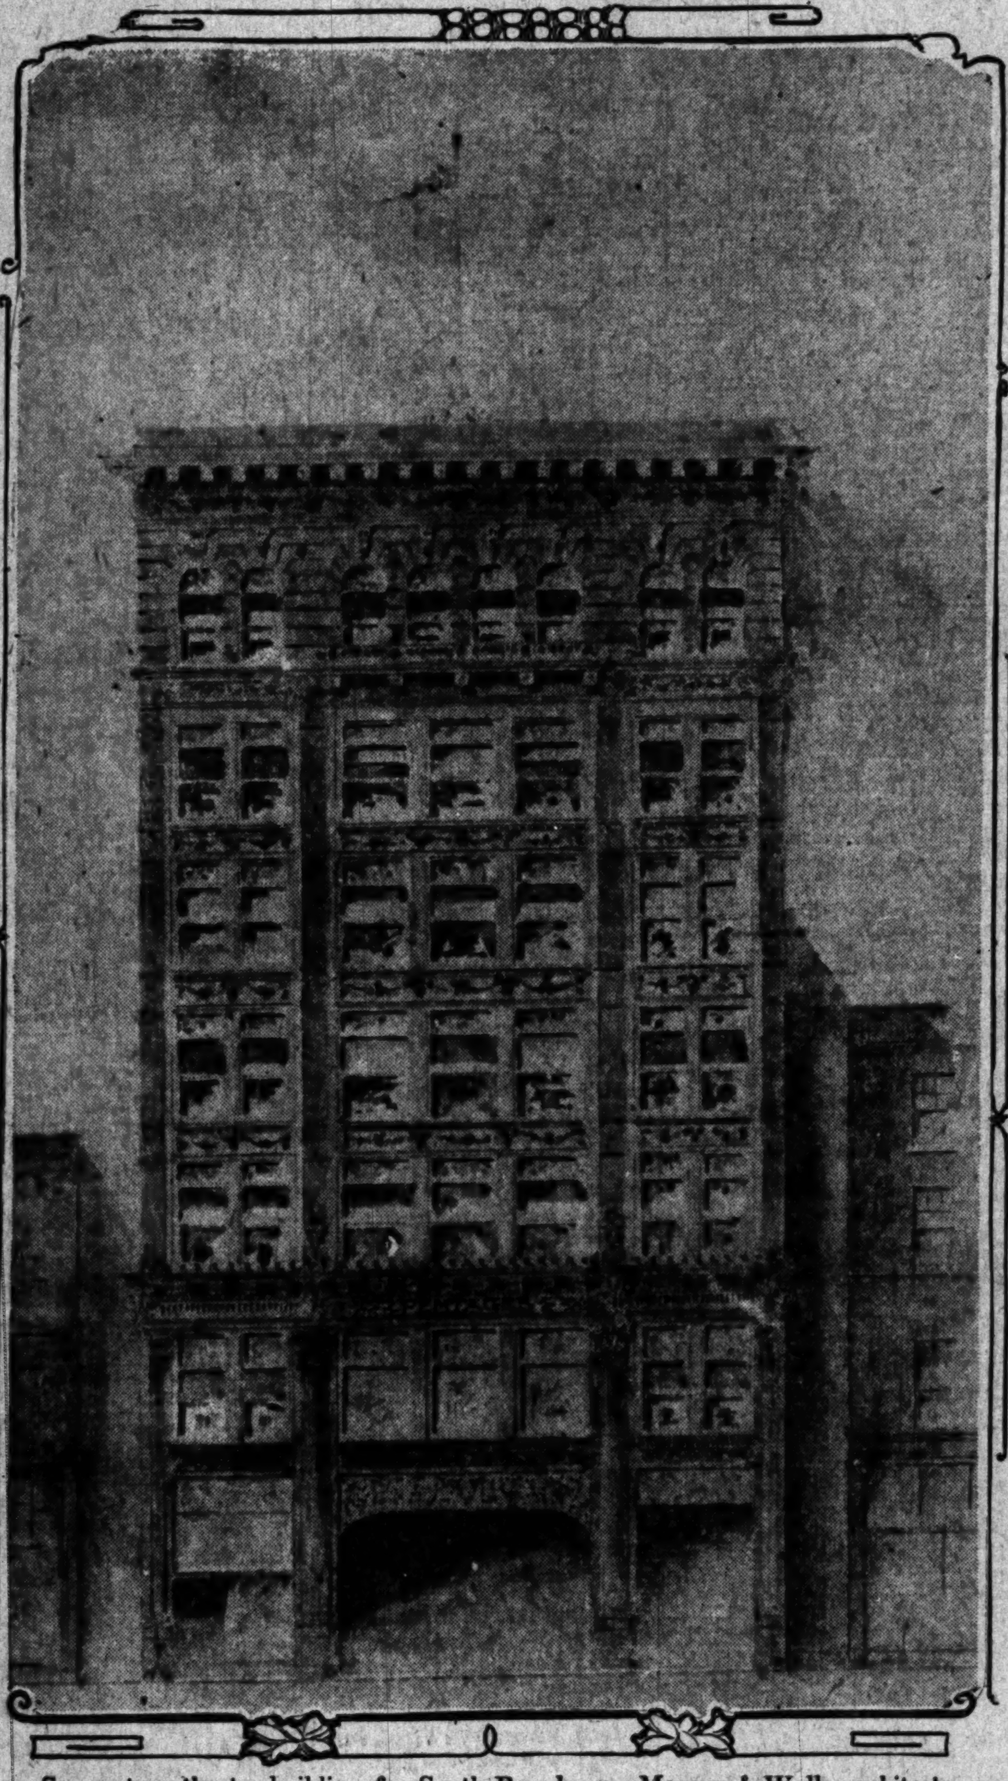
W. B. Merwin & Co. report the sale to Ray Livingston for R. F. Bennett of a three-story brick building on East First street, just east of Los Angeles street. The property has a frontage of forty-two feet on First street and thirty-nine feet on San Pedro, with a depth of ninety feet. The price paid was $40,000. Stores occupy the ground floor, and a rooming house the second and third stories. The property pays about 10 per cent. net income on the valuation. Mr. Livingston will hold the property as an investment.

PLANS CITY HALL.

H. Alban Reeves has been commissioned by the city of Pomona to draw up designs for the new City Hall to be erected at that place, on an area bounded by Fourth, Fifth, Thomas and Main streets. The structure is to be two stories in height, 70x90 feet, and of brick and stone construction. About $30,000 will be expended for the building.

BIG HOTEL PROJECT.

The Stricker Hotel Company has in contemplation the erection of a large tourist hotel in East Hollywood, which complete will represent an outlay of between $350,000 and $400,000. Articles of incorporation for this company, with a capital of $400,000, were last week filed in this city. Among those interested in the project are A. D. Stricker, Dr. L. E. Landone and Judge John D. Works.



Seven-story theater building for South Broadway. Morgan & Walls, architects.

FOR THE THESPIANS.

CAPITALIST WILL BUILD THEATER.

SEVEN-STORY MODERN BUILDING FOR SOUTH BROADWAY.

Fifteen-Year Lease for Structure Signed Last Week by Head of Pantages Theatrical Circuit—Show House to Cost Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars.

An important lease concluded last week through the agency of H. F. Metcalf assures Los Angeles another imposing structure in the business section, and a new theater, which is to be one of the most up-to-date playhouses on the Pacific Coast. By the terms of this contract, the agreement to which has been telegraphed from Seattle by Alexander Pantages, the proprietor of the Pantages Theatrical Circuit obtains for a period of fifteen years the use of a seven-story building to be erected by William Garland on the east side of South Broadway, between Fifth street and Mercantile Place. The total rental will be about $400,000.

The structure, tentative plans for which were drawn some time ago in the office of Morgan & Walls, will cost about $150,000. The design, as agreed upon by the two parties to the lease, calls for a reinforced fireproof structure, the upper six floors of which are to be used for offices. The dimensions will be sixty feet on Broadway by 165 feet depth.

The auditorium will have a seating capacity of 1000, and will be furnished and decorated elegantly and elaborately. The stage will be equipped with the most modern rigging, lofts and other theater paraphernalia. The dressing rooms will be located on the first floor and under the stage. The front portion of the basement will be fitted up and equipped for restaurants.

The Delaware building, which is at present on the site of the new theater, will be vacated the first of January and removed at once. The construction will then be pushed to completion at an early date. Mr. Pantages is exceedingly desirous of getting into this field with his attractions as soon as possible.

The Pantages Theatrical Circuit has large playhouses in Seattle and St. Joseph, and smaller theaters at many other points.

On this page of The Times is reproduced an elevation of the proposed structure prepared by the architects. The latter are engaged in planning interior details, and it is expected that the designs will be completed within a few days.

BALDWIN RANCH SALES.

Service Bros., selling agents for the Baldwin ranch lands, report the following sales: To Dr. J. A. Rankin, 100 acres in Rancho Potrero Grande, just south of El Monte, $30,000; to Benson & Stillwell, 120 acres in Rancho Potrero Grande, $30,600; to Bullard & Goodell, 60 acres in Rancho Potrero Grande, $18,000; to Edgar C. Coffman, 20 acres in Rancho Potrero Grande, $6000; to John Ginnison, 30 acres in Rancho Potrero Grande, $9000; to George W. Taylor, 20 acres in Rancho Potrero Grande, $6000; to A. A. Adams, 17 acres in Rancho Potrero Grande, $5100; to C. C. Keyes, 8 acres, $2400; to George W. Reaser, 6 acres, $1800; to Thomas Silver, 14 acres, $4200; to Ed. Beck, 6 acres, $1800; to Norton & Brown, 120 acres in Rancho La Puente, three miles east of El Monte, $30,000; to F. P. O'Connor, 100 acres in Rancho La Puente, $25,000; to Pollard Bros., 55 acres in Rancho La Puente, $13,750; to Charles Pierson, 50 acres in Rancho La Puente, $12,500; to L. E. Leavitt, 11 acres in Rancho San Francisquito, $21,300.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

Catharina J. Serrurier has placed on the market a tract known as the Ganesha tract, one block east of the Altadena business center. The improvements consist of curbed and guttered streets, water, electric lights and telephones.

A dozen "home builders," guests of the Home Builders Company, made an extensive automobile tour of the city yesterday, inspecting the various building sites and completed improvements of the company. The excursion terminated at the Angelus where luncheon was served.

The Edwards and Wildey Company has assumed the management and general sales agency of Vermont Avenue Park, a tract of 135 lots situated at the southwest corner of Florence and Vermont avenues. Each lot is 50x140 feet, fronting on well-improved streets.

ON CENTRAL AVENUE.

The Cornell Company has sold for G. A. Bryant to M. Ballard a lot 45x130 feet on the north side of Vernon avenue, close to Central avenue, for $1050, and a lot 50x142 feet on the north side of East Forty-sixth street, east of Central avenue, for Charles G. Houck to P. Leimen, the price paid being $1050.

LEASE LARGE HOTEL.

The Alhambra Hotel on Broadway, north of Temple street, has been leased by J. F. Hall, to C. C. Colyear, for a term of years, at rentals of from $850 to $1000 per month. Mr. Colyear will immediately furnish the place completely and conduct it as a first-class house, with 125 rooms, each containing every modern convenience. The lease was effected through the offices of Frank C. Smith & Son, representing Mr. Hall, and J. P. Stocksdale, representing Mr. Colyear. J. P. Stocksdale also reports closing three-year lease with J. P. Campbell for stores on the northeast corner of Fourteenth and Main, for Mrs. Shrader, and for three stores on South Main street for Messrs. Hughes & Chaffey. He also reports the sale of three lots, 50x70 feet each, in the New Dick Ferris Tract, on Western avenue, near Bimini Bath car line, for $800 each, the buyers being J. T. McCormick, L. T. Farrell and R. R. Moore.

ADDS TO HOLDINGS.

B. O. Kendall, president of the B. O. Kendall Company, of Pasadena, who is probably the largest individual owner of business property in the Crown City, has just added to his interests by buying for his firm from R. M. Widney, 50 feet frontage by 170 feet depth on South Fair Oaks avenue, just below Colorado, Pasadena. The improvements, which are nominal, pay 6 per cent. net on the purchase price, which was $27,500. R. J. Widney of this city, was the agent in the transaction.

SMITH RANCH SOLD.

F. D. Frost has sold to Adolph Graffen a 1600-acre ranch about eight miles west of Paso Robles, for $25,600. This property is known as the Smith ranch, and is one of the show places of this section of the State, being highly improved with a large house and beautiful grounds, and over two miles of stone fences. Eight hundred acres of the ranch are covered with large oak trees. The balance is used for general farming. The deal was made through the agency of A. W. Ross.

ARCHITECTS MEET HERE.

At the first annual meeting of the Architectural League of the Pacific Coast held in San Francisco last week, A. F. Rosenheim, of Los Angeles, was elected president of that organization for the ensuing year. John P. Krempel of this city was also honored, being chosen as secretary. The other officers selected were E. F. Lawrence of Seattle, vice-president, and W. R. B. Willcox, of the same city, treasurer. The meeting next year will be held in Los Angeles at a date yet to be determined upon.

One of the handsomest, roomy, bargains we have ever seen is to be found in this splendid, new property. Located one block from Wilshire blvd., one block from Sunset Park and surrounded by the best homes in the city, it has every car line facility and a paved street close by. The lot is 60x170 feet. There are ten splendid rooms, extraordinarily spacious. Living-room, library, dining-room, domestic quarters, servant's room and complete bath downstairs; and above stairs—four large, sunny bedrooms, large family bathroom and fine balcony sleeping-room. Every bedroom has two immense closets and two are supplied with extra lavatories, etc. There is a lavatory in the cloak-room off the lower hallway. We have seldom seen more handsomely appointed rooms than those throughout this house. It is a beautiful home, elegantly and substantially built, supplied with every modern idea and convenience; basement and fine furnace complete. Large veranda so broad and deep it is really a big room, itself. The outlook is excellent and we consider this property very fine value at $11,500.

FOR SALE—
Houses.

FOR SALE—BUNGALOWS, BUNGALOWS. I am going back to Chicago to live and must sell three of the most complete and beautiful bungalows ever built in this city. Two of these bungalows have seven large rooms each. The other is a 1½-story and contains 9 rooms and a sleeping porch. All of these bungalows are perfect in every detail. They are situated on the most beautiful street in the Wilshire district. I am going to sell these houses cheap and they are the best bargains in this city. It is impossible to duplicate them for the money. These houses are certainly of the very highest class. Built by an eastern builder and there is not a single modern convenience that has been left out. Lawn, cement drives, garage, furnace, costly electric fixtures, etc., make each property absolutely complete. Come and see these houses and make me an offer. The numbers are 752, 753, 758 HARVARD BLVD., one and one-half blocks from Wilshire Blvd. See MR. MILLER on the premises or Phone F2258. 24

FOR SALE—
TREMENDOUS SACRIFICE.
BEAUTIFUL NEW $7000 RESIDENCE
GOES FOR ONLY $5800.
$1500 CASH. BALANCE TO SUIT.

Owing to circumstances, owner compelled to sacrifice this elegant new two-story, nine-room house, well located on Leighton ave., close to Agricultural Park (where over $600,000 is to be expended by city, county and State, on buildings and in beautifying the grounds.) It is an exceptionally well-built house, strictly up-to-date and very conveniently arranged. On first floor is large living-room, 16x30, connecting with dining-room, 16x18, both handsomely finished, in dull mission and quarter-sawed oak, cabinet kitchen, large breakfast-room and den. On second floor are four large, light, airy bedrooms, elegant bathroom, large hallway and outside sleeping balcony. Large cement basement and house piped for furnace throughout. Lot is 50x156 to alley and surrounded with beautiful homes. Don't fail to see this before purchasing.

FOR SALE—
A HIGH GRADE
IMPROVED LOT CHEAP.

This lot is cheap, only in price. It's been placed in my hands to sell for the owner, who needs money and needs it quick. I've so arranged it that a sale for cash or terms will help him out. Of course a cash buyer will get a big discount, but the price is way down, either way.

This lot is 10 minutes from Broadway, with good car service. It sets high and commands a fine view. The street is oil-tamped, with cement walks, gutters and curbs. Gas and electricity both ready, tasteful planting of trees and flowers all done. The price is only $1000.

If you want to know more about this property see me. When I say it's cheap, I mean CHEAP. It's the buy of your life. Snap it up now or you'll lose it.

FOR SALE—
SOMERSET ACRES ARE MONEY MAKERS.

The long-headed folks who have bought at Somerset will make big money on their holdings. You can do as well if you get in now. The natural advance in values won't wait for you, for me or for anybody else, so I advise you to buy now, if you want to buy for profit.

Somerset is only 30 minutes away by trolley. It's a close-in suburban home place, where free water and rich sandy loam soil render owners practically independent. With acres at only $350, some less, on terms of $10 down and $10 monthly. Somerset is one of the biggest snaps in the desirable close-in property near Los Angeles. Owners will be selling off their property in lots for homes within a comparatively short time. Think of the money they will make.

Select an acre, put up a little home, have a garden and some chickens. Your place will practically keep you. Work in town here just the same, the car service is good. Let me show you Somerset, get a clear idea of its advantages and prospects. Excursions every hour daily and up to 2 p.m. Sundays. Come in and get one of our Los Angeles

FOR SALE— Acreage for Subdivision.

FOR SALE— FIVE ACRES OF WALNUTS, AT LESS THAN UNIMPROVED LAND CAN BE BOUGHT FOR IN SAME VICINITY.
I OWN AND OFFER FOR SALE 5 ACRES LOCATED DIRECTLY ON THE VENICE SHORT LINE; THE CARS STOP AT THE PROPERTY AT A STATION KNOWN AS COYNERS, JUST WEST OF THE PALMS, AND ALMOST OPPOSITE CLARKDALE. THE PROPERTY LIES ON THE NORTH SIDE OF THE CAR LINE, AND ON A COUNTY ROAD. IT IS IMPROVED WITH BETWEEN 90 TO 100 SOFT-SHELL WALNUT TREES, MOST OF WHICH ARE 11 YEARS OLD. THE PROPERTY IS WELL SUITED FOR A SUBURBAN HOME, AND THE WALNUT CROP WILL PAY INTEREST ON THE INVESTMENT.
I WILL SELL THE ENTIRE 5 ACRES FOR $5000. I AM OFFERING THIS PROPERTY AT A LESS PRICE THAN ANY OTHER SIMILAR PROPERTY IN THAT VICINITY CAN BE PURCHASED FOR, AND WOULD ASK YOUR EARNEST INVESTIGATION AS TO THAT STATEMENT, AS I WILL GUARANTEE TO SELL THIS PROPERTY FOR LESS MONEY THAN ANY OTHER SIMILAR PROPERTY CAN BE PURCHASED FOR.

FOR SALE— SPLENDID BARGAINS, RIGHT IN THE PATH OF THE CITY'S GROWTH.
320 acres, one mile south of city limits. High ground, beautifully located, perfectly drained. Splendid view in all directions. SUPERB FOR SUBDIVISION AND RIGHT IN THE PATH OF THE CITY'S GROWTH. This is a snap; it is away below value. We can show you how to DOUBLE YOUR MONEY on it and do it QUICKLY and WITHOUT SUBDIVIDING. Or make MORE if you DO subdivide. Things are moving rapidly in this section. Come and see us about this NOW. $500 an acre; good terms. (Can sell 160 acres separately.)
We have several unusually good buys in acreage for subdivision. Some in the city; some just outside; some farther away. We have ourselves carefully examined these properties and KNOW they are BARGAINS. Two, of modest size, are particularly good.
We can't tell you all about them here; there's too much to tell. But if you want something good in that line, come and see us, and come SOON.
LAND DEPT., E. L. HOPPER & SON. 402 Laughlin Bldg., Los Angeles. Phones—A1961 and Main 341. x24

FOR SALE—30 ACRES ON WASHINGTON st., 3 miles from the city limits of Los Angeles. 1000 ft. of this property fronts on Washington st. Electric car line to the beaches runs through the center, with cars every few minutes, with a station on property. 25 acres of it is in alfalfa, the finest land in the country. Riparian water right goes with the land, with water to irrigate 30 acres of alfalfa. This property is ripe for subdivision. They are asking $1000 per acre for the land adjoining this property on the north. This land can be bought for [illegible] per acre for the whole 30 acres. This is the biggest snap in Los Angeles county. Part cash, balance terms. L. B. LESPERANCE & CO., suite 406 Central Bldg. Phone F5949. x24

FOR SALE—
LOTS OF MONEY WILL BE MADE AROUND THE NEW POSTOFFICE.
POSTOFFICE.

It doesn't take a very wise person to figure that when you can buy property in that location at the present time, with old improvements paying 5 and 6 per cent. net on the investment, what will happen when the postoffice is opened which it is estimated, will bring into this district, 15,000 more people daily. To say nothing about the new 10-story Hall of Records and a certainty that the City Hall and other large improvements will be located there.

We are offering the best buy in this district for $27,500, with only $10,000, cash required. It has 25 feet of frontage on two streets, improved with two good brick buildings, and is in a very advantageous location. The present low rentals pay about 6 per cent. net on this price. There is no question but what this property will pay good interest on and be worth $50,000 shortly after the opening of the P[illegible]office.

FOR SALE—
Business Property.

FOR SALE— BY R. J. WIDNEY.

BUSINESS PROPERTY.

Close-in property is cheap,
At present asking prices.
And offers a most attractive
Field for investment.

Three years ago it was conceded
That we had discounted the future
About 5 years in asking prices of property.

Three of the five years have passed,
And Los Angeles with 75,000 more population
Is, generally speaking,
Asking 20 per cent. less for property
Than three years ago.

For instance,
Hill street, between 11th and 12th,
Three years ago
Was held at $1500 a front foot.
Today I can get you some
At $1000 a front foot.
In two years' time you can
Resell it at $2000 a front foot.

Property on South Broadway,
From Seventh to Ninth,
That can be purchased today
At from $2500 a front foot up,
Will, in two years,
Sell at as much per front foot
As Broadway, north of Seventh,
Is selling at now.

This means an increase in values
Of from $3000 to $3000 a front foot.
Inside of two years.

I am making a specialty of this district
And of this kind of property.
If you want to buy, sell or lease
Property so located,

MONROVIA.

FOR SALE—
H. J. EVANS,
Real Estate,
Monrovia, Cal.
Home Telephone 232.

Dear Sir:
I herewith submit a list of property placed in my hands exclusively for sale, and at prices that should command attention.
Monrovia claims to have (and justly so) the best residence location in the vicinity of Los Angeles. Situated at the foot of the Sierra Madres, it enjoys the direct ocean breeze from the Pacific, while the cooling breeze from the hills at night make it the most comfortable and enjoyable place in which to reside in all of California. Its water supply is par excellence, having its source in the mountains, and being owned by the city, is sold for domestic purposes at 50c for 5000 gallons—a lower rate than is charged anywhere in the State. Its schools rank among the foremost, and every church is represented. Its best recommendation as to climate is that physicians from all over the country are recommending it to their patients who are run down and need a change.
Any inquiries will receive my prompt and courteous attention.
Yours truly,
H. J. EVANS.

ALHAMBRA.

FOR SALE—
HOMES IN ALHAMBRA.
WHY A HOME IN ALHAMBRA?
Because it is the best city in California for families. Look at this combination; no other city in California can match it, viz.:
The purest of mountain spring water. High elevation, good air.
Clean streets, well shaded, fine trees.
Low taxes, clean city government.
Fine breeze every afternoon. (No high winds.)
Scarcely ever frost or fog.
Beautiful school buildings, highest grade.
Best of superintendents and teachers money can hire.
Live newspaper, awake to Alhambra's interests.
No saloons, and "cooler" empty.
Good churches and more building.
Good clubhouse, well managed.
Choice society, settled by choice families from New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore; lecturers, writers, historians, editors and musicians of the highest order.
Surely of all localities in California Alhambra leads for home and family.
The best people in the world that have traveled, and know what is good, have selected in Alhambra as their homes.
We have the climate, fruit and flowers, and we have the lots, cottages, bungalows, houses, mansions, villas from $2000 to $100,000. We have the cream of Alhambra and San Gabriel property listed on our books.
Courteous salesmen will take pleasure in showing and suiting you.
We belong to no syndicate, are independent dealers, own no subdivision, and are ready to serve you with perfect impartiality and fairness.

FOR SALE—
FOR SPECIAL BARGAINS
in vacant lots, good home places, the better class of houses and large lots, go to BUTTERBAUGH, MYREN & CO.,
for several reasons. We have been instrumental in placing the most people in our community. We always endeavor to give value for the money, why should we not? Our properties have mostly been bought at prices prevailing before the raise in values, hence we can afford to sell cheaper.
We can sell you a large lot, 100x354, which is nearly an acre, with fine view of the valley and mountains and best of water, for $900. Mind you this is in Alhambra City. Terms to suit the purchaser.
We can give you a lot, 90x200, equally well located, less than ¾ mile from the business center, for $800.
We have two special bargains in the WEUST TRACT, near HUNTINGTON DRIVE, one for $875 and one for $975.
We also have one adjoining the Weust tract for $700.
We have a 7-room house, close to the car line, only 2 years old, for $2900, takes only $800 cash.
We can sell you a 5-room house, not far from the car line, for $1850.
We have no hot air to sell, we don't offer it; but we will show you the goods and if they are not worth the money we ask don't buy. We have had 20 years' experience in the business and will guarantee any one who will intrust us with the business to see them through in a legitimate way. Just come and give us a trial.
Three automobiles are at our command, so there cannot be inadequacy of service.
We have offices at 519-520 Central Bldg., in Los Angeles. We are not looking for joy-riders, but we are liberal.

RANCHO LA PUENTE.

ALFALFA LAND. WALNUT LAND.
ALFALFA LAND. WALNUT LAND.

—2000 ACRES—
—2000 ACRES—
—2000 ACRES—

TWO THOUSAND ACRES OF THIS FAMOUS RANCHO HAS BEEN SURVEYED AND SUBDIVIDED INTO LOTS OF 10 ACRES AND UP, AND IS NOW OPEN FOR SALE.

This new subdivision is by all odds the best that we have ever offered to the public at any price.

We have no fear of contradiction when we say that there is no land in California that is superior to this.

The soil is a dark sediment loam, of great depth, and is free from alkali or any other objectionable features. See it and be convinced.

Sales are beyond our expectations.

Alfalfa flourishes in this fertile soil, producing easily 10 tons per acre each year.

This tract adjoins four other subdivisions that we have sold during the past few years and all of the purchasers have become independent and have comfortable homes. In nearly every case alfalfa was the source from whence their good fortune came. And it comes quickly and surely. Go out and see the beautiful homes, the thrifty walnut orchards and the waving fields of alfalfa. Then you will admit that our statements are founded on facts.

IRRIGATION.

There is an abundance and a never-failing supply of water under this land. To the north and west of this tract are scores of plants in operation, one of which pumps over 300 miner's inches of water. There is not a plant that pumps less than 150 miner's inches of water. The cost of development is very moderate. Just consider for one moment the advantages of having your own water system.

LOCATION.

It is 14 miles northeast of Los Angeles and close to the thriving towns of El Monte and Covina, and convenient to the Southern Pacific, Pacific Electric and Salt Lake R.R.s. Good roads, telephones, schools and all other conveniences.

MARKETS.

There is a good home market for all produce right on the ground; alfalfa sells in the field at not less than $10 per ton.

PRICE.

In order to close the estate this land will be sold at rock-bottom prices. It is away below what others are asking for inferior land. Improved land adjoining this tract cannot be bought for less than $500 and $600 per acre. Price $250 per acre.

Terms, one-third cash, balance payable on or before three years, interest 7 per cent. Unlimited certificate of title, by the Title Guarantee and Trust Co.

LOTS OF 10 ACRES AND UP.

THE SUB-IRRIGATED LAND.

Do you believe that it is possible to grow alfalfa, vegetables, walnuts or other produce without irrigation?

Just south of El Monte and only 12 miles east of the city we have a tract of sub-irrigated land that will grow any kind of crops without surface irrigation.

Go out and see the growing crops and be convinced.

We have about 500 acres more of this land surveyed and ready for sale. Lots of 10 acres and up. We have sold out one large tract.

If you want to take advantage of an opportunity of a lifetime, go out and secure a piece of this land; nothing more profitable for an investment or income; you will double your money in a short time.

The location is good; only 1 mile from electric cars and the thriving town of El Monte. Just 30 minutes' ride from the city.

PRICE $300 PER ACRE.

Terms, one-third cash, balance on or before 3 years, interest 7 per cent. Unlimited certificate of title by Title Guarantee and Trust Co.

FOR SALE—MONEY. MONEY. IT TAKES MONEY TO MAKE MONEY.

I HAVE ONE OF THE BEST propositions for making MONEY with money that is now offered in the STATE. I have a 4700-acre ranch FOR SALE, 4 miles South from R.R. station, Santa Fe line. On main county road lending from Escondido to San Diego. Has double frontage on said road, 4½ miles, with plenty of living water in river and numerous springs. Has a frontage on the SAN BERNARDO River of nearly 3 miles. There is nearly 3500 acres of farming land. Suitable for all kinds of produce and including all varieties of fruits, oranges, lemons, nuts, etc. Also especially adapted to the growth of the EUCALYPTUS tree. There is about 350 acres of level river bottom land, which could be irrigated by gravity ditch from river and sown to alfalfa. It is one of the best colonization propositions that can be found taking everything into consideration. It has all the elements to make an ideal stock, grain and dairy farm combined. Improvements, nominal; not fenced. PRICE $20 acre. ONE-THIRD CASH, balance, TERMS. For further particulars, call or write, O. L. STEVENS & CO., 508 Mason Bldg. Phone F7800, Main 2915. x24

FOR SALE—OR EXCHANGE—

ALFALFA FARM,

CHINO VALLEY.

An 80-acre alfalfa ranch, set solid to alfalfa and in perfect condition. The soil is a deep sandy loam to a clay subsoil, absolutely free from alkali or hard ground; is in a class to itself as to stand of alfalfa and quality of hay, and is an extra heavy producer. The water lift is very light and is equipped with the latest centrifugal pump using electricity for power at a very cheap rate, and the ranch is piped with 14-inch cement pipe with open gate turnouts. Will pay a handsome income on $350 per acre, and is worth the money. Will consider an A1 orange grove in the foothill section to full value, or a good home in the southwest part of Los Angeles or Hollywood to $10,000, with $9000 cash, and give time on balance. This ranch will stand a strict investigation, so do not inflate your values. Will deal with owners or exclusive agents. Call or correspond with MORGAN & WIMBERLEY, 294 South Thomas st., Pomona, Cal. SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY—

FOR SALE—
"SUNNY" STANISLAUS.
(No. 2.)

STANISLAUS COUNTY has become famous as a dairy county and ranks first in the State for her dairy products. This district is attracting dairymen from all parts of the country and they are bringing fine herds with them. Inquiry at the creamery demonstrates that each good cow will net its owner ten dollars per month. It is estimated that the creameries in the Modesto-Turlock Irrigation Districts are paying annually to their patrons in excess of $1,000,000. There is now in the neighborhood of 60,000 acres in alfalfa, yielding an average of eight tons to the acre per year, and as the market for all dairy products has been and is good, the men who have engaged in this industry receive handsome returns. There is room for thousands more and a sure market for all possible products. You can get some of this land now. Why not buy a farm and be independent? Write to the Stanislaus Board of Trade, MODESTO, CAL., or better still, come and see for yourself. x*

FOR SALE—THE LANDS BORDERING TUlare Lake in the San Joaquin Valley are acknowledged to be among the most productive in the world. The waters which at certain seasons overflow the lands and then recede leave rich deposits of silt and sediment, and when protected by levees these lands produce wheat and alfalfa in prodigious quantities. We have 568 acres of such land, which can be protected by a levee the construction of which will cost, probably, not over $500. Level—all fenced—within two miles of a railroad siding—Price $27 per acre. Terms 1-3 cash, balance in four equal annual payments at 6 per cent. Address A, box 234, TIMES OFFICE. x24

FOR SALE—
DELANO SNAPS.
$35 per acre—800 acres, east of Delano, proven orange land, one mile from R.R. station; fine well of water, large barn, old house. Will subdivide and sell at $100 per acre. See this for a bargain. Terms.
$65 per acre—1280 acres finest land in Delano district, adjoining lands now selling at $125 per acre; will sell quarter sections if desired. Only 2 miles east of Delano. Terms.
$125 per acre—40 acres finest early orange land with 40 shares of water, close to station and school. Will sell one-half if desired. Easy terms.
We are headquarters for early orange lands. See us for bargains.

COACHELLA VALLEY—

FOR SALE—OR EXCHANGE.
YOU ARE LOOKING FOR A HOME

And want all the advantages that can be found in any one locality. Why not look at Coachella Valley and compare it with all the others you have seen or heard about? We have measured it by scores of other places and cannot find its equal as a place to enjoy life and make money. With its gushing wells of pure, artesian water, exceedingly deep, rich, responsive soil, 12 months growing and maturing season, (earliest crops in South California), and the finest all-year-round climate in the entire southwest and, being on the main line of railroad, only a short distance from Los Angeles, in Riverside County, all the conditions are ideal.

For raising fruits, vegetables, live stock, poultry and alfalfa this Valley cannot be surpassed (and probably not equalled) in California. Oranges are ripe and ready for the holiday trade. Alfalfa furnishes 10 cuttings and 12 tons per acre per year and is netting the ranchers $100 or more per acre this year. Any crop that grows in a Temperate or Semi-tropical climate will produce more than an average crop in this Valley.

We have for sale or exchange some special bargains in unimproved, partially improved and highly improved ranches, from 10 to 320 acres. Also a few very choice relinquishments very cheap, if taken at once. We have photographs, maps, etc., and know every foot of this Valley. We can make you money. Call at this office and let us talk the matter over together.

SAN FERNANDO PROPERTIES.

To the shrewd buyer,
Who looks one year ahead
Instead of one year behind,
The Upper SAN FERNANDO Valley
Offers the most attractive field for investment.

To make money in real estate
You must buy before, not after,
The raise in values has occurred.

SAN FERNANDO Valley is the only Remaining part of Southern California
Where you can buy good land cheap.

SAN FERNANDO Valley,
Only 20 miles from Los Angeles,
And 10 years behind the times
In prices asked for land,
Has today more live forces back of it
That make for increased values
Than any other part of Southern California ever had.

Every dollar invested in this section
Will double inside of two years.

This office has a large list of SAN FERNANDO properties for sale.
In area from 10 to 1100 acres.
In value from $100 to $1000 per acre.

TWENTY ACRES, COVINA, CALIF.
435 Valencias, and the balance navels, 14 years old. Improved with an 8-room modern house. Azusa water and best of soil. Crop averages, $4000 to $6000 packed boxes. This property is close in and is worth $2000 an acre. Price $35,000.

TWENTY ACRES, COVINA, CALIF.
One-third lemons, one-third Valencias, one-third navels. All 12 years old, excepting 3 acres of 3-year-old Valencias. Income will average $8000 per year. Cement curb all around this property and has a fine building site, ornamental trees, flowers, etc. This ranch has a double water right and is one of the finest improved properties in the district. Price $35,000, $10,000 cash and balance to suit purchaser.

All the above ranches are as represented and we can prove to you that you can afford to pay $500 more an acre, for a good paying ranch than buying a run down proposition. It takes money to bring up a run down grove. Not only that, you are losing your income while doing so. We handle orange groves exclusively and can, perhaps, show you more good ranches than any other agent in Southern California. If interested in orange properties it will cost you nothing to have a talk with us.

FOR SALE—
"ATTENTION," ORANGE GROVE BUYER. DO YOU WANT A GROVE—FOR PROFIT OR AS A HOBBY? If it be as a hobby, then MOST ANY OLD THING WILL DO, but if you WANT IT FOR PROFIT, consider WELL EVERY FEATURE, whether it be an advantage or disadvantage, before spending your money.
The following list contains some very profitable groves, with some reasons why ORANGE GROWING IN THE FAMOUS EXETER-LINDSAY DISTRICT of Tulare county is "DECIDEDLY" MORE PROFITABLE than in ANY OTHER PART OF THE STATE. NO "SMUT," NO "SCALE," NO "FUMIGATING," NO "WASHING." THERE IS NOT A WASH RACK IN TULARE COUNTY—(THIRTY-FIVE PACKING-HOUSES, STILL ANOTHER REASON.) We market our fruit at least six weeks earlier than Southern California; "IN FACT," THE NEW CROP IS NOW GOING OUT; "HOLIDAY PRICES FOR US," STRONGER AND BETTER SOIL, MORE AND CHEAPER WATER.
"THINK A MOMENT" if these are facts, and you can determine "FOR YOURSELF," won't it PAY YOU WELL to investigate thoroughly before parting with your money? IF IT IS PROFIT YOU WANT, you had better spend a few dollars and two or three days' time investigating OUR CLAIMS, than to pass it up now and LATER WISH YOU HAD.
5 acres—4-year tops, on 10-year trunks, grapefruit, in splendid condition, carrying ditch stock, with ample supply of water; all under good cement pipe line; 1½ miles from town; no buildings; returns this season were $1300; terms, 1-3 cash, $5000.
10 acres—All 5-year navels, fine condition, small house and barn, ditch stock, team, wagon and tools, good crop on, located near depot, school and packing-house, terms, $10,500.
14 acres—A MONEY-MAKER; this is one of the best 8-year-old navel groves in the country; has always been a BIG PAYER; located at the foot of a large hill, just two miles from town; it has a fine well and electric pumping plant; no buildings; terms, $20,000.
15 acres—A show place, all 5-year navels, located only half mile from depot and packing-house, ditch water, cement pipe line, fine two-story house, good barn, all in fine condition; will put in all necessary tools, 3 horses, etc., if wanted, or will keep them; price, with tools, etc., $18,000, 1-3 cash; without tools, $15,000.
20-acre Valencia grove, 12 years old, and in full bearing; a big money-maker; good old house of 7 rooms, large barn, electric pumping plant, all under cement pipe line, and only 1½ miles from town; this is a splendid orchard, 1-3 cash, $40,000.
80 acres—One of the big profitable orchards of Tulare county, now for sale on account of interests in other industrial business which demands all of the owner's time; this grove is 14 years old and in fine state of cultivation, with an abundance of ditch water, together with excellent electric pumping plant; set of good farm buildings, teams and tools, cement pipe system and only 1½ miles from town and packing-house; to the parties who will give proper care we will make exceptionally attractive terms, and might consider 1-3 business ince, Los Angeles, $100,000. The place has 20 acres Valencias and 60 acres of navels.
A COUPLE of dandy youngsters, with big profit in sight.
25 acres—3-year improved Thompson navels, all under cement pipe line, with abundant water from ditch to thoroughly irrigate; the place is in fine condition, and located just a mile from town; if you want something good, look at this; we will withdraw this after November 15, if not sold. (Only $750 per acre,) terms, $18,750.
35 acres—A DANDY YOUNG VALENCIA ORCHARD, will be 2 years old in the spring; electric pumping plant, pipe line and near hills; all choice trees and in fine condition; no buildings; only 1½ miles from town. (SEE THIS, only $750 per acre,) terms, $26,250.
A TALK ABOUT ORANGE LAND is always of interest to the party about to engage in the orange business, therefore consider as a VERY PROMINENT FACTOR what nature has done for this district, as above related, advantages that make "ORANGE GROWING PROFITABLE." We have choice orange lands in tracts to suit, ranging in price from $90 to $150 per acre, ALL KINDS OF TERMS.
Write for any information desired, we will be prompt with you.
DON'T PLUNGE, INVESTIGATE.

CLAREMONT.

ORANGE AND LEMON GROVE BARGAINS. IN BEAUTIFUL FOOTHILL COUNTRY AT CLAREMONT, UPLAND, SAN DIMAS and LA VERNE.

This ten-mile district of superior groves, offers advantages not to be found in any other single section in Southern California.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY.

We are constantly listing the very best groves in the market; our list is complete in large and small orchards for sale. Your attention is called to the following:

20 acres—$32,000. One of the most promising groves in the frostless belt near Claremont. 4 acres Valencias, 1 acre sweets, 15 acres navels. This grove is well located on a main graveled boulevard. It has two and one-fourth inches of Loop and Meserve free canyon water. Grove is being fumigated by the owner this season, and has been well fertilized. Has a good seven-room home with splendid basement, and all modern conveniences. Good barns; shade trees and shrubbery and a beautiful carriage drive. Orchard in splendid condition, with 6000 box crop now on the trees. See this ranch for an orange grove bargain and an ideal home place.

20 acres—$5000. All navels, full bearing, a good grove, and the best 10-acre bargain on the market. This will be sold early in the week. Close in, and an excellent locality. Ample water right, which alone is worth $2000. Four-room house on this property. A big bargain.

25 acres—$20,000. 4 acres 4-year Valencias, 3 acres 10-year St. Michaels, 8 acres 10-year navels. A good producer, last year's crop was 4000 boxes, this year's will be much better. Good comfortable home. An excellent home ranch.

8 acres—$8000. Half full-bearing navels and half Valencia buds. New barn on this place. A good buy.

10 acres—$10,000. A good navel grove, close to Claremont. These trees are thrifty, ample water right, and a good homesite. Over 1500 boxes now on. This ranch is worth more, but the owner is leaving and desires a quick sale.

20 acres—$14,000. Navels, full bearing, a splendid corner, and an attractive modern six-room house. Roads and shade trees make this a very desirable property. All implements, etc., included.

20 acres—$14,000. All navels except 300 young Valencias. This is a grove which has few superiors as a good consistent producer. Over 4000 boxes on these trees, which are large and uniform.

5 acres—$3500. A magnificent grove, and a modern seven-room home, close in, at Upland. A heavy producer. Just fumigated and fertilized. Full-bearing navels, ample water right. An unusually attractive home place, within easy walking distance of the center of town. Owner desires to remove East.

20 acres—$17,500. On the Foothill Boulevard in the Upland district. Three-fourths lemons, balance navels, except 63 Valencias. A first-class grove; has had best of care. Modern seven-room house and barns. Shade trees and shrubbery.

ARE YOU A HOMESEEKER AND LOOKING FOR AN IDEAL COUNTRY HOME?

If so, we have three of the best in Southern California to offer you, homes amid beautiful surroundings, and at prices that will attract. Do not miss seeing them.

FOR SALE—
Lemon or Orange Groves.

FOR SALE—ORANGE AND LEMON GROVE. Locations, San Dimas and La Verne; no better districts; none more free from frost and wind. Do you know that the best and highest priced groves are the cheapest and best to invest your money in? We ourselves are now and have been for 34 years, orange growers in Southern California. We advise prospective buyers at all time is to buy the best and continue to have the best. This is the whole secret in making money in the orange or lemon business. As a rule the orange groves you see advertised for sale as SNAPS, by men who hardly know an orange tree from a weeping willow; such groves are not the best to buy; if money making and success is the motive of the buyer. We, of course, carry a full line of orange and lemon groves in our business, and always have some so-called SNAPS, which we sometimes refer to as our side shows. Consult with any successful orange grower and you will find his groves are not SNAPS but the real thing. Don't forget our office.

SAN PEDRO.

FOR SALE—
RUDECINDA TRACT,
San Pedro.

The greatest real estate investment proposition in the entire West.

San Pedro is now going through a wonderful period of prosperity—it is your biggest chance to make money.

Buy lots now in the Rudecinda Tract, and you will plant the nucleus of a fortune.

Now that the consolidation of San Pedro with Los Angeles is an accomplished fact, building and investment activity is at high tide in the harbor city.

Investors and home builders are flocking there by the hundreds. Residence property is soaring in price. It is the story of Los Angeles all over again. Pretty soon the man of moderate means will be barred from making money in real estate in San Pedro.

We offer you an opportunity to get in on the ground floor of San Pedro prosperity.

Lots are selling in the Rudecinda Tract now at $750 on good terms. It won't be long before these lots double and treble in value.

If you missed your opportunity in Los Angeles, do not pass up your chance in San Pedro—you will regret it if you do.

The Rudecinda Tract is a part of the famous Dodson Ranch. The lots now offered for sale are located but six blocks from the harbor front, affording a wonderful view of the bay and ocean.

The Rudecinda Tract is a beautifully situated subdivision with all modern improvements—gas, electricity, telephones, water, curbing, shade trees, etc. The $60,000 San Pedro High School is located right on this tract.

You should go down to San Pedro Sunday and see the Rudecinda Tract. Your own good judgment will tell you that money invested in it will reap enormous profits in the near future. Residences are in great demand in the harbor city; rents are high. Residence property is becoming more and more valuable as the population increases.

Call at our city office Sunday for maps, literature, and further information—then go down and see the property. Lots in the Rudecinda Tract are selling rapidly—there is no telling when prices will advance—be wise and buy now.

FOR SALE—AT SAN PEDRO.
THE POINT FIRMIN TRACT.

$630,000 appropriation has been made by U. S. government for San Pedro.

The government is spending millions here.

The $10,000,000 of harbor bonds which will be voted by Los Angeles city will make great harbor improvements. The 146 acres in outer harbor will be the site for great warehouses, docks and general shipping business.

Lots in the Point Firmin tract are sightly, overlooking the whole harbor, the 146 acres and the big $3,000,000 government breakwater. Lots run to water's edge and command the finest view on Pacific coast.

We sell these lots cheaper than lots elsewhere in Southern California—$1000 to $2500 for large lots. Easy terms.

FOR EXCHANGE—OR SALE—

ALFALFA FARM,

CHINO VALLEY.

An 80-acre alfalfa ranch, set solid to alfalfa, and in perfect condition. The soil is a deep sandy loam to a clay sub-soil, absolutely free from alkali or hard ground; is in a class to itself as to stand of alfalfa and quality of hay, and is an extra heavy producer. The water lift is very light and is equipped with the latest centrifugal pump, using electricity for power at a very cheap rate, and the ranch is piped with 14-inch cement pipe with open gate turnouts. Will pay a handsome income on $350 per acre, and is worth the money. Will consider an A1 orange grove in the foothill section to full value, or a good home in the southwest part of Los Angeles or Hollywood to $10,000, with $5000 cash, and give time on balance. This ranch will stand a strict investigation, so do not inflate your values. Will deal with owners or exclusive agents. COLYEAR'S,
509-511 South Main street.
(Where bargains reign.)

We've got the other fellows "Going Some." Dealers actually are endeavoring to buy from us. We were wise enough to purchase large quantities of SLIGHTLY USED furniture during the dull summer months and you can always find one of the largest stocks of SLIGHTLY USED goods at bed rock prices at our immense stores.

We have always had respect for the public and during our past 20 years of business have had the good will of the people of Los Angeles and vicinity, and appreciate the patronage that has been bestowed on us. Now the other fellows are trying to boost the prices, but the wise public won't stand for it. Our business the past week was a record breaker. Our second floor of SLIGHTLY USED furniture looked as if a Kansas cyclone had struck it.

Our buyers purchased several completely furnished houses the past week and together with the exchanges that were made, we think we shall have enough SLIGHTLY USED furniture to fill the requirements of our customers dring the coming week.

We shall offer a large line of SLIGHTLY USED bedroom sets, iron beds, folding beds, sanitary couches, odd dressers, washstands, bedding, wardrobes, extension tables, center stands, buffets, sideboards, china cabinets, bookcases, upholstered and bamboo goods, rockers, chairs, rugs and carpets, at exceptionally low prices, you don't need to have the cash either. A dollar or so a week will do. All goods marked in plain figures.

Now is the time to buy your heating stoves. You can find an enormous assortment of SLIGHTLY USED stoves of almost every size and make at prices that will actually make your mouth water, just as well save about half as not. All our SLIGHTLY USED stoves are garanteed. Some big bargains in gas ranges and cook stoves.

Don't get cold feet this winter, because you have no carpets on the floor. We have about a thousand SLIGHTLY USED carpets and rugs, all sizes and grades, at prices that cannot but appeal to the shrewdest buyer.

Another beautiful Victor phonograph with forty-four disc records and oak cabinet at a bargain.

See that beautiful hand-carved walnut bedstead from the late Philadelphia Centennial Exposition, cheap at $350; yours for $30.

CAPITAL WANTED.
We have the safest industrial proposition on this coast.
There is a TREMENDOUS DEMAND for first-class touring AUTOMOBILES, runabouts, etc. Also a growing demand for heavy trucks. We have designs and completed details for the best car the world has ever seen. A few specifications are Globular explosion chamber, long stroke, high compression, engine mounted on subframe, all parts interchangeable, power plants are interchangeable, break all 4 wheels, pressed steel axles, demountable wheels, 6 and 4-cylinders, four-speed gear, direct drive on third. We cannot fully describe the advantages of this machine on a whole page. The engineer has studied in Europe and has combined the best points of the best machines.
The best factories in the East are enlarging their capital and plants, and are paying from 18 to 40 per cent. per annum on the investment. We have here a better field, a better machine and less competition.

FOR SALE—THE BEST FITTED UP, NICest running confectionery, ice cream and lunch parlor in the city. It is located in the heart of the retail shopping district, is becoming well and favorably known to the best class of people, has a long lease at a fair rental, and the lease alone will be worth the price in a year or two. The fixtures are brand new and up to date. It is on a paying basis now, and its business is bound to increase indefinitely simply by attention and business management. The best season is now coming. This is just the place for gentleman or lady, and experience is not necessary as the present owner will stay a reasonable time and show the buyer all about it. This is all that is claimed for it, and only those meaning business and having the money need investigate. It is a chance seldom offered to obtain an established business at one-half what it cost to fit up, and my only reason for selling is, that I am compelled to go to Mexico in the near future. Price $3000. Address F, box 271, TIMES BRANCH OFFICE. x24

W. B. BARRETT CO., 424 S. Hill st. 24

FOR SALE — PRINCIPALS ONLY—NO agents. Advertiser being obliged to give up work on account of sickness, will sell a controlling interest in a well-established and paying business. Said business is the only concern of the kind on this Coast; produces all goods sold, and has never been able to supply the full demand. It will take a good, honest, wide-awake man with $11,000 or $12,000 to handle it, and the "buy" will be something tangible—not hot air or something "on paper;" not a speculative business, but a sure, reasonably profitable, absolutely safe investment, with the opportunity of pushing the business up to a big volume if you wish. Give some particulars of yourself, please. Address N, box 189, TIMES OFFICE. x*

FIGHT IN HOTEL.

Well-Known Mississippi Pilots Come to Blows in Lobby of St. Louis Hostelry.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Capt. Haptonstall of Middleport, O., and Capt. George W. Clark of Cairo, Ill., two of the best known pilots on the Mississippi River, engaged in an altercation in the lobby of the Laclede Hotel here tonight. Clark was arrested on the charge of carrying concealed weapons. He is locked up in the Police Station.

Haptonstall charged that Clark was attempting to pull a pistol from his hip pocket when he grappled with him and called Policeman O'Conner. Clark did not get his pistol out of his pocket. He could not clearly account for the presence of the gun when taken to the Police Station. The trouble between Haptonstall and Clark is said to be of several years' standing, and to have grown out of a rivalry between the two over piloting coal vessels from Louisville to New Orleans, a thirty days' trip, said to net the river pilots about $600.

FRESH AIR EDUCATION.

Woman Head of Chicago School Declares Children Need More of It in Class Rooms.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 23.—In an address before the Philadelphia Teachers' Association last night, Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of the Chicago schools, laid particular stress upon the physical education of the child.

"Lack of forcefulness and strength of the average American child," she declared, "is due largely to want of fresh air in the schoolroom."

She especially commended instruction of teachers in regard to the germ theory in tuberculosis, so that proper ventilating system may be established and necessary preventative treatment taught the child. The introduction of manual training in elementary schools was also approved.

THE MARKETS.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

The week came to a very unsatisfactory ending, due greatly to the warm wave which caused considerable damage to the fruit, held over from one day to another. Grapes suffered more than any of the other fruits. Muscatels were in bad condition, even from shipping from the country. Black Morocco grapes suffered also. Cornichons and Tokays, with their heavy, leather-like skins, were the best keepers of the day. Blackberries and the few raspberries which arrived went all to pieces in a few hours. This is due to the fact that the second crop of berries is not very hardy, although the berries are just as large and of as good a flavor.

The egg market was firm. Only forty-five cases were reported in. Local case counts sold as high as 43 cents a dozen. Eastern storage were in fair call. The week's trading has been lighter than expected, owing partly to the fact that prices advanced early in the week to the highest they have ever been at this season.

Butter receipts were 22,308 pounds. Trading in the commodity was light. Prices were unchanged. During the past days, butter has been featureless on the market. There have been no fluctuations of any kind and receipts have averaged more than sufficient to supply the local trade, causing a slight weakness if anything.

Cheese has had its ups and downs. Both eastern and Oregon cheese have been fluctuating. The buying has been very good. A demand for Edam cheese was a feature of yesterday's trading. Total arrivals were 8170 pounds.

An indication of the condition of the potato market was given yesterday morning with the sale of a car of choice Highlands at 85 cents a hundred. This is the bottom price so far this season, but with a large quantity of second-class stock on hand, it is very liable to go lower. Receipts were 2570 sacks yesterday.

Onion arrivals were rather heavy, 494 sacks, or just about two cars. Most of them are from the North, prices have been cut 10 cents and even at that there is much underselling of quotations. Yellow globes from local fields are adding to the total onion stock coming in.

Bean receipts were 835 sacks. Pinks advanced 10 cents, going to $3.90 as bottom with an upward range to $4, allowing for quality of best grades. Limas and Lady Washingtons were the best sellers after pinks yesterday.

Arrivals of apples were 12,317 boxes. The apple crop has been very well taken care of as far as Los Angeles is concerned. More apples have gone into storage here than ever before and dealers are pretty well prepared for whatever may happen in other parts of the country in the apple situation.

Some bunch goods in the vegetable line has gone higher. Carrots, turnips and beets have advanced as high as 30 cents a dozen with an average 5 cents below that figure. Other vegetables have been moving rather slowly through the week.

LOS ANGELES STOCK EXCHANGE.

Week Closes Dull With Prices Throughout Changed But Little Over Friday's Quotations.

The week on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange closed yesterday with a rather dull and uninteresting call. Prices throughout were unchanged to fractionally lower than those of Friday.

Twenty shares of Union Oil changed hands at 104.62½. The issue closed 104.50@104.62½, off 1-4 point and 3-8 point, respectively, in the bid and asked.

American Petroleum common was marketed at 65.00, to the amount of 10 shares. The close at 64.50@65.00, was off 1-8 point in the bid, and unchanged in the asked price.

Off board sales of a single Union Transportation bond, at 95.00, and of 1000 shares of Rice Ranch Oil at 1.10, seller thirty days, were reported.

In the mining section, 2000 of Bonnie Clare sold at 15@15¼, and 1000 additional at 15½, buyer 30 days. Two hundred of Combination Fraction were handled at 64, and 700 of Daisy, at 9@9 3-4. Consolidated Mines changed hands at 1 3-4.

SAN FRANCISCO LIST.

Market Quiet and Trading Limited. No Apparent Fluctuations—Portola Makes the Week Dull.

[Special service to The Times by B. F. Taylor, No. 112 West Third street.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—The market was extremely quiet all day, trading being on a limited scale, and fluctuations within narrow limits.

Southern Nevada stocks were practically unchanged from Friday's quotations. The Comstocks were more or less erratic, showing a gain of 17½ points; Mexican, a loss of 2½; Gould & Curry, of 2; Consolidated Virginia, of 12½; Savage, of 9; Hale and Norcross, of 5; Yellow Jacket, of 2½; Belcher, of 10; Sierra, of 4; Union, of 3; Chollar, of 1, and Potosi of 5 points.

The brokers are looking for a broader market next week, as the Portola business will be out of the way.

Compared with the closing of a week ago, the Southern Nevada stocks are practically unchanged. The Comstocks show the largest fluctuations, Ophir registering a gain of 3½ points, and Mexican a loss of ten points. Gould & Curry is off six, Consolidated Virginia off 17½; Savage off 13, Hale & Norcross, 5 and Yellow Jacket, 15 points. Confidence was unchanged, being offered at 1.50. Sierra shows a 6-point loss; Union a 6-point gain, and Potosi off 5 points. Chollar lost 6 points.

The week's business has been materially interferred with on account of the Portola celebration, adjournments having been taken on two mornings at 10:30.

FOREIGN MONEY SWAYS MARKET.

CONDITIONS ABROAD DOMINATE WALL STREET.

Heavy Selling Orders Executed in New York for European Accounts and Home Professionals Get Busy to Catch a Profit on Resultant Downward Trend.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—It was still manifest that the foreign money position, rather than conditions at home, are dominating the New York stock market. Heavy selling orders were executed here for foreign account, and while these were in progress there was selling also for the home professional account to get the benefit of the declining tendency in prices.

The selling pressure relaxed again when the foreign orders had been executed, but was renewed in the apprehension of what is to occur next week. The sharp reaction in foreign exchange rates that occurred yesterday, left a hope that requirements for remittance abroad had been covered with the approach of the period within which obligations maturing in London on November 1 could be covered.

This hope was belied by the strong demand for further remittances, not only to London, but to Berlin. The latter movement was in response to the expectation that the Imperial Bank of Germany would advance its discount rate from 5 to 6 per cent. on Monday.

There was a small withdrawal of gold from the Bank of England today for shipment to Egypt, which raised the question of the efficacy of the present bank rate to protect the London gold supply, and a decline of a fraction in the private discount rate in London also made doubtful the bank's control of the open money market in London.

Increasing attention is turned to the Brazilian demand for gold in connection with the heavy exports of coffee from that country. It is this demand that the London market appears to be able to shift upon New York. The added likelihood of further gold shipment from New York to Brazil growing out of the violent recovery in foreign exchange rates today furnished the motive for the late acute weakness in the stock market.

The final and lowest prices for stocks were immediately followed on the tape by the figures of the bank statement, showing increased surplus reserves, both under the average computation and under the actual statement. The substantial loan decrease shown by the daily averages contrasted with the increase in actual loans show the growing effect during the week of the transfer of loans from foreign banks to New York.

Bonds were irregular. Total sales, par value, $2,820,000. United States bonds 2's and the 3's registered, have declined 1-8, and the 4's ¼ per cent. on call during the week.

The Financial Situation, Security & Yield

The not entirely unexpected advance in discount rates of leading banks in Europe has been the feature of the week.

The reason for the ... seems quite plain.

The managers are seeking to protect their stock of ... from further encroachment.

The drain has not come from New York, but from Egypt, Constantinople, South America and other countries. Therefore it seems likely that the expectations entertained by New York bankers and speculators of more or less liberal imports of gold will not be realized.

Consequently it is difficult to see how prices of ... EASTERN SHARES can advance greatly at this time, based on any investment calculation, except that dividend increases on a larger scale than ... seems possible.

For ultimate results we advise selling EASTERN SECURITIES and reinvesting in LOCAL SECURITIES of the SAME ... but which are yielding ... dividends.

Among the best judges of the local situation, the opinion is expressed that a higher ... of values must be recorded ... the shares of the substantial ... companies.

The market for dividend-paying oil stocks is AT THIS T... a very limited and narrow ... which in part accounts for ... exceedingly low prices.

Safe investments can be ... in the shares of producing ... companies at prices that ... all the way from 5 to ... cent.

These unusual dividends ... beginning to attract not ... cal capital but funds from ... parts of the United States ... competitive buying will ... doubtedly result in ... prices skyward.

Los Angeles is no longer a provincial town and the Los Angeles Stock Exchange is no longer an institution struggling for its recognition. Los Angeles is ...

THE value of residence property must be measured by the desirable residential advantages that it possesses. Residence property that has exclusive features—advantages that cannot be duplicated, naturally possesses more ordinary value. It is the kind of property that the investor is constantly seeking. Mt. Washington—20 from Broadway—commanding views unsurpassed—above the smoke, dust, fog and noise line—1000 feet sea level—possessing unique health advantages—is property of the above named class. Dollars in- in this type of land quadruple themselves in a com- short time. Go and see this incomparable living today. Prepare for a unique surprise. Take yellow cars to Avenue 43.

INCLINE CARS IMPROVED.

The "Florence" and "Virginia" Have Been Partially Reconstructed.

The commodious incline railway cars have been reconstructed and generally rejuvenated until they now hardly resemble their former appearance. New chilled steel wheels have replaced the old ones and the mechanism has been improved to such an extent that the cars now run in an extremely smooth manner. The heavy tops of the cars have been removed and replaced with attractive canopy roofs. The new tops present a jaunty effect and add much to the general appearance of the cars.

LOS ANGELES & MT. WASHINGTON DEPOT.

Handsome Little Railway Station Will Be Completed on November 15th.

The attractive Mission Depot now being erected for the accommodation of patrons of the Los Angeles and Mt. Washington Railway Company will be entirely completed and ready for use about November 15th. A handsome red tile roof will adorn the top of the smart little structure. This is a feature that the company did not contemplate when the original plans were prepared.

MT. WASHINGTON HOTEL NEARLY COMPLETED.

Will Be Attractive to Tourist Element and Residents of Los Angeles.

The finishing touches are being added to Mount Washington's beautiful new Mission hostelry. The building occupies what is probably the most commanding hotel site in Southern California. Guests of this unique hotel will enjoy from the spacious verandas sweeping vistas of mountains, valleys and sea—and sunset effects that no pen or picture could adequately describe. The hotel is constructed throughout along the Mission style of architecture. Everything conducive to genuine comfort is included in the appointments of the building. It will be ready for occupancy about November 15.

—In view of its overwhelming residential advantages, Mount Washington is the lowest priced high-class residence property available in Los Angeles today.

RUSHING GAS MAINS UP MT. WASHINGTON.

Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation Has Large Force of Men at Work Laying Gas Mains All Over the Mountain—Difficult Work Nearly Completed.

Gas mains on the summit of Mt. Washington! To the average person this will not seem remarkable—but, nevertheless, to construct a gas system to the top of a residence district nearly 900 feet above the city street level, is no simple piece of work. It is in the nature of an achievement. Owing to the unusual height of Mt. Washington, it has been difficult to bring to the residents within a short time, all the public utilities enjoyed in the lower residence districts. But difficult as it has been—the work has been accomplished—and now the residents not only enjoy the finest scenic, climatic and sanitary advantages obtainable in Los Angeles—but they also have every modern residential convenience available. The Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation has a large force of men at work, laying the gas mains all over the mountain. The work will be completed within a very short time.

Purchases $7500 Property on Mt. Washington.

C. W. Hill, president and general manager of the F. W. Braun Chemical Co., has purchased a beautiful home on San Rafael avenue, south of Mt. Washington Drive. The house is two stories and commands a magnificent view. The consideration was $7500. Mr. Hill has lived for several years just opposite Mt. Washington, and when he visited the property recently, which was the first time in several years, he was absolutely amazed at the development of improvements. He says that Mt. Washington, in his opinion, has more exclusive residential advantages than any other section of Los Angeles.

New York Cotton Market.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Logan & Bryan say: "Lulled into a fancied sense of security by the experience of previous years, when the flood of movement cheapened values, the spinner has made his old supplies of cheap cotton into cheap cloth, and sold it cheaply. Now that his warehouse is bare of cheap cotton and he has neglected to stimulate the value of the finished product, he stands aghast and talks curtailment, but at the week-end we find him taking 338,000 bales of the highest price cotton against only 296,000 bales last year. This is probably the largest week in crop movement we will see for another twelve months, and to secure his supplies with a shrinking movement and from a people who are at last awakening to the fact that they can get any price they ask, makes the lot of the spinner indeed uncomfortable, unless he asks the consuming public to advance the price of cotton goods, which would be so easy to accomplish that many wonder why he does not grab that horn of the dilemma instead of clamoring against the fact that intelligent people have bought cotton speculatively, and are seemingly alive to the possibilities that are offered them on that side."

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN REAL ESTATE CIRCLES.

Continued Demand for Residence Property and Lots for Both Building and Investment Purposes. Thousands of Tourists Amazed at Activity Here.

Realty men, the cit yover, report a good demand for all classes of lots and residence properties. There is the usual quota of buyers for investment and an almost unprecedented percentage of acquirement for improvement. Building activity is of proportions which are attracting the attention of the entire country to Los Angeles and vicinity and thousands of incoming tourists are astonished at the activity hereabouts. Reports from San Diego indicate that the southern port is experiencing an animation in construction work, which considered on the basis of population, is probably second in magnitude only to that of Los Angeles. Reports of record permit figures continue to come in from other cities of the section. If there is a busier section in the entire country than Southern California, the statisticians who follow the building activities of the United States have failed to record tabulations attesting to such a fact. With still another week to hear from, the permits for construction in this city are already close to the $1,000,000 mark. These amazing figures are concerned for the most part with the erection of residences which are to be occupied as homes by the people of this city. Realty men are kept hustling to supply sites for real home builders. Following are reports in the past week from owners and dealers:

Buys Dalton Avenue Home.

A nine-room residence on a lot 50x150 feet at No. 2870 Dalton avenue has been purchased by Mrs. Z.Decker, of South Pasadena for a consideration of $7000. Mrs. Clara E. OCTOBER BUILDING PERMITS.

MILLION MARK AN EASY GOAL.

OVER NINE HUNDRED THOUSAND IN PERMITS.

Without the Contribution of a Single Big Construction Item, Valuation of Permits for Ordinary Building Activity Totals Nearly a Million to Date.

The chief inspector of buildings has issued during the three weeks ended yesterday, 687 permits for construction work within the limits of this city. The total valuation represented by these building items is $907,822. The figures are significant for the reason that the million mark ordinarily covered as the result of a whole month's activities in the building department is within easy hail within the comparatively brief period of three weeks.

The totals for the corresponding period of last year were 560 permits and $644,197 valuation. The increase of 127 in permit items and of $263,625 in valuation represents an average gain per week over October, 1908, of forty-two in permits and $87,875 in valuation.

A fact so significant as to be worth noting again in connection with this encouraging report is the fact that the totals offered in the department's statistics are made up of items of average cost; of residences and small buildings, rather than of one or two huge business blocks.

Following is the classified report and the report by wards:

PLAN LARGE BUILDING.

Hardware and Steel Wholesalers Secure Lease on Structure to Be Built on East Third.

The Spreckels Brothers Commercial Company will at once begin erection of a large wholesale and industrial building, to be occupied by the Pacific Hardware & Steel Company, on a site between the present warehouse of the former company and the Globe Mills, embracing Nos. 929-939 East Third street, and one block from the Santa Fé station. It will cost about $100,000. Parkinson & Bergstrom are the architects.

The building, as planned, will extend from Third to Second street, a length of 362 feet, occupying a frontage of eighty feet on each of these thoroughfares, and will be of mill construction with exterior of brick. For a depth of 200 feet back from Third street it will be four stories in height. The rest of the depth will be a single story, thirty feet high. This part of the building will be used for an iron warehouse, and its equipment will include an electric crane.

The main part of the building will be equipped with four elevators, pneumatic tubes, and a sprinkler system. The glass will be wired, and modern fire appliances will be installed. The site allows for an alley, twenty-two feet wide on the west side of the building, and a private railway siding on the east side.

The Pacific Hardware & Steel Company has leased the structure for a period of twenty years, the total rental approximating $250,000. This company is a San Francisco corporation, which does a jobbing business along the entire Pacific Coast, including Mexico, Alaska, British Columbia and the Hawaiian Islands. It has plants in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle. The local branch proposes to put in a complete line of shelf and heavy hardware and sporting goods stock, iron and steel, and to a million. The firm expects to handle all its Arizona and Nevada business from this city.

CASTAWAYS SEE TOO MUCH RED

Caridnal Football Boys Show Up Local Fifteen.

Losers Go Into Contest in Crippled Condition.

Crawford Proves to Be Star of Winning Players.

It was a case of too much Cardinal; the Castaways Rugby team went to pieces completely under the fast attack of the heavy 'varsity fifteen at Occidental Field yesterday afternoon. The local team was outweighed, outplayed and outclassed.

Six tries and a goal during the first half netted Stanford 20 points, and 5 more, with three converted, added 21 points in the second half Stanford, 41; Castaways, 0.

Although the Stanford team did not show the pretty backfield passing that had been anticipated, the men were big enough and fast enough, and knew Rugby well enough, to smother the Castaways throughout the game. Individual bits of brilliant play by the Englishmen went almost unnoticed, when the resistless advance of the Cardinal carried the ball toward the local goal before the end of each play.

A 40-yard punt by Monk Pierce, or a pretty piece of dribbling by Tom Higgins would start the crowd to its feet, but before the play stopped Stanford would have again secured the leather, and eclipsed the first part of the play by the deadly advance. By the time the ball was down for a scrum, or in touch, the bleachers had forgotten there were Castaways on the field. There seemed to be two Stanford men for every player in black and white, and two Stanford plays for every kick by the local team.

UNTRIED PLAYERS.

A long string of hard luck compelled the Castaways to start the game with untried men in important positions. Edwards, who had been counted on to play the fastest game in the backfield, failed to put in an appearance on account of a twisted ankle. Lewis, star half, was too badly banged up in his Pomona coaching work to get into the game, and little Harrigan of L. A. High was called in to help out at the last moment. Price of Poly, who had agreed to play forward, went out to Riverside with his own team, and Freeth, who has not lined up with a Castaway team this season, went into the front rank. Pat Higgins was out on account of his old injuries, received in the Berkeley game

The Stanford team came through the weak points left along the Castaways center by these losses, the forwards finding long, ragged dribbling and rushing advances easy. At wings the Castaways were strong, and Monk Pierce of Poly played a fine defensive game at full; but these men alone were not strong enough to stop the rushes. Tom Higgins worked hard at half, and gave one or two of the most brilliant individual exhibitions of the game, but was smothered under the weight of the Cardinal scrum. Milford, Harrigan and Dills of Pomona High, worked together well to check the rushes in the center of the field, but were almost helpless against the tearing Cardinal huskies. Dills, in particular, played a plucky up-hill game, using his head well, and making several substantial gains in the second half.

TOO MANY STARS.

It was hard to pick stars on the Stanford team, when the big fellows had things so much their own way, Crawford and Pemberton, Thorpe and

EVERYTHING GOES SMASH.

MAN KILLED, THREE HURT AS POPE-HARTFORD BREAKS RECORD.

Apperson Wins One of Three Events in Which Pope Drives First—Frank Free Among Injured—Fleming Hero of Day.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OAKLAND, Oct. 23.—Before more than 100,000 spectotars, many of whom camped along the course throughout last night, Jack Fleming today hurled his Pope-Hartford across the line, the winner of the Oakland Portola road race, in the world's record time of 64.50 miles an hour, for a distance of 258 miles, or 12 laps of the 21½-mile circuit.

A close second to the Pope-Hartford came the Apperson "Jackrabbit," which until today was the holder of the record wrested from it by the Pope-Hartford.

Only a few seconds behind the Apperson the Lozier, cleverly driven by Harry Michener, had to content itself with third place after being a dangerous contender throughout the long grind.

Hanshue, who drove the Apperson to its world record at Santa Monica, was at the wheel of the car today, and his gritty struggle to pass the flying Pope made the grand prize event a race until the last lap was reached.

The Pope-Hartford took the 150-mile race for small cars with even more ease than that with which it annexed the grand prize of the meet, but it was not entered in the second race, which was won by the Apperson, after a duel with the Lozier, which was not decided until the grand stand was in sight of the racers.

The second place in the small-car race fell to the Autocar, driven by Walter Morris.

HILLS POPULATED.

The huge grand stand was almost deserted for the natural ampitheaters formed by the hills lining the boulevard, which proved the most attractive part of the course. Owing to the length of the course, the spectacular features of the race were somewhat marred by the infrequent appearance of the cars before the spectators, but the long intervals of suspense were taken up with improvised picnic parties.

The races were marred by a number of accidents, two of which may result fatally. These were due to the inefficient policing of the course, and in both instances spectators were the victims.

O. F. Johnson, of this city, was struck by the Knox car driven by Frank Free, on the course near Fruitvale, and sustained injuries which probably will result in his death.

DAY'S FEATURES.

O. F. Johnson was killed, H. McKittrick, spectator; Frank Free, driver, and Joe Robinson, mechanician, probably fatally hurt.

World road race record smashed by Pope-Hartford from 64.44 miles an hour to 64.50 miles.

Jack Fleming drove a Pope-Hartford first in the three events of the day.

The second event was awarded to Apperson "Jackrabbit," as the Pope had failed to enter officially.

D. A. Booney, in the Stearns, made the fastest lap of the day.

An old man named H. McKittrick, was the victim of a peculiar accident. His skull was fractured by a metal rim thrown from a tire cast by the Sunset car.

On the second lap of the small car race, A. G. Linz, the mechanician of the Maxwell, was injured by the breaking of the fly wheel of his motor.

Early in the race the Chalmers-Detroit was hindered by a broken wheel and driver Howard Warner and his mechanician, James McCauley, were thrown from the machine and bruised.

FASTEST LAP.

The best time for a single lap was made by the Stearns, driven by D. A. Booney, who swung his big racer about one of the twenty-one and one-half mile circuits in 18m. 1-5s. The actual elapsed time of the Pope-Hartford in the Oakland cup race, was 3h. 58m. 15s.

The Apperson, which had negotiated a little less than eleven laps at the time the Pope-Hartford crossed the line a winner, was leading Lozier almost a lap. Both cars finished in the order in which they stood at the time when the Pope-Hartford won.

Besides winning the second place in the biggest event of the day, the 258-mile race, the Apperson also won the second race, ten laps, or 210 miles, negotiating the distance in 3h. 12m. 33s.

The Lozier was given second place in the second race, confining the winners of the day to the three cars, the Pope-Hartford taking the first race and not having entered the second, though finishing first.

Fleming made by far the best time in the second race, as well, but was not entered, and so could not take the contest. This led to some confusion, and it was generally believed that Fleming had taken the whole trio of races. The Pope-Hartford won the first event of seven laps.

The actual running time of the Pope-Hartford today was 64.50 miles an hour, breaking the world's record established at Santa Monica, of 64.44, and that of the Vanderbilt Cup race of 64.42.

ACCIDENT MARS.

The Knox, driven by Frank Free left the course on Stanley road, near San Leandro, and killed O. H. Johnson, a spectator, who was standing beside his wife, watching the racers. Free and his mechanic, Joe Robinson, were thrown out of the car and seriously injured.

Fleming, in the Pope-Hartford, won the race for light cars, covering the 150 miles in fast time.

An ovation greeted the driver as he went past the grand stand finishing his seventh lap.

The car continued without pause, as it was entered in the 258-mile event, and had a long lead.

The Chalmers-Detroit No. 7 struck a fence near San Leandro on its seventh lap and turned turtle. No one was injured.

In the last lap of the second event, the Stearns, Charley Soules driving, had a slight lead over the Apperson. Another Stearns followed right on the heels of the Apperson, and the event was exciting.

Soules and his Stearns reached a speed of seventy-one miles an hour in an effort to overhaul the lead of the Pope. Soules took the wrong road early in the race, and had gone about a mile before he discovered his error.

Up to the time of the completion of the third lap, the Pope-Hartford was making the best time of any of the competing cars, making each of the three laps in less than twenty minutes, or at a rate of sixty-five miles an hour.

The time between the completion of the third lap of the autocar and the next car was almost four minutes.

The Lozier, No. 12, was running second to the Pope-Hartford, but the Pope had a lead of several minutes.

THE START.

Fifteen automobiles, starting at regular intervals of a few minutes each, over the twenty-one and one-half-mile circuit, formed by the Oakland-San José country road, and the Hill boulevard, began the Oakland Portola road race, the first of the kind ever given in Northern California.

Although all of the machines started simultaneously, they were entered in three distinct contests. The first, for a distance of seven laps of the course, or an approximate distance of 150 miles, was for cars of 231 to 450 inches piston displacement.

The second-class racers covered 215 miles, by making the circuit ten times. These cars were of stock chassis with a piston displacement of 451 to 600 inches.

The third race, constituting the grand prize event of the day, was for racing cars and machines having a piston displacement in excess of 600 inches. This race was also open to cars which qualified in the foregoing events. The distance for the big race of twelve laps was approximately 258 miles.

Among the well-known drivers in the race were Harris Hanshue, who

SAINTS WIN IN HARD GAME.

Safety Loses to Methodists in Exciting Finish.

Rader and Casey Smash Up Stubborn Defense.

Hall and Ickes Rendered Unconscious.

St. Vincent's College, 8; University of Southern California, 6.

In the hardest fought game of the season, the fighting eleven of St. Vincent's College lowered the colors of the University of Southern California at Bovard Field yesterday afternoon, by the margin of two points.

Quarter-back Ickes was thrown across his own goal line three minutes from the close of the contest for a safety, which gave the deciding points to the Saints.

St. Vincent's lined up for a place kick on the Methodist 37-yard line. The ball was passed over the kneeling quarter-back direct to Neighbours on a fake, and the Saint kicker sent a short spiral just out of Ickes's grasp. Gage and Casey rushed the Methodist quarter as he recovered the ball on the bounce, and their impetus carried him over the U.S.C. goal. The Saints' claim of a touchdown, on disputed possession of the ball, was overruled by the officials.

The first touchdown was scored by the Saints six minutes after the university kicked off, Rader bucking the ball over in two terrific plunges for twenty-five yards, right over Tackle Cochran. Tortes kicked an easy goal. The ball changed hands on a fumble by the university on the second line-up. Rader and Casey plowed right through tackle for twenty yards, and Neighbours failed of a place kick on the university 35-yard line. After the kick-off Capt. Murray recovered a fumble on U.S.C.'s 20-yard line, Rader carrying the ball over.

'VARSITY SCORES FIRST.

The university scored seven minutes from the close of the first period. Capt. Paulin receiving Neighbours's punt, and running thirty-five yards through a scattered field for a touchdown. Decius tied the score by kicking goal. The play was entirely unexpected. Decius had carried the ball from midfield on a pretty fake punt for thirty yards. The Saints held on own 15-yard line. Neighbours received a poor pass, but managed to get off a low punt for twenty yards. The Methodist captain dodged like a rabbit between a half dozen tacklers, placing the ball between the posts.

The largest crowd of the season, some 1200 persons, witnessed the struggle, and the game was easily the best contest played so far this year. The Saints outweighed the university in the back field, where Rader, Casey and Gage formed an entering wedge for repeated gains of from five to fifteen yards. The Methodist line was weak on defense a greater part of the time, and only during the last half was the university able to smother the plunging Saint backs.

The Saints were stronger in the punting department, Neighbours outkicking Decius and Paulin, although the Saint was below his usual distance. In the back-field work, however, the university quarter overcame this handicap, Ickes picking the long spiral punts with more than his usual accuracy. Tortes was woefully weak at the same game, and lost much of the ground Neighbours gained on kicks. Both Neighbours and Paulin failed of a place kick, Neighbours early in the first half, and Hal during the opening minutes of the second period.

The terrific pounding of Rader and

SANDPIPERS.

FAST DESERT AUTO RACERS AFTER PHOENIX ROAD MARK.

Every Driver Confident of Smashing White Record. Fenner Sets Fast Schedulc to San Bernardino—Shettlr Hesitates—Every Entry Worked Out in Preliminary Trials.

THE Los Angeles-Phoenix automobile road record of 30hrs. 25m., made last year by the White steamer, is expected to be smashed in this year's Phoenix race. The time made by "Black Bess" was particularly good, but the knowledge of the course which each driver possesses this year should make the time at least five hours faster.

Every inch of the road has been covered. The course from Los Angeles to the Colorado River is as well known to at least eight of the drivers as the Baldy course was to the three men who started this year. Not a driver should be lost.

From the start, which will be from in front of the Hollenbeck Hotel, Saturday night, November 6, to San Bernardino, the racers will follow the upper road. Here a difference of opinion exists. Some will try to "beat it" all the way to San Bernardino. Others will take a steady gait.

Fenner would like to send his Isotta through the sixty miles of road in 1h. 15m. This is too fast, several believe. Ralph Hamlin will be satisfied to make the drive in 2h. 15m. The schedule of each driver varies, but only Fenner has set such a low mark.

Good going, with occasional bumps will be found from San Bernardino to Banning. All of the cars will be driven at speed over this stretch of thirty-four miles of the course. The road to Beaumont, which is twenty-eight miles from San Bernardino, will be negotiated in fast time as the stripped cars will take the ruts without serious difficulty. The six miles from Beaumont to Banning can be made at top speed.

PAN BUMPS.

Out of Banning the desert begins to loom up. The road to Whitewater is good, but the dirver who tries a mile-a-minute clip will come to grief on this stretch. The ups and downs of this road are terrific and at times the pan bumps heavily.

Again from Whitewater al Palm Springs the heavy sand is encountered. Drivers need not fear the wash of the Whitewater, where it skirts the low mountain ridge behind San Jacinto peak. This is particularly treacherous, but the Elmore and Dorris crossed easily. By following the road to Twenty-nine Palms, along the trail "Willie Boy" traversed, the quicksands of the river bed can be avoided, but this is three miles longer and necessitates opening two gates, and traveling north for two miles and then south again toward Palm Springs.

From Palm Springs to Indio, a distance of forty miles, the going is better. Good time can be made over this stretch. There are occasional deep sand pits which can be taken at moderate speed with safety. Careful driving is necessary.

Out of Indio the road gets better for a space and then begins the heavy sand pulling. Low gears must be used, and the car that does better than fifteen miles an hour is making splendid time.

After leaving Mecca, however, the tremendous pull is begun. Through the deep sand, where it is necessary to put on full power when going down hill, the cars are driven to Dos Palmos, that loneliest of all spots on the desert. Here the racers will check in with only a pause during the run. Motors are not stopped.

After leaving Dos Palmos the Chuckawalla Springs country must be passed. Treacherous and dangerous in the extreme in this section. Sand hollows offer excellent chances for ditching the car that leaves the road.

When the Blythe ranch is reached most of the sand troubles should seem light, indeed. With only seven miles to the Colorado River there is no excuse for being lost.

There will be a respite at Ehrenberg The cars will be put into control, and the new start will not come until daylight Monday, November 8. Then the [illegible] miles to Phoenix must be made on the "high."

There is a possibility that the winner can be easily selected, after the cars have reached Ehrenberg. The run to Phoenix, however, may offer several obstacles. The road is good, and the race will be thrilling unless some car has hours the advantage.

The Maricopa Automobile Club, which is conducting the race, promises to have the road from Ehrenberg to Phoenix posted. The members expect to place signs along every mile of the course in Arizona. This will prove a great help to the drivers.

Several who have entered will not make the run clear to Phoenix before the race. Ralph Hamlin will only go as far as the river. Fenner expects to stop when "Black Bess" pokes her nose into the waters of the Colorado.

STOPS AT EHRENBERG.

D. B. Rose is now at Ehrenberg with the Elmore. He does not expect to go through to Phoenix. He has had remarkable luck. He made Indio in splendid shape on Thursday. He left The Times office early Thursday morning and drove at a racing clip to Mecca. The Elmore is one of the likely cars in the Phoenix race, and Rose will know the road thoroughly before the start.

Morris O'Donnell has returned from Ehrenberg in the Pennsylvania The powerful racer made no objection to the deepest sand. The car went to Banning on the "high" and the low-gear work in the sand makes O'Donnell feel particularly confident.

There is a goodly crowd of rooters who expect the Pennsylvania to show her class in the Phoenix race. Walter Vail is not the only one who is condent the Pennsylvania is to win the laurels. The excellent work of this car at Santa Ana shows that it has plenty of speed.

Bert Latham and the Studebaker E. M.F., left Friday night for Phoenix. The car has been bucking the sand consistently. The "Thirty" can make the run in better than the record, says Bert, and Latham has a chance even against cars which are faster and of higher power.

Harry Lord has decided to drive the car as far as Mecca. This gives Bert the tussle with the sand for little more than half the race. He is equal to the task, as he expects to get a rest at the river.

Roger Stearns has a hunch the Ford will win. The little four-cylinder twenty-horse-power baby has returned from the desert covered with sand dust and honors a-plenty. The car went right through without a hitch.

There were several who thought the midget would balk in the Chuckawalla sand pits. The Ford was not expected by several to makethe trial trip as easily. Now that Stearns is back there are those who are willing to take a long shot on the smallest car in the race.

SECRET EQUIPMENT.

When the cars line up on Spring street the Ford will look as it does any day chugging along the pavement. When the Ford passes, or is passed by the leader in the race, Stearns will have a surprise packet to hand out in the way of equipment. The car will be fearfully and wonderfully shod for the sand battle.

This part of the equipment is a secret. Locked in the rear room of the Standard Motor Car Company's garage are the sand brogans the little car will wear. They fit like a glove and work like a charm. Look out for the Ford.

Leon T. Shettler is still the puzzle of the race. He has done practically nothing toward equipping his car for the run to Phoenix. In fact, he has not decided which car to start. The Apperson "Jackrabbit" is ready, but Shettler has said repeatedly he will not drive this fast car.

There is the Kissel "Six," winner of the six-hour race at Ascot. The car has not been stripped or especially tuned. It would make a great showing, no doubt, but Shettler may determine to base his chances of winning on a two-cylinder Reo.

When he returns from San Francisco Shettler is to decide which car to enter. Then the men will set to work on a hurry job, and the car will be prepared. One trial trip is all that is necessary, and Shettler's pet will be ready for the struggle.

William Bosbyshell is expected home tomorrow from his trial run. The Dorris is making a splendid hit with the dwellers on the desert. Bosbyshell takes the sand at a ripping clip. The car is powerful and particiulary fast.

The Dorris made the run to Mecca Thursday, and took the sand in great shape. Bosbyshell has high hopes.

TEN MOTORS IN PHOENIX RACE.

The Columbia roadster was entered in the Phoenix race late last night. This makes ten cars in the race. The check was signed by A. M. Young, of Bireley & Young, local agents. The Columbia has proved its roadability by smashing the Los Angeles-San Diego round-trip record.

Referee John S. Mitchell announced that at least two other cars, and possible three, will be entered before tomorrow noon, when the entries close. There will be a meeting tomorrow afternoon at the Hollenbeck Hotel of all the entrants to discuss the rules of the race.

One of the propositions of Referee Mitchell is that the first car be started at 9 o'clock. In this way, all the racers have a chance to reach the Colorado River by Sunday night and be placed in control. There is a sand bar in the river which makes ferrying at night particularly dangerous. The new start would be the following Monday morning.

CONN AND HIS SIMPLEX.

Charles G. Conn returned Monday in his American Simplex from a tour of the northern part of the State. The easterner was unable to take the car into the Yosemite Valley, as the rules forbid touring in the park. The car was taken to Merced, and the autoists took the stage into the valley.

FRANKLIN SCORES

LUFT KOLER MAKES FRIENDS OVER THE SEA TAKE NOTICE.

E. D. NEFF of this city is touring Germany in a Franklin. He recently drove over the old Gordon Bennett cup course, piloted by Baron von Starck. When the two returned to Wiesbaden the car was the center of interest.

Three chauffeurs, a Russian, Frenchman and an Italian, were particularly attracted to the Franklin. The German called it a "Luft Koler," an air-cooler. It was one of the largest air-cooled cars they had ever seen. When they heard that the machines are popular here and that they traverse the deserts for miles, the trio was astounded.

The horse power of the car does not impress them. They guessed it at from fifteen to twenty, writes Neff. They are surprised, says the Angeleño, that the car will run up hill. It seems small to their big foreign machines which makes so much noise.

Baron von Starck is a major in the German army. He is much interested in the Franklin, and desired a hill-climbing demonstration. The car was sent up the mountains to Saalburg, a distance of twenty-eight miles, and Neff says he made half the climb on high gear.

"Why," said Neff's German friend. "this car goes up hill like a rabbit."

Saalburg was formerly an outpost of the Romans when the Roman empire held sway. Part of the original walls built by the conquerors of the world are still in existence. The Franklin was driven about the fortifications of the city after the long climb.

The ancient fortress has been preserved by the government. The American car made an impression on the natives as it skirted the walls of the old city, which was important before the Christian era.

Von Starck said the American cars are making great inroads on European trade. He was pleased with the work of the Franklin, and thought it would be practical in even colder countries. The air-cooling system "made a hit" with the German army officer, who believed it could be used to advantage in the Kaiser's army.

Compared with the heavy and rather cumbersome German cars, the Franklin looked wonderfully light. The Germans consider the car as noiseless, says Neff, and he continues: "It is no wonder, as their cars rattle like a thrashing machine."

PACKARD MAN'S SHIPMENTS.

CHRISTMAS AUTO SHOW NOW THING OF PAST FOR DEALERS.

EARLE C. ANTHONY, manager for the Western Motor Car Company, is not opposed to holding an automobile show. He is particularly anxious that he shall go on record as not having opposed any of the plans of the Show Committee of which he was a member. He says he was simply following the expressed desires of a majority of the dealers and would have done all in his power to make the show a success had a majority favored the proposition.

"There is no disposition on my part to knock the automobile show plan," said Anthony, yesterday. "When the dealers exhibit sufficient desire to hold the show I'm strong for it and will work as hard as I can to make it a success.

"Should the dealers desire to reconsider the vote I think they should be given a chance, though I do not want to appear in the light of doing anything to influence those who are so strongly opposed to the plan.

"The Western Motor Car Company is ready to help out in any thing that will boost the cause of the automobile industry. If there is a show we will exhibit our Packards, Chalmers-Detroit and Hudsons and will make our exhibit worth seeing.

"At the last show we made as attractive a display as possible and we are ready to make good again when the time comes. Meanwhile we can hold a show of our own on our floors until the time is ripe for a larger exhibit."

The sentiment of the vice-president of the Automobile Dealers' Association is shared by a number of other prominent dealers. Anthony's ideas on the show are such as at least a dozen others hold. There is no disposition on the part of the dealers to bring the matter to a vote and there is little prospect of a show this year.

While the show sentiment is by no means dead there is only a small possibility that it will be brought up at the coming dealers meeting. Anthony's original idea was that the show be held during Christmas week. A number favored this plan until the show was called off.

It is now too late to think of holding an automobile exhibition sooner than February.

GOOD ROAD WORK.

Automobile Club Appoints Engineer Finkle to Inspect County Highway Commission's Labors.

F. C. Finkle has been appointed by the Automobile Club of Southern California to look into road conditions in Southern California, and particularly to report on the work being done by the Los Angeles Highway Commission. Finkle will act as an advisory to the officials of the club, and will report the progress being made.

During the coming thirty days, Finkle will go over all the work now in progress. He has consulted with A. E. Loder, chief engineer in charge of the road work, and with that official will inspect the work already completed.

An experience gained in active engineering work for the last few years is valuable to Finkle, who has been appointed by George B. Ellis, president of the Automobile Club. He will report from time to time at the meetings of the club.

J. L. Warnoche of San Bernardino, agent in that county, holds the record among Studebaker agents in Southern California for the most cars disposed of. He has sold and delivered twenty-three since February 1.

MAY END TROUBLES.

CATCH TIME ON FLYING AUTOS.

WARNER INSTRUMENT COMPANY PERFECTS SYSTEM.

Has Been Used Successfully in Big Race Meets and May Revolutionize Methods of Timing in Any Style of Contest—Can Be Worked by Two Men.

One of the latest devices for timing automobiles in race meets has been perfected by the Warner Instrument Company. It is claimed for the system that it is entirely accurate. It has been used successfully at Indianapolis, Lowell and Riverhead.

There is a possibility that it may be installed for the Santa Monica Road Race the coming year. A number of automobile men are in favor of the system and as it necessitates only two men in the timers' stand it saves valuable space. The results can be given the second the winning cars have crossed the tape.

The timing arrangement consists of a revolving drum covered with a sheet of paper, on which a pen traces a spiral line. Whenever a car passes the wire, the pen is pressed to one side and held there for an instant, leaving a deep indentation in the line on the paper. The paper is ruled across for every five seconds that the pen travels, and besides this, the pen is arranged to mark seconds so that each second is shown by a notch in the line. Each line has sixty notches and covers one minute. Every ten minutes an extra wide space is left between the lines.

Two men only are required to keep the record. One of them watches the cars as they pass and calls off their number and time to the other, who sets it down on a separate sheet. For instance, as a car approaches the man standing at the instrument calls the car number, and presses the key he is holding in his right hand to connect the instrument with a wire that is stretched across the track about four inches from the ground. When the car strikes this wire an electric circuit is closed that works the pen.

The operator calls off the time of that car at once in minutes and seconds, and tenths of a second. The man seated beside him enters it on the race time sheet in the proper space, and by making the subtraction secures the elapsed time, which is posted on the score board. The track wire is disconnected until another car approaches.

The chronometer controls the mechanism that drives the recording instrument and keeps the pen synchronized with it. Any error in this respect can be instantly detected on the record, because the notches that indicate seconds will no longer coincide with the cross lines.

On the road race time sheet, spaces are provided for the finish, starting, and elapsed time for each lap or mile for each car. When the operator calls off the starting time for the first car, it is entered at once.

In practice the operator enters the number of each car against its record on the record sheet at once, without in any way interfering with the instrument. The entire history of each car is thus made permanent, and if the figures that are posted are ever questioned, the time can afterwards be verified absolutely.

EMERGENCY TRUCK SERVICE.

Street Railway Lines to Be Aided by Fast Motors Ready for Day and Night Use.

Emergency auto trucks, fitted with alarm bells and big gas lights, which will be kept burning all night, is to be a feature of the Pacific Electric, and Los Angeles Railway Company's repair forces. Three Frayer-Miller trucks have been installed for emergency work. These were sold in the last week by the William H. Howard Automobile Company.

One of the big trucks will be used in Pasadena on the Pacific Electric lines there. Another will be used on the Pacific Electric lines in Los Angeles. The third truck will be installed in the barns of the Los Angeles Railway Company.

Great searchlights will be kept constantly shining in readiness for a dash. The cars are particularly fast for two-ton trucks. They are intended to be rushed to a hurryup job in order that traffic may not be delayed. The trucks have all the latest improvements which the Frayer-Miller 1910 models possess.

The same concern has sold a 1910 six-cylinder Winton to A. Getty, president of the First National Bank of Santa Ana. Mr. Getty will wait until January 1 for delivery. The Winton is intended as a New Year's gift.

BEARDSLEY IN EAST.

Sales Manager for Auto Vehicle Company Arranging for Nineteen-Ten Supplies for Local Factory.

Volney S. Beardsley, sales manager for the Auto Vehicle Company, is in the East and will return the latter part of this week. He is inspecting the 1910 models and arranging for supplies.

The local factory is working overtime to keep up with its orders. Beardsley is endeavoring to hasten large shipments of supplies which have been delayed.

The local man is now in Chicago where he will remain for several days. He is in close touch with the large manufacturers in the East and is preparing for the 1910 rush.

Glen Lull, secretary of the company, says his concern is busier now than it has ever been in the history of the automobile industry. The entire factory is being hustled to get out the 1910 cars in sufficient numbers, he says, to supply the ever-increasing demand for Tourist and California cars.

THOMAS MAN RETURNS.

Sales Manager Robinson of the Wilson Buffington Company Lands Big Commercial Truck.

A. S. Robinson, general sales manager for the Thomas Motor Car Company, has returned from the East after having inspected the new Thomas line. The "Little-Six" Thomas demonstrator reached here one day in advance of the local man. Robinson says the Thomas line for 1910 is a hummer.

While in the East Robinson landed the Atterbury truck for his firm. This truck concern is a pioneer in the commercial vehicle line. It makes a four and six-cylinder truck of from 800 pounds to five-ton capacity. The Atterbury demonstrator will be here in about three weeks.

New Thomas cars are to arrive in numbers within a week. Robinson's mission was to hasten the shipments as the cars are not coming fast enough for Wilson & Buffington, the local agents. The big garage is ready for the cars if they only get here, says Robinson.

According to the autoist the Thomas people are being rushed to keep up with their orders. The local agents can only hope for a limited number of cars.

These 14 Tourist must go this wee

Here's the greatest auto buying opportunity ever offered in Los Angeles. We've got fourteen cars that we are going to close out before inventory—November first—at the lowest prices for which such cars have ever been sold on the Coast.

Five of them are brand new—two of them have been used only for show purposes in the factory—the other seven have been taken in exchange from Tourist owners on the purchase of new cars. These cars that have been taken in exchange, have been completely overhauled and put in perfect condition in our factory—right where they were made.

These cars at the prices we have put on them—demand the attention of every man in Southern California who has a thought of buying a car.

There are several more astonishing bargains we have not listed here.

These cars are lined up on our floors ready for inspection and trial. We stand back of every car and guarantee each one to be just as represented.

Last Sunday we advertised a list of cars at bargain prices—and the values were so extraordinary that we cleaned out the entire lot. The cars we advertise today are even better values than last week's—and they'll go just as quick.

If you are interested, you will have to be on hand early this week.

KISSEL'S CHANCES.

Not since the six-hour race has there been such interest in a track meet. The Kisselkar, which carried off the honors in that race, is ready for another try. The car could be stripped in two days and sent to the course.

Leon T. Shettler may enter the Kissel in the free-for-all. The Kissel is fast enough and classy enough to win even in such a field. Les Gehricke, who drove the machine to victory before, is to handle the car if it appears at Ascot.

Care is being taken by Hempel to avoid the possibility of accident. Races have been held on the course when it was in worse shape than at present. Barring possible accidents, the meet should be one of the best ever pulled off at Ascot Park.

ACCESSORY MAN HOME.

John T. Bill Returns from the East With Breezy Report of Motorcycle Business.

John T. Bill has returned from a four weeks' visit in the East. He passed some time at Reading, Buffalo, Cleveland, and New York. He reports activity along motorcycle manufacturing lines and says the factories are busier than ever and are being taxed to keep up with their orders.

Each concern is increasing facilities for manufacturing motorcycles, says Bill. The outlook is that 1910 will be the greatest year in the history of the industry. The "one-man car" is to take a more prominent place than ever, he says.

Reading-Standards and Pierce motorcycles in particular are to be made in increased numbers. Bill says he passed several days at both factories and found the forces working hard on the new output. At the Reading-Standard factory Willard Hogue of this city is in charge of the test department and Raymond Seymour, also of this city, is riding in race meets for the factory.

Bill was accompanied by his wife. The two left New York the day before the Hudson-Fulton celebration. They found great crowds in all of the cities of the East and were impressed with the business being done along every line.

"The trip was instructive," says Bill, "as it showed me we are not doing all the business here in Los Angeles. I found many new wrinkles in the accessory line and discovered that the manufacturers of automobile supplies are as busy as the automobile and motorcycle factories."

OILS AND TIRES FOR DESERT.

Valvoline Company Offers Handsome Trophy and Other Concerns Make Special Inducements.

The Valvoline Oil Company has offered a handsome cup to the car winning the Phoenix race, provided that car uses their oil. The cup is of solid silver, a foot high, including the pedestal, and is strikingly handsome. In addition a bonus of $150 is offered to the driver who takes the car through to first place.

There is keen rivalry among the accessory and supply dealers regarding the equipment of cars in the Phoenix race. The Valvoline company is anxious to break into the racing game, and is offering special inducements to those who will use its oil on the desert grind.

The Harris oil people expect to equip more than half the cars in the race, and will probably put up a bonus and a cup for the winning car. The driver who wins the Phoenix race will capture more than $1500 in cash, and at least two handsome cups.

Tire men are also offering inducements to the entrants, and as a result several makes of tires will be represented on the sand-bucking cars. It will afford a splendid test of the durability of the tires during the 461 miles of road racing.

NEW AUTOCAR COMING.

Bulkley, Just from the East, Assumes Agency and Will Seek to Make Car More Popular.

M. S. Bulkley, who recently arrived from the East, has taken the agency for the Autocar. Bulkley expects to place his car more prominently before the public, as it is a machine that will bear inspection. It has made good on the roughest roads.

The new five-passenger demonstrator is now on the road. It is the first of the 1910 type to leave the factory, and when it arrives Bulkley promises a sensation in automobile lines. It is said to be the "last word" of the Autocar factory.

The car will have the original lines of the former models, but will have a number of important improvements. In general appearance it will be the same as last year's model, but will be faster and more snappy looking.

The Autocar has made good in Los Angeles. It is not as well known as it might be. A number of machines, however, are on the streets, and these are giving entire satisfaction. Bulkley has been promised early deliveries and expects to dispose of a number of the nobby machines.

The Autocar is being handled at No. 130 East Ninth street. Bulkley expects an Autocar delivery wagon here about the middle of November. The delivery rig has a capacity of 3000 pounds, and is said to be easy of operation and suitable for fast work.

ANOTHER TRUCK HERE.

The Gramm-Logan motor truck is now represented by the Automobile Sales and Manufacturing Company. The demonstrator, a two-ton truck, has arrived. It has a four-cylinder thirty-horse-power motor, and a direct line drive. The transmission is progressive, with three speeds. The driver from the jack shaft is by side chains.

The following-named persons have purchased Studebaker E.M.F.'s the past week: E. A. Weber, Frank Simmonds, W. C. Bergman, A. Byron Beasley; A. A. Caldwell, J. A. Jackson, Hollywood; A. T. Frampton, Artesia; Beeke-Keisel Co., Anaheim; A. S. Riley, Pasadena; A. L. Burson, Ventura.

"Wild Bill" Ruess is in Santa Barbara celebrating the victories of the Pope-Hartford. He will drive through Oxnard, Ventura and Santa Paula today on his way home (look out!)

A. J. Smith of this city, who is now in business in San Francisco, was one of the interested spectators at the Portola automobile races.

Leon T. Shettler wagered $300 on the Apperson car against the Stearns. Coney C. Slaughter had the loser's end of the bet.

The C. C. Slaughter Motor Car Company reports the following sales of Stearns cars: To Henry Blumenberg, a sixty-horse-power top tonneau roadster; to Walter Cosby, a thirty-horse-power top tonneau roadster; to H. E. Hueston, a thirty-horse-power touring car.

A Studebaker "40" has just been sold to C. C. Crowell of this city.

A. S. Ragsdale took delivery of a forty-horse-power, seven-passenger Studebaker last week.

The Lord Motor Car Company has its order in for 850 of the various models for Southern California, and has been striving to increase its allotment.

P. H. Greer will leave this week for the desert in a Mitchell roadster. He will drive to Mojave and Lone Pine over the route of the Mitchell stage line.

Ralph Hamlin has delivered a Franklin runabout to George W. Stoll. Dr. Rea Smith purchased a toy tonneau Franklin, and John H. Bradley a double-rumble Franklin. Arthur Braly took a seven-passenger fifty-horse-power Franklin limousine. Five-passenger Franklins were sold to H. S. Williams, T. B. Young and R. H. Kellam.

The California Electric Garage Company of Los Angeles and Pasadena reports the following sales for the week: H. I. Stuart, a specially equipped Detroit electric roadster; Walter E. Smith Company, a one-ton Lansden electric wagon, equipped with the new Edison storage battery; Col. W. J. Hogan of Pasadena, a specially finished and equipped Detroit electric roadster; Col. E. Dunham, a Lansden electric hotel bus, with the new Edison battery, for the King Edward Hotel; Harry Gray of Pasadena, a Columbus Stanhope; Mrs. F. O. MANY ENTER MOTOR RACE.

Vanderbilt Classic Calls Fast Foreigners.

Long Island Parkway Scene of Great Activity.

Small Cars Prepare for Hill and Massapequa Races.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The following cars were entered yesterday in the Vanderbilt Cup races: A Buick, to be driven by Louis Chevrolet; three Maxwells, to be piloted by See, Costello and Doorly; two Marmons and an American Roadster.

Although it has been stated frequently that Lewis Strang will drive an Isotta-Fraschini car in the race, the noted American pilot will be seen at the wheel of a Fiat. Three of the Italian cars have been nominated in the classic. The foreigners are determined not only to hold the Grand Prix of the Automobile Club of America, but to capture the Vanderbilt as well.

Two Chalmers cars and three Maxwells are entered in the Massapequa trophy race. Billy Knipper and Joe Matson will have charge of the Chalmers Flyers, while Costello, See and Doorly will drive the Maxwells.

Eddie Hearne of Chicago, Lewis Strang and E. H. Parker may handle Fiat cars in this year's Vanderbilt.

Joe Seymour, one of the veteran pilots of the racing game, will handle an Isotta-Fraschini, while the Apperson car will be in charge of Hugh Harding, one of the veterans of the industry. The Chalmers-Detroit cars will make a battle for the big trophy, with Bert Dingley and Lee Lorimer in charge of the machines. Harry Grant will drive the Alco, while the National Flyers, among the leaders at the Indianapolis motor speedway events, will be piloted by Charlie Merz and Johnny Aitken. L. A. Mitchel is named to handle the Simplex, with Willie Haupt at the wheel of the American.

Phil Wells, a St. Louis boy, will send the Moon through the Wheatly Hill's trophy event to be run in conjunction with the Vanderbilt. The car to be handled by Wells is the private roadster of Earl J. Moon, an officer of the company. George Riess will pilot the Marion named as a competitor also for the Wheatly trophy.

Vanderbilt Cup drivers are hard at work "tuning up" their speed machines listed to start Saturday morning in the annual motor classic on Long Island. The field at present includes twenty of the most powerful racing cars of domestic and foreign make ever assembled, and already the experts are predicting an average speed of better than sixty-six miles an hour.

The cup course was opened for practice early in the week, and although everything was in readiness for trial spins, a number of the star pilots failed to show up. The course has been completely oiled and the corners banked. All the holes and ruts in the country roads has been filled in with the best of Peekskill gravel, and while a few rough spots will have to be rolled down and ironed out, the speedway as a whole is in splendid condition for fast going.

Twenty-two special flagmen, who will guard the course, have been on duty for several days, working under orders of the Supervisors, and all traffic has been diverted to other roads and not a single vehicle of any description, other than auto racing cars, will be permitted on the course between the hours of 5 and 8 o'clock in the morning while practice is going on.

When the revival of the Vanderbilt Race was under consideration it was decided that it should be a stock car race under rules similar to the stock chassis events that have been held with great success in different parts of the country. These rules classify the cars according to piston displacement and there are four divisions embracing the maximum and minimum displacements fixed by the American Automobile Association.

If all the entrants were to compete at a uniform distance, the victory of the high-powered car would be certain, and it was decided to have two higher classes of cars, those having a piston displacement from 301 to 600 cubic inches, compete for the Vanderbilt trophy, while the cars of a displacement of 300 and below, should compete for the Wheatly Hill's and Massapequa trophies.

No great prominence had been given to the character of these trophies, but when it became known that, in addition to the trophies, there would be $1000 in prize money to the drivers in each of the two smaller classes, there was a howl from the drivers in the two larger classes.

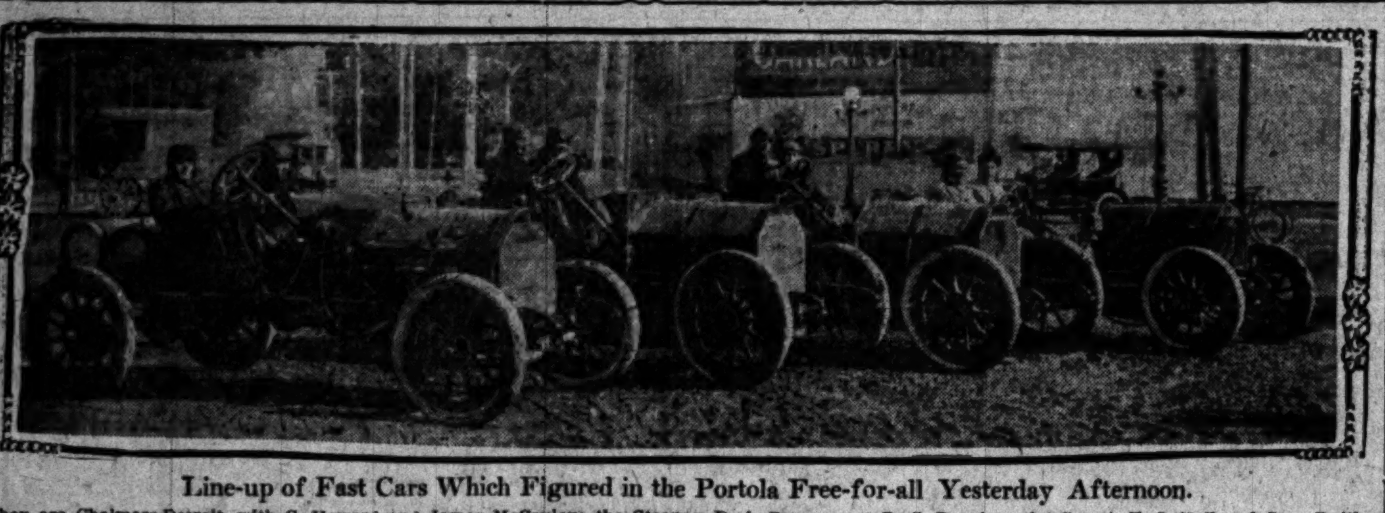
AUTO DEALERS WORLD BEATERS.

Los Angeles has the largest automobile dealers' association in the world. By the addition of three firms in the last week a total of forty members was reached. It is necessary to secure twenty-one members at a meeting to get a quorum.

President Ralph Hamlin yesterday stated that the association now leads all other automobile bodies of the kind. The Automobile Dealers' Association of Southern California is incorporated.

The directors are Ralph Hamlin, president; Earle C. Anthony, vice-president; J. S. Conwell, secretary; W. K. Cowan, treasurer; William E. Bush, Robert Atkinson and Don Lee. These men form the Executive Committee, which meets each week to settle matters of business. All questions are decided at the general meeting of the association once a month.

There is a question now before the association to restrict the membership. The body is becoming too large, say a number of the older dealers. This matter will be brought up at the next meeting, and forty may be the limit of membership.



Line-up of Fast Cars Which Figured in the Portola Free-for-all Yesterday Afternoon.

They are Chalmers-Detroit, with C. Howard and James McCauley; the Stearns, D. A. Bonney and R. C. Douglas; the Comet, E. J. Hall and Sam Smith; and the Knox, with Frank Free and Joe Robinson. The cars are on the Alameda turnpike.

WORLD RECORDS SMASHED.

OLDFIELD BEATS ROBERTSON IN ATLANTA SPEEDWAY DASH.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ATLANTA (Ga.) Oct. 23.—Barney Oldfield, in his Benz, made five miles in 3m., 52 2-5s. on the new Atlanta Speedway today, beating his own record at Indianapolis by nearly nineteen seconds, and establishing a new world mark.

Oldfield's remarkable drive followed a record-breaking drive of George Robertson in a big Simplex car, who reeled off five miles in the remarkable time of 3m., 59 4-5s. He then made a mile in 46s.

Robertson's time clipped 11 seconds off the record made at Indianapolis by Barney Oldfield, in a Benz, when he drove five miles in 4m., 11 3-5s.

Robertson then made two miles in 1m., 34s. flat.

In the ten-mile event, Robertson, Basle and Chiquot were entered. Robertson won; time, 8m., 21 1-5s. Basle did not finish.

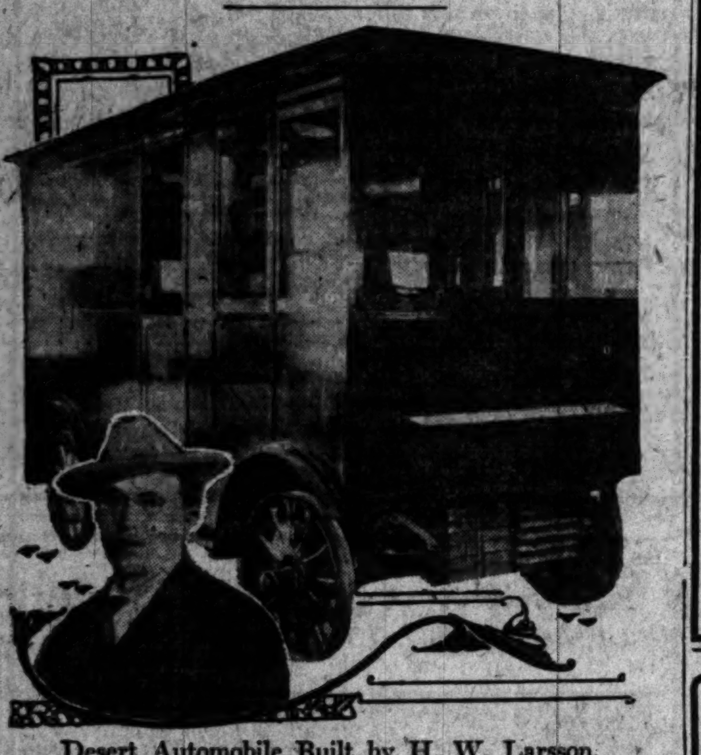
PROSPECTOR BUILDS NOVEL DESERT MOTOR CAR PALACE.



Desert Automobile Built by H. W. Larsson, who will leave soon for a prospecting trip in Death Valley. The car carries forty gallons of gasoline and its interior is finished like a Pullman railroad coach. Below is Mr. Larsson.

AN AUTOMOBILE desert palace car has just been completed in this city by H. W. Larsson, a mining engineer who has passed years in prospecting. The desert car is built like a Pullman and has every facility for the comfort of the occupants.

Sand storms will have no terrors for Larsson. He can close the shutters tightly and go to sleep until the storm blows over. He can stop anywhere that darkness overtakes him, without fear of molestation. The car is as snug as the drawing-room of the finest railroad train.

Built-in buffets, comfortable beds, a table, chairs, reading lamp, looking-glass and toilet articles are only a few of the conveniences of this practical automobile builder, who has incorporated his ideas into the car, which he expects will take him many miles over the sands.

The machine has taken a year to build and has cost $5000. It has a two-cycle air-cooled motor, with a double friction drive and has no differential. Larsson can carry forty gallons of gasoline, twenty-five gallons of oil and forty gallons of water.

Larsson will be accompanied by his wife on his tour of the prospecting regions. He expects to leave for Death Valley in December. He also has an assay outfit, with which he can test every "lead" and ascertain whether it will pay to work his findings.

The desert car is unlike anything that has ever been made in the automobile line. It is about the size of an ordinary 10x16 room. The wheels will take the regular wagon tracks and the car can be driven from inside.

One of the features of the car is the dainty kitchenette, in which every convenience for the housewife has been installed. There is a china closet, a place for stove and cooking utensils, a gas cooker and a fireless heater. Water is drawn into the car by siphon.

The front of the car is inclosed in plate glass. It has a wheel base of 108 inches.

This complete machine is equipped with a prospecting and assay outfit.

The old way of pulverizing rock with a mortar seemed too slow. The burner and crusher are mounted on a platform with a counter shaft, to which the power from the engine is applied.

This miniature outfit will reduce a four ounce sample of hard rock to 100 mesh in two minutes. By hand this would take twenty minutes of hard work. When not in use, the outfit is placed inside the car.

High Taxes in Great Britain.

"Americans would make a tremendous roar if they had to pay taxes as they do in England," said Mr. Arthur B. Hines, a San Francisco lawyer, who has just returned from abroad.

"The English government catches you over there on pretty nearly everything—telegrams, bills of sales, receipts, due bills, notes of hand, all carry a stamp tax such as was in force in the United States during the Spanish War.

A written agreement or contract is void if the stamp is lacking. The Britons grumble constantly about the income tax, which is now a shilling on the pound, or 5 per cent. of a man's annual revenues.

Heavy as are the taxes, the new fiscal scheme, as seen in the budget, contemplates rasing them, and I must say that public opinion favors the idea, for it will be the rich landed owners who will feel the new tax. Hitherto their vast estates have contributed nothing to the support of the government, but it seems that they will not be allowed to escape their share in the future."

Difficulties of English Language.

A class of German students was studying the English language. Schmitz was called to his feet by the professor.

"Conjugate 'to have' in the sentence, 'I have a gold mine,'" the professor ordered.

Schmitz proceeded:

"I haff a golt mine, du hast a golt dein, he hass a golt hiss. Ve, you or dey haff a golt our, yours, or deirs, as de case may be."—[Cassell's Saturday Journal.

OAKLAND AUTO RACES.

broke a world's record with the Apperson "Jackrabbit" at Santa Monica; Harry Michener, at the wheel of the Lozier, with which he has won a number of notable races in the East; Charles Soules, who has made a name for himself on road and track in the East, at the wheel of the Stearns, and Jack Fleming, the well-known local driver of the Pope-Hartford.

GREAT CROWD.

Several hours before the cars came from their camps, thousands of persons were gathered about the course.

Many tents were erected along the route the racers took, and hundreds of people passed the night in these in order to get places near the finish.

Eight companies of militia reported for guard duty before the start was made, and the course was carefully patrolled.

Just before the Maxwell, the first car to start, entered upon the race, the withdrawal of the Lexington and Rochet-Schneider entries was announced. The latter car broke its crank shaft during a trial burst of speed last night. The Lexington failed to arrive in time for the race.

The Sunset, second to start, blew out a tire 300 yards from the mark, and two other cars met with similar trouble.

There was considerable confusion over the figuring of official time. The timers were far behind in the early laps of the race.

Thomas Flyer

A Car Built for Conservative People

For you, who wish to take no chances with new, [illegible] "improvements—"

For you, who wish to waste no money on a manufacturer's experiments—

We have built the new Model "M" of the Thomas Flyer—a car for conservative people—designed on eminently [illegible] and sane lines.

For although we have embodied in it the newest ideas, you pay for no experiments. You take no risks.

Each improvement we made had first to undergo years of the most trying tests, before we adopted it—offered it to you.

Thus, in the new model "M," we have incorporated the much-talked-of "long stroke" engine.

For two years our designers studied it—tested it—comparing the ideas of Europe's foremost designers with theirs.

And only when we were fully satisfied of its superiority, did we adopt it.

Gets All the Power

Yet see what it means to you.

With a bore of 4 1-4 inches and a stroke of 5½, its A.L.A.M. rating is 42.8 H.P. On test, it actually develops over 60 H.P.

More than that, where the short stroke engine loses much of its power through the exhaust valve, the Model "M" engine gets all the power possible from the fuel consumed.

And there is another saving in the wear on the engine. For to make 30 miles an hour, the short stroke engine must revolve 37 per cent. faster a minute than a "long stroke" engine of the same bore.

Less Wear—Less Repairs

So there is 37 per cent. more jar—with the short stroke type—on the piston-pin, on the crank-shaft, on the engine itself.

And you can see for yourself which is the more powerful—which will last longer—which will cost you less.

Yet these are the advantages we refused to offer you, until we had proved them to our own satisfaction.

A Silent Car.

So, too, with our transmission, with every other detail of the new Thomas Flyer.

For example, we spent months seeking to make the engine smooth-running and silent. We placed the inserts in the valve plungers—reduced the valve clearance—equalized the compression spaces in the cylinders.

Simply to give you a car you can depend on, a tried and proved car, and one with the utmost [illegible] flexibility and comfort.

Please See This Car

Before you buy any car, please come to our show rooms and see the new Model "M." Note its graceful style, its exquisite beauty of design. Let us demonstrate its countless superiorities. Once you have seen it, we gladly leave the decision to you.

The car you want is here. Phone us for demonstration.

MISS HOTCHKISS LOSES TO MAY.

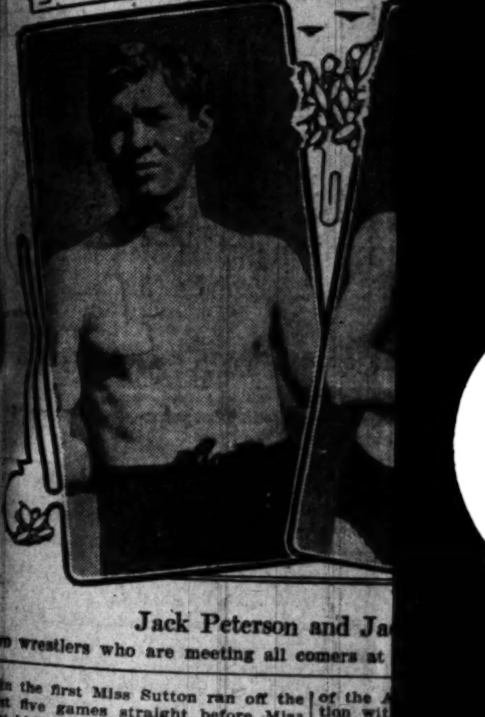
WONDERFUL SUTTON GIRL TRIMS NATIONAL CHAMPION.

Takes Every Set in Tennis Contest in Easy Fashion—Sisters Glerence and Mrs. Bruce Lose in Ladies' Doubles—Brown and Simp Sinsabaugh Beat Hardy and Driscoll.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss May Sutton, champion of the world, easily defeated Miss Hazel Hotchkiss, the present national champion in the feature match of the Portola tennis tournament on the courts in Golden Gate Park this afternoon.

In so doing Miss Sutton gave a wonderful exhibition of tennis. There was nothing particularly brilliant about her play but her accuracy and steadiness proved entirely too much for her clever opponent and at no time did Miss Hotchkiss have a chance to win even a set.



Jack Peterson and Ja

two wrestlers who are meeting all comers at

In the first Miss Sutton ran off the first five games straight before Miss Hotchkiss managed to win a game. The sixth game was the only one Miss Hotchkiss won during the set.

The second set was far more interesting than the first. Miss Sutton took the first three games and then Miss Hotchkiss created some little surprise by winning three straight games. Each player took one of the next two games, making the score 4-4. Then Miss Sutton again took the lead at 5-4 and finally won the set 6-4.

Miss Hotchkiss practically defeated herself in this match. Her errors were numerous, while those of Miss Sutton were few and far between. As a matter of fact, Miss Sutton made only three or four errors during the course of the match. She had her long forehand drive working in splendid shape and passed Miss Hotchkiss repeatedly with it at the net.

Miss Hotchkiss played the more brilliant tennis of the two, but she missed many more of these brilliant strokes than she made. As a result of the match there can be no further doubt regarding the question of supremacy between Miss Hotchkiss and Miss Sutton.

The remainder of the exhibition matches played during the day proved interesting. In the morning Miss Golda Myer and Miss Hazel Hotchkiss defeated Mrs. Bruce and Miss Florence Sutton in a match which was replete with fast and brilliant plays. The local girls succeeded in taking two straight sets.

Another feature of the tournament was the match between the champions, Dr. Sumner Hardy and Thomas Driscoll and Nat Browne and Simpson Sinsabaugh of Los Angeles. Hardy and Driscoll showed much of their old-time form in the early part of the match but they tired toward the end and Browne and Sinsabaugh won the last two sets rather easily.

The scores of the day's play follow: Strachan brothers beat Charles Rodgers and W. Johnston, 3-6, 8-6, 8-6. Miss Hazel Hotchkiss and Miss Golda Myers beat Miss Florence Sutton and Mrs. Bruce, 8-6, 6-3. Charles Foley and R. G. Hunt beat George Janes and Percy Murdock, 6-4, 6-2. Nat Browne and S. M. Sinsabaugh beat Dr. Sumner Hardy and Thomas Driscoll, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3. Miss May Sutton beat Miss Hazel Hotchkiss, 6-1, 6-4. George Janes beat Nat Browne, 6-4, 6-2.

JOHNSON AGAINST LOWE.

Lightweight Offers to Throw Featherweight Three Times Within the Hour at Chutes.

Fred Johnson and Jack Lowe expect to wrestle at Chutes Park this afternoon. Lowe's weight is 126, while Johnson strips at 135.

Last Sunday these two men wrestled to a tie, with one fall apiece, the third bout being stopped by the bell. This Sunday, Johnson proposes to throw Lowe three times in an hour.

Jack Peterson issues a challenge to any 145 to 154-pound wrestler. Eu- [illegible] Traveller is wrestling all comers at a local theater this week.

FROWN ON THIEVES.

EL PASO CITIZENS OPPOSE THE RACE-TRACK GAMBLERS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO (Tex.) Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Augmented by the people of El Paso the international reform bureau with headquarters in Washington has started a crusade to have the race track concession granted in Juarez, Mexico, revoked.

Construction on the Juarez race track is well under way, but the crusaders will follow the plan of the Californians in driving the track from Tia Juana, just across the border from San Diego.

A communication will be addressed to the State department at Washington together with a petition signed by business men of El Paso to the effect that race track gambling is obnoxious to them and that its conduct in Mexico near the border is a subterfuge to evade the American law. Before the opening of the Juarez races in December, it is expected the crusade will be well under way.

The reform league, which was organized in 1895, is superintended by Rev. William Crafts.

Similar action to that outlined against the Juarez Jockey Club will be taken against the operation on tracks in Mexico opposite Brownsvile and Eagle Pass, Tex. Senator Bailey, of Texas has promised to give the matter consideration and the opponents of race-track gambling confidently expect to rid the border cities of the menace by having Mexico revoke the concession as it did at Tia Juana.

MISS HOTCHKISS LOSES TO MAY.

WONDERFUL SUTTON GIRL TRIMS NATIONAL CHAMPION.

Takes Every Set in Tennis Contest in Easy Fashion—Sisters Glorence and Mrs. Bruce Lose in Ladies' Doubles—Brown and Simp Sinsabaugh Beat Hardy and Driscoll.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss May Sutton, champion of the world, easily defeated Miss Hazel Hotchkiss, the present national champion in the feature match of the Portola tennis tournament on the courts in Golden Gate Park this afternoon.

In so doing Miss Sutton gave a wonderful exhibition of tennis. There was nothing particularly brilliant about her play but her accuracy and steadiness proved entirely too much for her clever opponent and at no time did Miss Hotchkiss have a chance to win even a set.

In the first Miss Sutton ran off the first five games straight before Miss Hotchkiss managed to win a game. The sixth game was the only one Miss Hotchkiss won during the set.

The second set was far more interesting than the first. Miss Sutton took the first three games and then Miss Hotchkiss created some little surprise by winning three straight games. Each player took one of the next two games, making the score 4-4. Then Miss Sutton again took the lead at 5-4 and finally won the set 6-4.

Miss Hotchkiss practically defeated herself in this match. Her errors were numerous, while those of Miss Sutton were few and far between. As a matter of fact, Miss Sutton made only three or four errors during the course of the match. She had her long forehand drive working in splendid shape and passed Miss Hotchkiss repeatedly with it at the net.

Miss Hotchkiss played the more brilliant tennis of the two, but she missed many more of these brilliant strokes than she made. As a result of the match there can be no further doubt regarding the question of supremacy between Miss Hotchkiss and Miss Sutton.

The remainder of the exhibition games played during the day proved interesting. In the morning Miss Golda Myer and Miss Hazel Hotchkiss defeated Mrs. Bruce and Miss Florence Sutton in a match which was replete with fast and brilliant plays. The local girls succeeded in taking two straight sets.

Another feature of the tournament was the match between the champions, Sumner Hardy and Thomas Driscoll and Nat Browne and Simpson Sinsabaugh of Los Angeles. Hardy and Driscoll showed much of their old-time form in the early part of the match but they tired toward the end and Browne and Sinsabaugh won the last two sets rather easily.

The scores of the day's play follow: [illegible] brothers beat Charles [illegible] and W. Johnston, 3-6, 8-6, 8-6. Miss Hazel Hotchkiss and Miss Golda [illegible] beat Miss Florence Sutton and Mrs. Bruce, 8-6, 6-2. Charles Foley and R. G. Hunt beat George Janes and Percy Murdock, 6-4, 6-2. Nat Browne and S. M. Sinsabaugh beat Sumner Hardy and Thomas Driscoll, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3. Miss May Sutton beat Miss Hazel Hotchkiss, 6-1, 6-4. George Janes beat Nat Browne, 6-4.

DISQUALIFICATION FOR LIFE IS THE SENTENCE.

A.A.U. President Determined to Root Out Seceders from the Organization—Fight Started in Chicago Promises to Obtain Large Proportions This Winter.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The determination of President James E. Sullivan of the A.A.U. to exterminate the newly formed athletic body in the Middle West, which is antagonistic to the A.A.U., has met with approval of clubs affiliated with the A.A.U. Each of these organizations has pledged its support to the head of the A.A.U. and promised to uphold their chief.

To firmly impress upon his followers that he means to wipe out this threatening faction, Mr. Sullivan has ordered the head of the Central Association to disqualify for life the athlete or official of the A.A.U. who appears in connection with a meet governed by this outlaw body.

THE OTHER SIDE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Local seceders from the Amateur Athletic Union have evidently buckled on their armor for a battle royal with their former parent organization. Dr. Henry F. Kallenberg, president of the Amateur Athletic Federation, today issued a defi to the ultimatum of James E. Sullivan, national president of the A.A.U., reviewing the strength of the A.A.U. and the A.A.F., showing the advantage of the seceders over their former foster body so far as Chicago is concerned and declare that the local organizations are forever done with "the autocratic regime of the A.A.U."

Dr. Kallenberg, who was chosen to head the seceders, has given out a statement which, he claims, shows the waning power of the A.A.U.

"There are twenty States in the Union without a single A.A.U. club, but in all of these States are Y.M.C.A., high schools, colleges or playgrounds, and the like, with gymnasiums and athletic fields. In a number of these twenty States there are well-organized college and high school leagues and city federations.

"Less than two dozen individual colleges in the whole country are members of the A.A.U. There are, however, a few college leagues affiliated with the A.A.U. especially in the East and Far West (California.)"

TO TEST BALLOON TODAY.

Signal Corps and Aero Club Propose to Conduct Number of Observational Flights.

The lightest balloon that has ever been used in Southern California, with a capacity of 17,000 cubic feet, is to have a trying-out this afternoon at Chutes Park at 2 o'clock. The total weight of the bag, net and basket totals 275 pounds. This light weight is made possible by the light basket construction; the basket is largely made of network, with split bamboo slats for flooring, instead of the regular wickerwork.

If the balloon proves successful, it will be used for experimental work in ascertaining air strata conditions throughout the southern part of the State. This work will be in charge of the Signal Corps of the National Guard of this part of the State, which will have charge of the trials this afternoon, and of a committee from the Aëro Club of California.

George B. Harrison is conducting the first experiments. It is likely that he will not make the initial ascension, however, leaving that to a lighter man until the lifting capacity of the bag has been tested. "Daredevil" Colby will probably be the man in the basket during the trial ascent. For lifting power, the ordinary city illuminating gas is to be used, after having been "washed" chemically for the purpose.

There are forty-two Studebaker F. M.F.'s on the road at the present time, and due to the fact that shipments have been delayed by the railroad company, over half of this shipment will probably arrive the first of the coming week.

POOR CONTEST AT OCCIDENTAL.

TIGERS AND SANTA ANANS HOT UNDER THE COLLAR.

Weather Early in the Day Is Very Warm and American Style of Play Shown to Poor Advantage Before Stanford Visitors—Several Pretty Runs Negotiated.

Occidental 'varsity defeated the Orange Athletic Club, yesterday afternoon at Baer Park, 28 to 0.

The hot weather made the players listless and the game was marred by much fumbling, and weak tackling.

Capt. Collins scored the first touchdown on a short buck through tackle, after the Highlanders had steadily forced the ball down the field. Fred Thomson kicked goal.

On a 15-yard end run to goal Hopkins added another touchdown, Thomson again sending the ball over the bar. Landreth carried the leather across the goal line twice, both times on mass plays, and Thomson annexed five more points but missed on the goal kick. After that the score was decided.

Capt. Collins, Drury Wieman and Landreth got away with several long runs. Drury, particularly playing a strong, aggressive game.

The Occidental line was too heavy for the Orange men and the Highlanders invariably gained over mass plays.

Robertson played a steady, consistent game at full, and with a little more speed he should hold down the position next year.

Carpenter, the crack Orange end, got away with several clever, circling runs. Landreth played an even better game than he put up against the lawyers a week ago. His hard, fast work was largely responsible for the one-sided score.

Hopkins was given a trial at quarter. Although he fumbled several times his headwork was good.

In the second half, which was cut to twelve minutes, Occidental played six substitutes, which fact accounted in some measure for the ragged work.

The line-up:

BRITISH MEN BEATEN.

Lose Exciting Soccer Game by Small Score to California Players—Big Crowd Present.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Before a crowd that numbered at least 5000 persons at the Park Stadium today the California soccer players demonstrated their superiority over the stars of British Columbia, winning a clear-cut victory by two goals to one.

The game was the fastest exhibition of the round ball code ever seen in San Francisco, and was replete from start to finish with exciting incidents that roused the fans to a state of frenzy.

Both teams showed up well in defense, though the visitors played rather roughly and were penalized more frequently than the wearers of the "poppy" for fouling. The first half was largely fought in California's territory, but the home forwards showed up better in front of the goal, and established a lead of two goals in the first twenty minutes of the contest, through Downie and Welch.

Capt. Graham of the visitors scored with an express shot, but weak shooting lost them innumerable chances before the interval. Cruickshank was the chief offender in this respect, as he missed several times with an open goal.

The Californians woke up in the second half and the British Columbia defenders were given a busy time of it. A penalty against Rogers for fouling was taken by Bernard, but the best the local player could do was to hit the crossbar. McRitchie made a spectacular clearance of Hooper's penalty kick at the other end, five minutes from the call of time.

The line-up follows:

British Columbia.		California.
Beaney	goal	McRitchie
Hewitt	left back	Selkirk
Rogers	right back	Anderson
Graham	left half	Watson
Lock	center half	Grant
McLean	right half	Perkins
Robertson	outside left	Pike
Hooper	center forward	Aitken

SALT WATER TACKLES.

FOOTBALL ON THE SEASHORE LATEST IDEA FOR PRACTICE.

FOOTBALL practice on the sands by the ocean may become a regular part of the preliminary training for the gridiron candidates of the local colleges next fall. For two weeks the Redondo football team has been working out daily by the sea waves, and the novel stunt has proved so beneficial that adoption of similar practice methods by the coaches of the southern teams may ensue.

Preliminary practice at a cool resort by lake or in the woods is yearly undertaken by the teams of many of the larger universities of the East and Middle West. For a week or a fortnight prior to the opening of college the coach hustles his candidates to a near by water front, where they run through signal practice and acquire the elementary lessons in a period full of activity.

The bracing air of the lakeside tends to put lots of "pep" in the playing of the men, who accomplish more in a week under these favorable climatic conditions, than they would in twice the period on the home campus.

The salt air of the ocean is even more beneficial in its effect than are the lake breezes, for the effervescent brine seems to harden the human skin, and cannot be equaled as a nerve tonic.

The players can practice in bathing suits, and by playing in shallow water can tackle and fall in the surf without danger of injury. By practicing close to the breakers the men can dive into the salt water at intervals, and keep keyed to a lively pitch.

That local football teams would profit greatly by including in a seaside excursion for the players, is the opinion of those who have seen the work of the Redondo team. Heretofore, the season is far advanced before the candidates get even a fair knowledge of the rudiments of the game, and the big contests are upon the teams before the coaches have their men in any real shape to play.

The Redondo men are jubilant over their discovery, which is like an extension of the vacation.

The value of the local experiment should not be judged entirely, however, by the playing of the Redondo aggregation. Capt. Walton, a member of the Castaways Rugby squad, has gathered together only a fair team. Walton does not expect his candidates to make much of a showing this year. The boys are out for the sport, and will play perhaps but three or four games with athletic club teams.

Azusa Athletic Club will meet the beachcombers in the first game at Redondo next Saturday. Another contest is being arranged with the Orange Athletic Club, and St. Vincent's have been asked for a date. The schedule ends there, unless the team should go to San Diego for the sake of the trip.

Walton is the only man on the team who has played any kind of football, and his experience has been confined largely to the Rugby style. Freeth and Barton, the other two backs, are life guards who are strong athletes but who know little of the gridiron game. Crum is another life guard, who is fast but inexperienced.

Murphy at center is easily the biggest man on the team, weighing 260 pounds. Redeker and Bisbee are longshoremen who are aggressive and quite fast, but likewise lacking in extended knowledge of the game. Charlesworth is a wiry fellow who should make good at end. He is fast and seems to know some tricks about tackling. Woollacott, on the other end, is a light, active fellow who has played some on high school teams.

The players have been practicing daily along the beach, and follow each workout with a dip in the surf and a good rubdown. The men are in pretty good shape but will have to run a good deal to better their wind. The baseball field is being marked for football, and practice will be held on alternate days on the new field.

OVERRULED.

LAWYERS LOSE TO POMONANS.

PLACE KICK AND TOUCHDOWN CINCH VICTORY.

Barristers Unable to Hold Sagebrushers at Critical Moments. Parker and Shutt Score Points for Claremonters—McGregor Fractures Kneecap in Tussle.

Pomona, 9; U.S.C. Law, 3.

A sixty-five-yard run through a scattered field by Parker, right half of the Pomona team, practically won the game for the Claremont team at Fiesta Park yesterday afternoon. A place kick in the first half by Law School, and another in the second by the sagebrushers completed the scoring.

As far as playing ability is concerned, the teams were almost an even break, although the barristers had the advantage in weight. End runs and line smashing over center were the plays used most of the time, but neither team could gain consistently.

At the beginning of the game neither squad was able to make distance by line smashing, and for ten minutes of play the ball see-sawed across the center line. Alternately each team would get two downs without gaining any ground and then punt to its opponent.

Near the middle of the first half, Law School found a weak spot in its opponents' center and in four downs carried the ball from the Pomona forty to the twenty-yard line. A place kick was tried, but failed. Parker of Pomona then made a thirty-yard run through center. A forward pass was then tried by Pomona, but was caught in the center of the field by the local team. Law School then punted to the ten-yard line and on a fumble by the visitors, the lawyers regained the ball on their thirty-yard line. A place kick was then tried a second time, Selph sending the oval over the center of the bar for three points.

Law School kicked off, the ball being stopped by Pomona on the twenty-yard line and carried five yards. In a brilliant dash, Parker carried the ball through right guard for sixty-five yards before being downed. He again went through the line for a gain of ten yards, placing the ball ten feet from the goal. On three bucks the ball was carried over by Shutt. Valle kicked out, and Parker kicked the goal.

Pomona made its place kick early in the second half. The visitors kicked off, sending the ball to the twenty-yard line. Law School then tried the forward pass but did not gain anything. Selph punted and Pomona had the ball on the thirty-yard line. Ten yards was then gained by Pomona through the line and Parker made a pretty place kick.

LOTS OF PUNTING.

There was plenty of punting in the game by both teams. Pomona tried the forward pass several times with varying success. The local team tried the pass a few times but did not gain by it. The onside kick was tried a few times, but was usually blocked.

Toward the latter part of the second half, a gain of thirty-five yards was made by Law School on a run through center by McGregor. But a few minutes later in a general pile up McGregor was carried from the field with a fractured knee cap. Many of the other players received minor injuries. Cohn was taken sick during the intermission, caused by a blow in the stomach, and was carried to the dressing rooms, but he soon recovered enough to watch the finish of the contest.

Parker, who played right half for the visitors, was easily the star player of his team. He made the longest run in the contest and always seemed to tear through the line for a good gain when most needed. His kicking was also good, and he placed the ball with accuracy.

Miller played a good game at full for Pomona. There was plenty of punting in the game, and he sent the ball from 35 to 45 yards each time. Jennings made good interference and Valle and Shutt also did well.

Selph did most of the kicking for the Law School and was usually able to place the ball out of danger. He and Foss also did excellent work in breaking through their opponents' line. McGregor and Cohn starred until disabled.

The game was not started until nearly 3:30 o'clock, and much time was lost in squabbling over the decisions of the officials. During the latter part of the contest ten minutes was lost in disputing over a fumbled forward pass. It was nearly dark when the game was finished. Only a few students witnessed the contest.

DEFEATS SANTA MONICA.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WHITTIER, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Whittier High School won from Santa Monica High today at Whittier in a one-sided contest by the score of 8 to 3.

The heat was so intense that good football was out of the question, and straight bucks were impossible. Santa Monica only made their downs three times in the contest, but saved themselves from overwhelming defeat by good punting at critical moments.

Ballard and French made good gains on end runs, the former making a 35-yard run for a touchdown, after recovering a fumbled ball. Williams did good booting for the Beach Combers, making their only score by a drop kick from the 30-yard line. The following is the line-up:

SOCCER GAME TODAY.

Champion Thistle Team to Meet Rangers in Practice Contest at Fiesta Park.

The Thistle football eleven, soccer champions of Southern California for the last three years, are to play their first game of the season, at Fiesta Park, this afternoon, against the Rangers. Manager Sheddon has strengthened the team since last season, and a closely contested match is expected.

The game will be in the nature of a practice work out, to fit the new men of both teams into their position. The regular schedule of games has not yet been definitely decided upon, but will probably be settled within a couple of weeks. It is likely that the first of the regular games will be played three weeks from Sunday.

As yet only the three local teams of last season are in sight, the Los Angeles team, the Thistles and the Rangers. Now that the playgrounds have adopted the soccer game it is likely that it will become more prominent than last season, and additional soccer elevens will probably be organized.

Three new men will be seen in the Thistle line-up: Williamson, at right wing, an old man of the Rangers; Newman, left full, formery captain of the Winnipeg, Canada, eleven; and Watts, center half, a younger man who has had plenty of pracitce at the game both abroad and in Canada.

With these new members the Thistle team expects to make a hard fight to retain the championship honors for a fourth consecutive season. The team that plays today will be the regular Thistle line-up, with the exception of Shend, who takes the place of Wilcox until the latter's knee is in shape to allow him to resume play. This line-up will be: Burden, goal; Tom Higgins and Newman, full-backs; Carleton, Watts and Munro, halves; Williamson, Gorfunkle, McDougall, Buchan and Shand, forwards.

In the Ranger line-up there will be six new men; The two Burleigh brothers who will take center half and inside left; the Aitken brothers, who play left half and inside right; Buchanan, right half, and Welfare, right wing. This gives the Ranger eleven as follows: Jarvis, goal; Shepherd and J. Mitchell, full-backs; R. Aitken, C. Burleigh, and Buchanan, half-backs; A. Mitchell, Welfare, T. Atken, Lincoln, and J. Burleigh, forwards.

John McComb will referee the game.

The new 1910 Cadillac "thirty" came Monday. The car is larger than last year's model, and is handsomer in appearance. Twelve of the cars were sold the last week by the Lee Motor Car Company. A Cadillac demonstrator will be placed in Pasadena, Riverside and Pomona.

CHANCE FOR AMERICA.

May Secure Honor of Two Important Aerial Events—Great Credit Due Mix and Curtiss.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Cortland Field Bishop, president of the Aëro Club of America, arrived here today from Europe. He said he thought America had an excellent opportunity to secure the two big aërial contests for next year, those for heavier-than-air machines and lighter-than-air machines.

"The work of Curtiss and Mix on the other side reflected great credit on America," said Bishop. "Curtiss's failure to fly in New York during the Hudson-Fulton celebration should not be held against him, when the conditions are considered."

Bishop said he considered Lambert's flight around the Eiffel Tower a much greater feat than the aërial crossing of the English Channel.

JAP SAILORS WIN.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A great crowd of Japanese cheered the victory of their sailors in the international cutter race this afternoon at China Basin.

The race was a spirited and close affair, in which the American Naval Reserve lads, not yet seamen, were barely defeated by their older and more experienced rivals.

What might have happened had the seasoned veterans of the American navy taken part was demonstrated by the racing crew of the St. Louis, which drove down the course in front of the actual racers, and swept across the line far ahead.

This same St. Louis crew expected to take part in the race, and even went to the starting line, but Japanese officers objected strongly to their light boat, claiming it was not a service cutter, and the officials finally barred the American men-of-warsmen from the race.

[illegible] "Jackson" has proven its worth under every condition and practical test. It [illegible] expectations in the past—it will not disappoint in the future. From every [illegible] view it is the best car that can be built for the money, and represents to the [illegible] value for his outlay.

[illegible] "Jackson" has always been a car of individual design, graceful lines, classy and [illegible] Built under competent personal inspection, entirely in our own factory, its [illegible] established by seven years of satisfactory service.

[illegible] 1910 "Jackson" retains all the distinctive features embodied in previous models [illegible] served to make and maintain its prestige: Overhead Cam Shaft, Valves [illegible] at 45 Degrees on opposite sides of cylinder heads; self-contained Oiling system, [illegible] run in oil, Three-Speed Selective Transmissions with Ball Bearings for [illegible] All Cars are equipped with Splitdorf Magneto, Schebler Carburetor, and [illegible]Syphon water circulation. Greater reliability cannot be found in any car, even [illegible] higher price.

FAR IN THE LEAD

The facts of the great 300-mile automobile race on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway last August, are familiar history. In this race for the Wheeler & Schebler trophy, the most valuable prize ever offered in a similar contest, a "Jackson" stock chassis was far in the lead when the race was stopped, at the completion of 235 miles. The "Jackson" "showed the way" to many cars of greater rated power and much higher price, and, during the run made 100 miles in 96 minutes.

But, we don't build "racers"; simply safe, reliable, economical and serviceable cars.

UNIT "POWER PLANT." "Jackson" Models "30," "40" and "50" are designed with Unit Power Plant. This means that the Motor, Fly Wheel and Transmission are all encased in one "housing." Keeps in the oil, keeps out the dirt.

All "Jackson" cars are hung on full Elliptic Springs, front and rear. Frame is dropped two inches in the rear with a corresponding drop in the front axles. This allows for ample Spring Action. The car is carried close to the ground, while the actual axle road clearance has been materially increased.

With full Elliptic Springs, front and rear, the "Jackson" covers rough roads at high speed, with less jolting and consequent strain on the chassis—pleasant for the rider—economical for the owner.

Get your order in promptly—our output for 1910 is limited to 5,000 cars.

The 1910 "Jacksons" are now ready for delivery—make an appointment with your "Jackson" dealer for a demonstration.

The 1910 models are complete in every detail.

The Cartercar factory, which was also visited, will make 2500 machines this season, according to Woolwine. This concern is also enlarging its capacity. New buildings are to be erected, and the Cartercar factory expects to double its output the coming year.

Business conditions looked particularly good to the local autoist during his three weeks' absence. He found unusual prosperity everywhere. Every autoist wanted to know of conditions in Los Angeles, and there was keen interest in what is being done along auto lines in the West.

One of the impressive features of the trip, says Woolwine, was the desire of the automobile manufacturers to supply the trade in the West. There is great consideration, says Woolwine, for the western autoist who comes with a definite plan, and he is given every chance possible to secure cars.

BURRIS TROPHY.

Stearns Gets Record Dash, But Slaughter Fails to Secure the Cup.

It is one thing to win the Burris cup and another to hold it. The Stearns won the cup more than a week ago, but to date Coney C. Slaughter has not been able to secure the trophy. The original holders, who took the cup from the Columbia, insist on keeping the mug in spite of an order signed by Oscar Burris, who was one of the judges on the Stearns run.

On Monday morning the Stearns, owned by Jack Lankershim and driven by Harold Stone, smashed all existing records from Redlands to the Burris marble quarries, twenty miles up Mill Creek Cañon. On a trial heat Sunday morning the fast cars came within forty seconds of breaking the record of the Royal, which was driven by Al Livingston. The following day, with judges and officials and according to the rules governing the cup contest, the Stearns won the trophy. Mountain & Carigan hold the cup and have refused to give it to Slaughter. They maintain that the telephone connections were defective. The Stearns holds the record, but not the trophy. Slaughter threatens to take legal proceedings to secure the cup if it is not turned over to him tomorrow.

STYLE AND BEAUTY.

BIG STODDARD HITS THE MARK.

NINETEEN-TEN FIFTY HORSE-POWER CAR HERE.

Church Decides to Hold Auto Show of His Own in Spacious Olive-street Garage—Stylish Cars Attract Many. Soon Will Arrive in Numbers for Novel Display.

The Stoddard-Dayton "fifty" reached this city the early part of last week. The handsome car measures up to every promise made by the manufacturers who announced the car was to be one of the sensations among the new 1910 models. The straight line body makes a hit with those who are after a high-class car.

Built on speed lines the designers have not lost any of the original ideas of symmetry. The car is pleasing in appearance, has plenty of power, and is as stylish as ever. The 1910 motor hums in a comfortable way as the car is sent over the streets. The Stoddard can be throttled down on the "high" to a speed which will conform with every city ordinance.

Norman W. Church, Coast representative for the Stoddard, is more than pleased with the latest car. He says all the promises of the manufacturers have been fulfilled and he is preparing for a stirring campaign.

Church has jumped into the midst of one of the busiest months of the season when the selling campaign is on in earnest. He has waited weeks for the new car. Prospects have been satisfied to wait, however, and at last the car is here. Church says he expects to make the record of other years look poor beside the mark he is to establish this season.

Fred Flint, manager of the local branch, is also enthusiastic. He has cleared the big showroom for action and this week the Stoddards will be on display on the tiled floor. A shipment is expected the latter part of next week and each car is sold.

There is every facility at the Stoddard for handling the new cars. The garage is one of the largest in the city and the showroom is spacious enough to accommodate a half-dozen cars. The big Stoddards are to be given the places of honor in the display.

Neither Church nor Flint are in favor of an automobile show. The arrival of the new Stoddards has given them another idea, however. The big showroom at Tenth and Olive could be turned into a motor car display that could be made particularly attractive. All of the Stoddard models, and the Baker electric cars could be grouped attractively and shown to advantage on the spacious floor.

The Stoddard display at the last local auto show was one of the handsomest in the Hamburger building. Church took a prominent part in the show and entertained the officials with a banquet that was unique. This time the Stoddard show will be held at Stoddard headquarters and those who are anxious to see the new cars will be given a chance to inspect them.

Now that the Stoddards are beginning to arrive in numbers every one of the models can be shown and with tasteful decorations the auto show will be one of the attractions of auto row.

ELECTRICAL HARE-COURSING.

Four-Town Circuit in Arizona to Open Winter Season at Tucson Thanksgiving Day.

O. B. Smith, inventor of the new electrical hare-coursing apparatus, has been arranging in this city for the manufacture of apparatus for the circuit of four courses to be opened in Arizona.

Thomas A. Borton is associated with Smith in the enterprize.

Tuscon, Phoenix, Prescott and Globe are the cities in the Arizona circuit. Quarter-mile tracks are being built in each city, and the electrical apparatus installed. The Thanksgiving opening will be held at the Tucson track.

With the placing of the contracts for the apparatus in this city, local followers of the sport hope to see sufficient interest aroused to warrant the installment of a southern California circuit in the near future.

WOMEN TENNIS CLUB.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Oct. 22.—A women's tennis club, similar to the men's organization, is to be formed next week. Any "co-ed" who has played in an intercollegiate or interclass tournament will be eligible for membership. The following-named students will form the charter membership: Sara Bundy, '10, Los Angeles; Hannah Thompson, '10, Pasadena; Florence Burrell, '10, Oakland; Edna Hayward, '10, San Carlos; Marguerite Knox, '11, Los Angeles; Ruth Overman, '12, Santa Barbara; Ruth Hutchinson, '12, Los Angeles. The Tennis Committee that is arranging for the organization of the club intends to have the sport promoted on a large scale among the women students.

EIGHT JUMPERS FALL.

EXCITEMENT AT BALTIMORE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BALTIMORE, Oct. 23.—The fall meeting of the Maryland Jockey Club today opened most auspiciously with a large attendance and good sport. The Inaugural Steeplechase, the feature of the day's card, was a disastrous affair, eight of the field of ten going down. Three mounted and finished. The event went to Stalialand.

The Baltimore club cup, an affair for gentlemen jockeys, went to Bobbin Taylor on Jolly, in a pretty race. Jack Atkin, the crack sprinter, made his appearance in the opening event and equalled the track record for six furlongs.

Vermont Blanked.

ITHACA (N. Y.) Oct. 23.—Cornell defeated Vermont, 16 to 0, today, by the use of open football tactics. In spite of a drizzle which continued throughout the game, the forward pass and the triple pass were used accurately and effectively.

TABLES TURNED.

ANGELS SCORE TRIPLE STEAL.

Delmas Pilfers Home and Others Advance.

Sixteen Hits Made Off Lanky Oakland Heaver.

Thorsen Holds the Oaks from Start to Finish.

Los Angeles, 9; Oakland, 2.

Los Angeles made sixteen hits and five stolen bases off Nelson and Lewis in the game at Chutes Park yesterday, while the best that the Oaks could do was five swats off Thorsen. The locals simply soused Nelson all around the lot, and when they made the effort all kinds of runs rolled across the plate.

The big feature of the game was a triple steal in the second inning, made by the local players. Jud Smith led off by fouling to Lewis, and then Delmas hit a bounding single to second base, and beat it to first base. Bush Smith flew to left, and Thorsen hit past third base, Hosp filling the bases with a perfect bunt hit toward third. Then while Nelson was winding up to pitch Delmas stole to the plate on the throw, Thorsen going to third and Hosp to second.

In the third inning, with no one out, three successive bunts by Ross, Beall and Wheeler filled the bases, and after grabbing Wheeler's bunt, Nelson threw it wildly past first base to the bleachers, Ross and Beall scoring, and Wheeler running to third. This one easily scored on Bush Smith's infield bouncing single.

Three more runs came for the locals in the seventh inning on three passes, a passed ball, two singles and a double steal, Jud Smith stealing to the plate from third base as H. Smith ran to second. In the eighth for the locals, with two out, Ross's single, Beall's pass and Wheeler's double scored two more runs.

Thorsen had the Oaks jumping sideways for seven innings, and then in the eighth, with two out, Christian and Hogan were passed. Cameron doubled over first base, and Kelly singled to right, Oakland making its only two runs here.

Hosp played right field for the Angels, and slapped the ball for two singles and a double; Ross hit four singles in four times at bat, and Wheeler two singles and a double in five times up. Wheeler's single in the seventh inning was a foul bounce toward third base that hit a pebble and rolled into fair ground.

The big fielding stunt of the game was Kelly's fine running scoop catch back of second base of Godwin's short fly to center, and on this Kelly had no trouble in doubling Hosp at second, the latter having gone to third on what looked like a sure hit for Godwin.

There were no squabbling with the umpire, and very little wrangling, and the game showed nothing out of the ordinary.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—San Francisco cinched its hold on the Coast League pennant this afternoon by defeating Portland, 3 to 0.

Willis for San Francisco was invincible on the slab, granting only three hits and one base on balls, while Carson, who finished the game after half an inning had been pitched by Harkness, was hit at opportune moments, five men reaching first to bring in three tallies.

EASY FOR VERNON.

SENATORS BELOW PAR.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Vernon had little difficulty in pulling away from the energyless Senators today, winning the game by a score of 3 to 1. But a handful of fans were present to see the locals drop the fourth game of five played to the tail-enders.

Hitt had the better of the pitching today, but it was ragged field work that put two of the three Vernon runs over the plate. Coy drove a clean home run over Gandil's head in the fifth and scored half the earned runs in the game.

Sacramento made the other run in the second, tying the score, Vernon having made its first tally in the first half of the same inning. Incidentally Hogan filed a protest of the game with the scorer after calling Umpire Toman a "bum" and several other choice names.

In the second when Stovall scored on an overthrow of first base and McCay was nabbed at the plate, Hogan contended the ball had gone outside of the fence and each man was entitled to only two bases, according to ground rules. He wanted to send McCay back to second and Stovall to third.

Graham failed to see any opportunity for gain in the mix-up so only laughed while Toman and Hogan made each other ridiculous. Myers and Raymer were responsible for the two runs which gave Vernon a margin, being scored.

The sun, which shines down on third base direct in the afternoon, also had something to do with the play. But most credit is due two Vernon base runners, Coy and Stovall, who drew the wild throws by attempting to take two bases on infield drives. The stick work of Coy was the contest's feature.

Hitt was steady throughout the game, but more so in the latter part. Vernon touched Baum regularly from the beginning, but was unable to make more than one run, and that on a miscue, when four hits were crowded into the sixth.

When Coy clouted to right in the second he started the run-getting. Eagan sacrificed him and it took quick work by Darringer to put the veteran out at first. In the meantime Coy started for third, and Myers hurled the sphere high, allowing the runner to come home.

Sacramento, however, brought the argument back to an even break in the next half. Gandil singled to deep left and was sent to second on Zamlock's sacrifice. Raymer was out and Doyle singled to center, scoring the only local run.

In the fifth Coy took Gandil by surprise and drove the ball over his head into deep center field for a clean circuit. Stovall opened the sixth with a right field single. McCay bunted and beat it out. On the play, Stovall started for third and Raymer threw high to Darringer, allowing Stovall to score. Doyle recovered the ball and threw McCay out at the plate. This play caused the protest to be filed.

The score:

SAN DIEGO TEAM.

FAST MEN ARE SIGNED.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, Oct. 23.—Headed by Myers and Marquard, the famous battery of the New York Giants, Manager Palmer has signed a formidable array of talent to represent San Diego in the California Winter League. While Myers and Marquard will not be here until a few weeks after the opening of the regular season by reason of their being members of the All-National team touring the West, he has secured Catcher Owens of Chicago, as a change backstop. Another noted player he hopes to get is Larry Doyle, second baseman of the New York Giants.

Following is a complete list of players signed for San Diego:

Catchers—Hugh Kallackey, Tacoma, Northwestern; Jack Myers, New York Giants; Albert Owens, Chicago White Sox.

Pitchers—"Rube" Carson, Portland, Pacific Coast; "Rube" Marquard, New York Giants; Jesse Stoval, Vernon, Pacific Coast; Walter Slagle, Indianapolis, American Association.

Infielders—George Stoval, Cleveland, American; "Pug" Bennett, Seattle, Northwestern; Tom Downie, Tacoma, Northwestern; Joe McCarthy, Vancouver, Northwestern; Larry Doyle, New York Giants.

Outfielders—"Chick" Autry, Boston, Nationals; Sam Stovall, Sioux City, Western League; John Chadbourne, Indianapolis, American Association.

MINORS GET BUSY.

Are to Begin Work in Chicago in the Near Future on Ball Park for American Association.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—Ground will be broken soon for a new steel and cement grand stand on the proposed American Association baseball site at Sheffield avenue and Addison street. The property was bought last spring in the name of Charles S. Havener, owner of the Milwaukee American Association baseball club.

Mr. Havener acted as agent in the transaction and although being the majority owner, other association magnates were interested in the deal, among the rest being M. E. Cantillon of the Minneapolis club and his brother, Joe, late manager of the Washington team.

Among those well posted on the affairs of the association magnates, it was said yesterday that the occupancy of the grounds does not necessitate an immediate entrance of a league in Chicago society, although that is the ultimate object of the promoters.

The real plan back of the enterprise, it was said yesterday, was to bring John Kling, the former Cub catcher, here from Kansas City to be at the head of a semi-professional team in which case the city league would be reorganized or else enlarged to eight clubs.

Seals Win Pennant.

The San Francisco team won the Pacific Coast League pennant for 1909 yesterday by defeating the Portland team, 3 to 0. This means that while the Seals have nine games yet to play before the season ends next Sunday afternoon, they cannot lose the pennant, for neither the Portland nor Los Angeles teams, which play here this week, can reach the Seals.

Cuba for Detroit.

DETROIT (Mich.) Oct. 23.—With Outfielder Matty McIntyre in the role of manager, a dozen members of the Detroit American League team left here today for Havana, Cuba, to meet two Cuban ball teams in a series of twelve games.

BATTING AND FIELDING IN COAST LEAGUE.

RESTING.

STARS OF ALL BALL LEAGUES ARE TO PLAY ON THE DESERT.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

EL CENTRO, Oct. 23.—Winter baseball on the desert is to be the real thing this year. With a half dozen stars from the major leagues, some of the best men in the Pacific Coast League and others from Middle Western leagues, the Colorado Desert League is bound to attract the attention of baseball men everywhere.

The league this year will consist of Brawley, Imperial, El Centro, Holtville and Calexico, in California, and Yuma, in Arizona. There has been for three years a strong rivalry between Yuma and the Imperial Valley towns in baseball, and the Arizona management is rounding up a nine to make it hot for the teams in this section.

Yuma will have the veteran George Wheeler as captain and manager. Wheeler's first move was to sign Nagle of Los Angeles, and the two have their heads together, making up the rest of the team.

Calexico will have Berry McCormick for captain, and have engaged Walter Smith, formerly of the University of California, for third base; Talland, Anderson and other fast ones for the infield. The battery has not yet been announced, but it is understood that negotiations looking to the engagement of Krause are in progress.

Vance and Brown will do the battery work for El Centro, while Easterly and Harkins will constitute a secondary battery. Easterly, who has been making good as a catcher and hard hitter with Cleveland, will hold down the initial bag most of the time, and Harkins of Vernon, when not pitching, will play the outfield. McClelland, formerly of Los Angeles, will play third base, and a hard-hitting first baseman from the Coast League will probably be signed within a few days.

Imperial is figuring on having the crack pitcher of the league, as Scott, who played here last year, and who has been making good on the Chicago White Sox, will probably come, bringing with him one of the Chicago catchers. The Broadbent brothers have signed with Imperial, and two fast infielders from the Coast League.

Holtville has the best local baseball team in the valley, and with Browning, Berry and Zeider of the San Francisco team, the East Side fans have big hopes of capturing the pennant. Berry and Zeider have signed, and if Browning is unable to come big Jim Wiggs of the Oakland team will do the twirling.

The season will open on November 6 and will continue until February 22, when the final games will be played, provided additional games are not needed to decide the winner.

The desert league was first organized two years ago, when the five valley towns prepared to play a series of twenty games. El Centro, with the help of a few outside men, won nine of the first ten games, and captured the cup. Last winter more professional players were imported, and the quality of the baseball was much improved. Calexico and Holtville ran a neck-and-neck race for first place; Holtville claimed the pennant, but Calexico has it figured out that the season ended in a tie.

This year the managers of the various teams have organized into a league, with rules binding on both players and managers; one of the most important rules is that which gives the umpires absolute control on the field with authority to fine players, the management of the team to be in such cases responsible for the payment of the fines. Jimmy Toman and some other Coast League umpire whom he will bring with him will do practically all the umpiring, as with one or two exceptions only two games will be played on the same day.

Every town will begin the season with a strong professional team, and it is expected that soon after the first game additional players will be signed. Several major league stars, in addition to those named, are now corresponding with local managers, and it is possible that the season will wind up with the fastest aggregations of ball players ever gotten together for winter baseball.

Crown Hill on Top.

The Crown Hill baseball team defeated the Jefferson Street Athletic Club team yesterday afternoon by the score of 21 to 3, on the Diamond at Third and Whitmer streets.

Sunday Minor Ball.

The Manchester team will meet the Fraternal Aids this afternoon on the diamond at Ascot Park; the Highland Park team and the Bishops will play at Highland Park; the University Merchants play the Southern Pacifics at University, and the Wielands are to meet the National Lumber Company's team at Thirty-eighth and Alameda streets. This will be the fourth series of Sunday games for the new City League.

Oaks Too Strong.

The Oaks baseball team defeated the California school team yesterday at baseball by the score of 13 to 8 on the California grounds. This game was the sixth out of a series of seven played between the two schools. The batteries were: Oaks, Lange, Starbird, Berger and Schloesser; California School, Wilson and Brodwick.

PERTINENT COMMENT ON SPORTS.

THE WEEK'S EVENTS.

Fight Against A.A.U.

The fight started in Chicago against the Amateur Athletic Union has brought forth a statement from President Sullivan of the A.A.U., in which he proposes to suspend all players who take part in contests sanctioned by the new organization. Whatever the cause for quarrel, it seems beyond reason that athletes who are bona fide amateurs should be deprived of their standing because they take part in contests other than those sanctioned by the A.A.U. An amateur is an amateur wherever he competes, provided he observes the common restrictions of an amateur. It would appear then that such a suspension is not in keeping with the facts in the case and with the objects of the organization. There is reason in preventing an unregistered man from competing, for the A.A.U. can plead ignorance of the athlete's past, unless he fills out the registration blank. But when his record is once on the books of the association and when the association can keep track of his amateur standing, there is no just reason for suspension, provided the athlete lives up to rules. The fight between organizations should not be loaded upon the athletes. It is immaterial to an athlete under what organization he competes, so long as he is treated right. If the A.A.U. does full justice by him, it needs fear no fight to take its men away. Let's not get away from the central idea that the A.A.U. is in the field for peace and benefit of pure sports, not for organization power.

Racing of Automobiles.

Despite the fact that many persons have been killed this summer in automobile racing, the tendency is to continue the sport and so long as the motor car possesses great speed, there certainly will be races of some kind. It is a trait with Americans, and in fact the human race in general to a more or less degree, to require spice and danger in its daily pleasures and when the zest of contest is added to the ordinary things, men will not stop at real dangers. Auto racing is the most dangerous of sports. An accident usually means death or maiming for life, yet these dire prospects do not prevent drivers from entering any well-conducted meet. Auto racing will be continued in Southern California, and with ordinary luck and good care, there is no reason why accidents above the ordinary should occur. There have been a number of bad spills at Ascot Park, but fortunately the drivers and mechanicians have escaped with but slight cuts and bruises. The Santa Monica road race and a number of other road and hill-climbing events have been made annual features in Southern California. There are to be many races in the next year or so at Ascot, and it appears as though the racing game would continue indefinitely here. The hope of the auto people is that there will be no killings or maimings.

Need of Heavyweights.

The defeat of Stanley Ketchel by Jack Johnson emphasizes more emphatically the necessity of developing heavyweights of class if the fight game is to be kept alive. General interest in pugilism has declined greatly in the last decade and largely because of the dearth of heavyweight material rather than the passage of laws in States where boxing has been legislated against. Johnson and Jeffries are the only two heavyweights worthy of mention in the world today, and the sporting element throughout the country is intensely interested in the proposed battle. Very few persons nowadays are able to attend fights, but the general sporting public is greatly interested in newspaper accounts before and after the battles. The Jeffries-Johnson affair has been the greatest newspaper battle on record, and if the fight actually takes place there should be more printed on the event than on the Japanese-Russian War. Just think of the time when Corbett, Fitzsimmons, Ruhlin, Sharkey, Jeffries, Johnson, Kid McCoy and several other good heavyweights were fighting together! What an elimination contest that would make now!

Injuries in Football.

The many injuries sustained in the English Rugby football game show that there is a certain percentage of liability in every contest of sport. It has been claimed for the Rugby game that it is not nearly so dangerous as the American, but reports of California teams this year show that the percentage must be as great. In one afternoon two men on the Los Angeles High School team sustained a broken collar-bone and a broken nose, respectively, in playing Rugby; Pat Higgins and Lewis of the Castaways are so badly hurt that they were unable to play yesterday; so many members of the San Francisco Barbarians were injured recently that a scheduled game with the Nevada University fifteen was cancelled because of lack of men to fill the positions. This merely goes to show that a certain number of men will be injured in most any game of strenuous effort and that the American style of football is not such a barbarous pastime after all.

Visits of Northern Teams.

The visit of the California and Stanford Rugby football teams this fall seems to be in the way of a campaign for Rugby and as a social call, more than for merits of a football contest. More than 250 Southern California students attend school in the North and this large clientele is worthy of a social call for the good of the universities. Thousands of alumni are in Los Angeles. Then there is the campaign of the northern schools for the popularization of Rugby. Every effort is being made to have the game generally adopted in Southern California. Southern men are invited to the early season practice in the North, and special practice is held here for the benefit of the local high school players. It looks like the southern visits are to be a fixture, even though it is hard to make expenses.

Luck of Wild Bill Ruess.

William R. Ruess certainly is playing in good fortune, these days, and most of his rivals are ascribing it to the "luck of Wild Bill." In winning the races at Oakland, yesterday, the Pope-Hartford brings to Bill a certain amount of good luck for which he is in no way responsible, but whatever this occasion may bring him in renown, Bill's success in the Baldy race was through sheer merit of his own. In that contest Ruess showed the qualifications which bring success. His drive was one of the most daring ever undertaken and he won on personal effort, not considering the worth of his car. Although he will remain "Wild Bill" to his friends as long as he lives, the gentleman is fast becoming civilized, for he is attracting attention.

Coming of Soccer Season.

Soccer football following on the introduction of Rugby seems to emphasize the English invasion of the gridiron. Americans have not taken kindly to either game, as yet, but a well-played soccer game seems to have more excitement in it than the Rugby style, for the fumbling is absent (as the men are not allowed to touch the ball with their arms or hands.) It is the real "football" and the footwork of the clever player is marvelous. The chances are that instead of Rugby being popularized, soccer will come to the front as an antithesis to the American game and that the two latter will flourish.

Good Baseball Weather.

What would not the big league baseball magnates give for the steadily clear weather of Los Angeles throughout the summer. At least 15 per cent. increase in receipts would result if there were no rain checks necessary and if every game could be played according to schedule. While double-headers draw larger crowds and partly make up for the loss, it is certain that more persons would attend other games if the weather were not threatening. No manager is sure of a good day at any time in the East, and fewer persons will take chances on outdoor entertainments on that account.

JENNINGS SIGNS.

COBB TAKES THREE YEARS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

DETROIT, Oct. 23.—Hugh Jennings signed a contract today to continue as manager of the Detroit baseball club during the season of 1910. It is understood the manager's demand for an increase in salary was compromised.

Pitcher George Mullin and Catcher Schmidt have also signed contracts for next season, and Tyrus Cobb today signed for three years.

Although Manager Jennings's salary from the Detroit baseball club is a secret, something of the nature of his relations with the club have become known. He draws a percentage of the earnings, and in the three years he has been manager, has taken down in salary and profits, $41,500—$10,000 in 1907, $14,000 in 1908, and $17,500 this year. For 1910 he wanted enough to total him $30,000, provided he wins a fourth pennant.

An official announcement places the profits of the club for the league season at about $166,000, and, including the world's series, about $200,000.

Gentlemen:

I feel that some acknowledgement is due you for the splendid service rendered by the Goodyear Detachable tires, with which the winning Pope-Hartford motor car was equipped in the recent Mt. Baldy race.

The tires are a very important factor in an event like the Mt. Baldy race—over a 100-mile course, declared to be the most difficult and most dangerous course in the world—and it affords me great pleasure to state emphatically that the service rendered by the Goodyear tires could not have been improved upon.

The Pope-Hartford finished the race with a change of but one tire, caused by a puncture. The Goodyear "delivered the goods," in every sense of the term.

Wishing you the heaping measure of success which the Goodyear tires entitle you to, I am

CALIFORNIA BLANKS OLYMPICS IN FIERCEST GAME OF YEAR.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERKELEY, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The California 'varsity defeated the Olympic Club' fifteen this afternoon by a score of 19 to 0, in one of the fiercest games ever played on California Field. The club team, which contained a number of old Stanford and California men, was the strongest that had faced the 'varsity yet this year.

Schaeffer's men showed their condition to be about right for this stage of the game, while their playing was an improvement over that shown in the last Barbarian game. The chief fault was a tendency on the part of some of the backs to pass too slow. The scrum followed up well, but the men were often penalized for "off sides" owing to their eagerness.

As a whole the Blue and Gold is showing better team work than did the 'varsity of last year. Four freshmen, Baker of Santa Ana, Peart, Stroud and Graff, were given a chance, Peart and Stroud playing the entire match.

The game closed in an altercation between Faulkner, an old Stanford man, and Jordan. Faulkner lost his head during a throw-in and sluged Jordan, cutting his eye. Jordan kept his head, but three of Faulkner's team-mates were required to quiet him. Referee Thomas, who failed to give satisfaction to either side, saw the trouble, but refused to penalize the offender.

The Olympics were on the defensive most of the game, although a brace in the second half carried the play into 'varsity territory. The first try came after Allen had carried the ball 30 yards through the pack, and Baker had booted to 3-yard touch. Markwart secured from the throw-in and plunged over the line. Elliott converted.

The clubmen immediately rushed the 'varsity, and Dwiggins was forced to save, but kicked out to the Olympic 20. From a 5-yard scrum, Cerf secured and went over for the second try, which Elliott failed to convert. Score, 8 to 0. The play see-sawed between the 25-yard marks and half the time found the ball on the Olympic 25-yard line.

At the beginning of the second period the Olympics, by a passing rush, carried to the 'varsity 5-yard line, but Harris relieved by a punt to Olympic's 35-yard touch. Elliott then secured and ran 35 yards for a try, which he converted. In the play that followed John O. Miller seriously injured his wrist and retired.

Elliott soon made another score, after securing from a 5-yard scrum, but Harris failed to kick the difficult goal. The final try came soon after on the same kind of a play by the same man.

CRIMSON ON TOP.

HARVARD DEFEATS BROWN IN RAGGEDLY-PLAYED CONTEST.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) Oct. 23.—In a raggedly-played game this afternoon, Harvard defeated Brown, 11 to 0, the home team scoring in each half and twice successfully defending its own goal when touchdowns by the visitors seemed almost inevitable.

Forward passes were carried off more successfully than in any other game on Soldiers' Field this season. Harvard outkicked Brown, and the Crimson line, when fully realizing its danger, stiffened better than in any other game so far.

Both scores came within a short time after the Harvard goal had been threatened. In the first half, Frothingham, in Harvard's back-field, dropped a punt on Harvard's 35-yard line, from which Brown pushed the ball to the 2-yard line, where the ball was lost on downs.

After an exchange of punts, Harvard secured the ball on Brown's 25-yard line and Minot, by successive plunges, carried it over for the first score.

This action was repeated in the second half, but this time Brown managed to get within a foot of the Harvard chalk line before reluctantly relinquishing the ball on downs.

Minot carried the ball over for the second and last score for Harvard. The goal was missed.

E. Brown of Harvard snapped a tendon, and will be out of the game for the rest of the year.

TOO MUCH CARDINAL.

Cheda, all came in for grand stand applause, with Crawford the greatest favorite. Dole, in the latter part of the game, made the most sensational single play of the game, when the blocked Caley's punt after Kern's try, and ran the leather back across the line for another score. The two tries came in such quick succession that half the crowd failed to realize that Stanford had scored twice.

In the backfield the kicking of all the 'varsity men was a feature. Nearly every time a red man booted the leather, the crowd let out an "A-ah!" Stan Mitchell and Kern, the two freshmen on the team, did fine work, Stan making one of the fastest gains credited to the Cardinal. Kern ran nearly forty yards to one of the tries of the second half. Brown, at full, did the best kicking to touch that has been seen in the South this season.

Both field and weather were ideal for football, although the heat, while it made the play fast, was hard on the players. The Stanford men showed their fine condition by staying through to the end of the contest without letting up speed appreciably, while the Castaways, though they fought gamely to the last minute, were nearly all in before the whistle blew to end the one-sided struggle. At the sides of the field, where the side lines had been shoved out to give the full regulation width of 75 yards, the ground was too hard, but except for this the sawdust of the intercollegiate gridiron gave a good footing without being dangerously rocky.

The crowd filled the bleachers to their 100 capacity and overflowed to the automobile side of the inclosure. The number of automobiles on the grounds was an interesting feature, the big touring cars being parked two and three deep around two sides of the field.

TIRESOME DELAY.

Stanford did not kick off until 3:20 o'clock on account of a tiresome delay caused by the eleventh-hour losses of the Castaways and the necessary enrollment of substitutes. Finally, after the crowd had begun to become impatient, the black and white players trotted to their positions, and Crawford booted the leather for the Cardinals.

During the first few minutes of play the Castaways showed up with exceptional strength, working the leather well into Cardinal territory. The advance ended with Caley's long try for goal from the 45-yard line. The try went wide, ending all Castaways' opportunities for scoring until late in the second half. Within two minutes after Stanford's return punt, the ball was within striking distance of the local line.

The first score of the game came after about five minutes of play, when Reed secured from a scrum on the 5-yard line and passed to Mow Mitchell, who crossed the line. Crawford missed the goal.

DRIBBLING ADVANCE.

Pemberton added three more points after a ragged dribbling advance from a scrum twenty yards out, picking the ball from the ground just before he crossed the line. This score was typical of the Stanford gains, the advance coming through the ability of the Cardinal heavyweights to follow the ball hard and throw the play continually forward, rather than through any particularly pretty passing or running. In fact, nowhere in the game was there shown any of the anticipated cross-passing; from the spectators' standpoint, the contest was no prettier than the game played by the first Stanford Rugby team in Los Angeles, against Pomona, three years ago.

For the third score, Crawford again secured the leather after a dribbling advance, and wriggled across the line. Every inch was necessary to put the ball across the line, Crawford downing it with his arms extended just over the chalk. Dills made the tackle that brought him down.

Crawford also made the fourth tally, though Stan Mitchell got credit for making the opening. Stan came straight through the field from thirty-five yards out, after Reed had secured from the scrum, and passed to Crawford when close to the line.

Pemberton's try after just such an advance as led to the second score added three more points, bringing the total to fifteen. Crawford missed his fifth consecutive try for goal, from directly in front of the posts. Throughout the game Crawford's failure to boot the leather between the posts was in contrast to his exceptional work in the scrum; had he been able to convert safely, even in the majority of the occasions, the score would have run a full ten points higher. Stanford kicked only four goals out of eleven attempts.

The last try of the half was scored by Cheda, who secured from a line-out at twenty-five yards, and ran to goal. His pretty dodge past Monk Pierce made the try possible. This time Stan Mitchell kicked Stanford's first goal.

SECOND HALF.

In the second half one Castaway's dash brought the spectators to their feet, and seemed for a moment to avert a whitewash. From near his own goal Tom Higgins gathered in a punt and circled the bunch prettily, booting the leather when tackled. With this opening the Castaways pack closed in, and dribbled the leather the length of the field, booting it over the Stanford line for what looked like a score. When the players climbed off the ball, however, it was found that Stanford had saved by beating the Black and White men to the leather. With this single exception, Stanford was never in danger.

One flurry was caused when Caley, the biggest man in the Castaways scrum, got hot under the rough handling he was getting from the Cardinal forwards, and brought his fists up. Before he could mix things, about five Stanford 200-pounders were between him and the other side of the argument. There was no vulgar fighting.

Stanford's first try of the second half showed what real Rugby passing may be. From touch at five the ball traveled straight down the Stanford phalanx, Reed to Mow Mitchell to Stan Mitchell to Sanford at the far side of the field.

Thorpe scored after a classy counter-rush, when the ball traveled first to midfield under the Castaway advance, and then back and across the line under the Stanford rally. Pemberton scored again, and a few moments later Kern added three more after a forty-yard run. Dole than made his spectacular block of Caley's kick, and scored again, Crawford's boot sending the leather straight for the final two points of the game. During the half three goals were kicked out of five attempts.

The line-up:

MEAD BREAKS COLLAR BONE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RIVERSIDE, Oct. 23.—In a stubbornly-contested game of Rugby football this afternoon at Evans Athletic Park, Riverside High School team defeated Los Angeles Polytechnic High School by a score of 18 to 11.

Coach Davis of Riverside was chosen referee by the consent of both schools. A big crowd witnessed the game, which was a hard one throughout.

The Los Angeles team did all of its scoring in the first part of the first half. The visitors were outplayed by the local team. Mill and Goodfriend were Riverside stars, while Price and Doherty did the best work among the Los Angeles players.

Mead of the Los Angeles team, who played wing three-quarters, broke his collar-bone in the first half.

EASY FOR SAN DIEGO.

HOLLYWOOD SHUT OUT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] By a score of 8 to 0, the San Diego High School defeated Hollywood in a spectacular game of football played at Russ Oval this afternoon. Although defeated and not scoring a point Hollywood played a plucky game. Neither eleven were able to score in the first half. Forward passes and punts helped San Diego to an advantage and the first score was a safety.

A touchdown and goal kicked scored six more for the San Diegos soon after this. Porter, quarter-back for Hollywood, played the most spectacular game ever seen in this city. Several of the Hollywood boys were put out of the game on account of minor injuries. San Diego's eleven out-weighed the Los Angeles eleven by many pounds.

START TRAINING TABLE.

Two Vancouver Contests and Annual Nevada Game Fill Schedule for California.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, Oct. 23.—Two international contests with Vancouver and the annual intercollegiate game with the University of Nevada, fill the 'varsity schedule to the date of the Stanford game. The Vancouver contests will be played on Wednesday and Saturday of next week, while the Nevada game falls on November 6. These matches are expected to be the hardest on the schedule with the exception of the big game.

The reduction of the 'varsity candidates and the addition of ten freshmen bring the squad total to forty-two.

The men have gone into strict training and the regular 'varsity training table will be started Monday with eighteen men, which number will be increased to twenty-two later in the week.

The candidates are all in fine shape at present, barring a few minor bruises and the work of the next three weeks should put the players on edge. So far this season the Australian method of gradual training has been used.

The ten freshmen added to the 'varsity squad were Baker, of Santa Ana; Brant, Los Angeles; Morris, Peart, Hill, Stroud of Bakersfield; Laine, Wyllie, Mathew and Graff. Of these Graff, Stroud and Peart stand the best chances of making good.

Peart was easily the star of the freshmen backs. The coaches have been playing him as a center three-quarters, shifting Harris to the wing.

Hardy and Graff are fighting it out for a position on one side rank, and Ashley and Hansen are striving for the other. Indications favor Hardy and Ashley, both of whom rowed on the 'varsity crew last spring.

Carpenter, Phleger and Markwart have the front rank to themselves, while Jordan has no competition as lock. The pick of the rear rank candidates seems to be Northcroft and Pauly, but Swartz, who lost a certain position by the abolition of the wing forward formation, is very much in the running.

The backfield is playing in practically the same form as it has used through-out the season. Captain Cerf is at half, Elliott and Allen at five-eighths, Johns and Harris at two of the three-quarters and Dwiggins at full.

For the other wing position the most likely contenders are Peart, Evans of Pomona and Watts, a veteran of last year. Watts has not fully recovered from an injury to his knee and at present Peart seems to be the favorite. If Peart makes the team, he will possibly be used as center three-quarters and Harris moved over to the right wing.

Those comprising the squad at present are: Captain Cerf '09, Markwart '10, Haffey '10, Johns '10, Dwiggins '11, Swartz '11, Pauly '11, Phleger '12, Harris '12, Elliott '12, Northcroft '10, Johnson '09, Ashley '10, Vosburg '10 of Los Angeles; Williams '11, of Pasadena; Barnett '11, Hardy '11 Harlowe '11, MacDonald '11, Keough '11, Allen '12, H. H. Phleger '12, R. F. Jordan '12, Hansen '12, Evans '12, of Pomona; Bennett '12, Watts '12, D. Barnett '12, Quinn '12, Wheeler '12, Capenter '12, Block '12, Peart '13, Baker, of Santa Ana; Laine '13, Brant '13, of Los Angeles; Stroud '13, Hill '13, Morris '13, Graff '13, Wyllie '13, Matthew '13.

COY STARS FOR ELI.

COLGATE OUTCLASSED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW HAVEN (Ct.) Oct. 23.—Yale defeated Colgate this afternoon, 36 to 0, making five touchdowns, five goals from touchdowns and two goals from the field. The field goals were both made by Coy in the first half. It was the first time since 1888 that a Yale man had kicked two goals from the field in the same game.

Philbin made two touchdowns after long runs, the first a 40-yard dash and the other for 52 yards.

Miners Too Strong.

DENVER, Oct. 23.—The Colorado School of Mines eleven defeated Utah University this afternoon, 14 to 8, in a game that was marked by frequent fumbling, in which Utah was the chief culprit, and by a sensational run of seventy-seven yards for a touchdown by Capt. Spring of the Golden eleven. Besides the fumbling, Utah's tendency to offside play and holding in the line probably cost it at least one touchdown and possibly the game, as twice penalties were marked against it when the ball was within the very shadow of the Miners' goal posts.

Tars in Soccer Game.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The tars of the British Cruiser "Bedford" defeated the soccer players of H.M.S. Algeria and the Shearwater yesterday by a score of 4 goals to 3. The losers had considerably the best of matters in midfield and were easily value for a tie, but lack of finish in front of the goal was the cause of their downfall. Crossing over at half time with a deficit of one goal, the Bedford players never let up and made the most of the two opportunities that presented themselves, Patey finding the net twice in quick succession.

Denver Beats Dakota.

DENVER, Oct. 23.—Denver University defeated the University of South Dakota eleven here today, by a score of 10 to 0.

Pennsy Defeats Penn.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 23.—The University of Pennsylvania and Pennsylvania State College played a tie football game here this afternoon, 3 to 3, both sides making their scores in the second half.

A Discriminating Funeral Band.

Recently in Chicago an Italian band escorting a funeral down State street gave a most realistic musical programme to the dear departed one, says the Philadelphia Star.

Amid the loud lamentations of the deceased one's family and friends the smiling leader of the band gave the signal and his forty musicians began "To the end of the world for you."

As this piece was finished some on in the mourners' carriage cried out:

"Oh, where; oh, where, has poor Antonio gone?"

As if taking cue from the inquiry, the band turned up and played "No One knows." Seemingly this pacified the anxious one, and she ceased to ask the final destination of the one gone before.

The hard-hearted onlookers were making bets that the next tune rendered by the Italian musicians would be "There'll Be a Hot Time," when the band finally turned into a side street, and the last medley to reach the ears of the watchers was "It's the Unexpected Happens," from Julian Edwards' "The Gay Musician."—[Nashville American.

SAINTS WIN GAME.

Casey worked havoc with the university backs. Full-back Hall, the mainstay of the Methodist back-field, was forced to leave the game ten minutes after the opening of the contest, the U.S.C. back being completely out of his head for half an hour. Hall bucks with great force. He twisted his neck in a hard scrimmage, and was unconscious for some time. Ickes was also dazed for several minutes after the game, and muttered incoherently over the struggle.

RHEINY IS PLEASED.

Coach Rheinschild was pleased with the showing of his men. They have improved wonderfully since their game with Santa Ana. The players are better welded, and their team work is a large factor in the strength of the team. The Saints played much better than expected, and they outfought the university during the greater part of the game.

Coach Cromwell said he expected the Saints to play much harder than they did, and he was surprised the game had been so close. The deciding factor in the game was the superior advancing power of the Saint backfield. The university halves were not strong enough to hit the line for any substantial gains, and made nearly all their gains on plays around the end, and on taking advantage of the poor work of the Saints in catching punts.

The final half was largely a punting duel, Neighbours outkicking Paulin and Hogan, but losing ground on handling the return kicks. The Saints held up better than expected during the closing minutes of play. The ball was in the air a greater portion of the final period, and there was much off-side play through over-eagerness to block punts.

Rader, Casey and Neighbours shared the honors of the Saints. Rader is the best full-back who has played on a local gridiron since Burek retired, and his plunges through the Methodists' line were sensational. Rader made a monkey out of Cochran during the first half, but the Methodist tackle warmed up to the game in the last period, catching the backs frequently for losses.

Casey showed up best on bucks over tackle, and in spite of a bad shoulder, tore up the opposing defense for substantial gains. Neighbours starred more at punting than on playing the end position. The passing from center was poor, and twice Neighbours redeemed a wretched throw by skirting the ends when too late to get off a punt.

FIGHT ON LINE.

Capt. Murray easily held his own with the giant Allen, who had been shifted from guard to tackle to fill Stookey's place. The position was new to Allen, and he played hard, but could not break up the splendid interference of the Saint backs. Tortes redeemed his poor catching of punts, on several occasions carrying the ball back through a scattered field for fifteen to twenty yards.

Malcom, Wirsching and Ickes really held down the opponents' score for the Methodists. Malcom broke up more plays than any other two men on the university team, and tackled the men on punts more than his share. He was especially strong on defense, and gave Crawford so much trouble on offense that the Saint tackle was replaced by Spaulding.

Wirsching has been out in a suit but twice this season. He has always played in hard luck, but yesterday outclassed the veteran ends in every department. He was the first to get down on punts, and twice blocked forward passes. Not being in condition, he was unable to stand the pace, and retired at the end of the first half.

Ickes fought valiantly to save his team from defeat. His work in the backfield was especially commendable, and he used those plays which if any should have netted the required yards. He played himself out, and after the game relapsed into unconsciousness for several minutes. Kellar distinguished himself at guard in his first try-out.

The line-up:

St. Vincent's.		U.S.C.
Tortes	L.E.R.	Wirsching
F. Murray (c.)	L.T.R.	Wallace Allan
Teeford	L.G.R.	Keller

COLE DIRECT SHINES.

Proves Easy Winner in Feature Pacing Event at County Fair Races in Fresno.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

FRESNO, Oct. 23.—Cole Direct, son of Direct, proved to be the star of the race meet at the county fair grounds this afternoon, winning the 2:26 pace in easy fashion. Little George was the only contender, taking the first heat. After that the black gelding stepped in, and in the fourth heat played with Little George on the home stretch.

In the second heat of this race, Cole Direct stepped the half in 1:05, but the pace was too fast, and the time for the mile was 2:19, or 1:14 for the second half. Results:

The 2:20 pace, purse $300: Cole Direct (H. Brown) won second, third and fourth heats; Little George won first heat; best time 2:17½.

Four furlongs: Cameo won, Gluckstern second, Gray Eagle third; time 0:49. Miss Neugent, Midget and Mennel also ran.

Six furlongs: Gluckstern won, St. Albans second, Joe Gano third; time 1:17. Myrtle H. also ran.

Jamaica Results.

JAMAICA, Oct. 23.—Results: Six furlongs: Jeanne d'Arc won, Enfield second, Seymour Beuttler third; time, 1:14.

One and one-sixteenth miles: Patsy won, Shapedale second, San Guine third; time, 1.48.

Five and one-half furlongs: Flying Squirrel won, Sou second, Sticker third; time, 1:07 4-5.

One and one-sixteenth miles: Far West won, Huck second, Firestone third; time, 1:48.

One and one-sixteenth miles: The Peer won, Right Guard second; time, 1:52. Two starters.

One and one-sixteenth miles; Capt. Swanson won, Rustem second, Little Friend third; time, 1:50 2-5.

Events at Latonia.

LATONIA, Oct. 23.—Results:

WHO WAS THE FIRST JIM JEFFRIES?

BY MAXIM MAJOR.

Who was the first boxer? Who was the first James J. Jeffries?

In these times, when so many thousands of people of all classes take such deep interest in the art of boxing, it might be interesting to know how old this art of prize fighting really is, and in what manner it differed in olden times from now. Since the time when fighting with bare fists was made unlawful, the tendency of the interpretation of the word "boxing" has been to limit its use to exhibitions of skill, and to use the word pugilism when referring to professional contests under the old rules and to ancient gladiators. Modern boxing rules, known as the Queensberry rules, which govern even professional prize fights, have done away with the worst features of the pugilism of antiquity, and effected a great improvement in modern methods. The ancient method was to make the punishment as cruel as possible by wearing a cestus of bronze, several thicknesses of rawhide strongly fastened together, and projecting beyond the knuckles, and by binding the wrist and forearm with leather thongs, by these means adding to the capacity of the bare hand to inflict injury. The present custom of wearing a padded glove lessens this capacity. The last remnant of barbarism disappeared from pugilism when wrestling, which played an important part in the contests of the eighteenth and first half of the nineteenth centuries, was ruled out. How late it lasted is testified by the reports of historic battles, in which such passages as the following were common: "After a short struggle, both men went down, the Tipton Slasher uppermost," or, "They then closed, and after a short tussle, the Infant threw his man, falling heavily upon him."

How ancient was the practice of pugilism may be gathered from many writings of antiquity. In the roll call at the siege of Troy, about 2500 B. C., Polenx is described as "good with his fists." There are many interesting details of it at the funeral of Patroclus, including the mention of the belt which is still the emblem of pugilistic championships, and the habit of having such contests as part of a funeral celebration has survived to this day in Siam. A Roman poet (Virgil) leaves another classical description of the sport.

Among the English sports of the Middle Ages boxing did not occupy so prominent a place as cudgeling and quarterstaff; and Figg may be considered as the modern father of the "noble art of self-defense." From this time until 1860, when Sayers fought Heenan, the list of champions is unbroken. Up to this period the science of self-defense had made but little progress, and strength and endurance constituted the only recommendations of the practitioners at Smithfield, Moorfield, and Southwark Fair, which had long had booths and rings for the display of boxing. Broughton, who occupied the position of champion of England, built a theater in Hanway street, Oxford street, in 1740, for the display of boxing; advertisements were issued, announcing a succession of battles between first-rate pugilists, who never quitted the stage till one or the other was defeated, the reward of each man being dependent upon and proportioned to the receipts. Broughton was for eighteen years champion of England. He propounded some rules for the regulation of the ring which remained in authority till 1838, or nearly a century. They are most spoken of as the "old rules." Rule 1 is, that a square of a yard be chalked in the middle of a stage, and that in every fresh set-to after a fall, the seconds are to bring their men to the side of the square, and to place them opposite each other, and until this is done, it is not lawful for one to strike the other. Rule 2, that if either of the combatants be unable to be brought up to the square within thirty seconds after a fall and the close of a round, he shall be deemed a beaten man. No man is permitted to hit his adversary when he is down, or to seize him by the breeches, or below the waist, and a man on his knees is to be reckoned down. These rules laid the foundation of fair play. To Broughton also is due the introduction of gloves for "sparring matches," whereby lessons could be taken without injury.

The greatest professor of the art was Jackson, who was champion in 1795. He was not only the most scientific boxer of his day, but he gave his art such a prestige and popularity that half the men of rank and fashion of the period were proud to call themselves his pupils. He opened rooms for the practice of boxing in Bond street, and for years these were crowded by men of note. His "principles of pugilism" were, that contempt of danger and confidence in one's self were the first and best qualities of a pugilist; that, in hitting, you must judge well your distances, for a blow delivered at all out of range was like a spent shot and valueless; that men should fight with their legs, using all possible agility, as well as with their hands, and that all stiffness of style or position was wrong. Jackson is still regarded as one of the best theorists on the art. At this period pugilism was actively supported by many persons of high rank. In 1814, when the allied sovereigns opposed to Napoleon, visited England, among other entertainments, a sparring display was provided under Jackson's management, and the distinguished foreigners expressed much gratification at the exhibition of so much science and fine physical development.

Besides Jackson, Belcher, Gulley and Cribb were also noted champions at this period, which may be termed the palmy days of the ring. From various causes, its decline has since been uninterrupted. The more distinguished patrons gradually withdrew; the Pugilistic Club, which had been established in 1814, and included all the aristocratic patrons of the ring, was broken up. Magistrates set their faces against the lawless assemblies of roughs and pickpockets, who latterly

THE suit is ever popular. Probably one reason for the laurels which it has won from the American woman lies in the fact that, with two or three blouses, a transition can be made from the severe lines of the morning to the ornate style for afternoon or evening. From this varied collection of silk, mousseline and chiffon a choice can be made which will supply the needs of the business or social woman, who may well notice the new touches and turns that have appeared.

A black silk model employs white stitching to stylish advantage. Tiny tucks form a yoke, which is outlined with a broad band of stitched silk. Pointed straps on the front and sleeves continue this clever white idea, while jet buttons and black and white enameled ones are used to touch up the front.

In the leather-colored jersey silk there are most attractive lines. Black and cream are combined in a manner that hints of Paris. The tiny yoke is of black tucked net. Between this and the rounded top of the waist cream lace is inset, and below this braid is used to ornament the square yoke. A strap down the front holds the cream lace and pleated net frill. This double fulness appears again at the cuffs and throat. Narrow tucks give fulness to the bodice and mitigate the plain lines of the sleeves.

For plainer tastes the durable jersey silk of blue is particularly suggestive. Groups of tiny tucks extend in straight lines from the shoulders. In the central panel buttons of silk covered with soutache braid are placed with loops. The plain sleeves have three buttons on the outer seam. That is all; but there is an elegant simplicity in this model which will withstand the wear of many days.

Mousseline over a white silk lining is one of the popular combinations. Tucks are the lines which draw the eye to the blue model. A circular strap, upon which buttons and braid have been well used, forms a yoke effect. From each side a narrow lapel of silk peeps out, and two narrow strips continue this idea down the front. Horizontal tucks in groups form the upper half of the sleeve. The lower fulness is gathered into a straight, tucked cuff.

When braid was applied to the front of the green taffeta the maker used a summer idea, and the braided ornamentation is a creditable exploitation of soutache. Wide pleats over the shoulders give fulness, and a jaunty taffeta bow softens the neck line above the square which simulates a yoke. Pointed cuffs edge the sleeves. This blouse shows an effective adaptation of stiff silk.

Chiffon of the softest gray tone is folded over the figure along Marie Antoinette lines. The soft collar rises above a yoke of white embroidered chiffon. The shield of tucks below this has three rounded edges emphasized by a chainstitch of gray silk. On the square patch which holds the bertha folds in place are four ornamental buttons nestling in chiffon quilling. Horizontal tucks form the plain upper sleeve and the deep cuff. Softness of line and a general grace are the features of this blouse. In it a woman should feel well and artistically dressed.

Jet is heavily embroidered on the black mousseline waist for evening wear. Lines of this beading stripe the collar and yoke and finish the edge of the sleeves. A heavy ornamental band is held in place at the front by an immense flower form, from which jet fringe hangs in glistening lines. The sleeves of this model are very graceful. The fine tucks are gathered on the outer seam in a frill which lengthens the sleeve line—always a desirable point.

These are a few reliable models, which are practical, yet show new ideas worked out from a decorative standpoint. The combination of these two important elements of blouse-making will be hailed with joy by the "woman of the blouse."

SCHOOL for HOUSEWIVES

By MARION HARLAND

ECONOMY of MATERIALS and in COOKING

"We growl over the impossible prices of meat with prime ribs set before us."

"Our queens of the kitchen object to cooking the giblets."

THIS is the third of a series of articles written by Marion Harland with a view to helping the housewife at a time when the practice of economy may mean the keeping of a home.

The two articles preceding this were "A Stubborn Fact," dealing with the question of necessary economies, and "Economy in Buying." Next Sunday's article will be entitled "Economy in Hired Labor." The writer of the articles will welcome letters and suggestions from readers.

THE admirable editorial which is the keynote of the present economy series supplies us with another and a pregnant text:

"Our garbage barrels are filled with material upon which European families would grow fat. Meat that here upon the average table would be a tough and tasteless mess, if properly treated, would set forth a feast of soup, finely seasoned, a garnished stew and, for the breakfast following, a hash which, with the cheap vegetables boiled with the meat and some little additions of salad and cheese and coffee rightly made, would tempt the palate of the patron of the most expensive restaurant. And all at less than the cost of a tough hunk of indigestible and flavorless stuff set upon tens of thousands of American tables to deaden, not gratify, appetite and to breed dyspepsia."

Plain, strong language this, but not a whit plainer and stronger than is demanded by the facts in the case before us. We provide more lavishly for our tables than any other people on the globe. The householder who rises early and sits up late and eats the bitter bread of carefulness, in order to join the ends of expense and income on the first day of the year, will state as a self-evident fact that "the best is always the cheapest." Furthermore, with the honest (?) pride of the free-born American citizen, that "the best is none too good for him."

A year ago I awaited my turn in a butcher's shop, and as my wont is—

Whene'er I take my walks abroad,

I kept an eye upon my fellow-customers. A neatly dressed woman said something in a low voice to the man behind the counter, who walked to the corner of the shop and uncovered a pile of what looked like odds and ends of meat. She made her selection and purchase and went her way. In reply to the query I presently put him, the man smiled indulgently and let me have a closer view of the reserved fragments. That was what they were—the ends of steaks and chops and roasts pared away in trimming, and laid aside, not as offal, but as salable stock. All were clean and there was nothing unpleasing about the pile.

"They are never bought by Americans," the man explained, "except now and then by a 'cute' boarding-house keeper. The French and Germans get them whenever they can. How do I happen to have so many? You see, not one lady in ten who trades with me gives orders to have the trimmings of roast or steak sent home. Yet she knows that they are trimmed into shape after she buys them. Unless we have orders to that effect, we never send the trimmings. Most cooks don't like to be bothered with them."

I learned, too, that the odd bits—for which our American housewife pays and which she does not get—are bought by the canny foreigner for 6 and 8 cents per pound. I did not remind the civil dealer that we pay for steak and roast and chop before it is trimmed into shape. Hence, that he pockets a tidy profit upon each sale, even when he charges at the second one-third as much as the easy-going native housemother paid at the first.

Since it is my invariable practice to order the "trimmings" sent home with the bulk of the meat, it was none of my business to disturb his complacent computation of the petty gains that are beneath the average customer's thoughts.

As surely as Michelangelo discerned the embryo angel in the shapeless block of marble, the clever economist sees in the collection of odds and ends at the far end of the marble counter the possibilities of soups, ragouts, hashes, cannelons, meat pies, curries—and an infinite series of other savories. The trimmings of her neighbors' tables would set forth hers for a week, and her family be well fed.

Our editorial has a smart slap at this form of improvidence:

"We sit and growl at the impossible prices of meat, and all the while we insist upon having nothing set before us but prime ribs, porterhouse or sirloin steak, leg of lamb or round roast."

A sharper thrust at the native housemother comes in the next paragraph:

"Because there is practically no proper cooking of chuck, flank, rump, neck or shin parts of mutton or beef."

I subjoin to the justly severe comment upon our national cuisine the assertion that our housemother looks down disdainfully upon what a very "uppish" cook of mine once stigmatized as "innards." I have had queens of the kitchen of the same feather and lineage who objected to cooking the giblets of poultry, as "ongentale." If the old saw respecting the behavior of a beggar on horseback applies to them, it cannot be fitted to our well-to-do American matron. The best is none too good for her John and the children. Her wiser compatriot, who has made economy a study, buys a lamb's liver at 10 or 12 cents and orders it to be left at her door, and this without a blush of shame. She has taught her boys and girls to like it when "mother" cooks it.

It is washed and wiped; a few slices of fat salt pork are put into a frying pan, and when they are crisp are taken out. Into the fat goes a sliced onion, and when this is slightly browned the sliced liver is laid in the same hissing fat. It is left there just long enough to sear both sides of each piece. Then pork, onion, liver and fat are turned into a casserole. A half cupful of stock from the stockpot is added, and half a dozen button onions that have been parboiled. This is seasoned to taste with salt and pepper, covered and set in the oven for an hour. It should be done tender by then. Next, the gravy is drained off and the covered casserole is kept hot over boiling water. The gravy is thickened with browned flour and seasoned with a dash of kitchen bouquet and a teaspoonful of chopped parsley. After boiling, it is poured back into the casserole. It is served in the same when it has stood, covered, for five minutes in an open oven, that the gravy may soak into the liver.

Calf's Liver.

Calf's liver cooked in like manner is excellent. Or, if you wish to serve it whole, lard it with strips of fat salt pork, treat it as directed just now, and lay in the casserole. A spoonful of tomato catsup added to the seasoning improves the dish. Lay it upon a platter when done, pour the thickened gravy about it and garnish with the button onions. Half a can of French mushrooms (champignons) make of the baked liver a really elegant family dinner. The mushrooms are cooked in the gravy when it is strained off for thickening.

Cut it horizontally. What is left should be put under a weight. If properly seasoned and cooked, it is a fair imitation, when cold, of the famous (and costly) pate de foie gras. And this at an outlay of less than 10 cents, even if the champignons be added. Meat for two meals for four people for 35 cents a meal may be had by following the recipe I outline. I engage, also, that those who have never liked liver before will "take to it" in this guise.

Beef's Tongue.

A beef's tongue retails in city markets for $1. Wash and wipe it and parboil for half an hour after the boil is fairly on. Take it up (saving the liquor in which it was boiled), rub all over with butter and put into a covered roaster when you have poured a cupful of the pot liquor about it. Roast until a fork pierces it easily. Turn the gravy into a saucepan and thicken with browned flour, two tablespoonfuls of stewed and strained tomato, a tablespoonful of onion juice, paprika and salt to taste.

Simmer gently at the side of the range while you wash the tongue with the yolk of an egg (beaten) and coat thickly with browned and crushed crumbs. Set in the oven, uncovered, for five minutes, or until smoking hot and slightly incrusted. Butter again and serve. Send in the gravy in a boat.

Carve perpendicularly. This tongue is delicious cold.

A "Left-Over" Soup.

A good soup may be made by adding minced vegetables to the stock in which the tongue was boiled. Simmer until the vegetable dice are tender; season with celery salt, color with caramel and drop tiny cubes of fried bread on the top.

Calf's Head.

In a story depicting the trials and training of a young and ambitious housekeeper, who "thought she knew it all," I have narrated, among the other "Distractions of Martha," her struggles to prove the manifold capabilities of a calf's head. I repeat now what was said there in serio-comic fashion: that a calf's head may be wrought into more savory and popular forms than any other bit of meat known to the ingenious cook. It costs from 50 to 60 cents to begin with. The stock in which it is boiled makes delicious soup; the boned head, after it is boiled, may be breaded and baked, or made into that joy of the epicure, "tete de veau a la vinaigrette," or into imitation terrapin almost as good as the genuine delicacy, for which we pay a dollar a plate at restaurants. The tongue is nice eaten cold or pickled; the brains may be fashioned into toothsome croquettes or fried in batter.

In skilful hands the calf's head may be counted upon for four meals, and when all the seasoning ingredients that help to make these are considered from a financial standpoint the entire outlay should not exceed $1.

"The canny foreigner buys the trimmings at 6 and 8 cents a pound."

Sheep's Head.

Who but a Scotch housemother ever thinks of cooking a sheep's head?

I put the question to a notable housewife the other day, and she thought I meant the fish of the same name. She had "never imagined that anybody would eat a real sheep's head!" Then she said, "Ugh!"

I stood up stoutly for my "head." It yields the most palatable Scotch broth I have ever tasted. And there is no better in the world than that family soup one has in perfection in the Highlands. I have a recipe which was given to me in rhyme by the president of the University of Glasgow.

Nor is a boiled sheep's head, served with caper sauce and accompanied by creamed turnips, a contemptible dinner for the American who arrogates as his the right to have the best things going. You may buy the cleaned head in a city market for 40 cents. In the country the butcher will toss it over to you with a laugh as a gift—with the wool on!

Take it home, scald and rub powdered resin into the fleece down to the roots, strip, and you have the foundation for enough nourishing broth to last a moderate-sized family for two days.

Scotch "Brose."

Speaking of Scottish fare reminds one inevitably of the national dish of that hardy and frugal race.

"What did you have for breakfast?" asked a tourist of a bare-legged muscular Highland laddie.

"Brose," was the answer.

"And what for dinner?"

"Brose," still cheerfully.

"And what will you have for supper?"

"Why—brose!" surprised at the stranger's inquisitiveness.

"And do you not get tired of eating the same thing all the time?"

"An' wha' for suld a mon weary o' his meat?"

"Meat" with him stood for his daily food.

"Brose," alias oatmeal porridge, has nutritive qualities to which the brawn and endurance of the Scottish peasantry bear triumphant testimony.

With us these would be better understood if oatmeal were properly cooked. The mother who would have her children strong in muscle and bone and generally hardy throughout their systems should learn the values of this cereal in the course of her economical studies. Soak it for hours. Distrust the plausible advertisements that commend this or that brand requiring no soaking and but twenty minutes' cooking. That is a concession to the American habit of living fast and hard. Soak the Irish or Scotch meal long, and boil it longer. The fireless cooker cooks it to perfection without waste of fuel. Bring the sodden meal to a boil on the range, then shut it up in the heart of the cooker and leave it there for eight, ten or twenty-four hours. It is then digestible and full of properties that foster wholesome growth in the young and keep adults vigorous.

Economical Pastry.

Butter is a grievously heavy item in the expense book of our frugal housemother, and one to which Bridget-Thekla-Dinah lends the full weight of her hand—one, too, that must know no degree. "Cooking butter" is not admitted to the economical calculations of sensible home caterers. Better buy and use half as much than [illegible] second best. THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

In Tomato Season

I HAVE a fine recipe for chili sauce which I should like to have printed before the canning season is over. That is, unless you are already supplied.

Chili Sauce.

Twelve large tomatoes, one small red pepper, four apples, four onions, two tablespoonfuls of salt, two teaspoonfuls each of cloves, ginger and cinnamon, three cups of vinegar and the same of sugar.

Chop fine and boil two hours, excepting the apples. Chop these separately and add half an hour before removing from the stove. Put the spices in when the sauce is nearly done. Put up hot in glass jars and seal.

Canned Corn and Beans.

I have canned corn and beans with good results:

Cook them as for the table. When almost done I add a certain canning compound. The corn canned in this way last summer tasted as if it were fresh from the garden.

I am also sending a recipe for Mother Hubbard Pie.

Have the crust already baked; then beat together the yolk of an egg, a tablespoonful of flour and half a cup of sugar. Add milk and water to suit the size of the pastry shell and a small tablespoonful of butter, with lemon extract to taste. Cook rather thick and pour into the shell. Whip the white of an egg stiff, add powdered sugar to make a meringue; spread upon the surface of the pie and set in a quick oven to color slightly.

I have other recipes I should like to submit to the readers of the Exchange.

PEGGY (Russell, Iowa).

Let us have them—please!

I take but one exception to your otherwise excellent communication. I am afraid of all "canning compounds." I have yet to hear of one that does not contain chemicals that, while they act as antiseptics, cannot be warranted not to injure the human stomach.

A respected correspondent sent me the other day directions for using salicylic acid in canning. I had had the same formula from an ingenuous manufacturer of "canned goods," who assured me that "it was quite harmless, and does not affect the taste of vegetables or fruits."

I have detected the taste of the drug (for it is that, and a good medicine in its way) in bleached pears and peaches and in corn. It leaves a rough feeling on a sensitive tongue. A conference of eminent learned men—most of them physicians—decided several years ago that the alarming increase of Bright's disease in America within the last quarter century is due, in a great measure, to the free use of this "chemical" in the preparation of canned fruits and vegetables, particularly in the cheaper brands served upon the tables of summer country hotels. I have told here before how our own consulting chemist—one of the best in the United States—found in three tablespoonfuls of preserved pears enough salicylic acid to dose a man!

There may be harmless "canning compounds." I hope there are. I dread them all—perhaps through ignorance. Put up your own fruits and vegetables, using no agent but heat, and you take no risks.

What is Green Soap?

I see that you recommend a green soap as a wash for "blackheads," and as I am troubled with these "little demons," I should be grateful if you will send me the recipe for the wash. That is, of what it consists and what kind of "green soap" it requires.

W. N. (Chicago).

You did not read of the "wash" in the Exchange. I should like to exercise the "demons," but the work is out of my province.

In Need of Abdominal Band

Will the owner of the abdominal band who offered it through the Exchange kindly send it to me? I have just been through a serious operation and I need it sadly.

E. L. R. (North Harwich, Mass.).

The band in question was given away before we had your letter. I am sorry! I hold your address in case another should be sent in to us.

Confessions of a Sunny Southerner

1. Cook corn on the cob by placing it in boiling water, and then boil but three minutes.

2. When boiling meat, half an hour before taking it up add half a teaspoonful of baking soda. It makes the meat tender.

3. After your mashed potatoes are whipped or mashed soft, add a wee bit of baking soda, beating it in well and quickly and serve. It will be fit for a king!

S. S. (Down in Dixie).

But why "confessions"?

And why do you withhold your name and address from the tidbit?

Some Unknown Vegetable

Kindly advise me through your Exchange what to do with "vegetable oranges" and "garden lemons." They are to be used as vegetables, we are told, but I do not know how to prepare them.

EMMA B. (New Carlisle, Ind.).

As I never heard of either, I cannot advise you. What do the lemons and oranges resemble? I am curious! Some horticulturist will please "rise and tell."

Evelyn R., Chicago

I was very much interested in the article upon "Good Bonbons," by "Evelyn R." (Chicago). I should like to know names of manufacturers of the fruit color pastes, that I may get the exact article. Also, where a confectioner's thermometer may be bought.

As I am anxious to learn how to make really good bonbons, if it is convenient for you to give me the address of "Evelyn R." I should be much indebted to you.

2. I wish to make a jelly and flavor it with mint, using some coloring matter to make it of a delicate green. I had thought of using Maiden Blush apples, with rhubarb—say, one quart of cut rhubarb to half a peck of apples for the jelly.

What do you think of this? Or have you something you think would be better for the purpose?

Mrs. B. M. N. (Wilmington, Del.).

If "Evelyn R." should see this request, will she kindly empower me to pass over her address to the querist? I cannot do it without her sanction.

2. If you will get the extract of mint sold for this purpose by druggists you need not use the rhubarb. Or you may bruise the green mint leaves and stems, straining the juice through muslin and get color and flavoring together, using as a foundation a clear, almost colorless apple jelly.

I should fear that rhubarb would destroy the finer flavor of the apple and disguise the aroma of the mint.

Musty Volumes

Please tell me what to put into my bookcases to prevent the leaves of the volumes from turning yellow and to destroy the disagreeable odor.

S. N. G. (Chicago).

If your library be perfectly dry and well ventilated, the leaves of your books should not yellow, and the bindings should have no unpleasant smell.

To keep off mould and the bookworm, paint the shelves with a cedar oil, and restore the volumes to their places when the oil has dried.

Uncooked Pickles

At one time you published a recipe for canning small cucumbers without cooking. I have seen them put up in that way and they were delicious—much nicer than when cooked. I mislaid or lost the recipe. If you could let me have it I should be very grateful.

And should I wish to make sweet pickles, please tell me what proportion of sugar to use.

Mrs. C. T. O.

I have no recollection of the recipe for green cucumber pickle (you say "canned") that is not cooked.

I refer your query to somebody who has cut out and not lost the formula.

2. In putting up peaches, plums, pears, etc., for sweet pickle, I allow four pounds of sugar to seven pounds of fruit.

Baby's Bill of Fare

IF YOU desire to give baby pleasure, do not fall into the mistake of introducing variety into his bill of fare. While the simple diet enjoined by nature and common sense agrees with and satisfies him, be you likewise content. Neither is it kind to create in him desires for what may be an unlawful indulgence. Up to the age of 3 or 4 years give him little meat—rare beef, steak or roast, tender roast mutton and roast chicken. Prohibit fried foods of all kinds, also stews and rich soups. Broths—well skimmed—will not hurt him, but he ought not to know the taste of gravy. Plain puddings may be a holiday luxury, also custards, blanc mange and ice cream in small quantities. Ripe, fresh fruits, partaken of in moderation, should take the place of most sweets; but these he should not eat until after his weaning is some months old. Make haste slowly with all innovations.

Thomas Carlyle called the human stomach "that most diabolical of all machines." It depends largely upon the mothers of the rising generation to decide whether in the next century the biting epigram shall be truth or falsehood.

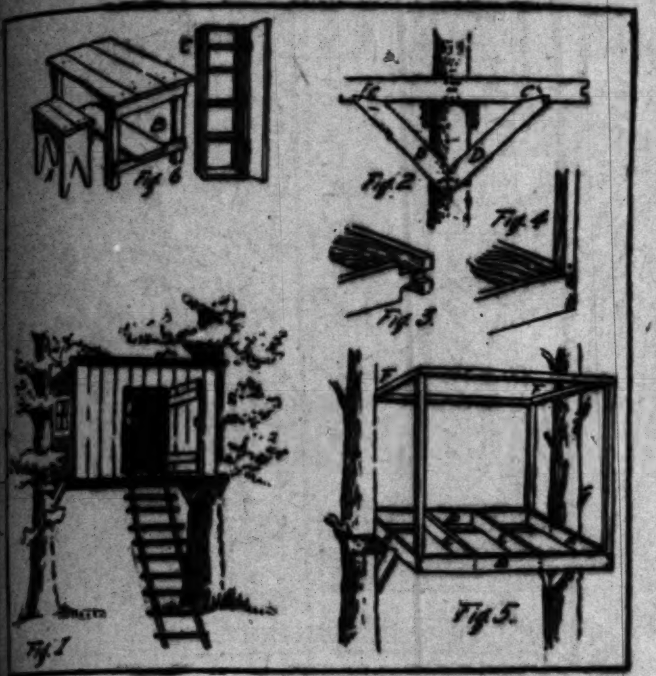
Tinkering Tom's House Among the Trees



"GUESS we've got to call 'im 'Tinkerin' Tom,' now that 'e's crazy 'bout this scheme o' makin' everything imaginable, by follerin' the instructions o' magazines," [illegible] Billy Mumford, captain of the "Bloody Robbers."

Skinny returned Billy's wink, while together they looked amusedly upon the handicraft of Tommy Bowes. But "Tinkering Tom," as he was now to be called, was so busy fashioning a new-fangled mechanical go-cart that the [illegible] went unnoticed. By way of [illegible], the two began talking over the affairs of the "gang."

"What's botherin' me is where we'll [illegible] this winter," said Billy, thoughtfully.

"That's so," replied Skinny; "we [illegible] to go all the way to the [illegible] when it's cold; Jack Warner's [illegible] won't let us have the barn since [illegible] set fire to it; an' Shorty's people, an' everybody else, for that matter, [illegible] us in the house, 'cause we [illegible] noise."

At this point Tommy seemed to take [illegible] in what his comrades were saying. Laying down his screwdriver, he [illegible]:

"I wanted to suggest somethin' to you [illegible]. Tomorrow I'm going to start [illegible] a little cabin between the [illegible] of those elms that're in the rear of my garden. I'm goin' to fix it up [illegible] the ground an' build a rope ladder [illegible] we can pull up after us, so's no one can interrupt."

"Bully for you, Tommy! You're the [illegible]!" shouted the others.

They said so many encouraging and [illegible] things that "Tinkering Tom" was induced then and there to quit work on the go-cart and begin the task of making a home for the "Bloody Robbers," of which body he was now an important member. And this is how he went about constructing the house:

From Stevens' lumberyard he got plenty of lumber. Using six-inch nails, he fastened two boards—each two inches thick, eight inches wide and [illegible] feet long—from tree to tree, on [illegible] sides of the trunks. The trees were six feet apart. These boards, which were placed about twenty feet from the ground, were given additional support by two blocks nailed in vertical position below them.

Then he took two boards (A-A), each six feet long, and after dovetailing the ends, nailed them at right angles to the first boards and above them; afterward, he used the supports [illegible] in the way shown in Figure 2. Boards B-B were then fitted into the dovetailed ends of A-A, and E-E nailed in place.—Uprights for the frame were made of two-by-three-inch spruce, the two front pair being seven feet high and the others six feet. They were fastened at the base by means of long, stout nails. For the top of the frame similar timbers were used.

The boards for the sides were nailed at the top to the timber frame and to the boards B-B and A-A at the bottom, and were strengthened by a timber run around on the inside, at half the height of the uprights. Doors and windows were constructed according to the diagram. Boards of the same kind as those used for the walls were employed in laying the floor, and similar ones were utilized for the roof. Two thicknesses of tar paper covered the roof, this being fastened down at the edges and seams by small metal washers and nails and the whole covered with two coats of paint.

Tommy even fashioned a bench and table (A and B) and a little closet (C) before he placed his house in the trees at the disposal of his comrades.

A glorious house-warming there was for the new home of the "Bloody Robbers." Only one tiny accident marred the success of the celebration. Several of the boys' sisters were invited to visit the house. They climbed the rope ladder only after considerable hesitation. And then, when all were bundled inside the tiny hut, admiring the cleverness of its construction, didn't some vengeful member of the "Bloody Pirates" steal up and jerk down the rope ladder!

The girls were in a sad plight; so were the boys. You see, the elms were by no means easy to climb. Finally, Skinny did manage to reach ground. Then began a long search for a ladder. There wasn't any handy. More than two hours passed before Skinny could return and enable the girls to reach earth safely. As the hour was late when the girls mounted the rope ladder, and as it was still later in the evening when the loss of the "stairway" was discovered, you can imagine what the girls' parents said when the party arrived home.

"Of course, I had to get the worst of it from all the folks," Tommy dolefully confided to Billy.

"Oh, well; we'll get even with the 'Pirates,' as we always do," said Billy, hopefully, "an' we'll do all our plannin' in the tree-house they tried to shut us up in."

Bwana Humpto in Africa

"WITH A FIENDISH GRIN HE BEGAN TO GNAW AT THE ROPE"

"ON A LOFTY CRAG PERCHED A BEAUTIFULLY FORMED GAZELLE"

(Photographs posed by figures of Humpty Dumpty Circus)

By Raber Mundorf

PHOTO wished to take a snapshot, but couldn't, because he was asleep. The night was cold and so was Photo. Heavy flannels he had donned, it is true; but his blankets persisted in slipping away from him. Very ungentlemanly blankets they were. He wouldn't have minded had he been able to take snapshots, for then he could have kept himself warm. (Snapshots are extremely heating). But he couldn't, because, as I said before, he was dreaming.

There were many exciting things to be photographed in his dreams, too. He had been dream-sympathizing with the warty rat. Other creatures, such as wicked rats, mice, moles and rabbits—from the jack rabbit to the tiny mouse-like fellow—were making fun of Warty because he had two warts on his lower lip. Photo offered to tie horsehairs round the warts and remove them. The other animals grew exceedingly angry and threatened to attack the lad. And they might have done so had not a number of birds, like those the hunting party had shot at Naivasha, come to the rescue. Splendid pelicans and Egyptian geese attacked the rodents in an endeavor to save Photo. Then the animals fled and all the birds disappeared except a gull with long red beak and legs and feathers of a beautiful slate blue. Photo longed to snap the gull, but he couldn't, because, as I've said twice before, he was asleep.

"Wake up, my boy!" some one shouted loudly.

It was the voice of Bwana Humpto, the good father of Photo and leader of the hunting party that was penetrating into the wilds of British East Africa.

"Please, father, bring me my kodak before I awake so that I can snap the beautiful gull!" pleaded the boy.

"You should never dream, Photo," said Doctor Pillo, sternly. "Here is a little verse which contains a deal of caution about dreaming and which I should like to have you memorize:

"Willie is so very bright—
Works with lots of vim and joy.
Why do people say, 'It's sad,
Willie's such a lazy boy'?

"Willie is so very good—
Not the slightest trace of sin.
Why, then, is it understood
Willie's always mischief in?

"Willie is so very bright—
Learns his lessons quick at school.
Why do teachers of him write:
'Willie seems a stupid fool'?

THE ANSWER.

"This may seem extremely queer
To you, Photo Humpto, dear.
Listen, then, while I explain;
Willie worked, time and again;
Willie studied, not in vain;
Willie really was so good
That he with the angels stood—
So the trouble, then, would seem,
All this happened in his DREAM.
And at day he was too tired
To make use of good acquired!"

When the doctor had completed his verse, and Photo had copied it upon the white bosom of his father's spare shirt, used for special occasions, such as dinner parties, in the British settlements, the sportsmen began a hasty breakfast. Afterward they commenced their march toward Mount Elgon, which they had planned to ascend.

On their way, several little reddish-brown water-buck were shot while feeding on a marshy plain. Later, Bosso, who guided the expedition, remarked that as soon as the party entered the wood they might have a chance to bag an impalla or two. But he warned the hunters to make no noise, or the impalla would whistle a shrill warning note and all game in the wood would be frightened and scatter. Photo had wandered a little distance from his fellows and was the first to espy an impalla.

"I'm sure he sees me and is about to whistle," muttered the lad to himself. Then he made up his mind that the animals should not hear the animal's whistle. As quickly as possible, he thrust a finger and a thumb in his mouth and blew a resounding trumpet blast. Immediately, all game stampeded, disappearing with a tumultuous rush.

"But why did you do it, my boy?" asked the much-annoyed father.

Whereupon Photo replied: "I thought if I whistled louder than the impalla, father, the creatures could not hear him."

"Yes, but your whistle is much the worse," said Dr. Pillo, sharply. "It would have frightened human beings, let alone dumb beasts."

Photo was very penitent for a time, but forgot his woes when the party reached in their travel that wonderful region lying close to Mount Elgon. Wonderful geysers there were, and pools containing water of shimmering, rainbow hues, and great mud terraces. It bore striking resemblance to Yellowstone Park, which Photo had visited in America.

Through this fairylike region the expedition wended its way, until the base of the mountain was attacked. Soon a camp was made, and Trappo, the naturalist, and Taxidermo set traps for small mammals. Others spent their time in various occupations, Bwana Humpto, his obedient son Photo and Dr. Pillo being the only persons who chose to renew the climb. These three mounted valiantly. After some hours the going became very rough. In one place the mighty hunter, who led, succeeded in attaining a foothold on a rocky pinnacle. Upon scrambling further up he loosened the rock behind him, thus giving Photo no place to rest his foot.

"Never mind, my boy; I shall haul up you and the doctor by means of this rope, an end of which I now throw to you," said Bwana Humpto, coolly.

Photo tied the rope about his waist and his father tugged away. The lad was suspended many feet above the ground, when suddenly a hyena appeared from behind a bowlder across the face of which the rope hung. He was an evil fellow, who had ventured up the mountain for the express purpose of doing harm to some hunter, should he find opportunity. With a fiendish grin he now proceeded to gnaw at the rope. He had a strong grip on the cord, so that Photo could by no means be lowered. Doctor Pillo was stricken dumb with amazement. It seemed that in a few moments the poor lad must fall to the rocks below and perish, when, with a quick movement, Bwana Humpto took one hand from the rope, jerked out a revolver and—

"Stop!" cried the Doctor. "In the event of Photo's death here is a little epitaph which I think it would be well to memorize:

Has no need of food or socks.
Let us plant a sweet verbena
'Round his home among the rocks."

Bwana Humpto paused until the verse was read. Then he coolly raised his revolver, took careful aim and fired. The hyena died. Photo was saved.

"Thank you, father," said Photo, gratefully. "I might not have got back to college in time for football next year had you not shot the beast."

But Bwana Humpto had already forgotten the accident. Far beyond, perched on a lofty crag, stood a beautifully formed gazelle. Bwana Humpto raised his rifle, took quick but careful aim and fired. The gazelle died. But no one was saved. In fact, three other gazelles were slain! You see, when the gazelle tumbled it fell backward and bore with it three gazelles that were feeding below. Thus the four were sent careering down a steep precipice, at the bottom of which they lay killed.

"Ah, 'twas a wonderful shot!" said the Mighty Hunter. Then he murmured hastily, "I must go back to camp at once and write a story of my remarkable killing while it is still fresh in my memory. Doctor Pillo, will you kindly skin these fine specimens and remove their horns?"

So Bwana Humpto made his way rapidly back to camp, while Photo Humpto tried to take snapshots of sunbeams and rocks.

(The twelfth and last Bwana Humpto story will appear next Sunday.)

The Rebellion of Little Miss Hawk Moth

THE last crimson ray of sunset vanished, and the glorious cloud tints of pearl and rose faded more and more, until the spreading twilight blotted out all color. And then stirred the winds of an autumn evening.

Little Miss Hawk-Moth, clinging closely to the gray wall, where her dull drab wings could not be distinguished among the moss and lichens, now fluttered restlessly.

"My friend," muttered she, "is it not time that we were flying?"

In reply, Miss Ghost-Moth likewise moved her wings. Shaking herself loose, she darted away, followed by her chum. They traveled far afield, and reveled in the sweet scents of night-blooming flowers.

As she rested upon a fragrant blossom little Miss Hawk-Moth watched a myriad host of moth-people flit above the tobacco plants, while they carried pollen from flower to flower. All white the petals gleamed under the light of a shining moon that sailed majestically in dark blue, starry heavens.

"How I love the moon!" sighed little Miss Hawk-Moth. "But wise moth-folk tell me I can never reach the moon, and that no matter how much I love other bright lights, I must not go near them, for they are dangerous."

Then she cried, rebelliously, "I don't think my elders are as wise as they pretend to be! I'm sure I can reach the moon, and I WILL!"

So away she flew, over meadow and wood and hill, and then upward. The little moth flew strongly and well, but at length her strength began to fail. Discouraged because she seemed no nearer the moon than before, Miss Hawk-Moth dropped toward the earth.

Without warning, a burst of flame greeted her eyes from the distance. Little Miss Hawk-Moth was bewildered. The light seemed as bright as the moon, yet the moon was still in its proper place in the sky. However, the light beckoned to her, and, not pausing to think, the foolish moth rushed heedlessly toward the flame.

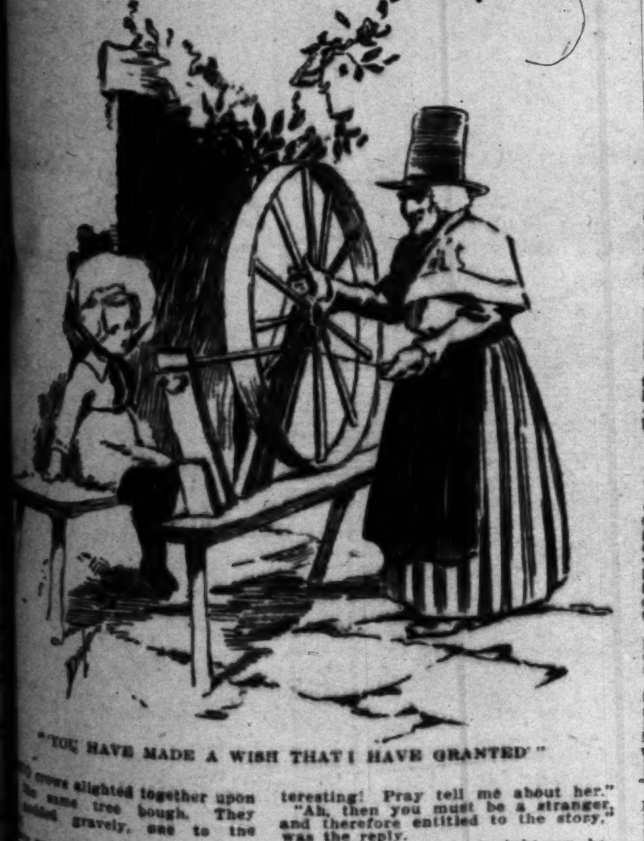
It was a house such as the little moth had never seen before. A window screen barred the way, but finally she discovered an opening. Into the room she fluttered, directly toward the radiant light which so greatly fascinated her.

Alas for poor little Miss Hawk-Moth! The flames she admired did not treat her kindly. No sooner did she flutter against a hot glass surface than down she fell, with wings scorched. Still she rushed at it, and was burned more severely.

And then little Miss Hawk-Moth painfully winged her way from the house, pursued by a big man, who sought to kill her. She had made the acquaintance of a lamp, as she afterward learned from those same wise folk whose advice she had spurned.

The little moth-lady still sits upon the white blossoms in the evening and gazes at the moon. No more does she attempt to fly there, however, and no light can attract her too near it.

A Wish from the Spinning-Wheel Fairy



"'YOU HAVE MADE A WISH THAT I HAVE GRANTED'"

Two crows alighted together upon the same tree bough. They nodded gravely, one to the other.

"Have you seen the prisoner today?" asked the first crow.

"Yes," croaked the other; "she was sad, but I think my news of the world cheered her."

[illegible] a third crow paused in his straight flight and joined [illegible] on their perch. He said, [illegible]:

"You speak of a prisoner. How interesting! Pray tell me about her."

"Ah, then you must be a stranger, and therefore entitled to the story," was the reply.

He who answered straightway began the following tale:

THE CROW'S TALE.

Somewhere in the Welsh valley, that is at the base of Mount Snowden, a tiny herd of black cattle grazed. A little girl, dark-haired and hazel-eyed, watched over them always and kept them from straying.

She grew more and more weary of her task. And one day, as she looked far down the valley and up at the mountains and hills, she said to herself:

"I shall run away from my tiresome work. In a land beyond the hills perhaps I may find a place where I shall have nothing to do."

The little girl stole toward home, leaving the cattle to wander as they willed. Her father was laboring in the fields and her mother did not see her tiptoe upstairs to her wee room in the loft. Soon the best clothes were donned; soon the lassie's flying footsteps put the cottage far behind her.

Fearlessly the maiden chose a path leading up the mountainside. After awhile the narrow path lost itself among closely growing trees and shrubbery. The little girl kept going on.

Then opened a large space among the trees. In the middle of it was a quaint little cottage, covered with vines. An old lady with beautiful white hair sat busily spinning before the cottage. Without raising her eyes she said:

"Go into the house, little girl, and eat the bread and honey and drink the sweet, cold milk you will find there."

The lass courtesied her thanks and did as she was bidden. The bread was of good wheat and light, the clear, golden honey was fresh and no milk could have been better. Besides, she was very hungry. So the miss enjoyed her meal greatly. When she had finished eating she came to the door to again thank the kind lady and to watch the spinning.

"I wish that I could stay in this pretty place all the time and drive no cows nor do any other kind of work," sighed she.

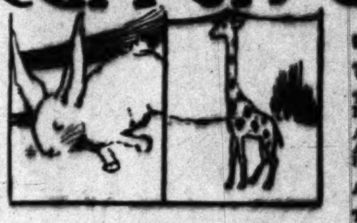
"You have made a wish that I, the Spinning Wheel Fairy, have granted," said the white-haired lady. "You wish idleness, therefore you shall have it. From this day you will constantly watch me spin; nor can you ever leave me unless I remove the spell I have cast upon you."

At first the little girl was pleased. But as the weeks passed she began to long for her parents and want something to do. But she could only walk in the garden or watch the fairy spin, or perhaps chat to the birds that flew by.

As a woman, still held captive, she laments, "How I wish I could be busy all the time!"

"So now, you see, my friend," concluded the crow, "how eager and grateful the prisoner must be for the news we bring. Would you not be sad if you were she?"

The Mechanical Person of Pingo



TO PINGO ISLE, with cheery smile, the Person made his way;
The smile was all he had to while his time in work or play,
But very lucky and most plucky was he thus to grin,
Because his friends the hungry maws of sharks had gone within
And he alone was left, bereft of all except his skin.

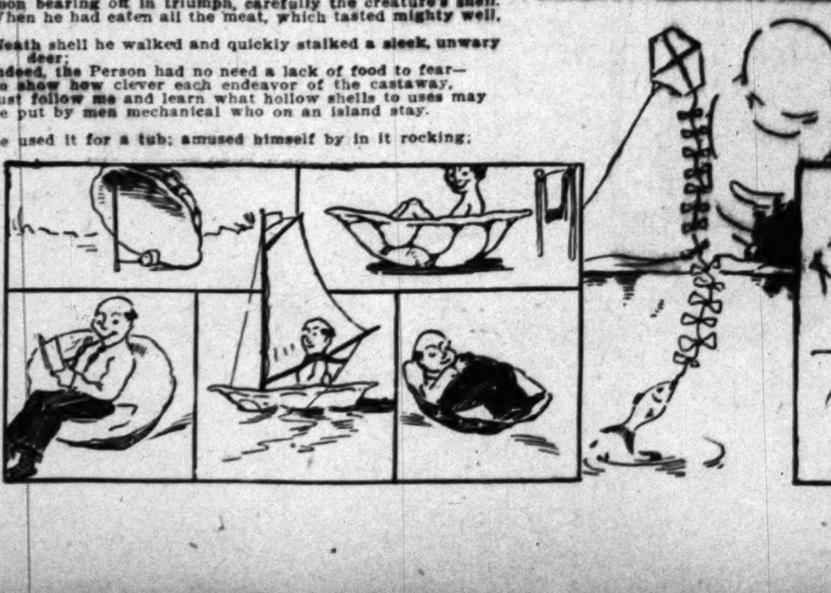
So now the Person made a vow, this Person now of Pingo,
"I'll surely not sit here demurely," said he; "no, by jingo!"
And then he whacked and then he hacked a turtle, sad to tell,
Soon bearing off in triumph, carefully the creature's shell,
When he had eaten all the meat, which tasted mighty well.

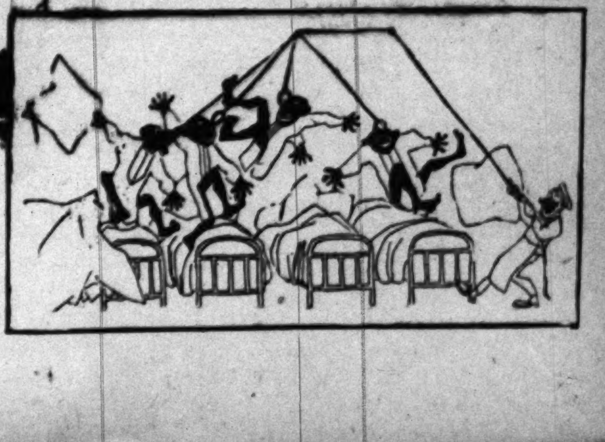
'Neath shell he walked and quickly stalked a sleek, unwary deer;
Indeed, the Person had no need a lack of food to fear—
To show how clever each endeavor of the castaway,
Just follow me and learn what hollow shells to uses may
Be put by men mechanical who on an island stay.

He used it for a tub; amused himself by in it rocking;
He slung it for a hammock, hung it high, the serpents mocking;
These things he tried, and more beside—this Person, who began
To rule the island, schooling all the natives to a man
In doing tasks mechanical, as docile creatures can.

A telegraph by tall giraffe had wire entirely placed;
A kite to catch a dish of fish was to the Person's taste;
In grabbing herbs, rabbits disturbed a chloroformed-soaked half
And soon were stretched out dead and fetched to grace the board in state;
The slave arose, with ring in nose, in haste—strange to relate.

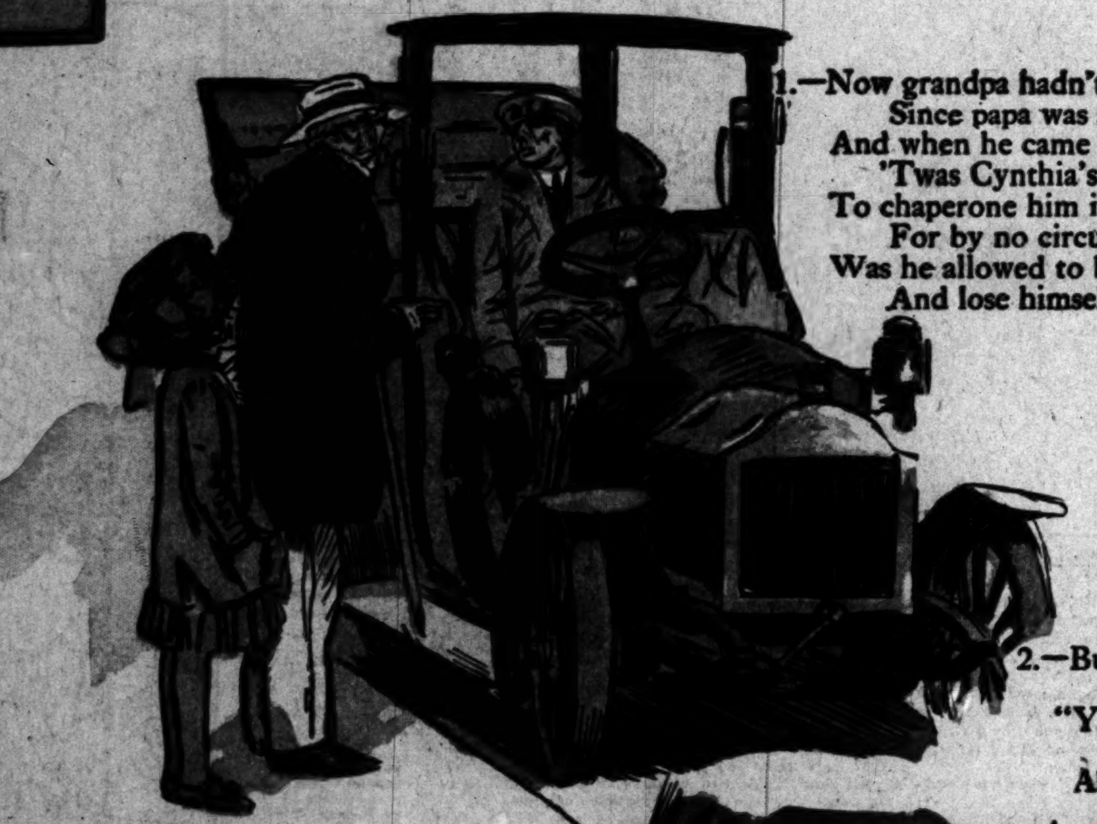
What can't a man mechanical do, if he wants to do it?
In case that I should place you on a "Pingo," would you rue it?
And would, or could, you smile, beguiling well a lengthy stay,
Just like this Person, like the man mechanical—but, say—
Perhaps you do not wish to talk of foolish things today.
— — Do you?

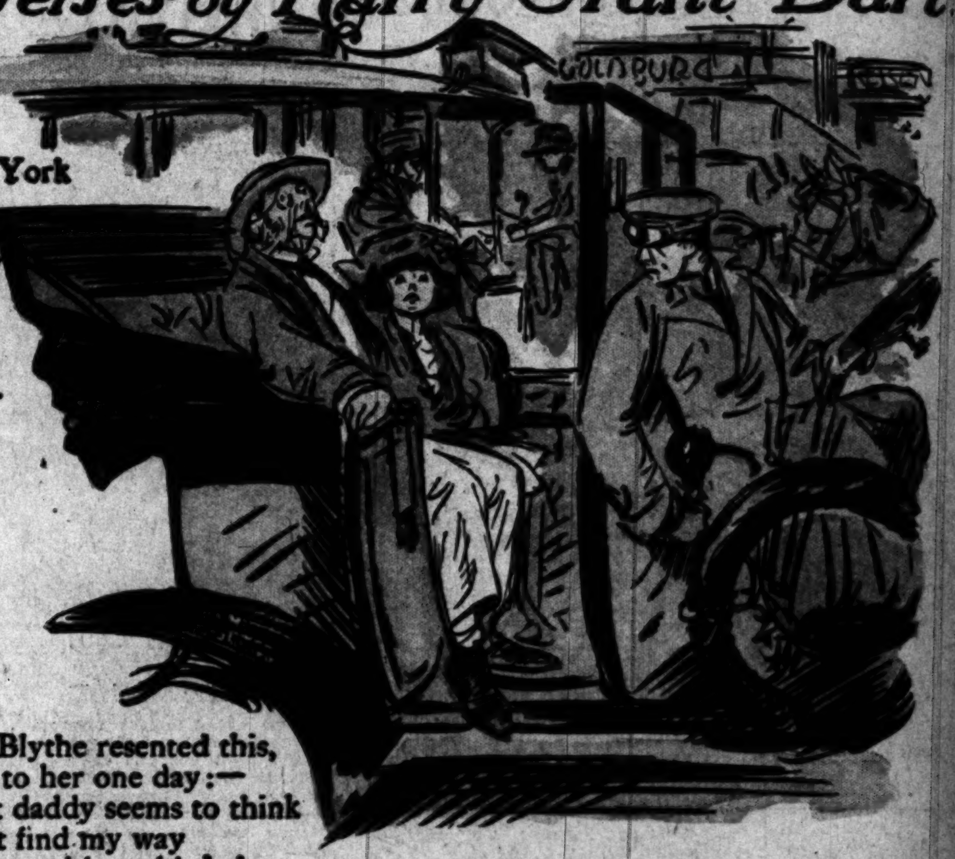




CYNTHIANNA BLYTHE

Drawings by Wallace Morgan ~ Verses by Harry Grant Dart



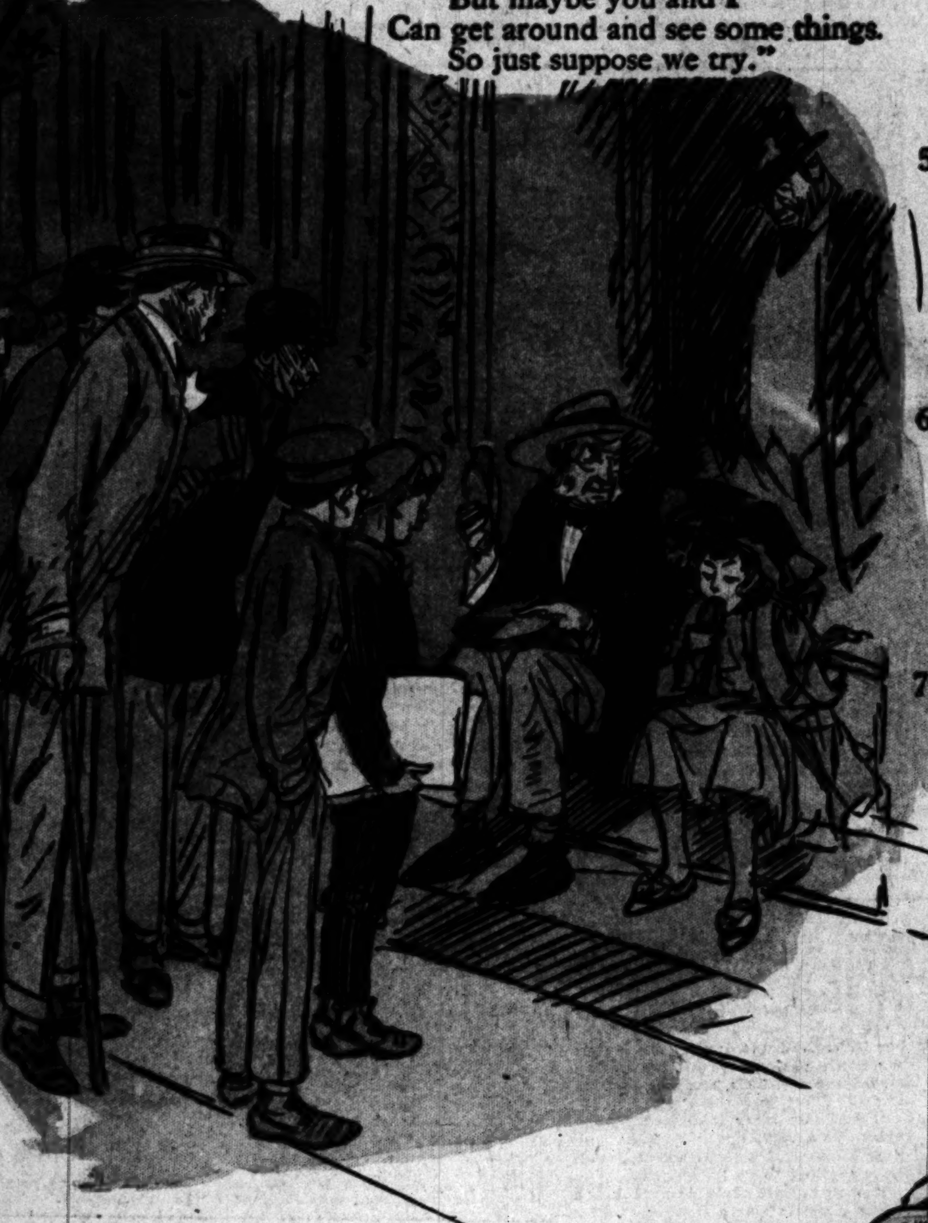


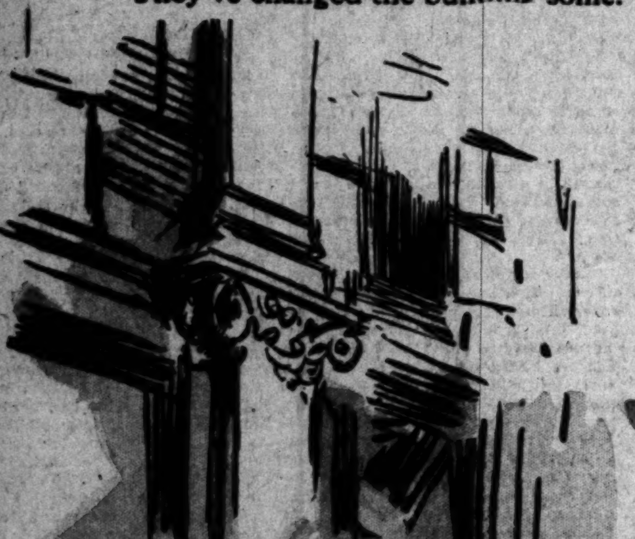
1.—Now grandpa hadn't seen New York
Since papa was a boy,
And when he came to visit her
'Twas Cynthia's greatest joy
To chaperone him in the park,
For by no circumstance
Was he allowed to be alone
And lose himself perchance.

2.—But Grandpa Blythe resented this,
And said to her one day:—
"Your brilliant daddy seems to think
I couldn't find my way
About this town without his help;
But maybe you and I
Can get around and see some things.
So just suppose we try."

3.—He hailed a passing taxicab
And said:—"Look here, my son,
Just rein up here and let us in;
We want to have some fun.
Just tote us 'round by Union square,
And stop us by the way
At old Jim Dinsmore's candy shop,
At Eighty-eight Broadway."

4.—All through the busy streets she laughed
At grandpa's popping eyes.
He gazed at Number Eighty-eight
In wondering surprise.
He viewed the twenty storied pile,
And then remarked:—"I vum!
Why, here's where Dinsmore used to keep.
They've changed the building some."

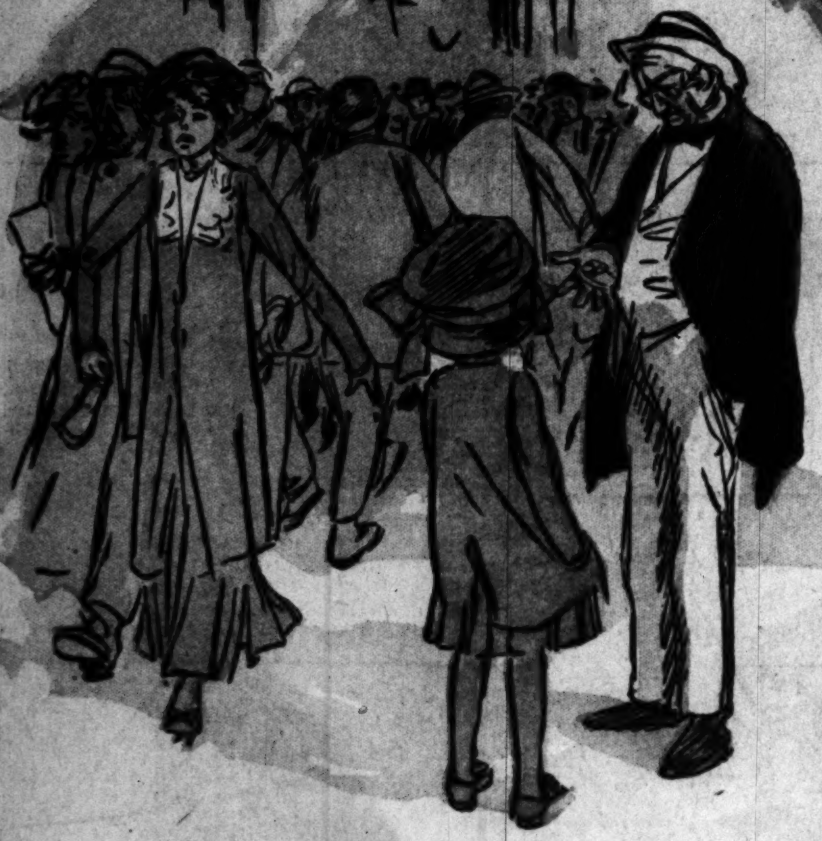




5.—Then, as they left the taxicab,
And grandpa paid the fare,
He found that he, through error, had
But twenty cents to spare.
His goodly roll reposed at home;
But then, he said, he knew
Of old acquaintances about
There ought to be a few.

6.—His efforts to discover friends
Were very much in vain,
For things had changed in Nassau street
And also Maiden lane.
With several hours of futile search,
He finally despaired,
And he and Cynthianna Blythe
Were hungry, tired and scared.

7.—When papa left the Stock Exchange
His pride received a shock,
For, seated on the noble steps,
Just near by in the block,
Were Cynthia and his dear old dad,
Too tuckered out to stand,
With pie and "hot dog" sandwiches
Displayed on either hand.



8.—In papa's car they travelled home,
And grandpa, on the way,
Of words concerning whereabouts
Had very few to say.
"From Podunkville to Seedlingsburg
The road, perhaps, you know;
But when in town," remarked papa,
"You'd better keep in tow."

Pioneer
ROOFING

One of the principal points about Pioneer Rubber Sanded Roofing is—it requires no paint, owing to its sanded surface. Proof against extremes of heat or cold—it has stood the severest tests to which roofing can be subjected.

Pioneer Rubber Sanded Roofing is made of wool felt, saturated with asphaltum; top surfaced with sand, and run through heavy steel rollers—to give it a hard, flinty finish.

Comes in handy rolls of 108 square feet, with smooth lap edges. Easy to lay—no special tools needed. Everything that is necessary in the way of nails, and liquid cement for laps, is furnished in the center of each roll—without extra charge.

LET YOUR LIGHT SHINE.

THE laymen of the Protestant churches, we note by a press dispatch from the East, are taking up the work of evangelizing the world. Undoubtedly evangelization has been left in recent past times too much to the ordained clergy, and the laity have kept so much aloof from active participation in the work, contenting themselves with contributing more or less liberally of their means. They are now not to relax the liberal hand, but with the contribution of money is to go personal participation in the work.

Let us go back to the earliest work of the evangelizers who undertook the task of winning the heathen world to the worship of the Christian God as He was presented to us in the life and teachings of Jesus of Nazareth. The thought we presented in that former article was this: The Apostle Paul, undoubtedly the leading spirit among the earliest disciples, in dealing with Jews and Gentiles was extremely careful not to attempt any abrupt or violent break between the thoughts, conceptions and modes of worship inherited from long years of ancestral practice by those to whom he addressed himself. He sought in no way to interrupt the current of their thought or to eradicate their conceptions excepting in the most fundamental matters where the conceptions of the heathen or of the Jews were radically and irreconcilably opposed to the views he had to present. In all other things he was very tolerant, broad of mind and charitable of spirit. We instanced the fact that the Christian Christmas was only an adaptation of the Roman Saturnalia and of the Teutonic feast which celebrated the slaying of the hero Balder by the arrow of Loki. We further referred to the fact that when he stood on Mars Hill and addressed himself to the very intellectual people of Athens he was exceedingly careful to commend them for their profound religious spirit, saying: "I perceive that in all things ye are very religious," and that he did not come to them to present to their minds a new God, but rather to speak to them of one they already worshiped.

Now we wish to go a step farther in this direction. At the time that the Gospel of Christ was offered to the Gentile and Jewish world the people dwelling around the Mediterranean Sea were under the spell of a system of philosophy known as Neo-Platonism. It was a pretty radical change from the original philosophy taught by the Greek thinker Plato. In fact, it was an eclectic system, taking what its votaries conceived to be the best from all theretofore antagonistic systems of philosophy. It incorporated ideas that were Egyptian, going back to the earliest Coptic thought, ideas that were Persian, going back to the teachings of the early followers of Zoroaster, thoughts that were Roman and thoughts that were Greek. Turn to Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians and we find phrases there almost verbatim copies of those found in the teachings of the Neo-Platonic type. They had arranged a system of theology which recognized under one supreme divine being a wonderfully complex but orderly system of lesser divinities known by the names of physical powers and by the offices held under human governments. We propose to quote a few of these Neo-Platonic phrases used in the epistles of the Apostle Paul. "Far above all principality and power and might and dominion." "The fullness of him that filleth all in all." "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness in this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." These phrases are used in the Epistle to the Ephesians, residents of a Syrian city on the shores of the Mediterranean Sea, but in reading these words we must remember that the first converts to Christianity were nearly all Jews, the Gentiles coming in more slowly; but these Jews, like Paul himself, were often very profoundly learned in the Neo-Platonic philosophy of that time, and like himself easily understood the references.

Now turn to the same author's letter to the Colossians, a Grecian city, and still we have the same phraseology as follows: "For by him were all things created that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones or dominions or principalities or power." "For it pleases the Father that in him should all fullness dwell." These words "fullness" and "full of" all refer to the radical conception of the Neo-Platonic philosophy expressed by the Greek word "pleroma." It was a technical word, a doctrinal word, and had a fixed and absolute meaning in that system of philosophy. Coming down past the times of the apostles, we find Origen of Alexandria, one of the leaders of Christian thought at that time, still more Neo-Platonic than Paul. His place of abode was Alexandria, near the mouth of the Nile in Egypt, the head city of this form of philosophy.

If we were in this evangelization movement and the kingdom of China was our field of work, we would seek out in the Chinese philosophy and religious thought every idea that was most particularly allied with the teachings of the Christian and Hebrew Scriptures. We would leave antagonistic matters as much as possible in abeyance and confine ourselves to showing to the Chinese the points of similarity between their present conceptions and those we wished to have their attention called to. We would make the first part of the Fifth Commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother." We would have this printed on tablets by the million in Chinese and placarded on every wall and rock all over the Flowery Kingdom. We would call attention to it as one of the most fundamental, radically basic principles in the Christian religion. The Chinese religion is very largely a worship of ancestors, and here is where we would obtain a lodgment for the consideration of Christian thought in showing the similarity of their own form of worship with our religious teaching. Another point, and we are done. The Chinese are the most peace-loving of all the civilized nations of the world. They have been lovers of peace as far back as we can trace their history. It was because of their peaceful disposition that the Manchus, ages ago, few in number but warlike in spirit, were able to overrun the kingdom and set up the Manchu dynasty, which lasts to the present day. Here again by the million we would print placards pointing to Jesus Christ as the Prince of Peace. We would quote His teaching in favor of peace and impress upon the oriental mind by every means possible the fact that the Christian religion, whatever may be the practice of Christian nations, exerts its influence altogether in favor of peace. In dealing with the Chinese in detail upon these points we would teach them the amelioration that had been wrought in warfare because of the inculcation of Christian doctrines and the cultivation of the Christian spirit. A text-book which would go carefully into a comparison of the bloodthirstiness and cruelty of ancient war and the much ameliorated condition of wars in modern times would be valuable to show to the Chinese the influences for peace exercised by the Christian religion.

The Wanderers

By Wilbur D. Nesbit

As a bird that wandereth from her nest, so is a man that wandereth from his place.—[Proverbs vii, 8.

What is the call the wild birds hear,
  Too subtle for our ken?
What hail comes to the fallow deer
  From distant brake or glen?
Is it the same that soft and clear
  Goes out to wandering men?

What is the call that minds the bird
  Of its long vacant nest?
Is it upon the echoes blurred
  By vagrant breeze caressed,
Just as the sighing, voiceless word
  Which tells men "Home is best?"

What puts the music in the call
  Which comes to them afar—
By mountainside or city wall,
  'Neath pine or deodar—
The music that bids one and all
  Turn where the home things are?

None knows the mystic call which comes
  To man and bird and beast,
As waking as the throbbing drums,
  When warfare long has ceased—
Insistently it sings and thrums
  To great ones and the least.

It may be but a rustling tree
  Which sings it with its leaves;
It may be that the sighing sea
  The summons softly weaves;
But what and howsoe'er it be
  The call each one receives.

It is the melody divine—
  The music of the spheres
That, clear in cadence, faint and fine,
  Comes sweetly to our ears—
A song of infinite design
  Through God's unnumbered years.

An Indian With a Remarkable Memory.

William Poodry—the Indians sometimes call him Gee-Oo-Wah-Kak, or Bitter-Sour—is an elaborate bit of mechanism. No man in all the Six Nations has a memory to equal his. That is why he is the preacher. He holds no office. He has no religious duties or qualifications. He does not preach or pray. He simply repeats from memory, word for word, the interminably long ritual of the festival. Passionless, gestureless, infallible, he stands in the middle of the council-house, three hours a day for three days in succession, reeling off the flowery prophecy and the stern chidings of the ritual. From time to time the audience grunts forth the responses or murmur as the memory of their sins fall heavy on them.

For 109 years this ritual of penance and prophecy has been repeated by the Six Nations annually in exactly the same way and with precisely the same words as it is being repeated this week on the Tonowanda Reservation. Like the Odyssey, it grew out of the past, taking on new form and substance with every meeting of the nations. But in the year 1800 one Ga-Yu-Diu, a Seneca Indian living on the lands which are now the Alleghany Reservation, compiled the ancient prayers and prophecies and made them into a book. From that day to this the form has not changed, for if the memory of the preachers weakens, there is the book itself to refer to.—[Buffalo News.

The Great Dowager. By Frank G. Carpenter.

BODY STILL IN PEKING.

COST OF FUNERAL WILL RUN UP INTO THE MILLIONS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PEKING (China.)—The body of the great Empress Dowager is still in Peking. It lies in one of the palaces of the Forbidden City, in a coffin of cypress wood almost a foot thick, bound with rawhide and covered with lacquer. It will rest there for several weeks yet, and will then be carried to its final home in the eastern tombs. The preparations for the funeral are now making. Its cost will run into the millions; and the road to the imperial cemetery will, figuratively speaking, be paved with gold.

The great Dowager had luxurious tastes, and was fond of pomp in all of her doings. She spent money like water, and used fabulous sums to keep up her palaces. During the last year of her life she had planned a new home at the Summer Palace, and had ordered the architects to draw the designs. The buildings were to cost 4,000,000 taels, or about $3,000,000, and the work was to have been begun in 1909. The plans were made, but owing to the Dowager's death, they will not be carried out. I am told that Her Majesty gave equally elaborate directions as to her mausoleum, and that it is being conconstructed on a magnificent scale.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

The great Empress Dowager is said to have been the richest woman in Asia. There is no queen living who has had such sums at her command. At the time of her sixtieth birthday a hint was sent out to the various officials that each should give the old lady a present, and money rolled in from all parts of China. Altogether something like $70,000,000 was sent to Peking.

This was about the time of the Chinese-Japanese war, and some of the money was spent to pay the expenses of that calamitous struggle. The then bad condition of the Chinese navy is said to have been partially due to the avarice of the old Empress. As the story goes, the government had set aside $15,000,000 for new warships. The old Dowager said it was a pity to waste so much money that way, and she took the naval appropriation and built a new palace. The officials remonstrated. They said the money had been voted for the navy and must be accounted for.

"That is easy enough," replied the great Dowager, and she straightway had carved on the gates of her new buildings an inscription which read: "These are the palaces of the navy."

The Dowager's Head Squeezer.

Since the Empress Dowager died, I have heard many stories about Her Majesty's champion squeezer, the famous eunuch, Li Lien Ying. He was for a long time her body servant, and later her Minister of Finance and collector of bribes. He invested her moneys for her in pawnshops, and in loans at high rates, and at the same time took such a goodly rake-off for himself that he is now said to be worth tens of millions of dollars.

No one outside China can appreciate the bribery connected with public office. Every official who came to the palace had to pay something to this cobbler's son, and even Li Hung Chang was once held up outside the gates for three days because he would not submit to his extravagant demands. I am told that it cost to pay the palace expenses during the life of the Dowager something like $30,000,000 a year, and a great deal of this came from such squeezes.

When the treasury grew low, the Dowager sent out collectors, who traveled from official to official over the empire and demanded gifts. One of these collectors was named Kang Yi. He was sent on a squeezing tour south, having been ordered to bring back at least 200,000 ounces of silver. When Kang Yi visited Shanghai he demanded that the Chinese Merchant Steamship Company, then under the control of Sheng Kung-Pao, should pay the government $200,000 per year. Sheng complained that the business would not stand it, and compromised at half the sum.

The viceroys of Nanking and Wuchang were heavily bled by Kang Yi, as were also those of Tien-tsin and Canton. The squeezing in the latter place was probably aided by a brother of Li Hung Chang, who was an official there. He was a friend of the Dowager, and he squeezed so much that the people nicknamed him "The Bottomless Bag."

Was She a Demon?

One hears all sorts of stories about the Empress Dowager. All acknowledge her ability and say she will rank among the great queens of all time. There is no question as to her strength of character. Some exalt her to the skies as an angel of mercy and light, while others say she was a demon incarnate, and they compare her private life to that of the Russian Empress Catherine the Great. As to her demoniac character, her detractors say she poisoned her husband, the Emperor Hsien-Feng, and thereby became ruler in connection with another empress whom he married before her. They suspect that the death of that empress was caused by the Dowager's machinations and plots, who then reigned supreme during the minority of her son, the Emperor Tung Chieh, who was a baby when chosen.

When Tung Chieh had reached the age of 15, at which time he might aspire to rule independently, he died of smallpox, and there are some malicious enough to say that his mother, the Empress Dowager, assisted him on the fairy ride to a far country. They allege that he had begun to resist her domination, and that the smallpox was really an overdose of opium pills. They say also that after his death the suicide of his wife, the Empress, who threw herself into a well, was assisted by this same great woman, and that other crimes of a similar nature may be laid to her charge.

How Kwang-Su Was Punished.

Take, for instance, a story which is whispered among the officials here at Peking. It relates to Kwang-Su, the late Emperor, and to a favorite concubine of his whom the great Dowager thought was inciting him to rebel against her. She ordered the Emperor to come before her, and then had his sweetheart brought in. When the two were kneeling, she charged them with treason, and said to the Emperor:

"I shall now show you how I treat traitors."

She thereupon gave a signal, and her executioners seized the concubine and with a silken cord strangled her to death before the eyes of her imperial lover.

The power of the great Dowager was supreme. A word from her could slice off a head, and her followers knew it. They trembled in her presence and dared not resist her. When Her Majesty lay on her deathbed some of the grand councillors proposed to raise to the throne another prince than the one she had selected and to make Prince Ching regent. Thereupon the great Dowager gathered her strength and rose up, saying:

"You officials think you can humbug me because I am old. Verily, I think the time for your death has arrived."

Possibly on Angel.

Such is one view of this great ruler's character. On the other hand, Miss Carl, who wrote a book giving her experiences in painting the Empress Dowager's portrait, says that she was kind and sweet and good. Mrs. Conger, the wife of our former Minister, speaks of her as a scholar and an artist, and there are many who will tell you that the charges of her being an assassin are false and malicious. I know the story about her being a slave girl is untrue. She came from one of the best of the Manchu families. Her father was Duke Chao, a military man, who was beheaded after she had married the Emperor Hsien-Feng.

There is no doubt but that she was true to her friends; and that Pu Yi is now on the throne is a living evidence of that trait of her character. The inside story of how this baby became Emperor is yet to be told. One of the highest officials gave me the bones of the matter as we chatted together last night. Said he:

"It had its birth in the coup d'etat of 1898. Kwang Su, the young Emperor, had entered upon his career as an imperial reformer, and had planned to put the great Empress Dowager out of the way. In company with his advisers, Kang Yu Weh and others, he had planned to have Her Majesty and her most influential officials executed. For this purpose, he commanded Yuan Shih Kai, who then had charge of the only modern army in the empire, consisting of about 5000 well-drilled troops, to come to Peking. As Yuan kneeled before him in the palace, the Emperor ordered him to march his army to Tein-tsin and slaughter Gen. Yung Lu, the great Dowager's friend. After that, Yuan was to march on to Peking, surround the imperial palace and capture the Empress Dowager herself. Gen. Yung Lu was the viceroy of Tien-tsin, and as such was commander-in-chief of the army of which Yuan Shih Kai was the general. Yuan bowed low as the Emperor gave him these orders, and then begged that the command might be put in writing. This the Emperor refused, saying that a verbal order from him was good enough, whereupon the Chinese general acceded and left.

As Yuan Shih Kai started back to his army, which was near Tien-tsin, he began to reflect on the respective ability and forces of the Emperor and Empress Dowager, and decided in favor of the latter. He went to Gen. Yung Lu and revealed the plot. Yung Lu at once took a special train and came to Peking. He drove out at night to the Summer Palace, where the great Dowager was living, and before daybreak she had raised an army of her eunuchs and servants and sent them to Peking and made the Emperor captive. Her Majesty then declared that he was not fit to rule, and made him send out an edict begging her to again take the throne. He was then confined in a building in the middle of a lake inside the Forbidden City, and he had no more power to the day of his death.

How Pu Yi Became Emperor.

In the meantime, the old Empress Dowager did not forget her good friends Yuan Shih Kai and Yung Lu. Yuan Shih Kai at once became the most influential man in the empire, and he remained such until the great Dowager died. He has since been disgraced, but he has many friends, and may again come to the front.

As to Gen. Yung Lu, the Dowager rewarded him by making his daughter Empress, and his grandson the ruler of China.

There is a pretty story in connection with this. According to it the Empress Dowager said to Yung Lu:

"I have just had a vision in which I have seen your descendants on the imperial throne, and I think the vision is bound to come true. Here is Prince Chun, the brother of the Emperor, and the most likely scion of the imperial line. Now you have a daughter of the right age for marriage. We will join her with Prince Chun, and the first son shall be Kwang Su's successor. Yung Lu gladly acceded. The two were married, and the baby, Emperor Pu Yi, was the fruit of their union. Just before the old Dowager died, she wrote the edict carrying out her part of the contract with Yung Lu, and thereby his baby grandson has ascended the throne.

How the Dowager Died.

The last hours of the great Empress were full of terrible pain. According to etiquette, the doctors dared not touch her, and could not experiment to find out her disease. I am told they watched her on their knees and saw her struggle and fight as death came on. The edicts sent out by her gave but little idea of her illness. Nevertheless, they are pathetic. Here is one that was published the middle of last November, about two weeks before her death:

"From the beginning of autumn our health has been poor. The officials and governors of every province have been ordered to send us physicians, but their prescriptions have not availed. Now the negative and positive elements in us are failing. We have ailments external and internal. Our breast is stopped up, our stomach is bilious, our back and legs painful, our appetite failing. Upon moving, our breath fails, and there is coughing and panting. Besides, we have chills and fever. Sleep is far from our eyes, and the strength of our body is failing. The viceroys, governors and generals are urged to send us physicians, and any who succeed in aiding us will receive special grace."

The edict was sent out and a new corps of doctors brought in. They likewise failed, and other edicts which were published about three days later stated that they were degraded and would work for some time in the future without pay as a punishment.

During her last days Her Majesty lived almost entirely upon woman's milk. She had a large corps of wet nurses and went back to the customs of her babyhood for nourishment. This is a common prescription for members of the imperial family.

Chats About the Great Dowager.

During my stay in Peking, I have had chats with many who knew the great Dowager. I remember a conversation with one of her ladies-in-waiting, a Chinese girl who speaks excellent English. She represents the Empress as having been a bluffer and as knowing how to play off one party or man against another. She was dictatorial and made her ladies dress as an understudy to herself. She would say along toward evening: "I intend to wear a red costume on the morrow, and on the day following all the girls must appear in red." The next day the order would be for yellow, or perhaps green, and the court lady who came in wearing the wrong color was punished.

When in her prime, Her Majesty was rather fine-looking. During her last days her face was drawn awry from a stroke of paralysis. This can be seen in some of the photographs which I have been able to secure in Peking. Her Majesty objected to being photographed, and she would not permit photographers to come into the palace. However, one of the court ladies who had been abroad as the daughter of the Chinese Minister to Paris brought in a camera and made some pictures. In some way the plates fell into the hands of outside photographers, and soon the likenesses of Her Majesty were sold over Peking. When this was known, the girl who owned the camera was dismissed and her family disgraced.

Behind the Scenes With the Dowager.

This woman tells me that the Dowager was fond of pretty things, and that she had great artistic taste. She painted pictures herself and wrote Chinese scrolls most beautifully. She supported a school for artists and had something like eighteen scholars in it who worked for her.

As to her penmanship, at an audience which she gave to Mrs. Conger, Mrs. Miles and other ladies when Gen. Miles made his trip around the world, she presented each of the guests with a scroll of her own making, saying:

"Some people charge that I do not write these scrolls myself, but I will show you that I do." Thereupon she called for large pieces of red paper, and with a brush, which she grasped tightly in her whole hand, she made some exquisite Chinese characters. I have seen portfolios containing scores of her paintings of flowers. Some of these are owned by Dr. George Morrison, the correspondent of the London Times in Peking.

Her Majesty's quarters in the palace contained many works of Chinese art, and among them were some which were exceedingly valuable. At one of her luncheons to the ladies of the diplomatic corps a jade bowl was shown. This was two feet high and nearly three feet in diameter; it was decorated with grapevines cut in the jade. At the same luncheon was exhibited another piece of jade, of the shape of a mountain, with trees, houses, men, animals and bridges carved upon it. It was five feet high, and more than that thick. When it is remembered that a piece of jade as big as one's thumb nail is worth several dollars, the cost of such work can be appreciated.

The great Dowager was fond of children. At one of her luncheon parties she asked the wife of our Chinese secretary, who acted as the interpreter, to bring her little girls with her. Only one came, and the Empress Dowager carried her off to her own bedroom and allowed her to play with carvings of jade and other precious stones. Upon leaving, the little girl was given a jade doll baby, which she carried home.

Her Imperial Majesty was fond of fine dressing. She had as many gowns as Queen Elizabeth of England, and all were of the most beautiful silks, satins and velvets. She wore much jewelry, and also the wigs and other hair decorations of high Manchu ladies. Her shoes were of Manchu style, each having a big heel in the center of the foot, which raised the wearer five or six inches..

Great Dowager and Modern Reform.

During her latter days the Empress Dowager was the soul of the reform movement. She knew but little of the condition of her people until the Boxer trouble occurred, when she was forced to flee to a far-off province. The Chinese had no opportunity to prepare the way for her, and she saw for the first time the real poverty of her people. During that period she evidently made up her mind to change things if she ever got back to Peking. As soon as she returned, she advised the foreign office to that effect.

Before arriving at the capital, she sent word that if foreigners would like to see the return of the court it could be arranged, and thereupon windows were rented along the line of march. The quarters of our legation were in a balcony over a silk shop, and those who saw Her Majesty tell me she was carried by in a yellow Sedan chair, and that she waved her hand to our Minister as she passed.

During that trip the great Dowager was very timid. She was upset by the war and the new innovations, and was as near real fear as she ever was in her whole eventful life. A part of the return trip was made on the railroad, when Her Majesty took her first ride on the cars. When the whistle of the locomotive blew, she was frightened, and asked what was the matter. She was told that the engineer was merely announcing a road crossing, and that nothing was wrong. She thereupon told the conductor that in the future he must send her word every time before the whistle blew, that she might not be frightened.

Turtle Worship.

At a place called Kotron, on the French Ivory Coast, the natives believe that to eat or destroy a turtle would mean death to the guilty one or sickness among the family. The fetich men, of whom there are plenty, declare that years ago a man went to sea fishing. In the night his canoe was thrown upon the beach empty. Three days afterward a turtle came ashore at the same place with the man on its back alive and well. Since that time they have never eaten or destroyed one of that species, although they enjoy other species.

If one happens now to be washed ashore there is a great commotion in the town. First the women sit down and start singing and beating sticks, next a small piece of white cloth (color must be white) is placed on the turtle's back. Food is then prepared and placed on the cloth, generally plantains, rice and palm oil. Then amid a lot more singing, dancing and antics of the fetich people it is carried back into the sea and goes on its way rejoicing.—[London Globe.

New Dean of Norwich.

INTELLECTUAL GIANT CAN PREACH IN THREE LANGUAGES.

From a Special Correspondent.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Among the crowd of intellectual pigmies who adorn—or otherwise—the English Church, the Rev. Henry Russell Wakefield, who has just been appointed Dean of Norwich, stands out a veritable giant. To be able to preach an interesting sermon is beyond the reach of most of the English clerics, but to do this fluently in two other languages as well as his own, it may safely be said, is an accomplishment possessed only by the new Dean of Norwich.

Mr. Russell Wakefield was intended for the diplomatic service, and to fit him for this, he was sent first to the Lycée Bonaparte, in Paris, and afterward to the swagger German University at Bonn, where the princes of the imperial family are sent to absorb the national beverage and incidentally as much knowledge as they care to. At the Lycée in Paris Mr. Wakefield had as classmate the ill-fated Prince Imperial, and the two became close friends.

A man of strong character and independent mind; the Dean has spent an unusually busy life, as municipal affairs have interested him as much as parochial. He is a recognized authority on education and unemployment, and is chairman of the Central (Unemployed) Body for London. He was a member of the recent Royal Commission on the Poor Law, and was one of the signatories to the now famous minority report of that body Social work, indeed, engaged his attention very early in life, as he became a member of the Richmond Board of Guardians when only 23.

REV. H. RUSSELL WAKEFIELD.

In 1903 he was elected Mayor of Marylebone, the largest borough in London, and was the first clergyman who ever held such an office. So well did he fulfill his duties that at the end of his Mayoral term, he was reelected and served another year in that capacity. During his second term of office he was presented to the living of St. Mary's, Bryanston Square, one of the most important in the metropolis, and celebrated as being an excellent "jumping-off" place for higher appointments in the church, two of his immediate predecessors having been made Deans of Hereford and Ripon respectively.

In the intervals of all his parochial and municipal activities, Mr. Wakefield has found time to write essays on "Hamlet" and the "Merchant of Venice" besides giving lectures on English literature. This taste he has inherited from his great-grandfather, the famous Gilbert Wakefield, scholar, controversialist, friend of Fox, and opponent of Pitt, whom he cordially and actively hated. This man once had the temerity to call his gaitered lordship the Bishop of Ilandaff "an absentee and a pluralist," for which he suffered a term of imprisonment at Dorchester.

"His Reverence" is built on large and generous lines; a large head, with a broad brow from which look out a pair of open and kindly eyes. Kindliness and firmness may be noted again in his mouth under which there is the firmest of firm chins.

Georgia Pine Doomed.

That the greater part of Georgia's pine is irretrievably doomed is incontrovertible. But it is a doom that has been made necessary by the demand of industry, and is to be regretted only from a point of sentimentality. Reforestation for the most part is out of the question, and even if practical, would be unwise.

In the first place, the Georgia long-leafed pine has the unhappy faculty of seldom reproducing itself true to the parent tree, the second-growth pine being smaller, sappier, knottier, and in every way an inferior tree; in the second, the pine lands of Georgia have a far greater future as farms than forests. It must be remembered, too, that the great West has practically no timber, and yet its lands are vastly more valuable than the timber lands of the Pacific Coast.—[National Magazine.

Good Roads of France.

HELP TO DRAW $150,000,000 FROM AMERICANS ANNUALLY.

From a Special Correspondent.

GRENOBLE (France) Oct. 3.—The American farmer pays $25 for hauling where the French farmer pays $7. I realize it here. Up the crazy, winding little valley beyond Uriage, I know a farmer who is cutting pinewood. Standing, it could sell for $3.60 per cubic yard. Cut, it is worth $4.40; and the Riouperou paper mills pay $6.80 to $7.40 delivered at their works, away down the valley.

Now, at the moment when competing outsiders would do the hauling as low as $1 per cubic yard, he insists on doing it himself; and the mills, for local reasons, make no effort to buy the wood where it falls.

Uriage wheat, delivered by the trolley at its Grenoble terminus, costs $4.72 the 220 pounds. Uriage farmers will haul it the twelve miles, delivered to any Grenoble address, for $4.75. Buying from them as trolley-competing carriers, you save all cartage in Grenoble.

It is needless to multiply examples in general, up to twenty miles, it is considerably cheaper to haul all kinds of merchandise by horse than use trolley or railway—even in this mountainous country. Judge, then, the economy on the plain. Also, the horse-and-wagon seldom returns empty, an extra profit. Between twenty and thirty miles, the advantages are considered equal.

The secret is good highways; and, note at once, they are not mere profit from the past. In 1830, Uriage Valley was a wild, torrent-swept ravine, roamed by bears and wolves. The picturesque new road—constructed while certain old Pennsylvania pikes I have in mind were beginning to run down—made possible a flourishing watering-place, a paper mill, an acetylene works, two cement works, an artificial telegraph-pole factory and a hydro-electric light-and-power plant.

It both opened civilization to remote farmers and gave them a local market. They take turns sending down horses for high-paid summer-resort uses. The same city boarders buy their eggs, milk, fruit, vegetables and meat. The lone valley factories give them steady profits. And even in winter, the fine roads permit Grenoble glove manufacturers to distribute and collect raw and finished material from a hundred scattered hamlets.

Why, the good roads permitted the trolley to be laid, and indirectly brought light and power to isolated farms at 2 cents the hectowatt.

Good roads solved the agricultural problem in France before the appearance of the trolley.

The present use of the trolley is passenger traffic, merchandise in less than wagon-loads and bulky freight traveling more than thirty miles; but, threading dozens of small towns that would not pay a trolley, there go automobile omnibuses. Thanks to good roads, the purely country stage coach never died out in France; and today it has become a big-capacity auto, of slow speed, with solid-rubber tires.

Before the development of the steam railway, France had a network of trunk highways—the present "national roads"—connecting the great cities, over which hauling by horse was cheap. Now that there is a steam railway within thirty miles of any given point, those magnificent roads, seventeen feet wide in macadam, not counting their dirt "sides" and shaded with fruit, poplars, elms, oaks or acacias, have become the delight of automobile scorchers; and a far more vast network of communal or "neighborhood" roads unite the smallest hamlets with trolley and rail.

Now, the simple fact that these communal roads are declared by the present Minister of Public Works to be "the greatest French work of the past forty years," ought to open our eyes and encourage American roadbuilding.

"No one out of France," he says, "realizes the profound sacrifices made by our people to produce them. Their enormous cost—above $2,000,000,000—is, nevertheless, the most productive of any item of our peace budgets."

Why? Because while the great trunk highways have been much superseded by steam railways, the newer cross-roads hunt out the elements of commerce and industry up to the smallest local sources.

The French countryside did not make this wise sacrifice entirely of its own idea. France has but one set of tax collectors—those of the central government at Paris. They hand over to communes (townships) and departments (States) part of the annual taxes collected in them—and, sometimes, even out of them. Now, the department legislature, while it can force communes to use only two-thirds of their improvements resources on roads that connect principal towns of the big department, can demand that the totality be spent on local roads connecting little communes.

In a word, the influence of the central Department of Roads and Bridges at Paris passes—very much by the Paris-appointed Prefects presiding over department legislatures—to that smallest local unity, the community, to force it to patriotic roadbuilding and repair.

One of the chief services is that of Public Works. The highest school of civil engineering, which gives two-year courses in applied work after students have passed the Polytechnique School, is exactly the School of Highways and Bridges. And, note, when the smallest, remotest communes have a bridge to build or road to open, widen or regrade, they have but to call to get the services of these experts gratis. Indeed, if they neglect to call, the experts are thrust on them!

But, you may ask, if the great trunk roads were superseded by railways at the moment of their perfection, was not much of their cost a loss? No. Of late years it is exactly they that give another remarkable demonstration of the use of good roads.

The new use is automobile touring. The splendid old trunk highways make automobile touring possible—(1) as speed routes of hurrahing happiness, and (2) as feeders to the more picturesque communal, departmental and military, or strategic roads of seacoast, remote chateaux, and those new Switzerlands, Savoy, Dauphiny, the Vosges and the Pyrenees.

Such a competent authority as Edmond Théry has estimated that tourists of all classes now scatter over France $600,000,000 annually—of which $150,000,000 is contributed by the United States. It is a vast and disproportionate increase in the past ten years.

Now, while the major part of the immense sum is still connected with cities, railways and shipping, it is not so of the phenomenal increase—estimated by Théry at $200,000,000 per year. This is enormously due to the private automobile buying and touring of the rich, the automobiling of the well-to-do, and tourist service of automobile brakes and cars—not to mention the [illegible] great other category of touring berlines and [illegible] drawn by horses in the auto wake.

It is new gold, all increase, scattered off the railway lines and benefiting the remotest country districts. Indeed, the amount spent in merely American automobile touring is fabulous. Last year, a moderate estimate gave 2000 American parties making private tours from Paris.

Supposing only two in each party (probably there were four,) and that they spent only $1000 apiece (probably it was $2500!) we have $6,000,000 private American tours from Paris.

But what of all the autos hired by Americans out of Paris? Dozens such—and the most expensive—meet each incoming boat at Havre and Cherbourg.

[illegible] Choiseul, Necker, Turgot and Trudaine waste the [illegible] resources in continuing the costly trunk roads [illegible] by Louis XV? It seemed so. France revolted [illegible] in bloody revolution. Did the Restoration waste the national resources in repairing Napoleon's injuries, at an expense that has never been counted?

It seemed so. At the very moment of the great roads' perfection, the steam locomotive entered on the scene; and the great highways fell into such disuse that when they got up a retrospective exposition of carriages in 1907, the example impossible to discover was one of the crack diligences of 1835! They finally accepted a rather decorative old country stage coach, till recently in local use between Aurillac and certain surrounding hamlets.

The great trunk roads seemed ruined; yet here are touring automobilists from the whole world scattering gold as they scorch over them!

And did the apparent ruin of their trunk roads teach the French a lesson? No. Away back, forty years ago—before the automobile had given the dream of a promise—they had begun constructing their vast new network of communal roads—at an expense of $2,000,000,000! Their total length, today, is 45,000 miles. That of the old trunk roads is only 24,000 miles. That of the department roads—a disappearing type—is 10,000 miles.

Nowadays both the central government and the department legislatures prefer to build and improve roads by arousing the patriotic self-interest of the townships. These cross-roads are the present prosperity of France; and every one knows it. For every dollar that a township spends on one, either central government or department legislature—often both—put up another dollar to go with it!

It is wise expense. Here is a country whose remotest inhabitants are brought in easy touch with modern prosperity. It is a wonderfully rich country; but little. What will not be the prosperity of America when every France that can be marked off on its map shall have the good roads of France?

STERLING HEILIG.

Samana Bay.

QUAINT, ANCIENT SANTA BARBARA, SANTO DOMINGO.

By a Special Contributor.

REPOSING at the foot of forest-covered hills which rise close back of it, and fronting on the beautiful Bay of Samana, Santo Domingo, is the little village of Santa Barbara. I say little, for there are not over 200 dwellings in it, and not one of them could possibly have cost $200. Most of them are the typical dwellings of the tropics, a mere shed against the sun and rain, consisting of two or three rooms, the partitions of which are seldom over five or six feet high. The frames of these houses are rough poles and the roofs are thatched with leaves of a species of palm which grows to an enormous size here.

There is little opportunity or desire for privacy in the majority of the houses, and the furniture and cooking utensils are of the most primitive character imaginable. In fact, the whole household economy is arranged and conducted on the plan of nothing but absolute necessity, and yet only to live here is a positive luxury.

The dictates of fashion have made no headway among a people to whom an income of $10 a year is princely, yet no prince is happier than they. I refer of course to the common people. There are but two classes, the very poor and the very rich. The poor are in the vast majority, but there seems to be no clash between the two classes of society.

A heavenly climate tempers the necessities for food, clothing and shelter to a minimum; indeed, so generous is nature that she supplies food almost for the gathering of it, and withal an amiable, satisfied state of mind which is not disposed to find fault with the order of things, has to do in a large measure with the beatitudes of the mass of the people.

My quarters here were in a private house (there is no public place of entertainment) to the owner of which I had letters of introduction. In almost any part of the United States such quarters would be called poor, practically being used for sleeping purposes only. The floors were of earth covered with rugs, the furniture came from France, and was a dream of old-fashioned beauty. There hung on the walls a couple of paintings which were done by some old Spanish master 300 years ago, and would be an honor to the mansion of a Vanderbilt. We used daily solid silver which once graced the table of Gen. Santa Anna of Mexico.

The language spoken by most of the people is a mongrel mixture of Spanish and French, but enough of them speak some English so that one who is able to use that only can get along very comfortably.

The connections with the outside world are meager, a mail steamer coming in once a month from New York, bringing canned goods, petroleum, salt meats, small hardware, and carrying away bananas, logwood and coffee. Two hours is about as long as it stays, and as soon as it was gone we settled down to another month of "dolce far niente."

During the War of the Rebellion, this quiet little place was the scene of many a wild orgie by crews from the ships of the Confederate navy, Carenaro Cay, one of the little islands that lies far back in the bay, being one of their coaling stations. It was almost completely hidden by trees and was a well-chosen spot for the purpose to which it was put. At the close of the war there were several hundred tons of coal left which was used by various of our naval ships. The place was continued as a coaling station till 1873, when it was abandoned, the United States flag was hauled down, the wheelbarrows and flagstaff sold, and today scarce a trace remains of its former use and occupancy.

It was in that year, 1873, that a party of capitalists—George M. Pullman was one of them—came down here and by the payment of most liberal option fees rented this Bay of Samana, received grants of land, rights to build docks, to construct telegraph lines, to build hotels, and to cut a wide swath generally. They did erect a huge hotel, they surveyed for railroads, and they had a dazzling future before themselves for a time. The ultimate success of their plans depended on the annexation of the island to the United States, but Congress failed them, and all their schemes came to direct grief. The whole thing was a dismal failure, the hotel is in a heap of charred ruins, the money was wasted, the roads are overgrown with trees, the telegraph lines are gone altogether, and scarcely a thing remains of their enterprise but a memory.

And yet their wildest dreams may some day be realized, for this is a country of possibilities beyond compare. If it were in the hands of an active, industrious people there is no limit to its productiveness. The climate is that of a perfect sanitarium, and the landscapes and sea views are perfectly entrancing. Samana Bay is larger than New York Bay, and possesses every advantage that commerce by sea requires.

Some idea of its utter solitude may be had when it is known that it is a favorite breeding-place for whales. Many a time have I, when out sailing, come close to a mother whale and her calf, sometimes asleep on the surface of the warm, still water, never frightened by my boat. At night, the snort of porpoises is often startlingly near. The water is so clear that the bottom, fishes and marine plants can be seen at a depth of from forty to a hundred feet, and fish are so plenty that one can catch a boat full of them in a few hours if he cares to do so.

One day while out shooting wild goats on Ballandre Cay, I stumbled over the ruins of a house, and upon further exploration found what must have been an extensive and substantial town of at least the early Spanish settlement, possibly earlier. I found a half-filled well inside what seemed to be a court, the remains of fallen arches, and no end of dimension stone of rather small size; all was overgrown with large trees and vines. At one side of the island, under water, I saw the remains of a stone dock which extended a considerable distance from shore.

The island is uninhabited, and the people who live in the vicinity have not even a tradition of its occupancy. Its story is already wrapped in oblivion. If it was Spanish, it is just as well that it is lost, for their occupation was the most cruel and inhuman ever recorded.

Of society for a northerner, there is absolutely none here, but if one wishes to get away from the world, to an exquisitely beautiful place, where every breath tastes like nectar, where care is unknown, where skies are forever blue, where the rills dance down forest-clad mountains like streams of silver, where as nowhere else sea and sky, earth and heaven meet and melt together in a hazy horizon, where the diamond stars of night are reflected on the bosom of a beautiful bay, where nature displays with a prodigal lavishness her tropical wealth and loveliness, where she takes one in her ample arms and smiles contentment and enchantment each day and each hour that he rests in her embrace—if one wishes to be a partaker in all such felicities, go to Samana Bay.

But it is no place to make money; neither is it a place where one can spend much. You will be made welcome by a simple-minded, true-hearted people, mostly black, who are already well disposed toward you, but who have at the same time very decided notions as to their political and social standing, and are able to defend their position with vigor and reason.

Gov. Johnson's Birthplace.

The house in which Gov. John A. Johnson was born was described in detail by C. F. Johnson, who says he believes he is the only living man who was present at the wedding of the Governor's parents.

The ceremony took place in the same little log house in which Minnesota's great executive was born. The house was only fourteen by sixteen feet. There was no sawed lumber in it, but the logs of which it was constructed were hewn by the Governor's father and by Hans J. Johnson, the uncle of the man who attended the wedding as a small child.

"I remember," said Mr. Johnson, "that there was not even any floor in the house, but the party danced and made merry in spite of that."

The old house has long since vanished. Its roof was thatched of slough grass, and even the door was hewn out of forest logs; but at that it was considered then one of the best houses in that part of Nicollet county.—[Minneapolis Journal.

Charming Away Tigers.

No wood cutter will go about his task in the Indian forests unless he is accompanied by a fakir, who is supposed to exercise power over tigers and wild animals generally.

Before work is commenced the fakir assembles all the members of his party in a clearance at the edge of the forest and erects a number of huts, in which he places images of certain deities. After offerings have been presented to the images the particular forest is declared to be free of tigers, and the wood cutters, in virtue of the presents they have made to the deities, are supposed to be under their special protection.

If after all these precautions a tiger seizes one of the party, the fakir speedily takes his departure without waiting to offer superfluous explanations.—[Calcutta Statesman.

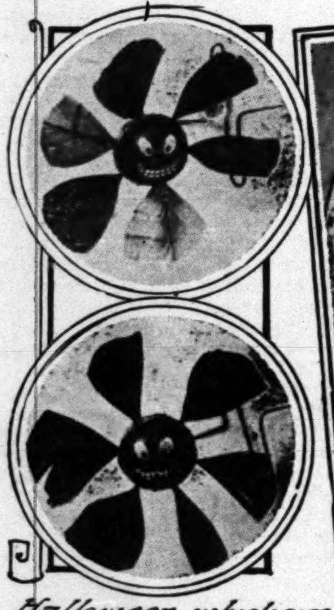
Playthings for Halloween.

NEW KIND OF GHOSTS THAT HAVE GRISLY, LAMBENT EYES.

THE LATEST STYLE IN WITCHES HAS AN ILLUMINATED NOSE—HALLOWEEN PINS WITH VEGETABLE HEADS—A PUMPKIN-HEADED DOLL THAT CRIES "WOW-WOW!"

By a Special Contributor.

THE peasants of Thuringia and the mountains of the Hartz, in Germany, are kept busy these days, trying to think up new ideas for Halloween playthings, which, in due course, when the proper season arrives, are mostly shipped to the United States. A good deal is thought of Halloween in England, but during the last few years its celebration has become popularized in this country to an extraordinary extent.

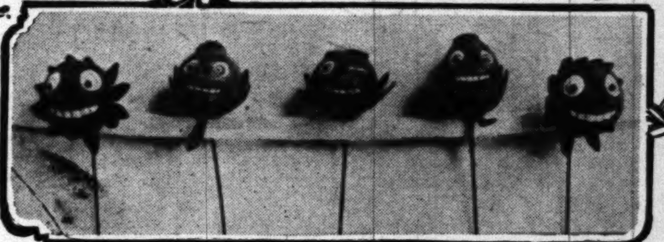


Halloween whirligigs

A Halloween witch witch with a luminous nose.

An indestructible Halloween devil.

A vegetable Halloween bulldog.



Halloween pins, for scarf or coat lapels.

Halloween doll which contains a toy ballo and cries "Ow-wow"

Hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of Halloween toys will be sold to American purchasers this season—practically all of them made in Germany. We have toymakers on this side of the water, of course, but they cannot compete with the European producers, owing to the higher prices of the labor. In the region of the Thuringian Mountains, for example, a whole family of peasants, working together in the humble home cottage, is well satisfied to earn a total of $3 or $4 a week by this kind of work.

What makes it more surprising is that many of the playthings exhibit quite a high order of ingenuity. In order to satisfy the requirements of the market, it is necessary that the Halloween toys each year shall be really novel in one way or another. The people who buy them are looking for something new; and it is a difficult task to ring fresh changes constantly upon a theme which is in a sense so trite. For, after all, the possibilities of vegetables, converted into jack o' lanterns and other grotesque shapes, are somewhat limited; and, apart from these, there is little other material to draw upon except ghosts and witches.

The comic vegetable was certainly a happy inspiration. It made the appearance for the first time only half a dozen years ago, and since then it has assumed a multitude of ingenious forms. Funny people of all sorts, including caricatured policemen and even prize fighters, appear, as it were, in a vegetable guise; and a novelty this season is a pumpkin-headed bulldog with an expansive smile and a cucumber for a body.

The manufacturers of such toys are the German peasants, who, as already stated, do the work in their own homes, even the little children having their part in the tasks. Thuringia especially is a country of toymakers, and the poor folk, who dwell in humble cottages on small farms along the mountain slopes and in the valleys, are obliged to carry their wares in great baskets to the near-by towns, sometimes long distances, to dispose of them to the great dealers.

These dealers have their headquarters in the towns, such as Sonneberg, from which the playthings are shipped in great quantities. They employ, at relatively high wages—though in this country the pay would seem to be lamentably small—clever designers to invent and execute models for new and attractive gimcracks for the Halloween market. Such models are given to the peasants to copy, raw materials being sometimes furnished. This is how it happens that at this time of the year one sees in the stores, offered for sale, thousands of Halloween toys exactly alike—as if they were turned out from the same molds. Many of them are in fact made in molds, of papier maché—the comic vegetables for example.

One of the most interesting of the novelties this year is a witch of an entirely new pattern, with a hollow papier maché head, so made that a small candle can be placed inside of it. By this ingenious expedient the lady's nose, which is of huge size and made to represent a partly-opened pea pod, is rendered luminous. It is a very attractive feature. The witch wears a sort of merry-widow hat, which is merely a large disk of white cardboard cut out in the middle to make it fit upon her hollow cranium.

A new kind of jack o'lantern has enormous protruding eyes, like exaggerated gooseberries, which produce a weird effect when the candle is lighted inside. This is a witch's head. Of course, witches figure very importantly in the playful superstitions connected with Halloween, and any fresh idea in this line is sure to be acceptable. Another witch, this year, rides on the back of a white goose—a more comfortable instrument of locomotion one would imagine, than the conventional broomstick.

There is a yellow kid with a pumpkin head that is decidedly picturesque. Its stomach contains a small balloon, which is inflated by blowing through a small rubber tube. When one's lips are withdrawn from the tube, and the balloon collapses, the queer-looking manikin cries "Wow-wow!" right out loud. The kid holds a megaphone in its hand, which is supposed to add to the realistic effect.

But the queerest things of all for this season, perhaps, are the Halloween whirligigs, as they might be called. Each of them is a miniature pumpkin, with a jack-o'-lantern face, provided with half a dozen feathers set in such a way as to make of the contrivance a tiny windmill. The windmill is attached to a pin—to be stuck into the hat or coat of the person wearing it—so that it may whirl in the breeze.

Likewise for the scarf or coat lapel are Halloween pins—themselves entirely a novelty—which represent miniature jack-o'-lantern pumpkins, each having a funny face. Some of the faces are Irish (the tiny pumpkins for such being green in color,) and others are German, Chinese, or what not. All of them are decidedly comic, and inexpensive, costing only 5 cents apiece.

Quite new, also, are the Halloween dolls, which appear to be of the indestructible kind—or pretty nearly so. There is a fuzzy doll with pumpkin-like head, and another which, quite appropriately, represents the devil. His Satanic Majesty is a personage who within recent times has been degraded from the plane of high tragedy to that of low comedy, and it would be a great mistake to leave him out of Halloween.

Many Halloween lanterns for this season represent devils. There are also ghosts, of course, but the new ones have lambent eyes, which make them look much more grisly.

A Halloween horn, for making a joyful noise on All Hallows Eve, has a pumpkin mouthpiece. There is a new kind of Humpty-Dumpty which appears to be made of various vegetables growing together. Papier maché ears of corn, when opened, disclose comic doll babies. But the most nonsensical absurdity, perhaps, is little jugs, quite commonplace in external appearance, bearing on the outside the words, "Matrimonial Prospects." When one pulls the cork out, however, a string follows, to which are attached six tiny china infants without any clothes on!

Buying Rubies in Burma.

Oriental merchants have business methods which would arouse the wonder of the New York stockbrokers. Perhaps the most peculiar methods are associated with the sale of rubies in Burma.

The prospective purchaser takes a seat near a window and has before him a large copper plate. The sellers come to him one by one and each empties upon the plate a little bag of rubies. The purchaser arranges the gems all in separate little heaps in order that he may set a valuation upon them.

He first divides them into three grades, according to size. Each of these groups is again divided into three other piles, according to color, and each of these piles in turn is once more divided into three groups according to shape.

Artificial light is never used in the examination of rubies, the merchants believing that full sunlight alone is capable of bringing out the color and brilliancy of the gems. All sales must be made between the hours of 9 a.m. and 3 p.m., and the sky must be clear, so nothing can dim the radiance of the crimson stones.

The copper plate is brought into requisition in more ways than one. The sunlight reflected from it through the stones brings out, with true rubies, a color different from that of spinels or tourmalines, which are thus readily separated. Many spinels bear a close resemblance to the ruby, but this simple test made under the keen eye of the oriental never fails.

When the various stones have been segregated the buyer and seller begin an odd method of bargaining by signs, or rather grips, in profound silence. After agreeing upon the fairness of the classification they join their right hands, covered with a handkerchief or the flap of a garment, and by grips and pressures understood among all these dealers they make, modify and accept proposals of purchase and sale. The hands are then uncovered and the prices are recorded.—[New York Sun.

Small Farms of Portugal.

The Portuguese are an extremely conservative people. Every man follows rigidly the methods employed by his father and forefathers. In very many parts of the country, the old wooden plows are still used.

When a man dies, instead of one of the heirs taking the whole property and paying the remaining heirs for their parts, the whole property is divided into as many parts as there are heirs. More than this, each separate part of the property is thus divided.

Thus if a property consists of ten acres of pasture land, eighty of vineyard and ten of grain land, and there were ten heirs, each heir would receive one acre each of grain and pasture land and eight acres of vineyard. This process has been going on for a very long time, so that now in the most fertile part of Portugal the land is divided into incredibly small portions.

The immediate result of this is that the product of the land is barely sufficient at best to sustain its owners. South of the River Tagus, on the other hand, there are enormous tracts of excellent land lying unused, but it has been found impossible to induce the farmers of the north to move into the region and take up large holdings.—[Philadelphia Inquirer.

now my eyes have been opened and I know bet- you've got a chair strong enough to hold your weight, chuck it out. You don't want it. There's no class to it. Go down to a veterinary hospital for diseased and suffering furniture—they're called antique stores—and get one about a thousand years old that's afflicted with spavins and saddle boils. If you can get one with such bum springs in its cushions that it'll say 'Mamma,' like one of those dolls with a talented stomach, when you sit down on it, you've got a treasure, and you want to nail it no matter how much the proprietor of the store may ask for it. If you can get a slender chair for your hall with fractured Chippendale legs and a cane bottom that's caved in till it looks like a waste basket, don't overlook that chance, either. You're acquiring a priceless trophy that'll bring tears of envy to the eyes of every connoisseur that's allowed the precious boon of looking at it. For $900, any way, I think that's the price, but maybe it's more—you can get a rare bargain in the shape of a grandfather's clock that quit striking the year the boys came back from the Mexican War and has more things the matter with its works than a lady hypochondriac. For a slightly smaller figure you can often pick up a perfect gem of a spinning wheel with most of the spokes missing and the legs fall out by the roots, or a mahogany bureau with skin disease and drawers that you couldn't open with anything short of a blast of dynamite.

"Yes, sir, the manufacture of antique furniture has become one of our greatest modern industries. It gives employment to thousands of union antiquarians out at Grand Rapids and other centers of what you might call grand rapid antiquary, not to mention the traveling agents who're constantly employed planting the products in New England farmhouses and colonial Virginia homesteads where they're kept in stock until the collectors come along and snatch them up."

"Well, it certainly sounds foolish to me," said the House Detective.

"You've got to remember that nearly everybody of any prominence has the collecting fad in one form or another, these times," said the Hotel Clerk. "When I was a kid, only the small boys had the collection fad. We collected bird eggs in the spring, one another's clothes in the swimming season, stone bruises in the summer and sniffles in the winter. Outside of us, there wasn't but one or two collectors in town. One was a party who collected bugs. He ran the county insane asylum. And the other was the president of the local bank. He collected coins. He was one of the best coin collectors I ever saw. When a piece of currency passed into his possession, there was a permanent gap created in the circulation right there. He was the original human safety clutch. Every time he had to spend as much as $2 he bled internally. But when he died, his collection passed into the hands of his oldest son, who had everything in his head that would naturally belong there, except brains, and in time the various coins composing it got badly scattered.

"But now, everybody you see nearly is collecting something. The Standard Oil Company collects competitors and dries them and puts pins through them and stores them away in a file. Uncle Joe Cannon collects insurgents. President Taft goes through the West on a private car collecting western Republicans who like the new tariff. At last accounts he had one and hoped to get another during the winter. Mr. Bryan collects nominations. Society leaders collect husbands. The anti-trust law collects dust, and the trusts also collect dust, only it's a different sort. The musical comedy writers collect new gags, but fear to put 'em in a show because the public resents such innovations, preferring the jokes that are familiar to all, because then they know exactly where the point is and when to laugh. I collect my salary with more or less difficulty and spend it without hardly noticing it. You collect the gems of wisdom and truth that I let fall from time to time. Yes, sir, everybody collects something. There's the prominent steel magnate that put his old wife aside and hooked up with a lovely lady out of a comic opera. And No. 2's been engaged in the business of collecting a few intimate friends in exclusive New York society ever since. Here only the other day I was reading about her return from Europe. She had more trunks of wardrobe than the whole troupe used to carry when she was in the chorus. And she stated on landing that it was her present intention of restoring the golden period of Pompadour and Du Barry and those other French ladies whose names are familiar to all readers of modern advertising literature, on account of so many face powders and new ways of doing up the hair, having been named for them. And then she started right off to her castle to resume her work of collecting those society friends. But I don't think that to date it's been what you'd call an unqualified success."

"Wot's the trouble?" asked the House Detective.

"Well," said the Hotel Clerk, "she's got a magnificent gold-lined cabinet to put the specimens in, but so far, she hasn't got any specimens."

Celluloid Boomerangs.

The skill of the Australian bushmen in boomerang throwing is not exaggerated in the least, for the boomerang wielded by an expert is a thing of magic. It will soar through the air like a bird, now high up, now just skimming the surface of the ground, turning in circles, finally falling just where it has been aimed to fall.

The boomerang can be fashioned of ash or hickory, says a writer in St. Nicholas, but can also be cut or stamped out of celluloid and hard rubber. Boomerangs are now being sold in two or three American cities. Several expert throwers in this country have fashioned their own boomerangs not only of celluloid but of heavy cardboard.

If the cardboard does not get wet, it makes a serviceable missile. Celluloid is excellent for the purpose, because it is light, very hard to break and can be worked into the peculiar curve and twist which are so necessary to give the boomerang its force and direction.

FIRST MILITARY SALUTES.

THEY WERE TO SHOW THAT A PERSON'S INTENTIONS WERE PEACEABLE.

[St. Nicholas:] The custom of firing a salute in honor of admirals, captains and other naval dignitaries as well as other forms of greeting originated in the desire to show to the person saluted that the saluting person was unarmed and could do the other no injury.

This was a very important matter in the olden days when most people went armed and violent encounters were quite common. When any one approached another it was necessary to assure the latter that no harm was intended, and this sign of good faith was made by the new-comer's handling his weapons in such a way that they would be useless for immediate action.

The present courteous raising of the cap or hat had its origin in the removal of the basinet, or small metal helmet, an act which showed an absence of fear by leaving the head of the wearer open to attack and which likewise occupied his right hand, so that he could practically make no assault.

The dropping of the swordpoint to the ground now as when the sword was in more active and ready use makes the weapon temporarily of no service. The bringing of arms to "present" in salutation of superiors is a custom of precisely similar origin.

The ancient custom of entering the presence of royalty uncovered likewise originated in the desire for safety. So also did that of retiring backward from the royal presence. In either case the person admitted to the throne, with his sword arm occupied in holding his helmet, could not easily reach or use his weapons. These precautions in medieval times were very necessary, when it is considered that the king, prince, or duke, being seated, would not be able to defend himself immediately or even readily against sudden attack.

The word "salute" itself has the idea of "safety" in it, as it comes directly from the Latin salus, signifying "health," then "welfare." To "salute" is to wish health and safety. The root of the word goes back to the Sanscrit sar, which meant to "protect" or "guard."

Naval salutes are interesting to landsmen as well as to jack tars. The artillery salute is the survival of one of those ceremonial practices which formerly had some definite meaning, and is meant to signify not only an honor to the flag or representative of a friendly nation, but also that the vessel saluting has no hostile intent.

Shotted guns fired by the full armament of the ship were used in the seventeenth century, as if to say: "Now every gun is empty and we are unarmed." Blank salutes became the eighteenth-century fashion, but, like many other customs of that polished, formal period, were carried to a ridiculous extreme.

When in due time it became the practice to give a special salute for a certain rank or occasion the odd number of guns—in which all salutes are measured—was selected in order that the salute might open as well as close on the "honor" side of the ship, the vessel's starboard. When the United States first attained national standing the existing national salute of twenty-one guns was adopted, in accordance with the usage of other countries, by our army and navy.

So in international usage the national salute for every country is of twenty-one guns; while the American national salute, used in our own country, is one gun for every State, forty-six guns now being fired on state occasions. The earliest instance of this domestic salute was that which history records as given at the raising of the first American flag, when Capt. John Paul Jones fired thirteen guns, one in honor of each of the thirteen original States.

The number of guns fired in an artillery salute varies in accordance with the rank of the officer or personage saluted. The President's salute is, of course, twenty-one guns. Admirals of the navy, generals of the army, Governors of the States. Ambassadors from foreign countries, and Justices of the Supreme Court are saluted by a salvo of seventeen guns. Salutes gradually diminish in the number of guns fired until they reach the lowest grade, seven for a junior commanding officer or our consul at a foreign port.

Custom varies in European countries, but all foreign rulers have more powder burnt in their honor than is consumed in the American Presidential salute. King Edward and Queen Alexandra are saluted with a salvo of fifty-one guns, and members of the royal family and important state and military personages receive a fewer number, the details of which are of course set by law. Kaiser Wilhelm outranks any other contemporary sovereign, being saluted by the largest amount of noise, the imperial salute consisting of 101 guns. This is the standard for emperors and for some kings. The birth of an heir to the throne of a state is signalized by 101 guns also, as happened only recently when the little Princess of Holland was born.

Family Burial Grounds in Missouri.

In a certain family burying-ground in Southern Missouri is a gravestone upon which are these words: "Here Are Buried Aunt Jane, My Negro Mammy, and Her Husband, Tom, a Negro Gentleman of the Old School." The family burying-ground is disappearing. In Saline county is yet preserved the Sappington burying-ground, where two Missouri Governors are buried. In Boone county, in the William Jewell Cemetery, walled and exclusive, another Missouri Governor is interred. Here and there throughout the State in the regions more remote from the newer cemeteries of the towns, are family graveyards, usually pathetic in their unkemptness, gravestones broken and tumbling down and weeds growing where flowers once were. The family burying-ground scarcely ever endures to the third generation.—[Columbia Herald.

The Map's Bare Spots.

PLACES WHERE SOME FUTURE EXPLORERS MAY GAIN FAME.

By a Special Contributor.

MOTHER EARTH has yet a few charms which she is able to withhold from the scrutiny of inquisitive man; but they are very few and very far between.

True it is, though difficult of belief, that three generations ago four-fifths of our sphere's land surface still remained a mystery, and 40,000,000 square miles of mystery had some potency for keeping keen the imagination of man.

In their school geographies our great-grandfathers saw Africa as a mere outline, its seacoasts and a part of the Valley of the Nile being all that was known of her. Australia was even more of a mystery, for not only was her entire interior unknown, but not even her coast line had been completely outlined.

Save for a horseshoe line indicating the coast of Baffin's Bay, earth's entire north above the 70th parallel was a mystery of mysteries, while its south was even more of a blank. The vast heart of Asia was an enigma to the remainder of the world, and North America, west of the Mississippi River, was an unknown wilderness, in which the existence of the Rocky Mountains was unsuspected. Geographies of the time described our continent as "chiefly composed of gentle ascents or level plains."

But today Mother Earth is almost in the plight of a woman who, having withheld nothing, has lost the cardinal charm of mystery. For within a century the unexplored land area of our sphere has diminished from 80 to about 5 per cent.

The Arctic still reserves some mystery. Greenland is not yet entirely outlined, the missing link of its chain of coast line being the northeast corner, between Independence Bay and Lamberts Land. Its white heart still remains an enigma, described on the latest charts as "entirely covered with a glacier of a probable thickness of 1000 to 3000 feet." The American and European spokes of the great Arctic wheel have been pretty well traced out, but all that vast sweep from the northern coast of Siberia to the pole is a blank on the map, still ignominiously labeled "unexplored territory."

Disappointed that the regions about the North Pole are but a depression filled by a frozen sea, the world will soon turn its eyes to the bottom of its spinning top, which, Lieut. Shackleton tells us, will prove to end in a broad knob jutting out two miles beyond the level of the sea. Wilkes' Antarctic continent has now been proven to be a fact, but its chief mysteries remain to be unlocked. Already the wonder of the world, the great floating ice barrier of the Antarctic has been traced to its outmost end and the southern magnetic pole has been found; but no one yet guesses what plums lie within that great slice of the Antarctic pie, that wedges poleward within the eighty degrees of longitude west of Cape Horn. Shackleton has been nearer to the South Pole than Philadelphia is to Washington.

"Crown of World" Yet Unclimbed.

After this goal shall have been reached, the greatest geological mystery to be solved will be Mount Everest. There can be no more Cooks or Pearys, Shackletons or Scotts—no more Stanleys or Livingstones. But the highest honor yet to be gained outside the Antarctic region is the laurel wreath now awaiting the brow of him who can climb up those 29,000 feet—those five and a half miles—to the "crown of the world," on Everest's snowy peak. Other Asiatic peaks which still withhold their mysteries from man's scrutiny are those mountain monarchs of the world: Mt. Godwin-Austen (28,250 feet,) Kang-chen-junga (28,150 feet,) Sihour (27,815 feet,) Nanga Parbat (26,629 feet,) Nanda Devi (25,689 feet. The English cragsman, Mummery, after conquering 20,000 feet of Nanga Parbat, gave up the ghost from its snowy side. Before that, W. W. Graham claimed the world record and announced his climb of Kabru, and, because he did not confess to enough mountain sickness to suit the wise savants, precipitated a worse controversy than that still waging over Cook's climb of Mt. McKinley. If he is to be displaced the laurels must go to Rubenson and Monrad-Aas, the two Norwegians who conquered Kabru's 24,015 feet year before last. On this trip they slept at the highest elevation at which man ever passed the night. And this past summer the Duke of the Abruzzi attempted Mount Godwin-Austen, the second highest peak of the world.

But the most that we know of Everest's silver crown is now given to us in the wonderful telephotographs of Vittorio Sella, taken from Chunjerma Pass, eighty miles away.

What's in the Arabian Desert?

Asia has yet some other unsolved mysteries with which she is luring the world's explorers. Rockhill, Younghusband and Sven Hedin have but lately unlocked the mysteries of Thibet, the latter having just explored the Trans-Himalayan range. And this Rockhill is our own man—W. W. Rockhill, the new American Ambassador to the Czar. So the only big blank remaining on the map of Asia covers the great Arabian desert. Smaller blanks are Kurdistan, parts of Western China, Siberia and Persia. And the most difficult of these is Kurdistan, where the explorer must contend against the treachery of the hostile Kurds. Near to this territory a big bare place on the map is being filled in by Prof. Raphael Pumpelly, working—under a grant from the Carnegie Institution—in Turkestan, Eastern Persia and Sistan, that Trans-Caspian region hitherto neglected by explorers, although believed by many [illegible] have been the cradle of earth's civilization.

And what secrets has Africa still locked [illegible] black heart? A decade ago, the map of the [illegible] was a bare spot marked only with some [illegible] lines, where travelers had passed. This year [illegible] tional Geographic Society had completed a great [illegible] the dark continent on which, according to the [illegible] purpose, was to be shown all explorers' tracks, [illegible] thick was the network that there would have been [illegible] for little else, and they were omitted.

Mysteries of Timbuktu.

A few years ago the biggest bald spot on [illegible] covered Timbuktu, known hitherto as "the [illegible] city of Africa"—and all the country round about [illegible] the French have lately explored this region [illegible] studying its queer types of architecture, [illegible] caves and read in its many relics the history [illegible] not unlike our cliff dwellers, who occupied [illegible] during the stone age. Indeed, the French have [illegible] seen about every square mile of the Sahara, [illegible] conquered the hostile Tourges, those Berber [illegible] and brigands who from their scattered oases [illegible] scour the whole desert, lying in wait for caravans [illegible] they pounced upon and massacred. While [illegible] desert against these marauders, the French [illegible] troops have traversed and surveyed practically [illegible] its vast unknown regions. And now the vast [illegible] Allah is to be entirely crossed by a railway [illegible] north and south, from the Mediterranean [illegible] Algeria, to Lake Tchad and Nigeria. Meanwhile, [illegible] ends of the great Cape to Cairo Railway [illegible] ward grow closer and closer together.

The longest Trans-African journey ever [illegible] from east to west was completed year before [illegible] the explorer, A. Henry Savage Landor. He [illegible] Djibouti on the Gulf of Aden, and, passing through [illegible] sinia and the Congo Free State, went up to Lake [illegible] and over to Timbuktu; thence to the Atlantic [illegible] Cape Verde. This trip covered 8500 miles, [illegible] a year minus one day. No white person [illegible] Mr. Landor on the journey.

But while Dr. Cook was struggling with Mount McKinley, the Duke of the Abruzzi was successfully exploring Mount Ruwenzori, the snowy source of the Nile, whose glaciers had conquered all other intrepid cragsmen. This eminence, holding snow almost upon the equator, Abruzzi has found to be not one mountain, but six connected mountains, each rising in several peaks, all crowned with eternal snows, and some higher than Mont Blanc. This range most geographers now accept as without doubt the long-sought "Mountains of the Moon." So what few secrets Africa now holds are hidden away in Morocco or Abyssinia, the only two states of the dark continent not yet dominated by the European.

All of Australia's secrets seem now to have been learned, although this great island continent had not been so much as crossed by explorers until our Civil War times. Its sandy deserts no longer hold the terror that they had when they so mysteriously swallowed up the explorer, Leichardt. Every wonder of the "bush" has now been seen—the haunts of the emu and kangaroo, the duckbill and laughing jackass, the wild bushmen throwing the boomerang and dancing the corroboree.

New Guinea Still Unexplored.

But New Guinea still remains a mystery to the explorer. She is the last of the great old-world tropical lands whose secrets have not been confided. Great stretches even of her coast line still remain uncharted, and all save spots in the interior remain blank on the map of this great island, which, with its 300,000 square miles, is greater in area than Norway and Sweden combined, or Chile, or the whole Austro-Hungarian empire. The slopes of snow mountains have never yet been trodden by white men. Indeed, so forbidding is the country that several well-equipped expeditions of Dutch scientists have recently failed to reach even the bases of these ranges. In fact, the Dutch have left their half of the island—the western—practically unexplored.

But South America now has to offer more mysteries than any other land area. The Latin-American republics have been too busy with revolutions to devote much time to geographical research. Between the tributaries of the Amazon and of the Parana are millions of square miles of jungle and forest known only to treacherous savages. Southern Patagonia also holds many a riddle not yet answered by the white man. But there has recently been some awakening in South American exploration. That forbidden region of Peru, the Andean highlands, known as the "Thibet of the western world," has been penetrated anew and studied. Bolivia, in the heart of the Andes, is now projecting its long-deferred railway outlets to the Atlantic and Pacific, and Brazil is making financial provision for railway lines into the great, mysterious Amazon basin.

North America's map contains bare spots in the frigid heart of Labrador and some of the regions farther north and west. Indeed, one-half of Alaska is still an unexplored land of mystery.

North America also boasts of some peaks not yet conquered by the mountain climber, and the most majestic of these are Mount Robinson (13,700 feet,) probably the highest of the Canadian Rockies; Mount Goodsir, the [illegible], Mount Fairweather (15,500 feet,) Crillon (15,[illegible] feet) and La Perouse (11,300 feet.) This land of cactus, scorpions and mirages, lying part in Arizona and part in Sonora, is some 150 miles broad, and within it are hundreds of square miles of sand never yet trodden by man. Bird Sanctuaries.

MAN THE CHIEF FACTOR IN MAKING THEM NECESSARY.

By a Special Contributor.

OF the causes which lead to the extinction of animals, human activity is the chief. Animals of course are subject to epidemics of disease, to such catastrophes as deluges and to the rapacity of their fellow-creatures. But Nature holds the balance between kind and kind very fairly. The extinction of any species is a slow and gradual process, unless man intervenes.

Then it is apt to be rapid. The story of the dodo is a case in point. This bird was a pigeon as big as a turkey, so fat and short of wing that it could only waddle and flutter. It lived on an island in the Indian Ocean, with little to disturb its equanimity till the first voyagers arrived. They named the island Mauritius, knocked the dodo over with sticks, and feasted joyously on the fresh meat. A bird so easily captured and so alluring to hungry sailors was marked to perish, and ere long the dodo became extinct.

In one respect the wingless birds of New Zealand are better equipped than the ill-fated dodo. Both the wood hen and the "kiwo," or apteryx, are fairly swift runners. A bird without wings seems degenerate, a paradox in nature. But these curious types are after all the products of their environment. In old Maoriland the only ground animal dangerous to birds was a rat, and he was not very formidable. In the air lived rapacious hawks and eagles. If the ancestral "kiwi" had wings, his descendants were wiser in their generation. They and their congeners took to running and hiding in the ti-tree scrub, a thick cover like our chaparral, and in course of time lost the art and organs of flight. The Maoris indeed hunted them, but without the aid of guns or dogs. So the wingless birds held their own very well till the white colonists arrived.

Colonization under modern conditions acts like a revolution. Settlers not only introduce firearms and clear away the forest covers, but they disturb the existing order of things in a more subtle way. In this century animals of all sorts, from camels to lady bugs, are moved about from country to country all over the globe. The acclimatization of strange species in a colony sometimes upsets the equilibrium of the native fauna entirely. They are unable to turn about and present a new front to imported enemies. Natural selection, the process by which, as Darwin taught us, species are fitted to survive and flourish, takes time, and geological time at that. When not only dogs, but such destructive enemies of nesting birds as stoats and weasels began to multiply in New Zealand, life at the level of the ground became hazardous. The wingless birds seemed destined to disappear.

Desiring to save these curious types, the government of the country some years ago established them in a sanctuary. Resolution Island, a lonely spot on the southwest coast in the beautiful fiord region, was selected for the purpose. It was made "tabu," as a Maori would say, to the birds that were helpless against the changes that had come over the land.

The sentiment which prompted this and similar action in other countries is of quite recent growth. When the dodo went under, no one gave its extinction a thought. The first measures taken to protect birds looked to practical ends, the interests of "sport," the maintenance of species valuable as food. Hence the laws regarding close seasons and the preservation of game. Now most advanced nations have also taken under their protection the native song birds, and such birds as are liable to become extinct owing to their being hunted down for the sake of their plumage, or their rarity.

In this country the economic value of birds, their utility as aids to agriculture in destroying noxious insects and in other ways, has been more thoroughly studied than anywhere else. This is being done under the auspices of the Federal government as part of the work of the Department of Agriculture. The researches are made public in pamphlets, which serve to guide and correct popular sentiment and opinion. But the work of interesting the public in bird protection and of obtaining the requisite legislation has been performed by those zealous private associations, the Audubon societies of America.

It is owing to their efforts that we have sanctuaries for birds. In some cases land has been bought for that purpose out of the funds of the societies. In other cases they have succeeded in obtaining reservations from the public domain. Not much land, and that of little agricultural value, will serve for an asylum for persecuted birds. Uncle Sam has plenty of barren rocky islands and sandy keys to spare. Every one remembers the big forest reserves made by our late President; there was some controversy about them. But few perhaps were aware that he set aside some odd lots of the public domain as sanctuaries for birds. One of these was the Breton Island reservation, consisting of a few sandy islets off the mouth of the Mississippi. No human being would ever want to settle upon them, but they serve as cities of refuge for certain birds, especially the egrets.

Laws forbidding their capture or killing are not enough to save a species that is becoming rare. The price set on its head rises high enough to tempt unscrupulous hunters to risk detection and punishment. Our nearly extinct condor is protected by law; but not long ago one was killed in Los Angeles county. The offender, it is true, was discovered, but the mischief done was irretrievable. Animals verging on extinction need the same care and watchfulness as the game preserved on a private estate. Hence the need for a sanctuary, a place from which marauders of all sorts can be rigidly excluded.

For this end a small island is well adapted. The intervening sea prevents the immigration of such undesirable citizens as snakes, skunks, weasels and other destroyers of birds and their eggs. It is comparatively easy to guard from human poachers. An out-of-the-way island is not the kind of reservation which a land-hungry people is apt to covet for settlement. Some birds are well aware of the value of such locations for breeding purposes. For generations past certain keys off the Florida coast have been occupied by big "rookeries" of pelicans and flamingoes.

While a barren or rocky situation is well adapted to the requirements of sea birds, inland species need some sort of cover. On the island selected by the New Zealand government as a sanctuary there is plenty of brushwood. The wingless birds find there the same forest conditions in which their ancestors flourished. The sanctuary serves also as an observation station, and some interesting notes have been made by the warden on the habits of the inmates.

Four different kinds of wingless birds are represented. The weka and "kiwi"-apteryx have been already mentioned. The two other species are the ground parrot, and a variety of apteryx named "xoa" by the Maories.

The "weka" is also called by the colonists the wood hen. A brownish bird, about the size of a barnyard fowl, it lives in the bush and is rarely seen except by campers and prospectors. The weka is possessed by a keen curiosity. It haunts the vicinity of pioneers' camps, "snooping" around with its bill thrust forward in a listening attitude. Anything that glitters it carries off and hides; it is possessed by the same mania as the souvenir hunter. It is not as fast a sprinter as the road-runner, and with the aid of dogs is easily captured. As the flesh of the weka is good eating, it has disappeared from the settled districts of the colony.

Both the weka and the apteryx are on view in a pen at the public gardens, Aotorna Hot Springs. Of the feathered oddities of New Zealand the apteryx is the one that is best known outside its native land. It is "featured" in popular natural history books, and no museum is complete without a specimen. Having a curved bill and brown plumage, the "kiwi" at first sight reminds one of a curley. But there is a certain hairiness or mop-like quality about its feathers that puts the bird even to the unscientific judgment quite in a class by itself. One would expect it to bristle up all over, if excited. Its nesting habits have been observed in the sanctuary. Although not a large bird, it is said to lay a sixteen-ounce egg, and the young come into the world full fledged.

The queerest inmate of the asylum is the bird called by the Maories the "kakapo." It is a parrot by its affinities; but so degenerate that the alert and aggressive "keas" of the island—the parrots that attack lambs and tear out their kidneys—would scorn to own the relationship. The ground parrot has the round staring eyes of an owl and, like it, a hedge of hair-like feathers around the orbit. It sleeps all day, wakes up at nightfall to search for berries, and is too sluggish to have any fear of man. It merely makes a feeble protest if touched, and then drops off again to slumber. Obviously such a bird stands in need of protection.

In establishing these curious birds on a reservation, the New Zealanders acted with commendable foresight. Delay is dangerous, when species are becoming scarce. "Nature brings not back the mastodon," nor did she give the "moa," the gigantic extinct emu of New Zealand, a second innings. There is a kind of patriotism, too, in preserving whatever is typical of the land. That the people of the colony take pride in these peculiar birds is shown by the figure of an apteryx, which is engraved on one of their postage stamps. Do not take it for a "totem." A wingless bird would not be a suitable emblem for a progressive people. Like the picture of Mt. Cook and other scenes in the same issue, it is an advertisement of what the country has to show the stranger. The government is well aware that in this nature-studying century tourists and travelers are quite as much interested in our birds as in lakes and mountains.

Our Crop of Naval Stores.

Rosin and turpentine, known technically as naval stores from the fact that for many years their principal uses were maritime, are produced from two species of southern pine, the long leaf and the Cuban, but it is quite probable that a number of other species will be employed within the next twenty-five years.

The crop of naval stores, including four and a quarter million pounds of rosin and sixteen and a quarter million casks of spirits of turpentine, has an approximate annual value to those engaged in it of at least $30,000,000.

For how many centuries commercial use has been made of the sap of the pine cannot be determined with any degree of assurance, but according to the National Magazine the custom was general in South France at the time of the invasion of England by the Spanish Armada.

For many years, the industry was confined to the South of France and Austria, where it still flourishes on a small scale, and it was not until a hundred years ago that intelligent effort was made to establish it on this continent.

For fifty years or so the Carolinas and Virginia were the chief turpentine-producing States, but with the opening up of the pine forests of Georgia the scene of operations was gradually shifted southward, until before very long Georgia had become the center of the industry. At the present time Florida is in the lead, with Georgia and Alabama a close second and third. The depletion of Florida's forests, however, is gradually extending the turpentine area westward, and it is quite possible in twenty-five years' time Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas will be in the lead.—[New York Sun.

The Range King.

DIABOLO DEMONSTRATES THE SURVIVAL OF THE FITTEST.

By a Special Contributor.

ALL summer long from our camp in the foothills of the Manzanos we had watched Diabolo and his band. Our interest had been materially quickened by a remark from Sherman, the cattle buyer, before we left Albuquerque:

"If you-all happen to get a rope on that black stallion, I can use him for two hundred."

With the confidence of the neophyte, we had no sooner established camp than plans were laid for capturing the prize. Visions of the black stallion trailing demurely at the end of our hempen lariat filled our dreams and buoyed our waking hours. The record of our disillusionment need not be written. The utter futility of our efforts to approach within striking distance must have furnished our intended prey a succession of novel diversions. Had we been more experienced the derision of our Mexican boy Emiliano would have been sufficient admonition:

"You no catch heem hundred year—heem Diabolo."

So all summer Diabolo and his band of mares grazed about the slopes before our camp, unscathed by lariat or branding iron. However, our interest in the doughty range chieftain was increased rather than diminished as we came to study him from the respectful distance which he had established. As the hot months passed and grazing on the open mesa became more precarious, the herd ranged closer to the foothills. Gradually the lower water holes diminished and disappeared, and only those in the cañon remained. New Mexico's long-remembered thirteen months' drouth had cast its blight on the land, threatening the existence of all range animals. With a sagacity worthy of his responsibility, Diabolo sought out the strongest spring in the cañon and laid out a short-cut trail through the foothills. No engineer could have drawn a truer or more economical line of easy gradients than the narrow path among the piñons and boulders. By some instinct, Diabolo had seemed to sense the peril of the cloudless day, and had laid his plans to fight a desperate battle against annihilation. The eighteen mares of his clan, weakened by suckling colts and insufficient forage, had wasted to pitiful specters. Diabolo alone retained his rounded form and glossy coat. His black tail swept the ground and his gait had lost none of its resilient spring. Regularly each day the herd filed across the foothills trail for water and slowly back to the stricken range. There were no frisking colts or whinneying mares to relieve the monotony of the procession as in other days. With drooping heads and dragging feet, the line seemed to move through the film of dust above the trail like a phantom caravan.

Our covetousness had been supplanted by sympathy, and each day we watched the horizon for the belated rain clouds which would bring succor to the stricken creatures of the range. But no relief seemed imminent. As if to crown his difficulties, Diabolo one day found himself facing a new predicament, evidently more galling to his harassed temper than his unequal fight for existence. A strange stallion, a sleek buckskin, evidently fresh from some favored range, began hanging about the herd, trailing the little band to the water hole and back to the range. Those who have watched the habits of range horses know what this situation means. Either the invader must be summarily disposed of or the old leader will find himself supplanted by the new and stronger rival—range ethics are confined to the survival of the fittest.

After the manner of his kind, Diabolo declared war—a fierce duel to extermination, without quarter or cessation. With a snort of defiance he charged the buckskin intruder, biting and kicking with fiendish ferocity, his great supple body rearing and lunging at his adversary, heedless of the treacherous rocks and stinging cactus. For hours the buckskin evaded the punishment, but Diabolo seemed tireless in his grim assault. When night came and we could follow the warfare no longer, the shrill cries of the combatants told of the ruthless battle among the hills.

At daybreak, by common consent we saddled our mounts and rode away toward the range. As we topped the hill overlooking the mesa, we came suddenly upon the herd grazing idly among the withered sage and greasewood. Off to the right, a black head reared abruptly from the underbrush with a muffled snort, and the lagging mares pricked up their ears and moved away with lethargic step. Diabolo circled the herd, his head and tail held high as of old, but one foot limped awkwardly and his black coat was smeared with blood in a dozen spots.

Apparently the buckskin had vanished. We could find no trace of him among the hills where the battle had been waged, and we returned to camp uncertain as to the outcome. Emiliano listened to our observations gravely. For some moments he pondered, then beckoned us to follow, and led the way up the cañon trail. "Buckskin—heem—water hole," he explained brokenly. Half-way to the spring we overtook the vanquished buckskin, toiling painfully and by slow stages, dragging a broken leg. Invariably the wounded range animal will spend its last effort to reach water, and Emiliano's solution was merely the inevitable outcome. A rifle ball ended the buckskin's suffering.

One day the wind veered suddenly and black clouds spread across the sky. Rain had come, and each afternoon for days we spent indoors listening to its droning murmur. Arroyos swelled to rushing torrents and the drought-smitten ranges turned green like magic. Diabolo and his band came to the cañon no more and the foothill trails were deserted. A month later when we broke camp and drove away across the mesa to town we came upon the black chieftain and his clan. The mares and colts were fattening rapidly, and danger from the approaching winter was already obviated. And in the lead, sleek and regal, trotted Diabolo, a proud vision of equine symmetry.

Diabolo had won, and down in our hearts we shared his gladness. The last taint of chagrin for our failure vanished as we watched his stately demeanor and realized the travesty of domesticating this superb creature of the plains. Some day, according to the immutable logic of fate, Diabolo must taste the bitter dregs of defeat, but now his sovereign hour had come. With peace and plenty in prospect, his imperious spirit seemed to vaunt its supremacy with a kingly disdain, acknowledging subjection to neither man nor beast nor blighting drought.

The Revolt of Venus.

AN ENGLISH VIEW OF NEW YORK FASHIONS FOR AMERICANS.

From London Opinion.

THIS is the age of revolts. Everybody is revolting everywhere against everything. The twentieth century is the revolting century. The very latest revolt is the revolt of Venus against the tyranny of Paris. I need hardly point out that the modern Venus is an American. The Gibson Girl settled that. Well, the American Venus has made up her mind to rebel against the Parisian dressmaker and the Parisian milliner. She has drawn up a declaration of independence in New York. In future, she will abjure Parisian fashions, and array herself in "American styles pure and simple." So far as I can make out, American styles, like Oscar Wilde's definition of truth, are seldom pure and never simple. American taste leans toward the eccentric. I fear New York will not succeed in overthrowing the domination of Paris, for American women are not patriotic enough to sacrifice their appearance for the sake of their country. They might die for the Stars and Stripes, but they will not be dowdy for them.

After all, there are limits to patriotism, and no country has the right to ask a pretty girl to look hideous in order to support home industries. The heroines of the past were never expected to become frumps as a proof of their devotion. Barbara Frietchie was not asked to wear a Columbia costume, "composed of thirteen red and white stripes and forty-six white stars on a blue ground above a gleaming golden eagle four inches wide." Florence Nightingale and Grace Darling were not implored to wear the Union Jack. The modern woman is urged to turn herself into a guy in order to show her national spirit. This seems to me to be patriotism run to seed. It would be just as logical to ask Americans to give up European tours, to abandon the habit of reading English books, drinking French wines, smoking Turkish tobacco, eating Russian caviare, and listening to Italian tenors. It would be quite as sensible to forbid American gamblers to lose any money at Monte Carlo. In fact, if this insane patriotism is carried out to its logical conclusion, every nation ought to cut itself off from the rest of the world, and live entirely on its own produce. It is the policy of the hermit crab.

The American Venus cannot overthrow "foreign prestige in feminine fashion," for the simple reason that Paris alone can evolve fashions which gratify her desire to look different every few months. The secret of feminine charm is its passion for endless variety. Paris, and Paris alone, can cope with the feminine desire for change. There is some mysterious magic in the air of Paris which is not found in the air of London, or Berlin, or Rome, or St. Petersburg, or Brussels, or Vienna, or Madrid, or New York. Nobody can explain it, but it is there. You cannot bottle it and carry it away, for the Parisian dressmaker and the Parisian milliner quickly become demoralized when transplanted into London or New York. The Parisian environment affects their invention in some mysterious way, and stimulates their imagination. The London environment quickly destroys the Parisian grace and elegance and lightness of touch. If all the great Parisian dressmakers and milliners were captured by an English army and brought captive to London, in a year their deftness and dexterity would be gone. They would become Anglicized; they would become heavy and clumsy and dull. It is a mistake to ascribe the delicate grace of Parisian fashions to the French character, for the French provincial towns do not foster it. It is a purely Parisian quality, and it does not exist in France outside Paris. In Paris it is exuberant. The supply of ideas is never exhausted, and the midinettes, with their magical fingers, and the mannequins, with their instinct for style, grow like mushrooms. They are not made; they are born. The air of Paris breeds them and feeds them.

New York cannot capture the Parisian magic, because the atmosphere of New York is not Parisian. Life there is harder, harsher, and more metallic. Femininity is not a cult in any city except Paris. That is the secret of the Parisian supremacy in fashions. The cult of femininity has never been cultivated so absolutely as it has been cultivated in Paris. Woman is the religion of Paris. The Parisians worship nothing but woman. They worship her as a substitute for every other form of romance. She represents for them the only remaining escape from reality. Paris is the city of cynics. It is the metropolis of disillusion. It has lost faith in every ideal except the ideal of feminine allurement. It has no illusions except the illusion of beauty. It clings to that last illusion with pathetic obstinacy, and, in order to keep it up, it demands an everlasting refinement of refinement. The natural crudity of woman must be veiled with mystery, and the whole art of fashion is the creation of feminine mystery. Clothes are used not as an envelope, but as an evasion. To be dowdy is to be found out. Paris is the severest critic of feminine outline and poise and idiosyncracy. No sensitive woman can walk down the Rue de la Paix without feeling anxious about the hang of her skirt, the angle of her hat, the harmony of her color scheme, the fit of her gloves, the shape of her shoes, the propriety of her hair, and the grace of her gait. Paris is the only city which makes a woman fear daylight.

It is the fierce glare of criticism which makes Paris the dictator of the world's fashions. If a woman is not elegant in Paris, she is an eyesore. London stares at an elegant woman; Paris stares at a dowdy woman. In London, a woman is either pretty or plain; in Paris even the plain woman is pretty. The Parisienne, as a rule, is not beautiful, and perhaps that is why the cult of elegance is so universal in Paris. In London a plain woman gives herself up as a bad job, but in Paris a plain woman makes the best of a bad business, and outwits nature by the ingenuity of art. Indeed, it might be said that the prettiest Parisian women are the plainest.

There is no demand for art where nature is comely. There is no art in Switzerland, because there is so much scenery. The Alps have a good deal to answer for. Where Nature is at her best, man is at his worst. If Parisian women were made beautiful by Nature, they would not trouble to perfect the art of dress. They would be content to go about as God made them. Fortunately, the majority of Frenchwomen are plain, and they are compelled to set Nature at naught. The miracle of Paris is that she enables a woman to triumph over a bad figure and a bad complexion. It is not necessary to be a beauty in order to be beautiful. Paris can make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, and turn a hag into a houri.

The Englishwoman, as a rule, has a good figure and a good complexion. In London you meet more pretty girls than plain ones. The consequence is that the Englishwoman does not trouble to spend her whole life on the study of making the most of either her natural advantages or disadvantages. She is an untutored savage compared to the Parisienne in all the feminine artifices. For instance, she seldom knows how to dress her hair, although she has the most abundant and the most beautiful hair in the world. She clings to the antiquated notion that she ought to go through life with the hair she was born with. She seldom thinks of changing the hue of her hair, and she has a sturdy prejudice against buying it. The average Englishwoman does not pay a hair dresser to dress her hair. In Paris the visit to the hair dresser is a daily rite. He is as important as the dressmaker or the milliner. The Parisienne takes care to have hair that suits her face. Simplicity is the secret of Paris. The Englishwoman, as a rule, takes infinite pains to avoid simplicity. She has no clear and precise ideal, and she abandons herself in despair to the barbarities of fashion. She does not know what she wants, and she is comically puzzled when she discovers that her hat makes her look ridiculous. The characteristic of her clothes is expensive restlessness and costly incongruity. The Parisian ideal is repose and harmony. The English ideal is feverish chaos. The well-dressed Englishwoman looks like a riot.

The American woman is like the Frenchwoman in her determination to make the most out of her defects. As a rule, she is not so comely as the Englishwoman, but she has overcome her natural deficiencies by borrowing the Parisian elegance. It is difficult to distinguish between the elegant American and the elegant Frenchwoman. If you see a brilliantly-turned-out woman, you may be sure that she is either French or American; that is why the revolt of the American Venus against the tyranny of Paris is bound to fail. Besides, the new tariff will not keep out French gowns and French hats. The other day an American friend of mine wrote to me asking me to pray for her on a certain date. She was going home with a stupendous supply of Paris hats and Paris gowns, on every one of which she would have to pay nearly as much duty as their cost. But she would ruin herself rather than wear American hats and American frocks.

The only remedy against the tyranny of Paris is a self-denying ordinance on the part of fashionable women. What is needed is an anti-fashion league, the members of which would wear a simple uniform like the livery of the nurse or the Salvation Army lass. I have no doubt that the intolerable burden of fashion will sooner or later drive women into a defensive uniform like that which was adopted long ago by men. It is not generally realized that men wear a uniform, but the severe simplicity of male attire is a sex uniform. It is at its austerest in evening dress, but there is little room for fantasy even in tweeds. Our dandies and bloods find it difficult to satisfy their taste for decorative originality. They are forced to ring the changes on ties and tie-pins, socks and spats, gloves and canes. Even then their uniform is simple compared to the maddening complexity of feminine raiment. Man has vanquished the tailor. Woman is still the helot of fashion.

JAMES DOUGLAS.

The Meadow Lark.

Oh lark! thou darling, happy thing,
How well I love to hear thee sing!
Thy joyous measure seems to say:
"Be glad, be gay! Be glad, be gay!"

Is't dawn's first flame thy heart that fires
And heavenly song in thee inspires?
Thou wingest thy flight to greet the day—
"Be glad, be gay! Be glad, be gay!"

ELEANOR VORE SICKLES.

Great Plan That Failed.

THE ROMANCE AND TRAGEDY OF THE ASTOR FORTUNE.

By a Special Contributor.

WHEN Napoleon sold to the United States that vast territory then known as Louisiana and embracing most of the trans-Mississippi country, there blossomed in the brain of John Jacob Astor a plan of development so magnificent in scope that it fired the imagination of Thomas Jefferson until he got to think of it as his own idea. Time has not dimmed but rather mellowed its splendor, for it gave to the world one of the tragedies that never will be forgotten and that marks a rugged chapter in American history. By the camp fires in the Far Northwest and in the Canadian wilds the story of the Tonquin has been told and retold until it is a part of the folk lore of the people of the forest and the plain.

Too bad that such a brilliant undertaking did not have a successful termination, but even if it did not fulfill the expectations of its originator it brought to the name of Astor a fame that is enduring. Measured by the conditions of a century ago and those of today, the project of Astor far surpasses those of any latter-day captain of trade, transportation or finance. He planned a real winning of the West, a peaceful conquest of a great region to which the nation's title was doubtful, the establishment of a long chain of trading stations that would blaze the way for civilized man and open the door of opportunity for countless millions, and beyond the West itself he reached out to give to America the trade of China and practically the control of the Pacific. To do it all, he asked no aid. Out of his purse he drew the money to pay the cost.

The Immigrant from Waldorf.

John Jacob Astor had come to the United States in 1783, an immigrant from Waldorf, a village on the Rhine. He expected to become a piano salesman, but while the ship that brought him over was icebound in the Chesapeake he heard enough from one of his fellow-passengers to convince him that in this country there were far more possibilities for him as a dealer in furs than as a dealer in musical instruments. When he got to New York he started in at once as a buyer of pelts. At that time the business was in sad disorder. In earlier days the French had controlled the trade. Through Canada, the Ohio Valley, the Great Lakes and Mississippi the French trappers ranged, and their product found its way to Montreal. When the English drove the French from Canada and a new system of trade came with a new order of men, the trappers found it difficult to adjust themselves to altered conditions. Hardly had affairs righted themselves and the careless, spendthrift but hardy French voyageurs become accustomed to their new masters than the War of the Revolution came on, and at its close the business was in the same state of disorder as after the French war. In the northern part of Canada the Hudson Bay Company was in control, but it was not aggressive at that time. Far more business was done by the independent merchants of Montreal, who, a little later, merged their interests, formed the powerful Northwest Company, and controlled the whole lake region and the territory west. The men in the Northwest Company were Scotchmen, and they were the real lords and rulers of the Canadas. There was a smaller concern, known as the Mackinaw Company, that operated in the upper Mississippi Valley. New York, in the days of British control, had a fur trade, but the Revolutionary War had driven away the British merchants.

Patiently and carefully Astor went about building up a trade on his own account. He sought no alliances, and looked for no favors. He traded with the Indians, the French and the English. Occasionally he traveled to Canada and purchased pelts from the Northwest Company, the Mackinaw Company, or the Hudson Bay Company. In good years and in bad years he prospered, for he was a genius as a merchant. He was a trade economist. Most of the goods he exchanged for pelts he manufactured himself.

Bought Land and Bought Land.

By the close of the eighteenth century he was the richest man in the United States. Then, as his wealth continued to grow, he did a thing that many persons thought was foolish. He bought land. Most of the land that he bought was on Manhattan Island, far beyond the developed section, and did not seem likely to be encroached upon by the little city for generations to come. Occasionally he spread a bit in his land investments. Once he purchased an estate of 50,000 acres up the Hudson. The wisest men in New York said he was inviting ruin, tying up vast sums in unproductive land that meant nothing for him but taxes. But he kept on buying land.

Then, in the first decade of the nineteenth century, Louisiana was purchased from France, and John Jacob Astor, sitting in his office in Pearl street, studied the new map of the United States and marveled over the possibilities the newly-acquired empire opened to the nation. The region beyond the Mississippi was less known then than is the interior of Africa today. A few years before the Columbia, that mighty river of the north, had been discovered. The Rocky Mountains were a barrier hard to cross. A great domain in the far Northwest would become the territory of the nation whose people first established themselves there and raised the flag. To establish a chain of trading stations along the Missouri to its headwaters and then from the headwaters of the Columbia on the other side of the Rockies down to the mouth of the big river on the Pacific shore would open a highway to trade and settlement. The station at the mouth of the Columbia River would be a depot from which a fleet might trade along the Northwest coast to the Russian possessions in Alaska, and also with the rich markets of China and the whole Pacific.

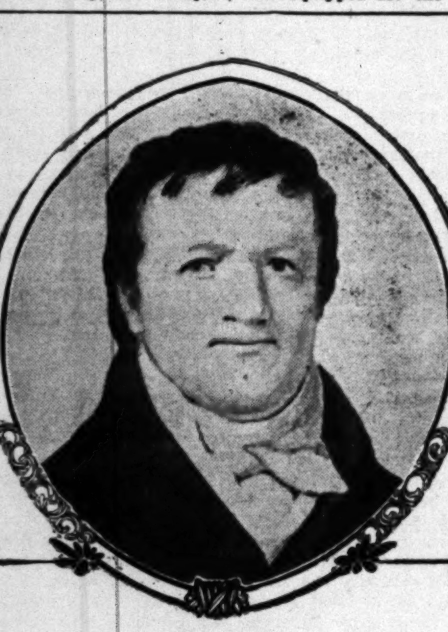
It must be understood that thus far the whole Columbia River country was open territory. If the British got there first it would be theirs. The northern limits of the Louisiana that Jefferson purchased were vague. And what made the situation acute was the fact that the Northwest Company had pushed across the Canadian Rockies and established some trading posts in a section it called New Caledonia. It was nearing the Pacific and approaching the Columbia Valley.

The Charter.

To Washington went Mr. Astor to get from the President the sanction of the government for the magnificent plan he had in mind. He got the enthusiastic support of Mr. Jefferson and the Cabinet. No doubt Mr. Astor saw great profit for himself in the enterprise, but, far more than profit, he sought the fame the project would bring to him.

There was a lot of work preparing properly for the expedition. First of all, Mr. Astor organized the American Fur Company. That company got its charter just 100 years ago. Unable to get in the United States the voyageurs he thought necessary, he recruited a force from among the attachés of the Northwest Company. For his lieutenants in the undertaking he also drew mainly on the men of the Northwest Company. These men he made partners. He gave to them 50 per cent. of the interest, retaining the other 50 per cent. himself. They were under no financial responsibility. He put up $400,000. In his selection of men he exhibited exceptionally bad judgment. The plan was to send two forces, one by ship around the Horn, the other through Canada and down the Mississippi and then up the Missouri, over the Rockies and down the Columbia. The land force was to establish posts along the route and meet the other force at the mouth of the Columbia.

A fine ship, the Tonquin, was equipped for the sea trip. She carried in her hold the frame of a schooner, which was to be employed in the Pacific coasting trade. The Tonquin was commanded by Jonathan Thorn, a lieutenant in the navy, on leave of absence. Nearly all of the Northwest Company men Mr. Astor had taken into partnership were British subjects, and before the Tonquin sailed, two of them went to the British Minister to the United States and advised him of what Mr. Astor was doing. Hardly had the Tonquin left port than trouble began. Capt. Thorn was a martinet, honest and punctilious, but with an abiding contempt for landsmen. Duncan McDougal, the partner to whom Mr. Astor gave his proxy to act in any disagreement, was a peppery, flamboyant creature. Thorn and McDougal clashed at once, and there was a condition approaching mutiny on the Tonquin from start to finish.



JOHN JACOB ASTOR.

The Tonquin.

On September 8, 1810, the Tonquin left New York. The frigate Constitution conveyed her to sea, there being a British warship outside which, it was understood, intended to stop and search her and take off such British subjects as were aboard. The Tonquin got away without molestation, but there was turmoil aboard every day. Many times the captain threatened to put the partners, the clerks and all the voyageurs in irons. The ship stopped at the Falkland Islands and two of the partners had a narrow escape from being marooned there, the captain sailing away without them. But the ship became becalmed and the men were able to get to her in a boat. On Christmas Day the Tonquin doubled Cape Horn and on February 12 reached the Sandwich Islands. There some Hawaiians were recruited for service in the Columbia River country and the Tonquin resumed her journey. On March 22, 1811, the Tonquin arrived off the mouth of the Columbia. The weather was tempestuous and the sea was high. For several days vain efforts were made to find the channel. Eight men were lost in the capsizing of small boats that the captain sent out to find a way into the river. At last, after much delay and trouble, the Tonquin got inside, and on April 12 a site was selected on a small bay for the establishment of the station which was to be the company's headquarters on the Pacific. A fortified post was built, the Stars and Stripes were raised and the settlement was named Astoria. From Astoria parties were sent up the river to explore the stream, establish stations at advantageous points and open up trade with the Indians.

After all the cargo destined for Astoria had been taken out of the ship the Tonquin departed to proceed up the coast to trade for pelts at the various harbors, visit Alaska and begin business with the Russians, Mr. Astor having sent a representative to St. Petersburg and made arrangements by which the American Fur Company was to supply the Russian posts with goods and handle the bulk of the sealskins the Russian hunters gathered in Bering Sea.

Hardly had the Tonquin left than the people in Astoria learned from the Indians that a party of thirty white men had arrived several hundred miles up the Columbia River. It was a party of Northwest Company men who had established a trading post on the Spokane River, which empties into the north branch of the Columbia. The Americans had arrived none too soon.

The Insult.

It was on June 5 that the Tonquin left Astoria. A few days later, the ship arrived at Vancouver Island anchored, much against the advice of the Indian interpreter, who told Capt. Thorn the natives were the most treacherous of Indians. But the captain, obstinate and intolerant of opposition, would not heed advice. In the morning a great fleet of canoes put off from the shore and swarmed about the ship. The Indians had sea otter skins to sell. The Indians were headed by two sons of Wicananish, the Indian chief, and by an old sub-chief named Nookamis. Capt. Thorn expected a profitable deal, and had the deck spread with blankets, cloths, knives, beads and fish hooks. The Indians had some experience with Russian traders, and Nookamis was especially shrewd. He scoffed at the offers Capt. Thorn made, and exasperated that choleric gentleman to a high degree. When Capt. Thorn made a bid, the chief demanded twice when the captain offered, and when any other Indian seemed about to sell his skins, Nookamis checked him and advised better bargaining.

The captain, in disgust, waved Nookamis away, and, sticking his hands in his pockets, began pacing the deck. Nookamis followed him, holding the skins before him, but unable to get him to renew negotiations. Then Nookamis changed his method and started to revile the captain. The captain, white with rage, seized the skins, whipped the Indian about the face with them and then, as Nookamis ran from him, he kicked Nookamis overboard. As if that was not enough, he kicked all the pelts of the Indians overboard and drove the whole band off the ship.

It was in vain that the Indian interpreter pleaded with the captain to draw up his anchor and sail away. The captain was an officer of the United States navy, and told the interpreter to cease his chatter. When one of the partners who had accompanied the captain on this trip also urged immediate sailing, the captain taunted him with cowardice. Neither would the captain pay heed when it was pointed out to him that Mr. Astor had especially warned the party against admitting more than three or four Indians on board at a time.

The Tragedy.

The following morning, parties of Indians came out in canoes again and made signs that they wanted to trade. They were allowed on deck. Then more canoes came out, and soon Indians were clambering up the sides of the ship until the deck was crowded with them. They were willing to trade with the captain now on better terms. Once more the Indian interpreter pleaded with the captain. Once more the partner, McKay, pleaded. It was no use. But more and more canoes put out from the shore until all the squaws were in boats alongside and all the bucks were on board. Possibly the fact that the interpreter persisted and explained that beneath the mantles the Indians wore they probably had weapons concealed at last influenced the captain. At any rate, he gave orders to weigh anchor, and sent some men aloft to set the sails. The Indians thereupon were prepared to trade on any terms. But they took knives and hatchets always in exchange for their otter skins. Then, as the captain gave orders for them to get into their boats there was a yell. Knives, clubs and hatchets were drawn, and the Indians hurled themselves upon the whites. The first man to fall was Mr. Lewis, the ship's clerk. He was a calm, determined man, unobtrusive and quiet. He was leaning over some blankets which he had been bargaining with an Indian about when he was stabbed in the back and fell, mortally wounded, down the companionway.

The captain made a glorious fight. He had nothing but a clasp knife. He drew this and cut and slashed until he had killed one Indian and crippled various others before he could free himself from the lot of savages who made the first rush at him.

Then he tried to reach the quarter deck, and he strewed his path with dead and wounded. But now and then a knife, a club or an ax struck him, and at last he fell. In an instant he was hacked to death and then he was tossed overboard onto the knives of the squaws in the canoes. All over the ship the batle raged furiously, but the Indians so far outnumbered the whites that the crew was overpowered and massacred. As a man fell, his body was cast overboard to the knives of the squaws.

Revenge.

Four of the seven men who had gone aloft managed to get to the cabin, where they found Lewis. They barricaded the door and then with muskets and pistols fired through holes in the companionway and cleared the STORY OF A MOUNTAIN LION HUNT AND A DINNER.

By a Special Contributor.

WE had been building a quail trap all day. The breakfast dishes were still hiding under a newspaper covering down in the cook, tent, unwashed because when the idea of building the trap came to the Man with his morning coffee his ardor swept all along with him to the tool house. "All" included the black cat and myself; we were both taken on every kind of enterprise for the company.

The present undertaking was a wonderful trap designed after a model that the Man had once seen in successful operation at the Casa Grande ruins. "It's against the law to trap quail," I offered, handing over the rusty nails that I had gouged out of a dynamite box.

"Law nothin'!" the Man growled. "We've got to get something to eat, and we're out of cartridges, and gosh! who's going to know what we are doing out on this old desert?"

I was having some very strong hunches that this was a "wild goose chase;" I hated to see the Man tearing his hands with the rusty wire that he was weaving forth and back with a patience worthy of a better cause. He was an uncomfortable sight: bloody, dusty and sweaty. My urgings to wait until another day fell on deaf ears. The trap was finished and dragged to a near-by butte, and grain was scattered all around it. "And now," said the Man, as he threw out the last handful of barley, "I say that we eat, and then pull our freight over to the Virgin Copper camp and find out if Sonora Graham has managed to get the hound he was telling us about last week. Gee whiz! we mustn't miss that mountain lion hunt."

That was the man of it: to make me work all day on an old quail trap and then expect me to skip with him blithely over the hills to a distant mining camp! A light confection and a long rest suggested themselves to me as a more fitting ending of the day than a three-mile walk over the range to gossip of hounds with Sonora. But—"We sure mustn't miss it," I acquiesced, and we prepared for the start. The Man was soon ready and stood waiting for me resplendent in clean shirt and trousers washed by himself the day before. I hastily gathered a plate of scraps for the cat—she should eat and rest if I couldn't—I had a last look at the cosy interior of the tent and stifled a sigh, and we were off, after I had made a last stand for a quiet evening in our own camp. "It's going to rain before we get there," I declared.

"You needn't go if you don't want to," said the Man.

"I would rather get wet than stay here alone," I told him.

"Well, then, come along," he urged, and we set out, as jovial a couple as could be expected under the circumstances.

We struck the Virgin Copper just as the first raindrops spattered the dusty road, and found Sonora in his kitchen making a cocoanut cake. His greeting when we appeared in the doorway was hearty and profane. We seated ourselves on the ever available packing boxes, after being presented to Mr. Henly, another visitor, and otherwise known as "Hen." He was a gray-haired old prospector, and enjoyed the warm corner back of the stove and a cheek full of tobacco.

"Well, I have the hound, all right," Sonora announced; "brought him up from the Gila last night. "And putting a last slather of frosting on his cake and sliding it into the oven, he offered to show us the beast. It was tied to a manger in the stable and cordially received us. A long, tall dog it was, black and tan, with long, pendant ears. The rain was pouring down now, and Sonora expressed his satisfaction. "It'll be damn queer if we don't get that mountain lion when the weather clears," he said. "The scent will stick to the damp ground a long time, and the hound won't have any trouble in following its trail."

I voiced my probably hopeless desire to go on a mountain lion hunt. We had not exactly, as I understood it, been asked to join the hunt, but now all doubts were dispelled: "Go? Of course you'll go," said Sonora. "Just you all come along with me as soon as the rain lets up."

Then he went on to tell us about this particular lion he was after. "I expect he came into these parts from the Pinal range," he said, "or maybe from the mountain-sheep country at the west end of these here Superstitions. Anyhow, here he came from somewhere about two months ago, the first lion that has been in these parts for nigh onto two years, and he has played the very devil with my deer that I'm dependin' on for my winter meat. He has killed four that I know of, and prob'ly more. And he's about the slickest ever. I've laid for him beside his kills time and time again. I've still-hunted him day after day up on the cliffs, and around on t'other side of the mountain, and never got to see even the tip of his tail. But now—well, I guess he has killed his last deer."

The rain continued to pour down, and you who have experienced Arizona rainstorms know that it did actually pour. There was no possibility of returning to our camp that night. At dusk we gathered in the cookhouse for our evening feed. I had no drawing toward that place; it gave me creepy feelings, the damp dark corners having such possibilities of scorpions and tarantulas; yes, and even rattlers. Old Hen had not budged from the close proximity of the kitchen stove. In response to Sonora's inquiry about the contents of the bean pot he allowed that they were just about right. Preparations for supper were not fatiguing; a pan of yeast-powder biscuit, beans, coffee and honey, and then the frosted cocoanut cake for the "finisher."

The Virgin Copper was a series of prospects with shaft house and engine, everything ready to run when Capital could be induced to run it. In the meantime, Sonora was sole caretaker of the place. We spent the evening in the manager's tent house, which he had made into quite a cosy nest for himself. He was away most of the time pursuing the eastern capitalists. Two or three times a year, with pomp and ceremony a party of possible investors was brought out and shown the shafts, and the mountains at large were spied upon. Then, after a day or two, it had always transpired that they returned whence they came, and Sonora was again left to kill time by making cocoanut cakes and variations of chile con carne. The hound was allowed to enjoy with us the warmth and sociability of the tent house. He seemed to understand that there was some hunting to be done, for he snuffled and jumped around and bayed his impatience to be off. But a word always brought him crouching to the floor, his sleek pointed head between his paws, his kind, intelligent eyes begging pardon for the lapse from good form.

Light conversation, or conversation of any weight, was not Sonora's long suit; it was fully as hard for me to drag tales of his prowess from him as to hunt the game. Unblushingly I kept up a fire of questions which at last brought forth a few sparks and gave me some knowledge of the mountain lion. "They sure are cowards; you needn't be one bit afraid of 'em, ma'am," said Sonora, "if you should ever get lost from the party. I never heard of 'em attacking man or woman.

"Newspapers gets a little gay now and then, and describe how these here mountain lions drop out of a tree or off a cliff on to folks; but gosh! I never actually knew of any such doings. Did you, Hen?

"Hell, no, I never did!" vouched Hen, "and I've lived right among 'em all my life. Yes, I've sure seen an' killed a lot of 'em in my day."

"They don't look so big as they really are," Sonora continued. "The old he ones will weigh 175 to 200 pounds; and they can drag around the biggest kind of a deer."

"Well," said I, "I hope we will get at least a look at one of these animals, even if we don't get a chance to kill it."

"That ain't what you can ever expect to happen," said Hen decidedly. "They are so damn shy that you never get a look at 'em till they're treed. But once you get 'em treed you can set down an' look at 'em as long as you're a mind to."

For all of this thrilling hunting talk I was sleepy by 9 o'clock and went over to the guest tent. It was a neat and commodious place, containing two white iron beds piled high with very clean, pretty comfortables, and there were clean white slips on the pillows. The etiquette of these mining camps does not call for sheets; gray wool blankets take their place, and few guests remove more than their outer garments upon retiring, which saves a lot of trouble and is a long stride toward achievement of the simple life.

Everything was ready for an early start the next morning. Old Hen appeared at the cook tent shivering with cold, and while drinking his bumper of steaming coffee announced his decision to forego the hunt because of sundry aches and pains that the dampness had brought on. So we left him to wash the dishes and keep camp, and were out on the trail before sunrise. It was about two miles up to the cañon where Sonora had so frequently seen signs of the lion, and somehow I felt sure that we were going to bring home its pelt. The walk in itself was worth while. The air was soft and fresh after the rain, and pleasant with the aromatic odor of greasewood and sage. The low bushes were alive with small feathered creatures, "pretty quicks," mocking birds, and many other kinds of sweet singers. For a mile we followed a road made by the miners, and then went on in rough country between two mountains. Sonora was ahead, or rather the hound was, tugging on its chain, and I struggled along behind the Man. There ought to be something doing right about here," said Sonora, and he had no sooner said than his prediction came true: the hound made some blood-curdling noises—at least they struck me that way, and I think that the mountain lion's emotional nature might have found the howls upsetting enough. I never went on any kind of hunt but my sympathies were all with the to-be-eaten side of it. But such are my inconsistencies that I am always ready to go, and alas! my appetite for the delicious game is keen; I love venison especially, but can shed a tear before, and after, taking.

The hound was sniffing some footprints in the moist sand that were as big around as a saucer. "Ah ha! the old cat has been along here since the rain stopped," Sonora exclaimed, as he unchained the frantic dog. Away it went on the trail, bellowing raucously about every third jump, and we tore along in its wake. I was proud of my speed and my agility in scuffling over the rocks and along the ledges of that rough cañon. Sonora and the Man were heavyweights, better for endurance than speed. The farther we went the worse was the going; up and down the sides of the cañon and across it many times. I certainly thought I would break some part of me. I took some of the steep places sitting, but I was last in the procession, and no one was aware of my lowly progressions. Once I saved myself from a header by grabbing a thorny mesquite branch, but I only cried "Ouch!" once.

"What's the matter?" the Man called. "Are we going too fast for you?"

And then Sonora panted: "By the way the hound is baying, I guess he has the cat treed. Come on! come on!"

The men's faces showed small rivers cascading down them, but they pushed on, hungry for the killing. I had fallen a little behind, and now made a desperate rally. Why I hurried so I don't know, for when it came to the last death scene, I always shut my eyes. The dog was baying more and more frantically, and guided by his nerve-racking noise, we came at last to where a big palo verde tree held the mountain lion. It was on top of what might be called a low mountain or a high butte, and the dog was pawing and jumping in ineffectual attempts to climb the trunk. When we got up close, we could see the big, gray-furred lion stretched out on a limb of the tree, his wide, golden and anything-but-fierce eyes intent on its pursuers' every motion. It paid not the slightest attention to us, seeming not to notice our approach. Its long, slender tail was never still, swaying in wide sweeps, and again vibrating and jerking just like that of my placid house cat.

"Well, what are we going to do now?" I asked of puffing, perspiring Sonora.

"Oh, sit down and smoke a cigarette and get some wind back into us," he replied. "We'll plunk him when we get good and ready."

"No, sir, if the poor thing has got to be killed, do it now and have it over with," I demanded.

"Go ahead, Sonora, he's yours," said the Man, and at that Sonora aimed his rifle and fired, and out of the tree fell the mountain lion and struck the ground with a dull thud. The hound grabbed it by the throat. The well-placed shot had deprived it of power to make even one post-mortem kick.

The men carefully skinned the lion, and as carefully cut some portions of its carcass and put them in a clean sack. I asked what they intended to do with the meat, and Sonora said that it was for the dog and the cats and chickens.

Back we went to the mine with our trophy. The Man said that we ought to be going home to look at the quail trap, but I was too tired to go on. Sonora said that he would not let us leave until we had sat up to a good venison dinner with him. So I lay down in the guest tent while it was being cooked. Presently the Man came in and enlarged upon the fine venison chops we were to have. As Sonora was passing with some fresh lettuce from the garden, he also stopped to make some remarks about venison, and to ask if I liked mine cooked nice and brown.

There had been so much talk about venison we were to have that it made me, as the Man would say, "sit up and take notice." That is to say, I was beginning to doubt that there was venison in camp. I had not heard of a deer being recently killed, and we saw Sonora every few days. He would have lost no time giving us such an important item of gossip as that, as well as a share of the meat. Moreover, there had been no venison for the evening meal, nor for breakfast. I was trying to decide whether or not my would-be deceivers should enjoy their little joke, when I heard the Man calling from the cook tent: "You, Diana! Venison! venison! venison!"

Whatever the meat might be, the odor of it was appetizing, and I took my box at the end of the table and allowed Sonora to put a helping of "venison" on my plate. About two pounds of meat was his idea of a moderate serving. I commented on the delicious appearance of the chops, and made my usual request: "Just half of that, please," which my host always complied with by leaving me a three-quarter division, accompanied with a few remarks that likened me to a humming bird.

My chop was crispy, brown, tender, and really of fine flavor, and the dinner was good as a whole. I complimented Sonora upon his culinary achievements several times, and was prepared for it when the Man said at the end of it: "And now I am going to tell you a good joke."

The air of triumphant satisfaction with which the three had watched every mouthful I ate had more than confirmed my suspicions, and I was not to be outdone in deception. When the Man said: "It is cat meat that you have eaten," I went through every phase of surprise, and was the best deceiver of the four. I was glad to let them revel in the belief that their power of finesse was wonderful indeed. I had enjoyed a fine hunt and a good mountain lion chop, and was willing to repay them in this way, since it gave them so much pleasure.

Sonora and Hen never knew how the joke, if there was any, was on them. But later I couldn't resist telling the Man the true inwardness of it. I told him, too, that I thought it a really brutal joke. "And remember," I added, "that this cat meat is the limit. No chuckawalla ragout nor rattlesnake chowder for me!"

Why Big Trees Are Big.

The magnificent forests of Douglas fir in Washington—it is called Washington fir there and Oregon fir (the commercial name) in Oregon—do not have an equal anywhere else in the world. This is not surprising when we take into account the rainfall, which in the Puget Sound country is about fifty-three inches, while up in the higher Cascades near Seattle it is 100 inches, and even reaches 150 inches.

Under such climatic conditions the seeds of trees germinate readily and all trees continue to make vigorous growth. These great forests, says ture, are due to the climatic conditions of the region.

On the east slope of the Cascades, the rainfall is less, and here the bull pine is found, interspersed with beautiful white pines, which sometimes reach a height of 200 feet and a diameter of 6 feet, although there are many trees over 100 feet high and three or four feet in diameter. The tree resembles our eastern white pine, but is more slender and with slender spreading or somewhat drooping branches.

HOW A WOMAN WAS LOST IN THE WILDS OF CANADA.

By a Special Contributor.

LAST August, I was spending a week at Laggan while on my way to the Pacific Coast. Laggan can scarcely be described as a "village" in the Rockies, as it consists of but one boarding-house, of a rough-and-ready description, a postoffice, a section-house and a half-dozen frame or log houses occupied by railway men. It has no place of worship of any kind. But, as a railroad center, it holds a very important position, being the western terminus of the Canadian Pacific. As it is only two and a half miles from the famous Lake Louise, one of the beautiful "Lakes in the Clouds," which is situated at the base of Mt. Victoria and its glacier, and close to which stands "The Chalet," one of the railway's luxurious hotels, Laggan is naturally one of the best known stopping-places for tourists, who make numerous excursions from it. One of these, viz., that of the Valley of the Ten Peaks" and "the Moraine Lake" was strongly recommended to me by some people I met when descending the "Saddleback" Mountains one day. They had accomplished the trip on horseback, but saw no reason why I, as a good walker, should not make the excursion on foot.

The "Valley" is, at the least, ten miles from Laggan, the trip being estimated as a twenty to a twenty-four-mile walk. This fact did not deter me even as a "lone woman" from attempting it. Accordingly, the very next morning I started. The weather was magnificent and fairly hot. I had been told that it would not be necessary to go up to the "Chalet," as there was a wagon road from Laggan from which I could strike a trail or path.

Sign posts are not as numerous as they might be in this part of the country and I had walked, apparently, a good many miles, without discovering the desired turn. However, at last I came upon a camp at the side of the road, one of the occupants of which, lucky for me, was visible and obligingly showed me the very turn, within a stone's throw of where we stood, and which, but for him, I should have never dreamed of taking, or possibly have even seen. Now, feeling much more assured, I mounted by it to a well-defined path which was a continuance of the trail from the Lake Louise Chalet. Mile after mile this narrow road led me round the side of a mountain, sometimes through wood and sometimes again in the open with an expansive view of the valley far beneath, which had, as far as I could judge, no road through it but that formed by the winding of the river, which glistening in the sunlight through the trees had formed a bed for itself as it came down from the Moraine Lake," which latter soon came into view, though yet a long way off. Still going round, crossing mountain streams which sometimes almost flooded the path, I at last got into forest land again and commenced the descent to the lake. This body of water has been compared to "An emerald gem, set in a gla[illegible]ment." On one side of it are the famous "Ten Peaks" between which lies fathomless snow and from which the ends of the glaciers hang down to the valley [illegible]

It was all very lovely and very grand, and if I had only been wise enough to return by the way I had come, I should have had a beautiful excursion and this little adventure would never have been written. But, generally speaking, if I can manage to go back from any place by a road different from that by which I have arrived I try to do so. Accordingly, seeing that there was a narrow trail by the very margin of the water I took it. After some time this turned away from it and a little later on lost itself in a kind of meadow land.

Though the way became decidedly worse as I went on, this only made me the more reluctant to retrace my steps, and hoping to strike the original path from a higher point, I persevered and soon found myself ascending some very stony ground. When I had gained the summit I realized that it was useless labor, as there was no outlet from the head of the valley, but over the mountains. Disappointed in that direction I determined to get round the heights above the lake, and commenced a route which, independently of its difficulties, was so very long that after walking—I might say scrambling—for what appeared a very considerable time indeed, I had made, seemingly, no way. The "Ten Peaks," to which now I had taken a strong dislike, were as much in evidence as ever. On and on I went, until at last I arrived at a point at which I should decide between a further ascent or a painfully precipitous descent, if I hoped to regain "my original path." As [illegible] that lay beneath me, I chose, with many misgivings the latter course.

It was a grassy slope which I should, under different circumstances, never have dreamed of going down. It almost seemed like "tempting Providence" to attempt it, but I could see nothing better before me. Fortunately, it was liberally strewn with fallen logs which gave some sense of security, and steering for these, and keeping as far as possible from a narrow rocky ledge where a fall would mean something too painful to contemplate, I let myself go; there were but few places where it was safe to stand upright, so I necessarily kept a slow speed in my perilous venture. When most of the difficulties had been surmounted I commenced to think that perhaps after all, in spite of my precautions, I had missed the path, that by some possibility it had been above instead of below me, and that I should be obliged to go the whole way down to the valley, through which, as I mentioned before, I did not believe there was any road, when suddenly to my great joy and thankfulness I espied the very trail by which I had come that day.

I do not believe any mortal was ever more delighted to see a road than I was to behold that narrow way round the mountain, knowing I was, so far at least, on the right track for my destination, but feeling at the same time that it would be a race between me and the light if I reached Laggan before night. For the present, at any rate, I felt tolerably secure, for as long as this path continued in the open, I could get along safely. So endeavoring to make up for lost time I got up speed, so as to, if possible, pass through the forest section before darkness set in. At last the trail left the side of the mountain and struck into the wood. Although the light by this time had diminished sufficiently to make every charred stump of a tree appear a possible bear, still I was agreeably surprised on entering the forest to find that for a while at all events I should be able to get on, naturally, not without an occasional stumble and fall, but as long as bones were safe I did not mind these. So, still at a good rate I kept on till pulled up by finding myself, though still apparently on the trail, barred from further progress by a boggy thicket. I tried to get through, but had not sufficient light to clear it, and having no wish to get stuck there, retraced my steps as best I could. I felt that it was just possible that I might have got on a side path, though this as I found afterward was not so. However, there was nothing for it now but to wait until the moon rose. It had been full but a couple of nights before, and the only thing to be done was to "possess my soul in patience" until this beneficent luminary should appear!

"Moonlight in the forest" sounds very romantic, but somehow, many of our "ideals" when put into practical use are apt to lose a good deal of the fancied romance attached to them. There was a good-sized stone at the side of the path and on this I determined to take up my position, and if possible get a little sleep, in any case rest, before resuming the march, but in a short time I began to feel so cold that it seemed like courting rheumatism or something worse to remain thus quiet for so long a time; accordingly I rose and commenced a kind of patrol, suggestive of a policeman's up-and-down, to try to keep my circulation going. At length the moon made an appearance, but at the same time I began to realize that it would be a good while before it could be of much use to me. By degrees I was able to see my own shadow, which fact gave me as much pleasure as it could have afforded poor "Peter Schlemil" himself! Notwithstanding, the light was not sufficient for the passage of the difficulty which had stopped me. If any one doubts this statement, let him try the difference between moonlight in the open and moonlight in the forest; if he learns nothing else, he may perhaps appreciate the value of patience! After some further trials of the thicket. I was at last enabled to make my way through, and to my great satisfaction found that the path continued all right on the far side.

Again in good form and perhaps never feeling more free from nervousness in my life, I was going along at a swinging trot, when suddenly I was pulled up again, but this time by the sound of some animal, which I had evidently disturbed in his slumbers. I could hear a hasty scramble up a tree, but a few yards ahead of me on the left side of my path. I shouted then to startle whatever it might be still further, after which it seemed to me as if the tree, not having been selected with much deliberation, had possibly not proved comfortable and that the climber had descended to "terra firma" again.

I have never been a particularly brave woman, but I may not perhaps be considered an unusually cowardly one if I confess that I felt that I could not, by that light, pass the spot where my unknown enemy was. So softly walking backward up the path, I kept as quiet as possible, while I supported myself with my hand against a tree and awaited developments. All was still again. I could think of nothing now but to wait for the dawn. So I trod noiselessly across the path and seated myself on some underwood. I should have been glad if I could have gone to sleep, but that I felt would not be prudent, as I should possibly want all my wits about me before morning. The moon moved slowly, rising through and above the tall pine trees. A portion of the wood was bright, and a portion in deep shade. Far away in the Valley of Laggan I could sometimes hear the noise of a passing train, which I would at such times devoutly wish I were in, and though they were but vain wishes, still the feeling that I was, if not in touch, at least within hearing of civilization, took something away from the vast loneliness of the vigil.

That I was not entirely without company soon became evident. Looking down the path to my left through the dim light which illuminated it I discerned the form, though I could not determine the species, of some small animal, which was approaching in my direction. Apparently on seeing me, he changed his mind and vanished without giving me the chance of a nearer view, but in a very short time afterward, something about the size of a rabbit, which, as well as I could see, was altogether black, or of some very dark color, appeared just at the same spot and looked as if he desired to investigate the reason of my presence in his domain. Not being desirous of making his acquaintance and anxious, for obvious reasons, that my whereabouts should remain unknown, I shook my umbrella at him in silence, which had the happy result of making him vanish, too.

For the remainder of the night I was left in peace, and though I still kept careful watch on all sides, my eyes were pretty constantly fixed on the trees facing me, through which a silvery tint heralded the coming dawn. Naturally, owing to the dense shade of the wood all around, it was later than it otherwise might have been before I could avail myself of the light, but as soon as it was possible I got up and, stepping as lightly as I could down the trail, came to the place of my alarm on the previous night, and anxiously looked about as I passed for the cause. To my great relief there was nothing to be seen but trees and undergrowth. Gathering up more courage with the increasing daylight, all seemed to me easy traveling now; but, although I did not then know it, there were still many miles to walk before I could reach Laggan, at which I did not arrive until 8 o'clock.

If I might suggest a moral for this true story, it would be: "Always return by the way you have gone. It may be prosaic, but is much safer!"

SALVO CONDUCTO.

REAR-ADMIRAL EVANS, RETIRED, TELLS HOW THE YORKTOWN RESCUED REFUGEES.

The United States gunboat Yorktown, under my command, arrived in the harbor of Valparaiso, Chile, about December 1, 1891, after a rough passage from New York, says Rear-Admiral Robley D. Evans, retired, who describes "The Most Dramatic Event in My Life" in the Delineator for October. She had been hurried to the Pacific because of threatened trouble between the two countries, Chile and the United States, caused by the ill-treatment of a number of the crew of the U.S.S. Baltimore in the harbor of Valparaiso while on shore leave. One of the men had been killed, stabbed to death, and many others seriously wounded.

Two days after our arrival the Baltimore sailed for San Francisco and the Yorktown was left alone to represent the United States while the courts of Valparaiso endeavored to arrive at some conclusion as to who was to blame for the unfortunate occurrence.

The American Minister at Santiago, Chile, Mr. Patrick Egan, had given asylum to many political refugees of the Balmaceda government, and these only added to the embarrassment of the situation—they were practically the guests of the United States and must be protected and fed at all hazards. To protect them proved much easier than to feed them, and Mr. Egan found himself in a most serious situation. Finally, the mob threatened to burn the American legation, and thus secure the persons who had taken refuge therein. This threat, fortunately, was never carried out, but it produced one curious result—orders by wire from the President for the commanding officer of the Yorktown to proceed to Santiago and report to him by telegraph as soon as possible the conditions surrounding the American legation.

Upon my arrival at Santiago, I found a very curious condition of things. The American legation was surrounded by spies who stood about with firearms ready to shoot any refugee who showed himself. They also did all they could to annoy Mr. Egan and prevent him from obtaining the necessary food supplies for those under his care.

There were nearly 100 refugees in the American legation at this time, and to clear them out and get them to a place of safety was the business of the Minister. After I had wired the President at Washington the general conditions at Santiago, I conferred with Mr. Egan and informed him that I would receive the refugees on board the Yorktown at Valparaiso provided they could be turned over to me with the permission and approval of the Chilean government, but not otherwise.

A few days after my return from Santiago, I received a cipher message from Mr. Egan that he and a few friends would visit me the following morning, which I of course understood. The train containing the party was stopped a few miles out of Valparaiso and Mr. Egan and his friends were lowered over a steep bluff into the boats of the Yorktown, which were waiting, and safely brought on board with the statement from the Minister that they were there by permission of the Chilean government. As they came over the side and saw the crew standing at quarters ready for action, one of them, an officer of high rank, who had served his country for over fifty years, placed his hand on one of the six-inch guns and said: "Captain, this is a practical salvo conducto." "No, General," I replied, pointing to our flag, "that is the practical salvo conducto." To get the remaining refugees on board was the important thing, and to this we devoted ourselves.

I wired my own government that the presence of the refugees on board would seriously embarrass me in case of trouble, and asked permission to proceed to Callao or some other port and land them. The answer came back promptly: "Use your own discretion," and I did.

A visit was made to the British admiral and he was informed of my intentions and what I proposed to do if the Chilean squadron followed us. Four hours before our departure, all other foreign vessels, including the Chilean flagship, were informed of our proposed sailing, and an offer made to carry any mail they might have for Callao.

"The Yorktown was cleared for action and at 4 p.m. got under way. As her anchor cleared the bottom, her engines were sent full speed ahead, and the little white gunboat turned rapidly and stood for the open sea, her crew all standing by the guns ready to reply properly to any hostile act which we all had good reason to think might come at any moment. Passing rapidly down the line of Chilean ships with the marines at "Present Arms," the bugles sounding a salute to each, observing most carefully every detail of international courtesy, she cleared the end of the line and passed the fleet of foreign men-of-war, most of which were under steam and ready to move.

During the time we were passing the Chilean ships, and for five or ten minutes after, when we expected them to follow us, the situation seemed to me intensely dramatic. The whole picture was beautifully set, and the danger was enough to keep one's nerves in a pleasant state of tension. The small gunboat would have been no match for the force opposed to her. They could have sunk her and killed all her crew with one broadside, but the beautiful flag at her staff commanded and received the consideration it always deserves, and no hostile act was committed; not a shot was fired, and not a single Chilean ship got under way to follow us.

A Moribund Art.

CONCERNING INDIAN BASKETRY OF THE PACIFIC COAST

By Mrs. M. Burton Williamson.

IT is remarkable that a rude people, ignorant of the various appliances of art, should develop an industry that appeals to the most esthetic taste, for Indian basketry is the epitome of symbolic development.

As we are aware, collecting Indian baskets as a fad finds its votaries not alone among people of abundant means, but lovers of artistic handicraft will forego many so-called necessities in order to purchase these specimens of the Indian woman's skill.

As a diversion, collecting fine specimens of Indian basketry requires more taste, critical acumen and knowledge of what should constitute a "choice specimen" than the average person would conjecture. Dr. J. W. Hudson, who lived for twenty years near the Pomo Indians in Mendocino county, California, and made a rare collection of their basketry, says there are "ten graded rules" the "basket crank" must be cognizant of if he, or she, would obtain the best samples; these are: "Weave, symmetry of outline, of stitch, of thread, delicacy of thread, material, pattern, ornamentation, general effect and size."

We are beginning to see that the finest products of basketry are the outward expression of a love of beauty in the heart of the weaver. Nature revels in variation, so these simple children of nature unconsciously follow in her lead and give textile expression in endless patterns of basketry. For adepts in discerning and collecting baskets tell us there are no duplicates. Hudson, in the Overland, says: "To obtain a specimen of every weave and pattern of baskets it is necessary to purchase all that were ever brought into existence." When we recall that civilized woman is the slave of "patterns" whether of knitting, lace, embroidery, or other form of fancy work, each worker copying the pattern of another, we are amazed at the originality of the Indian woman.

Besides furnishing her own pattern—being limited only by tribe distinctions of technic and ornamentation—she must needs collect her own material, searching the woods, mountains and cañons for the particular plant her fastidious taste requires for her own creation, whether these be Sitka spruce, three-leaf sumac, willow, tule or other plant.

We are also surprised to learn that the finest specimens of basketry were not made for barter and exchange, but for the delight of the maker, and that frequently rare specimens were burned at the burial of the Indian squaw who made them. Sentiment is an attribute we have been very chary of recognizing in an Indian. Mrs. Sarah P. Wheeler relates the following story in connection with one of the mission baskets in the Coronel collection at the Chamber of Commerce: Money was offered the maker of the basket, but the squaw could not part with her rare basket for money, yet the one who wanted the basket was a fri Indians, and how could she refuse her? At Indian woman said: "Have you anything yo I prize this basket very much, but I will give ket to you for it." She could give her bask present, but to sell something that seemed a p herself, she could not do it!

While experts in order to possess rare bask up golden eagles before the impoverished India weaver, the novice, here and there, finds a bask gives joy to the possessor even though a might not label it as worthy of special men though Mason says of some baskets sent home forty-niners that some of these baskets, now possession of old families in the Eastern St worth their weight in gold.

As we have noted, the expert specializes i of the merits of a basket while the novice m in the general effect. But, as intimated, on be an expert to feel a thrill of joy in the p of one of these ethnic productions. Like th niner, one may desire to own one of these ductions, leaving the intrinsic value out of th tion.

The late Otis Tufton Mason, curator divisio nology, United States National Museum, de ketry as the "mother of all loom and bead says the "first and most versatile shuttles an's fingers." He recognizes "two distinct technic in basketry"—hand-woven, which is warp foundation; and sewed or coiled, built o dation of rods, splints or straws. He give seventy-five definitions to describe the various weaves, patterns, etc., which enter into this industry.

Although Indian basketry shows such variety in form, color and ornamentation in individual specimens, yet one soon learns to classify certain types of baskets as the work of different families of aboriginals. The soft, pliable, embroidered basketry of the Tlinkit or Yakutats of Alaska; the highly-decorated baskets interwoven with feathers and pendants of abalone and beads of the Pomo Indians of California; the coiled plaques of the Hopi Indians of Arizona; the fretwork, or zig-zag designs of the Pima Indians of Arizona, and the yellow-and-brown, coiled basketry of the Mission Indians of Southern California, all show a pleasing variety that is, as I have remarked, easy to detect.

Alaskan basketry readily resolves itself into Attu or Aleut, Tlinkit or Yakutat weaves. The former is said to be the work of a few Indian women who are rapidly decreasing in number. Before the Aleuts came into contact with the whites, their baskets were without colors, the fine weaves alone being their pride. Now, quaint little tufts of bright-colored yarn are seen on them, reminding one of the conventional ornamentation of Dresden china. In basketry, Alaskan baskets are classified under twined work, the weave being very different from the coiled weave. The Tlinkit basketry, besides being attractive in ornamentation, has this peculiarity: the inside of each basket is entirely different from the outside, in decorative design. As the baskets are not double, this is very puzzling at first.

One of the pleasures anticipated in going to Alaska is the expectation of visiting the Alaskan Indian villages, in order to purchase baskets of the makers. After seeing the natives, as a tourist graphically declares, in their "vile-smelling houses," there is one thing that surprises the traveler; no matter how unkempt the surroundings of the basket-maker may be, the basket is always most carefully guarded and encased in white sheeting; this clean white cotton cloth is spread out whenever the basket is to be exhibited, and, even before the basket is made, the clean, cotton cloth shields it from dirt.

Mrs. Lillian A. Williamson gives the following description of the Tlinkit or Yakutat basketry of Alaska: "The Yakutat baskets are made of spruce roots, and the real Indian colors are yellow, dyed with tree moss, red from a berry and black from the maidenhair fern. The other colors are dyes which they have learned from the Americans to use; that is, they use the bright dyes purchased from the Americans, as they find them so much easier to procure. When looking at Indian baskets, if they are made with vegetable dyes, the squaw will say: 'Injun dyes, Injun dyes.' You'll hear this until it will ring over and over in your ears.

"The roots for making the baskets are procured by the squaws, who make excursions into the mountains to find them. It takes, sometimes, several days to get enough fresh young roots for a basket. These roots are boiled, having been previously scraped, after which they are placed in a pan of water, to soak for two or three weeks. When ready to weave, the squaw puts the roots in lukewarm water; the roots are separated to get a fiber the desired size, a little knife blade fixed into a bone handle being used for this purpose. After the fiber has been loosened from the root, one end is fastened to a stick set firmly in the ground, and with a mussel shell or copper implement it is scraped until it is fine and smooth and of a glossy appearance. One would scarcely think there would be so much work necessary before the weaving process begins. It takes a long time and a great deal of patience. Before I knew what a tedious process it was to make these baskets and how carefully these women handled their work and how they really loved these products of their handiwork as though they were animate objects, I wondered why they would chatter and scowl at me when I would take up a basket to ask the price, then ruthlessly drop it, so that sometimes it would fall on its side. I thought, at first, they did not like it because I did not purchase the basket, but I soon found out that the most of them are rather indifferent about selling them, but not so about the handling of their precious work."

It is not surprising that the basket is dear to the Indian, as Carl Purdy, who made a study of the Pomo Indians of California, says in Out West: "Into the life of a Pomo, baskets entered every day from his birth to his death. He was cradled in a papoose basket, and in it, hung by a broad band on his mother's brow, he made his early journeys. His home was a great thatched basket; his toys were baskets modeled after the large ones he saw." He ate from a flat basket, drank from a round one; his food was cooked in large mush-bowls and a water-tight basket carried his water. One wonders how food could be cooked in a basket, but, like everything else, it requires a skill or knack in manipulating the hot stones used to cook the food. Dr. William H. Holmes, in "Anthropological Studies in California," gives a number of illustrations of Indian women preparing meal from acorns and cooking the same. Wooden tongs are used in lifting the hot stones from the fire into the basket, and also in removing the stones from the basket of water. The basket must be water-tight, the stones properly selected and not heated to too great degree, or the basket would suffer. Basket bowls are dipped in pitch to make them water-tight.

The Pomo Indians of California make beautiful baskets. Especially noticeable are the ones covered with tufts of bright-colored feathers. While the effect is truly gorgeous, Mason tells us: "The best examples of coiled weaving are not to be found in feather baskets." But, as we know, all their basketry is not limited to feather designs.

Of the baskets made by the Indians of Mid-California and Southern California, Dr. George A. Dorsey of the Field Columbian Museum considers those made by the "Mariposans" as the most valuable, "as much as $200 having been paid for a gambling tray, while a similar amount is frequently demanded for the beautifully-made mush bowls." The Tulares or Yokuts of the Mariposan family show many interesting shapes and designs among their basketry. Their vase-shaped, or "bottle-necked," as experts term these baskets, ornamented by a row of the crest feathers of the quail or jaybird, are intended as gifts, and happy is the receiver thus favored. When a Los Angeles lady received one of these baskets made by Louise of the Tehachapi or Cuddeback Indians of Kern county, the giver informed her she was to be "forever blessed with all that is good." While the basket is woven of willow, the design of diamond or star-point tracery that borders the basket is colored by using the root of witch hazel of Owens River, nearly a hundred miles from this Indian settlement—this distance the squaw must travel to find her coloring dyes. The rich coloring of a basket is not seen in a photograph, but some idea of design is possible.

The Tulare gambling placque, or tray, is not often met with in amateur collections. With the tray should be eight dice, made of halves of walnut shells filled with pitch and pieces of mother-of-pearl. The tray figured is about eighteen inches in diameter. It is said to be 100 years old. While one might question the number of years, the tray shows the marks of use and age, not only in the mellowed golden color, but in the wearing away of the warp. Stephen Powers, in "Tribes of California," gives an interesting account of dice playing as conducted by the Indian women. "Four squaws sit around it to play, and a fifth keeps tally with fifteen sticks." The number of flat surfaces turned up, two or five, makes one in the count.

The picture of a bead-eyed papoose strapped in his little cradle, whether the cradle basket be that of a California Indian, Paiute, Ute, Hopi, Navajo or Zuni, appeals to the maternal instinct and makes one wish that these aboriginals of our Pacific shore had been able to give us motherhood legends at first hand. Aboriginal motherhood has too long been either ignored or misunderstood.

Probably the most familiar form of cradle basket is that of the slipper-shaped, plain, turned weave of osier of the Hupa Indians of Northwestern California. The little round awning for the protection of the baby's head is attached to the basket by a little, coiled osier cord and may be tilted at any angle. The carrying straps are omitted in the illustration, which shows a light, airy basket, easy to carry and readily adjustable to an upright or flat position.

An Alaskan cradle, a basket covered with fur or cloth, is "seldom to be had," although of "rude structure of no intrinsic value." Its scarcity in collections is due to maternal superstitions. G. T. Emmons, authority on the Tlinkit Indians of Alaska, gives the following reason: "The old superstition still prevails that the cradle must never be used but once. When no longer required, it is hidden away by the mother in some hollow tree in the depths of the forest or in a cleft in the rocks on the mountain side, and allowed to remain there. If it should be found by one evilly disposed, injury to the cradle would rest on the child."

The basketry of the Indians of Southern California is very often labeled with a "Mission Indian" tag instead of a more specific label. This is rather unfortunate, as a basket means so much more when it can be localized, for the Mission Indians include a great many villages of the Shoshonean and Yuman families, each having distinctive names. The general type of coiled weave basketry, usually made of aromatic or three-leaf sumac (Rhus trilobata,) reed grass, or rush (Juncus acutus,) and basket rush (Juncus textilis,) is easily recognizable. They are more substantial than delicate in texture, but are very attractive in color effect, often ranging from creamy white to varying shades of brown and black. While recent basketry often shows signs of haste in manipulation, some of the older Cahuilla, or Coahuilla, and Soboba baskets are fine examples of this textile art. The illustration shows one of these old baskets made a third of a century ago, the property of the first Indian teacher employed by the government in Southern California.

A young lady visiting on a ranch in Southern California espied a "Mission basket" with no bottom, excepting coarse wires for use in carrying grapes, etc., and it occurred to her that this basket should have a bottom on it, the old one, as she presumed, having worn out. A Soboba weaver wove a bright new bottom on the old hopper basket with such skill that nothing but the color tells the story. For this old open-bottomed basket, having a circumference, at the top, of about sixty-eight inches, and depth of nearly a foot, represents the basket known as the hopper, used in grinding acorns in a mortar stone. One wonders which would be the more interesting, the basket as a relic of primitive ways or the "restored" basket representative of the spirit of the day!

No miscellaneous collection seems complete without a specimen of the "Navajo wedding basket." (The Pomo wedding basket is another rare basket, but is unlike the Navajo in form as well as ceremonial use.) At first glance, it seems as though the Navajo weaver had been short of decorative material, so instead of making her row of reddish-brown and black complete around the basket, there is a break in the band, but we are told this is characteristic of this decorative motive. For this so-called wedding basket is, according to Dr. Washington Mathews, the basket "drum," as well as sacred basket of the Navajos. He says the break in the pattern is "put there to assist in the orientation of the basket at night in the medicine lodge when the fire has burned low and the lights are dim." For in their "ceremonies careful discrimination is made between the butt and the tip, the central and the peripheral ends, and the butt has precedence over the tip. This law applies to the basket in question as well as other things." When we recall that the points of the compass are strictly recognized by the Indians in their ceremonies, that this break in the motive must be always turned to the east, we see the significance of it. The last coil of the basket is directly in line with the opening or break in the design.

As there is considerable difference of opinion among basket collectors as to whether the Navajos really make their own sacred, or wedding, baskets, I will quote from Dr. Mathews on this subject. His long official residence in the Navajo country makes what he says authoritative: "The art of basket-making is today little cultivated among the Navajos. In developing their blanket-making to the highest point of Indian art, the women of the tribe have neglected other labors." He says, however: "They still continue to make this form for the reason that it is essential to the sacred rites and must be supplied by women of the tribe who know what is required."

The thick Hopi coiled placques are unlike any we have been considering. These meal trays of yucca are decorated with mythological figures, but the symbolic characters are abbreviated and perspective is held in abeyance. One, and often four, birds can, with a little patient study, be distinguished in the colors in each placque, head, feet, toes and tail all showing plainly after one has figured out the picture puzzle. Mason says: "On a single Hopi plaque it is not rare to see side by side the complete figure of a bird or butterfly with outspread wings, and near by an abbreviated cross which means the same thing."

Some of these sacred meal trays of Northern Arizona Indians have the ends or coils of the basket neatly finished, while others have the end of last coil unfinished. When I first saw one of these Hopi trays, I objected to its unfinished condition until I was told this was the "key" to the maker, the unmarried women leaving their placques with the coil unfinished.

The fret-like or zigzag ornamentation of the Pima Indians of Southern Arizona is familiar to most admirers of basketry, and closely allied to the Pima designs are those of the Arizona Apaches which sometimes, as in the illustration, represent conventionalized animal figures. Human figures also appear in many of their designs.

Another tribe of Arizona Indians are the Papagoes. A friend showing me a large basket of Papago weave, related the following: A squaw was busy making her bread in the basket; after watching her, this friend asked her to sell her the basket, but the squaw only shook her head. Silver was shown her to no purpose, but, as my friend was going away, a Papago Indian ordered the squaw to take her meal out of the basket and pass the bowl over for the silver. Seeing the squaw was unwillingly being deprived of her necessary utensil, my friend tried to evade the purchase of it, but the determined manner of the Indian made her feel that probably the loss of the basket might be for the squaw the easier way of settling the domestic dispute.

It is a common object of remark that the best types of Indian basketry are the work of old women, and that the art is dying out. In the first place, basket-making requires infinite patience and much time, besides painful effort; in the second place, the demand for more remunerative labor makes this technic a last resort.

George Wharton James says: "It would be a calamity to Indians and whites alike if the industrial art of basket-making were allowed to die." He relates the following: "A friend of mine not long ago asked a lady missionary to the Indians if she encouraged her dusky flock in the work of basket-making, and confessed herself almost paralyzed at the answer: 'No, indeed! I never encourage them in any except the Christian arts.'" It is to be hoped this missionary is an exceptional one, for from an ethnic point of view, aboriginal art should be encouraged in every way. As O. T. Mason wrote: "Over and above the sympathetic spirit engenedered and the kind encouragement given to exquisite and most worthy artists by the collection of basketry, the study is a very important one from the side of culture. It is the alpha of an art in which billions of capital are invested, millions of human beings employed."

We may say with Mason: "It is to be hoped that with the admiration of American basketry may be coupled a humane feeling for Indian women themselves, who have made so much genuine pleasure possible."

On a Rural Wisconsin 'Phone Line.

Chicago "hello girls" well may congratulate themselves that their lot in life did not assign them to jobs in the Wisconsin rural wire service. In many of the small towns of that State the telephone operators lead a harassed existence. When receiving outside calls, the unfortunate operator must articulate the name of her town distinctly. This requirement sometimes leads to throat trouble and nervous prostration.

How would you like to sit at a telephone board and say "Oconomowoc" several hundred times each day? That's the duty of the three young women who operate the exchange in the fashionable summer resort for Chicagoans. Here are other Wisconsin towns, repeating the cognomen of which limbers up the vocal chords of the "hello girls": Kickapoo, Ixonia, Menekaunee, Wyocena, Kaukauna, Menomonee Falls, Muwwango, Namekagon, Wauwotosa, Wauzeka, Weyauwega. Last, but not least, there is an appellation hardly Indian which appalls more than any of the rest. It is Schleisingerville.

Worst of all, the poor girls cannot "slough" these words as does the railroad brakeman.—[Chicago Tribune.

A Hector Outhectored.

A publisher's reader, at the Franklin Inn, a literary club, hectored a group of novelists.

"You chaps," he sneered, "must always be coining new words. Good English isn't good enough for you. In the last half-dozen manuscript novels I turned down, there were such horrible neologisms as 'he hoarsed,' 'she parroted,' 'they shrilled,' 'he glimpsed her,' 'it supremed,' and so forth. Faugh!"

"Let me inform you," cried a novelist defiantly, "that your remark shows a pitiful ignorance on your part of our mother tongue. As for 'shrilling,' Tennyson writes:

"'With petulant thumb and finger shrilling 'Hence!'

"Chapman, the great Chapman, is an authority for 'parroting.' 'Glimpsing' has been used by Howells and Lowell, and 'supreme' as a verb may be found in Shelley's letters."

Fool Brockey's Wife.

LITTLE VERMONT SCHOOL-TEACHER COMES TO CALIFORNIA.

By a Special Contributor.

"CALIFORNIA'S so big and brown!" The little Vermont school teacher stared at the August hills.

"Yep—got on her summer buckskin," the brick-complexioned driver turned half-round to assert. Those were the times when a daily stage satisfied all the requirements of travel between Los Angeles and Pasadena. "California's all right," he continued. "I came with a lung and a half, and I've still got all I brought. I'd rather be a live stage driver out here than a dead capitalist back there."

Disappointment with the wayside scenery settled over Deborah Millard's romantic anticipations just as the brown dust eclipsed her pearl-gray polonaise. She wriggled and brushed, impatient to rid herself of both.

The only other passenger was a substantial, well-tanned matron with an anxious eye for her many bundles rolling and jouncing in the bottom of the surrey that served as stage.

"This country's a strange garret to them women folks that's always et off their great-grandmother's chiny," she observed shrewdly.

"I always have," admitted Deborah, sniffing forlornly the winey sun-distilled odors of sage and "old man." "Is that why it smells like an herb closet to me and looks like a desert?"

"Desert!" chuckled the driver. "Why, there's a man in Pasadena believes it's going to be built up all the way from Los Angeles. He's counting on selling out his orange orchard in city lots."

"That's Fool Brockey," gurgled the matron.

The girl's start at the name fairly lifted her from the seat. As she sank back, her feet pushed tensely at the bottom of the stage; her arms were rigid to the shoulders.

"What makes you call him—Fool Brockey?"

The driver tipped back his hat and laughed aloud.

"Two letters got left out. F. L. Brockey—see?"

"Men don't name themselves."

"Brockey comes by it more honest than that."

"There was his land deal with Peter Scott," prompted the matron.

"Tell me," commanded the stranger.

"There goes an awful smart bird!" Deborah did not look at the road runner scurrying across the highway to lose himself in a patch of cactus with a final perk of his exaggerated tail.

"Tell me," she insisted tensely.

"What? Oh, about Fool Brockey?" answered the driver. "Well, old Peter Scott, as a special favor offered to sell Brockey fifteen acres from his piece at a hundred per acre. The tenderfoot had just landed in Pasadena with a pile about that size, and he planked it down. The next day he happened to start to town with me, and I said:

"'Of course you fixed about the water?'

"'Water!' he says. 'Don't the Lord provide the water?'

"'You chump!' I told him. 'The Lord provides the original supply, but you buy it out of an irrigating flume by the inch. In California, you pay for water, and they throw in the land.'

"'Let me out!' he yells. And he streaks it back to Pasadena hot-footed."

"How did he arrange it?" asked the girl with a sharp intake of breath."

"Had to mortgage his place back to Scott for the water, and now he works for the old codger off and on at a dollar four bits a day to pay interest on the mortgage. It's expensive to be a fool."

Just then the girl's end of the seat went down alarmingly at a bit of sidehill road while the matron's substantial bulk coasted against her. Her involuntary effort to save herself sent her reticule flying into the highway, where it spilled its contents in the dust. The driver stopped his team and clambered down. He crowded some papers and trinkets into the reticule. Then he rescued a photograph that had fallen to one side and stared at it involuntarily. The matron caught a glimpse of it from above.

"Why, ef it ain't——" she cried, and then was silent. Both looked at the girl. With flaming cheeks and miserable eyes she reached out her hand for the picture.

"You surely have not been talking about this Mr. Brockey," she blazed, slipping the photograph back into her reticule.

"That's the same Brockey, all right," the driver confirmed in dazed fashion.

The matron had a feminine illumination.

"Great jumping Jehosephat! You ain't the girl what was coming on from Vermont State to marry him?"

"I am!"

The stage driver faced away and flicked at his team, while his very back exuded embarrassment.

"There, there, dearie, don't you mind too much the things we said," the matron consoled her, at the same time prodding her fat brain to recall how damaging they were. "Any one can tell he's a scollard, and goodness is just write all over him."

"I've never seen him."

"Sakes, no! Ain't he told me how you was promised to his schoolmate, and after he died how you and him took to writing—and the rest. He jest lives on your letters; they're his meat and drink."

"And when they have dances at the schoolhouse," the driver spoke over his shoulder, anxious to redeem himself, but without the courage to turn around, "he'll get some nice sympathetic girl in a corner and spin on and on about you—all he wants of that girl is her ears——"

Deborah turned her burning cheeks away to the sage brush. For a year in bedtime trances she had walked beneath the citrus foliage of Hesperides with a demigod. It was all crumpling like any other dream stuff. Here she was being jogged along a dusty road among endless sun-burnt hills to meet—a fool! She showed no interest when the well-kept young orchards on Orange Grove avenue were reached.

"Is Brockey looking for you today? He didn't say anything about my picking you up this particular trip."

Deborah felt her lips work stiffly as if swollen.

"I'm afraid not. I came through a day quicker than they told me in Underhill."

"That's his ranch, dearie, and there's him out irrigating. Why, child, you look like you was going to a hanging 'stead of a husband."

The girl achieved a little sound of dissent.

"Here, Brockey," called the driver. "I've brought you a prize package."

A very Ichabod Crane of a man dropped his hoe and came running with a funny galloping gait caused by jumps over the irrigating channels.

"You get your money's worth of him by the yard," the driver could not forbear to tease.

Frederick Livingston Brockey stood by the roadside staring up in shy, pleased adoration of his dream lady thus suddenly materialized. Her delicately-tinted skin, her deep blue eyes, her trim little figure, her gray attire, demure and dainty in defiance of all damages of travel, gave no lie to his ideal.

To Deborah Millard, Brockey looked a disreputable vagabond with his too-brief overalls and his blue-checked shirt so large at the neck as to show an unbelievable length of lean throat. He had removed a weather-beaten straw hat, revealing hair matted with perspiration that also trickled down his dust-streaked countenance. To be sure, there was the straight-featured, softly-bearded face with the fine dreamy eyes she knw by photograph, but which assorted grotesquely with the rest of him as when children put together heads and bodies cut from different pictures.

Deborah Millard tugged at her faculties for some conventional speech of greeting, but it would not come. Brockey looked down at his big bare feet with boyish embarrassment.

"This is the case of Maud Muller reversed."

A spasm of nervous laughter blew across Deborah's face, leaving it more set in dismay than before.

"Wait while I get my coat," Brockey adjured the driver, "and then you may drive us on to Minister Brown's."

He was off again at a run, a giant among his young orange trees, and disappeared within a square, unpainted shack.

"Lopes like a jack rabbit," observed the stage driver, half-admiringly.

Mr. Brockey emerged from the shack with his appearance ameliorated by coat and shoes. He climbed into the seat beside the driver, and the stage rattled on.

This course of action was in accordance with their plan, carefully arranged in their correspondence, as there was no hotel in Pasadena, and Deborah had liked the idea of spending the first night under her own roof. Over and over when she brushed her hair at bedtime she had dramatized the meeting and the subsequent romantic progress to the minister's, and now the reality was a burlesque.

"Sold any city lots yet?" she heard the driver inquire of Brockey.

"No hurry," he drawled. "I'll hate to see my flock of green geese crowded out by office buildings."

"I don't see it coming."

"I'm a male Cassandra," laughed the other good-humoredly, "and you're the unbelieving Trojans."

The girl started and wrung her hands nervously in her lap. There was the cultured poetical phrasing she had admired beyond measure in his letters, and the silken voice matched the pictured face. What had these to do with the lanky, barefoot, short-jeaned scarecrow of the roadside? Was he the man she had crossed the continent to marry? Surely this was the dream from which she must awake to El Dorado and the demigod.

In the midst of her paralysis of bewilderment the stage arrived at the rose-covered piazza of ex-Minister Brown, now an orchardist. Deborah was ushered into the best bedroom to make any small changes in her appearance she might wish. The driver and the matron were invited by the jubilant bridegroom to linger and witness the ceremony.

The lady from Vermont shut herself in and stared at her white distressed face in the mirror. There surely had been no opportunity to break the engagement during that brief time in the stage of studying the ill-fitting back of Mr. Brockey's coat. Neither could she have made the damaging announcement on the minister's doorstep. Yet every moment hemmed her in more closely. The fact that the bridegroom had bought her ticket to California was a sordid complication. To be cruelly forced into a hateful union is the favorite misfortune of heroines, but to be jiggled and jostled into a ludicrous one—poor Deborah! She shook off the strange numbness of will and thought. She paced the room clutching her temples. She would tell the minister to send Brockey away—Brockey—Frederick—why, this was Frederick—just this Fool Brockey, the community butt and joke. She flung herself face-down across the bed at that. For the instant, the loss of Frederick hurt so much that her brain went numb again on the problem how to escape from Brockey.

The minister had been called from his plowing, and hastily donned his official black. After due notice through his wife, he entered the bedroom for the conventional interview with the bride-to-be.

"I presume, my dear, there was no compulsion about your coming to California to marry Mr. Brockey."

"No, no," she answered hastily," of but I——"

"Well, now that you have seen him, do you want to marry him?"

The tone was serious and the suavely clerical invited confidence. Deborah Millard had already her lips to launch her hysterical appeal when caught a twinkle in the ministerial eye and a behind the hand that stroked his beard. All her ridicule had been a lash of a thousand stings. seemed to hear the laughter ring from porch to the length and breadth of Pasadena; she heard it up and echoed from parlor to parlor in Underhill, cause she, Deborah Millard, had come to California marry a man she would not have after she had him.

She caught herself in time, though with an inadequate speech like the arm thrust out to fall.

"Mr. Brockey is—taller—than I expected."

The minister threw back his head and laughed ily, but his mirth trailed off a bit foolishly before icy dignity of the little Vermont schoolma'am.

"I'm quite ready," she annnounced.

. . . .

Half an hour later the newly-wedded couple home by a short cut across the orange orchards. pink mist was gone from the Sierra Madres; their loomed blue and clear.

"They look so big and near; seems like they'll on me." Disconsolately, Deborah shook the vety soil from her shoes. "Why don't you have under your trees?—What's that?" She blanched crowded against her companion.

"Only the coyotes—wife." He mumbled the last like a bashful schoolboy. "They always bark evening."

"Will they attack us? Where can we run! must be a big pack."

"We're in no danger. You can't count coyotes by noise. There's probably one or two 'way off mesa toward Monk's Hill."

Deborah was only partly reassured, and quick pace at each fresh outburst of demoniac howls.

"Perhaps I did wrong to send for you so soon I'm still in the pioneer stage," volunteered the husband hesitatingly, "but I kept thinking of were missing—the mountains different every the floods of golden sunshine, and the mocking singing in the orange trees."

"I'll try—to get used to it."

It was not quite dark outside the house, but could be seen of the interior until Mr. Brockey a kerosene lamp and disclosed a single room with two bunk beds, table, and cook stove. The were lined with cheese cloth on which were some chromos advertising agricultural implements the lurid school of art supposed to be popular country trade.

"It isn't any more different from what I than anything else," Deborah managed with chin.

Muttering something about "chores," Frederick ingstone plunged out of the shack.

. . . .

Summer lasted into November that year. soaking rain drove into the Brockey shanty as a sieve for three days. Frederick Livingston Deborah ate breakfast to the watery orchestral paniment of torrential splashing on the redwood the high-pitched tinkle into pans set about and the incessant hiss of drop after drop steam as it descended on the cook stove.

"Glorious!" beamed Brockey.

"I'm glad you're pleased," retorted the lady house.

"The country needs it," apologized her husband.

"I wasn't needing any more trouble. And I country too much to care what it needs. I hate from the old bragged-up mountains to the horned toads. I hate the climate, we can't wear it, nor ride it, nor sell it, and I hate——"

"The cracks will swell shut by tomorrow," he cated.

"Just note your California tapestry!"

The wood-stained cheese cloth clung soppingly walls instead of sagging away as usual in dust- ing folds. Its value at best was entirely settlers seemed to connect a certain respectability thus hideously draping the real beauty of their walls. It was a decent suggestion that they accustomed to plaster and wall paper in the were on the way to have them again.

"Don't you mind," ventured the man.

"But I do mind!" snapped the woman. would that wasn't California mad!"

"Now, Deborah!"

"I see you unwinding your legs from the your chair so's to make a dive for the barn hurry! Look at me all brown and haggy! disposition! See what California and months with a strange man has done for that!"

"Why, Deborah—our letters——"

"Letters! letters! I can't make myself wrote them! Why didn't you tell me you foot like a wild Indian! Why didn't you laughing stock of the neighborhood! Why

The final fling followed Brockey out into He did not go to the barn, but stood in noticing the rain, for the burning surge within. Angry humiliation was shot through with pity for her and a hypnotic guilt.

Half an hour later, Fool Brockey entered with a piece of native sod on a shovel.

Brockey opened his arms and his wife slipped into them.

"The shack isn't there now."

"Not there?"

"No," he explained to the top of her head. "The boom came, and Peter Scott and a lot of them sold out too soon. Fool Brockey didn't, and now he's the richest man in Pasadena."

"I don't care! I want the little old house you built for me with your own hands."

"When I subdivided, it fell on a corner lot, and they moved it away to build a bank. You won't know Pasadena; it's almost a city."

"Suppose you try me and see." Which was really not a bad suggestion—for a fool.

Wouldn't Stay Down.

A STORY OF ADVERSITY OVERCOME TOLD IN THE SMOKING CAR.

By a Special Contributor.

"POOR old Jackson!" sighed the shoe drummer, with a sympathetic shake of the head; "I guess he's down and out this time."

"Don't you believe it," said the hardware salesman. "Old Jackson's down, but he ain't cut by a long shot. He's as game as they make 'em, and before they can count ten on him, he'll be up and goin' again."

"It's been my experience," observed the red-headed person in the corner, "that a good man is never down and out until he is dead. Take that Missouri milliner for instance. He——"

"I thought you was talking about men," put in the shoe drummer.

"I am," said the red-headed person. "This is, or was, a man milliner. The only thing feminine about him was the goods he sold. He was a jobber and he had a big trade. But he failed. People who didn't know how much of a man he was said of him, as you have said of Jackson, that he'd seen his finish. He disappeared for a time, but the other day he bobbed up again in his home town with a good-sized fortune in cash in his pocket, and he'd made every dollar of it in gravel—just plain gravel. No, sir; you can't keep a good man down."

"That's right," agreed the traveler from Terre Haute. "There's something in that old story about the catch-as-catch-can rassler who got stronger every time he touched ground. Now, I used to know a man—well, I guess I might say I know him yet, though I haven't seen him for a long time—who went down further an' climbed back up a longer hill than anybody that ever lived, I imagine."

"Then he must have scratched gravel, too," suggested the red-headed man.

"No, not exactly—and yet, come to think of it, he did, in a way. I'll put it up to the crowd if you don't mind."

Nobody seemed to mind, so the traveler from Terre Haute bit off the ragged end of his cigar stub and proceeded to "put it up."

"His name's Jenkins," he began, "Lorenzo Dow Jenkins—named after the old-time Methodist circuit rider, you know. Father and mother was so strait-laced they didn't smile on Sundays. Everybody called him Dow. He grew up about as long an' about as wide as a fence rail, but he was all ginger. One day a drummer asked one of his customers: 'What was that just went by?' 'Was it a man?' says the customer. 'Don't know,' says the drummer; 'it was gone before I could get my eyes focused.' 'Then it must 'a' been Dow Jenkins,' says the customer. That's the way he went. He was so thin and traveled so fast it took a quick eye to catch him when he was on the move. He went into the real estate business an' made money hand over fist. But instead of soakin' away some of it, he put every dollar he got into his business. When the hard times come along in the early '90s, he was tangled up in a lot o' big deals that was more'n he could carry, an' like many another good fellow, he went under. Lost every cent he had.

"O top o' that, he took down sick and laid in bed for months. When he got up he wasn't any thinner, but he was a whole lot slower. He was all stiffened up with rheumatism and had to go around with a cane. He doctored an' doctored, but it didn't do no good. At last he makes up his mind to go down into Southwest Texas or New Mexico. So he borrows a little stake and strikes out. At Kansas City somebody sneaks into his room an' takes his pocket-book. Left him flat broke again. Didn't even leave his ticket. But he'd started, an' he wasn't goin' to turn back. He was about seven-eighths dead anyhow, an' he figured it wouldn't matter much how or where he lost the other eighth. So he started out to tramp it.

"Well, the railroad men were kind to him, givin' him a lift now an' then, an' he got along pretty well until one night he crawled into a box car down at McAlester, in the Indian Territory. The head brakeman on that train was a murderous brute, and when he discovered Dow in the car an' found he didn't have any money, he grabbed the poor devil by the back of his coat collar an' threw him out.

"The train at the time was goin' pretty fast, an' was runnin' along a high fill, the ground slopin' steep from the track down about sixty feet to the level of a little valley. Down this slope Dow rolled over an' over until he landed kerplunk in a shallow creek that flowed along the base of the fill. That, I reckon, is when he scratched gravel. He didn't know anything for a while, but he wasn't much hurt, an' after a bit his brain gets to workin' again in a hazy sort o' way.

"'I guess I'm dead this time for certain,' was the first thought that came to him.

"Then a mighty bad smell crept up into his nose.

"'An' I must 'a' been dead a long time, too,' says he to himself.

"Pretty soon he begun to realize that he was cold, an' that brought another thought.

"'Anyhow,' says his muddled brain, 'it ain't hot, so Iguess I've got to the right place.'

"By an' by he opened his eyes an' found he was layin' stretched out on his back in the bed o' the creek, the water singin' about his ears an' almost coverin' his body. Soakin' an' shiverin', he crawled out onto the bank. By that time the sun was up an' gradually it warmed him until he went to sleep. When he woke up, along in the afternoon, he was feelin' better than he'd felt for months. His pains were gone an' his joints didn't seem to be so stiff. He couldn't make it out until that smell hit his nose again. Then he crawled down to the creek again an' found that it was the water that smelled so bad. He also found that it tasted a whole lot worse than it smelled—a sort of a mixture of kerosene an' rotten eggs. But it was clear an' cold, and he knew at once that it came from a mineral spring. So he held his nose an' drank until he was chuck full o' the stuff, an' then he lay down an' went to sleep agaiin.

"Next' mornin' he was feelin' better still. He got up an' followed the stream back a couple o' miles until he come to the spring, an' then he explored around and discovered an Indian shack not far away. There was Indians in it, too, and they let him stay there a whole month, fed him an' wouldn't charge him a cent. Of course, he didn't have a cent, but that don't alter the fact that it was mighty white in 'em. Every day he filled up with that water an' wallered in it, an' by the end o' the month he was as well as he'd ever been.

"Now, he felt pretty sure that there was some money to be made out o' that water, but he didn't quite see how a man could swing it without capital. It was about the beginnin' of wheat harvest, an' he went over into Oklahoma an' got a job as a field hand. All that summer he stayed in the fields followin' the harvest clear up into Manitoba. By fall he'd laid by about $300, an' then he got a lot o' bottles an' some labels, went back to the spring an' filled up his bottles an' crossed over into Texas, stuffed up with the idea that he was goin' to make a fortune right off the handle sellin' the wonderful remedy for every ill of man or beast.

"The first town he struck he set up a stand on the public square an' made a spiel that was so convincin' that he sold fifty or sixty bottles as fast as he could hand 'em out at a dollar apiece. That was a mighty fine start, but along in the evenin', as he was sittin' in front of the hotel waitin' for train time an' smokin' a big cigar, a feller comes slippin' up to him an', says he, in a whisper:

"'Excuse me, partner, but they's a whole lot o' people in this town tonight that's mighty sick, an' somehow or another they're the same folks that bought medicine from a man down on the square today. I ain't namin' no names,' says he, 'but if their friends get a hold o' that man, an' they's out lookin' fer him now, it's goin' to go mighty hard with him.'

"Dow didn't lose any time. He didn't understand it, but he knew it wouldn't be any use to try to explain. He slipped through the hotel, out the back door an' struck across the country as fast as his long legs would take him. He wasn't any too soon, either. The crowd was right after him, an' for three days they kept him on the jump to get away from them an' their dogs. But finally he threw 'em off the scent, struck a railroad sidin', flagged a train an' got back into the Territory. He was pretty near heart-busted, but he figured out that there was somethin' about that water that wouldn't keep, decomposed or soured, or somethin', an' so the bottlin' business was all off."

"But," said the red-headed man, as the traveler from Terre Haute lighted a fresh cigar, "I thought you said he got to the top again."

"That's right, so I did," admitted the Hoosier. "And so he did. He give up the bottle idea, got options on all the land around the spring, went back to Indiana and interested some of his old friends in the proposition, an' they agreed to put up the money to build a big sanatorium down there. But that scheme fell through, too, for, while they was arrangin' the deal, another feller come rovin' through that country, got the scent of kerosene from that creek, found there was coal oil there, an' paid Dow so much for his options that he hasn't had to do a lick o' work since."

Egypt Is Using Steam Plows.

Egyptians are awakening to modern methods in agriculture, if the report of a British Vice-Consul at Alexandria can be taken as a basis for forming such a conclusion.

American Vice-Consul Frederic W. Cauldwell of Cairo writes that the British Vice-Consul says in his report of 1908 that steam plows have found great popularity in Egypt.

During the last six years, according to the British official, 150 sets of a patent steam plow of a British make have been imported into Egypt. Each set, he says, consists of two engines and one cultivator, and can plow twenty-one acres a day.—[Washington Star.

Not What He Meant.

CAPT. BRADLEY S. OSBON, the famous sailor, said in New York, in the course of a vigorous defense of Dr. Cook:

"Peary, in criticising Cook, only criticised himself. He was like the old uncle at the Zoo.

"An old uncle stood in the Zoo monkey-house. He watched the monkeys' antics with stern disapproval. A doctor at his side laughed and said to him:

"'Uncle, they seem almost human, don't they?'

The speaker, a publisher of New York, smiled grimly.

"It gives point to a story that John Strange Winter—she's a woman—told me last year. At a seaside hotel, when she informed the landlady that she was a novelist, and no less a one than the author of 'Bootles' Baby,' the landlady answered with a queer smile:

"'Oh, I'm so glad! I like to entertain literary people so much! They never in the least mind paying in advance.'"

THE non-magnetic yacht Carnegie, before its departure on a fifteen-year trip to survey the oceans of the world, was visited by Mr. Carnegie. On his tour of inspection, accompanied by Dr. L. A. Bauer, who has charge of the yacht's expedition, Mr. Carnegie expressed great admiration for the appearance of the engine-room. The surface of each small piece of brass or nickel was a mirror; no soiled waste or greasy cloth was anywhere to be seen.

Mr. Carnegie said he would like to congratulate the person who was responsible for the engine-room's appearance. The man was sent for and listened respectfully to Mr. Carnegie's praise. Then moving out of the room, he halted at the door, and, smiling, asked:

"Excuse me, sir, is this 'just honorable mention,' or does it carry a prize?"

It carried a prize.

A Real Bwana Tumbo.

QUENTIN ROOSEVELT, discussing his father's powers as a hunter, said one afternoon on the homeward-bound St. Louis:

"My father is such a good shot that, when he gets back, he'll have a right to talk as one of his old western friends did.

"This grand old western hunter sat by the stove at the trader's one night when a young man exclaimed:

"'Say, Pap, tell us about some of the narrow escapes you've had from grizzlies and so on.'

"'Young feller,' said the old hunter grimly, 'if there's been any narrow escapes, it's the grizzlies as has had 'em, not me!'"

Not to Be Forgotten.

"HALLOWEEN," said Senator Bacon of Georgia, "always recalls to me an excursion I made one autumn in the Tennessee mountains.

"At sunset, famishing, I came to a farmhouse, and the old farmer—for there were no inns in the neighborhood—agreed to put me up for the night. But he couldn't give me any supper, he said, till 9 o'clock; for they were having a Halloween party, and supper would be served late.

"Hungry as I was, I had to wait. At last, 9 o'clock arrived, and some two score of us sat down to a table fantastically decorated with pumpkin jack-o'-lanterns and other Halloween emblems. In front of me was a superb cake—five tall layers, iced with a white icing. A superb cake.

"The supper was a fine one, with all the delicacies of Tennessee, but they didn't get round to me with the substantials, and to stay my appetite I took a piece of cake. I noticed as I did so that the old farmer at the head of the table looked at me rather hard, but he said nothing.

"I waited awhile, and took a small piece more. The old farmer fidgeted. Still the waitresses neglected me, and I reached out toward the cake a third time.

"It was more than the old man could stand.

"'Hold on, stranger,' he cried sternly. 'Coarse-feed yourself first. Coarse-feed yourself first.'

"And I hastily drew back my empty hand, and waited as best I could till the coarse feed arrived."

Praise All Round.

W. E. TUTTLE, the editor of In the Mist, Niagara Falls' well-known journal, narrated at a banquet a number of good Falls stories.

"All our visitors praise us," said Mr. Tuttle. "Some praise the superb scenery, others praise the no-less superb hotels. For instance:

"A man and his wife were taking leave of Niagara at the end of a hard but glorious day. The lady, thinking of the river, which they had visited after luncheon, sighed and said:

"'Wasn't it a beautiful gorge, James?'

"'Yes,' said James, and he smacked his lips. 'Yes, I don't know as you'll get better eating anywhere than at Niagara.'"

It Was the Tide.

"IT was a mistake," said Mayor Stoy of Atlantic City, discussing a recent governmental difficulty. "These people failed to understand the difficulty, just as a man from Okoboji, in Iowa, failed last week to understand the tides.

"This man sat on the beach, close to the water, munching a bag of peanuts. A fat lady, one of the end-of-the-season bathers, gamboled in the waves near him. She shrieked, hopped up and down, and flapped about with arms and legs, and meanwhile the waves crept nearer and nearer the Okoboji peanut eater.

"He regarded the advancing water sternly. All of a sudden, a stronger wave than usual swept up the beach, and—splash!—the man was dashed with spray.

"'Hi!' he shouted, scowling blackly at the happy bather, "hi, Fatty! stop that there bobbin' about before ye drown a feller, will ye?'"

Cock Arrived First.

WHILE the judges and clerks of election in the second precinct of the Eighth Ward, 1333 East Eighth street, were engaged this morning in a discussion of the North Pole and its probable discoverers, the first voter appeared.

"Name, please?" he was asked.

"Cook," was the reply.

"Ah, just back from the North Pole?"

"Yep."

Just then the second voter appeared.

"Name, please?"

"Perry."

"What's that?"

"Perry."

"And are you just back from the pole, too?" demanded the clerk.

"Nix; I don't know what you are talking about," said No. 2.

The parties to the queer coincidence were Herman F. Cook of 1333 East Eighth street and Willard Perry of 926 Lydia avenue.—[Kansas City Star.

Why He Wanted a Minister.

"IS there a preacher on this train?" asked a large, dark-visaged man as he passed from one sleeper to another.

At last, after he had loudly repeated his query for the fifth or sixth time, a grave-looking gentleman laid aside a book and rose up from a seat near one end of the car.

"I have the privilege of being a minister of the gospel, sir," he said. "Can I be of any service to you?"

"Yes," said the large passenger. "A fellow back in the dining car has bet me $5 that it wasn't Lot's wife who got Joseph into trouble, and I thought you might have a Bible with you, so I could prove he was wrong and get the money."—[Chicago Tribune.

Did Not Call for Ambulance.

AFTER a day and a night spent in answering telephone calls from people who wanted the latest news from Peary and Dr. Cook, the secretary of one of the arctic clubs had retired for a well-earned rest, when the persistent phone bell rang again. A voice at the other end said:

"Do you want the ambulance sent right over?"

"What ambulance?" roared the irate secretary.

"Why, the one you sent for."

"I sent for no ambulance."

"You lie!"

The secretary gasped; then he screamed into the phone:

"Send it as soon as possible, and you come over, too, and I'll send you back in it!"—[New York Sun.

The House Beautiful—Its Flower Garden and Grounds.

INVADED BY WEEDS.

TWO SPECIES OF GRASSES THAT HAVE SPREAD RAPIDLY.

By Ernest Braunton.

CALIFORNIA, more especially the southern portion, seems to be the dumping-ground for weed emigrants of every description, and very few, indeed, of our garden weeds are native to this State, or even to America. It will thus be seen that their name is legion and could not even be enumerated here, but the grasses are few in numbers, and it is very interesting to note the rapidity with which they spread.

Two years ago, while in a yard on Brooklyn Heights, in this city, the writer noticed a most peculiar new grass that had completely taken possession of one corner of the lawn. The owner of the place said the lawn had been sown to "eastern red clover" (which was much in evidence,) the seed having been sent from Kansas. As the grass is rather tropical in nature, it was found by further questioning that the head of the house was in Mexico and for years had been sending seeds and plants from that country to this city. It seems probable that it came to us from our sister republic on the south, never has been reported in this State before, and had spread with such rapidity that none of the household had before noticed it. A recent bulletin of the Southern California Academy of Sciences gives a list of additions to the flora of Southern California, by S. B. Parish, and contains the following paragraph:

SOW CALIFORNIA POPPIES NOW.

"Eleusine indica. In a lawn at Los Angeles, 1907, E. Braunton. This is the first reported appearance in California of this widely-distributed tropical and subtropical grass." It bids fair to be a serious lawn pest if it should escape from its present rather isolated position.

Concerning the rapid spread of some introduced brome grasses (Bromus rubens and B. maximus,) Mr. Parish says: "These bromes were first noticed in the spring of 1888. In each instance there was but a small number of plants, which could have first appeared, at most, not more than two years earlier. Two years after first noticed, each species had spread for a mile along the roadsides of the two cañons in which they first appeared, and a few plants of one species were noticed in the valley itself. The diffusion of both species continued with increasing rapidity, and in a few years large patches of either could be found in all parts of the valley and surrounding hills. They are now among the most widespread, abundant and well-established grasses of the region. By roadsides and in waste places, in pastures and in cultivated fields, on dry mesas and hillsides, these pestiferous grasses abound. Both species are equally abundant, but they seldom grow intermixed, the one which first obtains a foothold appearing able to hold the ground against its companion, as well as against other vegetation. B. rubens, while attaining a more luxuriant growth in better soils, adapts itself also to those of the most sterile character. Dry and hard clay hillsides it coats with a close felt-like covering an inch or two high, that completely chokes out the native spring annuals that were their former occupants. Both are nearly valueless for forage, as animals will eat only the youngest growth, and both are injurious in hay by reason of the long, stiff awns." Other introduced grass pests are noted in this article, but these two alone are cited to show that plant emigrants from Europe find as congenial conditions in Southern California as those of the human species from the same continent.

Another Chapter on Gladioli.

Gladioli planted very early, say in March, will give flowers before the hot weather comes to dwarf and burn the flowers. Seeds of gladioli sown in February or March will sometimes bring a few flowers (perhaps one stalk in a hundred will bloom,) if all conditions are favorable, but as a rule the hot weather prevents them from properly developing. Could they be shaded during the hottest season, a large per cent. of stalks could be blossomed the first year from seed. This the writer has demonstrated in years gone by. The writer first began growing gladiolus from seeds just fifteen years ago, the first three years' crop being from chance fertilization of Luther Burbank's "Butterfly Gladioli," a very good strain, too. But he has lived these fifteen years in growing these bulbs to find out, with little room for doubt, that seeds of these plants should be sown late. Being very busy during last spring, the seeds from the crop of 1908 could not be planted until the first week in July. It was surmised that time yet elapsed for a fair development of bulblets before the end of the growing season or the fall of heavy rains. It was feared that if left unsown, many of the seeds would lose their vitality, and some are considered valuable. More than this, failure to plant would lose a whole year in determining results of technical experiments. Up to present date the results have been a pleasant surprise. The growth has been more rapid, vigous and altogether satisfactory than any the writer has ever had on this genus of plants. Still better, a considerable number are now blooming, and unless very unfavorable weather comes shortly, the percentage of blooms will surpass the record of any former year, even those planted in February. It is evident that mature bulbs may be planted during that month, flowered and ripened, harvested, and the soil renovated, manured and sown with seeds from the same plants in time for the second crop of flowers. It may be found that this late seeding will react in a detrimental manner on the bulbs, and if so, sorrow will ensue, for many of the seeds are crosses with America. From present knowledge, it appears advisable to sow gladiolus seeds any time during the month of June. Next year, it is hoped to sow seed in same plat during six consecutive months, merely as an experiment.

Worthless Sundials.

Quite recently a garden owner proudly showed the writer a bronze sun-dial plate of fine workmanship which she said came from England and was going to be set up in her garden "by the north star." She was quite surprised and somewhat skeptical when told that it was utterly useless in this latitude. One could guess the time of day by looking at the sun far more accurately than would be told by a sun dial made for England. We have two or more local agents or manufacturers who have on hand or will make to order sun-dials especially designed for Southern California, and those for other States or countries are worthless here.

An Art Association.

At the College of Fne Arts, on Avenue 66, just at the northern limits of our city, there has been formed an association of expert workers in the applied arts, one of which latter is landscape gardening. The organization is known as the Arroyo Guild, and will publish a quarterly magazine, the first number of which is just out, entitled "The Arroyo Craftsman." Each number will have to do with the home both in and out of doors.

A Premonitory Dream.

"Some years ago early in the summer," says H. Addington Bruce, in Success Magazine, "I dreamed that while out taking a walk I was suddenly attacked by a huge cat, which clawed ferociously at my throat. That was all there was to the dream, or at any rate that was all I remembered on awakening in the morning, and naturally enough I dismissed it from my mind as nothing but a dream.

"But when I found myself dreaming the same dream again and again, I began to wonder what significance it would possibly have. Usually it varied greatly in minor detail. Always, however, the climax was the same—the cat had me by the throat and was biting and scratching viciously. Altogether I dreamed this dream not less than a score of times in six months.

"Shortly before Christmas I took a cold which settled in my throat, affecting it so badly as to require the attention of a specialist. Much to my astonishment it was then discovered that a growth had been developing for some time and that an immediate operation was necessary.

"Several weeks later, the operation having been performed successfully, it suddenly occurred to me that I was no longer being troubled by the phantom cat. For the first time the meaning of the singular dream dawned upon me.

"It had been a genuine premonitory dream. Consciously I had been in utter ignorance of the dangerous growth in my throat. It had not progressed far enough to give me any pain or even to cause discomfort. At the same time, the organic changes it involved had produced sensations plainly felt by what psychologists call the subconscious and manifesting through the conscious to the conscious in the form of a dream."

MUNICIPAL IMPROVEMENTS.

TURES NEEDED TO HELP BUILD A MORE BEAUTIFUL CITY.

our city grows larger, we often find certain pro- visions of bygone days altogether inadequate to our needs. Certain it is that streets like Main Spring were quite sufficient in width to accommo- the traffic of pueblo days, but it is equally cer- that they are insufficient for the demands of a progressive city.

San Francisco, on Market street, and in parts of large cities, there are safety stations close up to street-car tracks where all persons may rest secure, while waiting for a car or for a car to pass so they may coss the street in safety. It occurs of times daily upon our streets that women children are striving to get across to a waiting car when the street between is so filled with vehicles it is found impossible to get across until the par- car desired has moved on to the next street. hindrances often occur to our most able-bodied Such instances show the need of these safety on all streets where there is congested traffic, matter how narrow that street may be, for often the insufficiency of width is the chief cause of the in-

These few of the many features needed to help build a beautiful city on better lines than at present exist, and many pages could be filled with notes of things equally to be desired. Is it any wonder, then, that the man of taste and means flees from this semi-civilization to a country home easy of access from the city?

The Queen of Palms.

Avenues and streets planted to Cocos plumosa are becoming quite common, and in a few years we shall have some handsome avenues of this "Queen of Palms." Now that the taste is manifest for better street palms than the Washingtonias, we hope to see streets planted to the "Seaforthia" (Archontophoenix Cunninghamii,) one of the most ornate of the whole palm family. Some people count them more handsome than Cocos plumosa.

San Francisco Flower Show.

Last week San Francisco held a flower show, said to have been the finest ever seen in this State. It was made especially attractive to exhibitors, for there were offered $2000 in cash prizes and about seventy-five silver cups. The management showed keen judgment in calling three of the judges from Southern California, where we grow every flower possible of culture in the north, and many too tender for that invigorating climate. With all this, we must admit that the San Francisco Bay region can produce some flowers much superior to any we grow. One flower in which they particularly excel at certain seasons is the rose. In twenty-two years of residence in Southern California the writer has never seen roses here to compare with those in bloom about the bay in May. Nevertheless, we grow many more flowers of a high standard, and over a greater part of the year than is possible anywhere north of the Tehachepi. The judges who went from here were: J. G. Morley, superintendent of parks; Robert Armstrong, one of our very best gardeners; and William Hertrich, head gardener for H. E. Huntington. All have had experience in this and several eastern States as well as across the big pond, and each is a capable judge of ornamental plants and flowers.

Street Paving.

It is pleasing to note that the old granite-block pavement is rapidly becoming a thing of the past in Los Angeles. When one goes from an asphalt or brick pavements, nearly noiseless, down among the granite blocks of Los Angeles street, where the noise is nearly deafening, it is not hard to decide which one the average taxpayer would prefer, cost not considered. Absence of noise is nearly as much to be desired as freedom from mud.

Malaprop Humor.

Most of us are acquainted with Punch's joke concerning the son of the house who, as he gallantly escorted the beauty of the evening to her carriage, gushingly remarked: "I have been waiting all the evening for this moment."

It is an example of bungled flattery which compares very favorably with the remark of an unlucky admirer of the great French actress, Mme. St. Denis. Her performance of "Zara" had just been greeted with enthusiastic applause, and as she stepped from the stage, she said: "To act that well a woman should be young and handsome." "Ah, no Madam!" exclaimed the unfortunate man, in his anxiety to pay the highest compliment possible. "You are convincing proof to the contrary."

Twice in one evening the great novelist, Charles Dickens, was guilty of an embarrassing malapropism. "I have distinguished myself in two respects lately," he wrote to a friend, explaining the matter. "I took a young lady unknown down to dinner and talked to her about the Bishop of Durham's nepotism in the matter of Mr. Cheese. I found she was Mrs. Cheese. And I expatiated to the member for Marylebone, Lord Fermoy—generally conceiving him to be an Irish member—on the contemptible character of the Marylebone constituency and Marylebone representatives."

Even these situations, however, are not quite so embarrassing as that of a member of Parliament who at a certain political reception remarked to a neighbor: "I wonder who that homely old woman is over there?" pointing out a rather stout lady at the other end of the room.

"That sir," was the reply, "is my wife!"

"Oh, no, no!" stammered the confused Parliamentarian, "I mean the person standing on her right."

"Indeed! That is my daughter!"

The first Baron Kenyon was rather fond of telling the story of how, while on circuit with Justice Rook, they entered a village just in time to accompany the population to the little village church. The parish clerk, anxious to have the congregation show due appreciation of the honor conferred by the presence of the distinguished jurists, gave out two verses of one of the metrical Psalms: "Speak, O ye judges of the earth, if just your sentence be; or must not innocence appeal to heaven from your decree? Your wicked hearts and judgments are alike by malice swayed; your griping hands by mighty bribes to violence betrayed."

By this time, most of the adults had woke up to the application of the Psalm and remained silent, allowing the children and a few women to continue the second verse.—[Tit-Bits.

The Blue and White in Greek Flag.

The Greek flag is an unpretentious piece of blazonry consisting of nine stripes of blue and white alternately, with a white cross on a blue ground in the top left-hand corner. The navy flag has a golden crown in the center of the cross.

Blue and white are the national colors of Bavaria and were adopted by the Greeks as a delicate compliment to the Prince of Bavaria, who accepted the invitation to ascend the throne of Greece when that country had succeeded in wresting her independence from the Ottoman Empire.—[Dundee Advertiser.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

THE EXPORT TRADE.

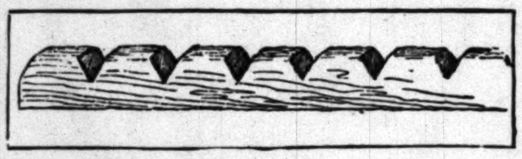
IT IS GROWING AND IS WORTHY OF CAREFUL ATTENTION.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experience with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

BEFORE the San Francisco fire, the export trade in breeding stock to the Australian colonies, the Philippines and the Hawaiian Territory was a prosperous business, the stock coming from all sections of the country, and centering at San Francisco, where the birds were properly cooped and sent on their long ocean voyages. Since the rehabilitation of the city, this trade has gradually recovered, and some shipments are going forth on almost every steamer. There is no reason why California breeders should not secure the bulk of this trade, and if they will only go after it along intelligent and business-like lines they stand first chance because of their geographical position.

As a matter of fact, the export trade over the Pacific Ocean is destined to be a very important factor, not only to the agricultural interests, but to all our productive industries. The thing to observe above all others is to send only a No. 1 stock. Correspondence now on the writer's desk contains bitter complaints from Australian breeders against much inferior stock sent over from England, with a plaintive query, wanting to know what the prospects are for securing first-class birds from this coast. Obviously, the breeds in the ascendancy in Australia are the Orpingtons, Minorcas and Leghorns, with here and there a sprinkling of Rocks and Wyandottes. Buyers in the Philippines and Australia are proverbially liberal buyers and trustful. In view of this, think what it means to send out inferior stock. The birds cannot be returned, and to the purchase price must be added the duty, transportatin charges, cost of cooping, etc., making the total no small item. Hence the importance of sending out only the very best stock—stock that shall breed well and prove of economic value when it gets settled in its new environment.



THE ANTI-CROWDING ROOST.

Of course export orders usually call for specific objects. Your customer wants either show birds, good breeders, or some particular qualification to supplement a deficiency in his flock. In such cases, take particular pains to not only supply the want, but write him in detail as to the best way of obtaining his aims. Information of this sort is invaluable, and should always accompany a sale of this nature.

In conclusion, California breeders should bear in mind that the export trade is a growing one, and the breeders who get in early and make good are sure to build up a lucrative trade.

The Anti-Crowding Roost.

Overcrowding causes much of the trouble in ailing fowl due to the fact that when roosting close together, the birds become overheated, and in this condition are quite apt to catch cold when let out in the morning. Most breeders limit the number of fowl to a house, but even then some roosts are apt to contain more birds than others. As a means of overcoming this difficulty, J. W. Brewer furnishes a roost which he has facetiously called "The Sunny Jim," which consists of a piece of 2x6-inch dressed lumber intersected with notches as shown in the illustration, three inches wide at the surface, leaving a roosting surface of about 7 inches. A glance at the drawing will show why this roost prevents overcrowding. Mr. Brewer says it works admirably and removes the trouble.

Misrepresentation and Faking.

The action of the American Poultry Association at its last meeting in disbarring a number of its members for misrepresentation and faking in the showroom as well as in the selling of breeding stock, will certainly have a salutary effect upon the industry. The pity of it is that drastic measures were not adopted long ago. To sell prize-winning stock that is so only in name; to borrow birds with which to win honors and then sell other stock as such; to effect collusion between two or more breeders, where A shall take the picked birds and coin in Boston, B in New York and C in Chicago, are but a few of the grafting methods that are constantly being practiced. To be sure, expulsion from the association and barring from the showroom will not prevent future operations along similar lines, but it will certainly make the rascals more careful and the show management more cautious. Locally, our shows have been quite free from faking, and it is to be hoped that the action of the national body will be the means of stopping it entirely. It is a mighty poor specimen of a man who will fake a prize, and only a rascal will misrepresent the stock he is selling.

Photographing Your Fine Birds.

The Times is always glad to publish the "counterfeit presentments" of really fine poultry—birds that are typical of their breed and variety, and present a front that will show them as they appear at their best in the breeding-yards. To do this, your birds should be tame and so familiar with your appearance in the yards that all evidence of nervousness and "scare" is removed. A good way is to accustom the specimens you want photographed to confinement in a large coop fronted with fine steel wire, then take coop and all direct to a photograph gallery, and snap away until you get what is required. One of the finest photos we ever saw of a bird was secured in this way. If this is not practicable, then try to get a picture in the yards by "snapping" until you get a good likeness. In addition to the birds themselves pictures of yards and appliances, especially of an economic and practical nature, are always acceptable. In either case, short descriptions should accompany the pictures. Send in your photographs addressed to the poultry editor, Times Office.

How to Carry a Fowl.

It is frequently necessary to carry a fowl from one place to another on the farm, or among the different yards. The most common way is to pick it up by the legs and carry it with the head hanging down. This is the easiest for the poultryman, but is no doubt, quite as uncomfortable for the fowl as it would be for a human being.

Simply take the fowl under the arm, with the head facing backward, the arm around the body, holding down the wings, and the hand grasping the legs tightly above the feet. Held in this way, the fowl is grasped so firmly that it has no chance to struggle, and yet is in a comfortable position. Try it the next time you have occasion to carry a fowl from one yard to another.

Utility or Beauty?

Poultry-keepers often discuss the question of breeding fowls for practical or standard points. Some take the ground that all should be sacrificed to utility, others that beauty and standard points should first be considered. Both of these advocates are extremists, and if they had their way would injure rather than benefit the poultry industry. There should be, and there is, a happy medium. First, fowls should be bred for utility; second, for beauty; third, for standard points.

It is possible for most breeds to combine all the above qualities, and where it is found impossible the trouble undoubtedly lies with the standard, in which case it should be changed to conform with the making of an ideal fowl. The first two qualities are easily combined and the third is often added. In relation to this subject, George C. Brown, ex-president of the American Poultry Association and a well-known poultry judge and writer, says: "This is a practical country, and breeding fowls for mere fancy or beauty alone will never become popular. Beauty and utility should be twins in poultry culture." The points that constitute the general make-up of a pure-bred fowl should only be looked after sufficiently to insure purity. The effort to develop in an extravagant degree any particular feature or point, will invariably be carried out at the expense of utility.

Use of Poultry Manure.

Fresh fowl manure should not be placed about the roots of plants. It would be useful as a mulching for roses and fruit trees, mixed with an equal bulk of road scrapings.

For plants in pots, one part to twenty of soil will be ample. It is a valuable fertilizer. It should be spread thinly to dry, and may then be crumbled and scattered over the soil at the rate of about two ounces to the square yard. In the kitchen garden, it may be incorporated with an equal quantity of soil, and the mixture applied at the rate of two pecks per square rod (30¼ square yards.)

As a liquid manure a peck should be put in twenty-five to thirty gallons of water, and applied copiously once or twice a week after the plants (celery, onions and other garden crops) are established and growing freely, but not when just inserted.

Quick Maturity Best.

At the Cornell Experiment Station, tests were made in feeding pullets in a way to retard their maturity and to postpone the laying season. The idea was that the plan might prevent pullets laying early in the fall when prices were comparatively low, and cause them to lay more eggs in late fall and winter.

They were allowed a grass run and a fair ration of whole grain, but no beef scraps or ground grain. As compared with pullets fed in the usual way on meat scraps, etc., to induce rapid growth and quick laying, it was found that no advantage had resulted from retarding the growth. The pullets fed the stimulating ration laid more eggs at a better profit than the others, and as judged by their growth and hatching qualities of the eggs, the forcing process did not injure the pullets.

Formulas for Mash Foods.

Off and on the poultry press gives publicity to mixtures calculated to give best results in mash feeding. For the most part, these are better suited to eastern conditions than those of California. In view of this, we publish three formulas for mash foods rec by Prof. Jaffa of the State University that available food materials in our home markets.

Hev ye noticed that most av the Americans ye see on this side are fat? The lean American is nearly extinct."

"Uncle Sam, in the caricatures, is always lanky," said I.

"He is that," said Andy, "but caricatures are always a hundherd years behind the times. Uncle Sam wuz lean wanst, but that is a long time ago. It wuz in the days av Abraham Lincoln. The modern American is as fat as Falstaff. If ye cud dhress John Bull up in stars an' sthripes, an Uncle Sam in top boots an' a Taft waistcoat, ye wud hev yer caricatures up-to-date. John Bull used to be fat, but he's an emaciated narvous skileton now. Uncle Sam is like Jeshurun. He hez waxed fat. Bill Taft is a modern Yankee, an' Arthur Balfour is the modern Englishmon. The wan is all flesh an' smiles; the ither is all narves an' legs. But the cartoonists hev niver noticed the thransformation, an' they go on makin' John fat an' Jonathan thin."

"Why has John Bull lost his flesh?" said I.

"I'll tell ye," said Andy. "He worries too much aboot his family. They hev got on his narves. He is always in a state av panic. If it's not Russia, it's France, an' if it's not France, it's Jarmany. The owld bhoy is livin' on scares. He hez become hypochondriac. He listens to every quack docther, an' he reads all the quack advertisements. He persuades himsilf that he hez got ivery known ailmint. If it's not wan thing it's anither. He's a hypochondrium. He's afeerd av the day he niver saw. He's a Gummidge. Uncle Sam hez got all the cheerfulness that John hez no use fur. He hez got the smile that won't come aff, the Taft smile. John Bull used to belave in himsilf. Now he belaves in iverybody ilse."

"Well, Andy, modesty is a virtue," said I.

"Modesty is a varture in a wumman, but in a nation it's a disease," said Andy. "What John needs is an attack av cheek. In the owl' days he had the divil's own impidence. He looked on Europe as if it wuz his dure mat, an' by hivins he wiped his feet on it ivery time he took a stroll. He hez lost his hilthy contimpt fur foreigners. He lies awake thinkin' aboot his own shortcomin's. Uncle Sam hez borrowed all the cheek John Bull used to hev, an' he hez added to it. If ye want to see a nation wi' a hilthy contimpt fur ivery ither nation on earth, take a ticket to New York. An American belaves in Ameriky, an' nothin' ilse. He hez no use fur Europe. He regards it as a back number. He admires it as a museum or as an owl' furniture shop. The Englishman used to walk Europe as if it wuz his quarther deck, but it's the American who does that nowadays. I'm not surprised that Americans are fat.

"Well, Andy," said I, "we have some fat Englishmen left. What about Chesterton?"

"Wan swallow doesn't make a summer," said Andy, "an' wan Chesterton doesn't make a cheerful nation."

"At any rate," said I, "he sets a good example. He glories in his girth."

"What's the use av Chesterton bein' fat whin Barney Shaw is thin?" said Andy. "Shaw is wan av thim lean, hungry chaps that are the heart-scald av the counthry. He's all vegetables, vinegar, an' vitriol, an' a nation that ates vegetables, dhrinks vinegar, an bathes in vitriol is past prayin' fur."

"You talk as if Shaw was Iago and John Bull Othello," said I.

"Shaw is on'y a symptom," said Andy, "but he's a symptom av a deadly disease. Ye can call it cynicism, if ye plaze, for a cynic is a mon that doesn't belave in himself or onybody ilse. All cynics are lean min, though I don't say that all lean min are cynics."

"How would you fatten John Bull?" said I.

"I wud make him belave in himsilf," said Andy. "Silf-consate wud make him so fat that he cudn't see his own shadow, an' whin a mon can't see his own shadow he can't be frightened av it."

JAMES DOUGLAS.

Earl Invents a New Tap.

The Earl of Verulam has just applied for the registration of a trade-mark for a new brass tap, which he has invented. It is to be known as "Ye tippe toppe tappe."

Lord Verulam thus adds another to the list of peers who have made reputations in the world of invention.

The best known of these is probably the Earl of Dundonald—a descendant of the famous Admiral Cochrane—who has invented, among other things, a galloping carriage for quick limbering up, the "Instra" hand warmer, which was found to be of immense benefit in the frontier campaign in India a few years ago; a camelback ambulance to obviate the jolting of sick and wounded soldiers; and an improved water cart, the object of which is to reduce the danger of enteric fever by enabling water to be more easily boiled on the field of operations.

Another member of the House of Lords with a decidedly inventive faculty is the venerable Earl of Wemyss, who recently introduced a military implement which could be used either as a spade, a pickaxe, or a saw, and also forms a shield against the bullets of the enemy.

Among well-known peer inventors of former days were, first and foremost, Lord Kelvin, and, in addition, the Earl of Rosse and Lord Grimthorpe, whose name will always be associated with the clock in the tower of the House of Commons.—[London Express.

Great Plan That Failed.

deck. As the Indians started away in their canoes, the four sailors went on deck and used the deck guns with deadly effect on the savages. With the Indians went the Indian interpreter. He had not been molested during the massacre, and he it was who subsequently reported the tragedy. That night, the four sailors, unable to work the ship, put off in a boat in hope of making their way to Astoria. They wanted to take Mr. Lewis, but he refused.

Soon after daylight, a few canoes put off from shore to reconnoiter. Around and around they circled, but the sails of the Tonquin flapped idly and there was no sign of life on board. The canoes came close, and then a man appeared on deck. It was Lewis, the ship's clerk. He made signs of welcome, and invited the Indians on board. The Indians were unwilling at first, but as hour followed hour they became emboldened. Then one crept cautiously aboard. There was no sign of life. The deck was soaked with blood, but Lewis had disappeared. Another Indian climbed aboard and then another. Then the canoes came out from shore in good number. There were many beads, blankets, knives and trinkets about the deck for any one to have who chose to take them. Back to the shore went word of the plunder that was so plentiful. Then the Indians came in hordes.

When the deck was crowded once more, crowded almost as it had been the day before, a man wounded unto death crept along the floor of the hold until he reached the magazine, where four tons of powder were stored. Then there was a report such as perhaps never was heard in Vancouver Bay before or since. The Tonquin in an instant became a volcano. Its timbers, torn into ten thousand fragments, were thrown high in the air and then scattered over the waters. Of the Indians who were on the deck, the beach for a mile about was strewn for days with their dismembered parts. Lewis, ship's clerk, had avenged the Tonquin's dead.

As if this grewsome tragedy were not enough, it had a horrible aftermath. The four sailors who sought escape in the boat were cast upon the beach some miles away. They were brought back to the Indian village, tortured and then slaughtered.

McDougal's Treachery.

Whatever courage McDougal possessed seems to have departed after he heard the fate of the Tonquin. It did not matter that the overland force, after a series of remarkable and trying adventures, reached the Columbia River country and joined the Astoria contingent. It did not matter that the Beaver, a supply ship sent by Mr. Astor, arrived from New York and went on to Alaska to trade. McDougal saw peril and disaster everywhere. War had broken out between the United States and Great Britain, and he feared the British would swoop down upon him.

As if Mr. Astor had not suffered enough from the stupidity of his agents, a new chapter now was added to the story of their folly. The Beaver, after visiting Alaska, went to China with a cargo of skins. Opportunity was offered to sell the cargo at a profit of $300,000, but the fool in charge dilly-dallied until the season passed and the cargo had to be sacrificed. Then the Lark, another supply ship sent by Mr. Astor, was wrecked, partly through carelessness. McDougal, worrying because the Beaver had not returned promptly from the Alaska-China trip, turned craven when he heard a party of Northwesters were bound for Astoria, and that a ship sent by the Northwest Company and escorted by a British man-of-war, was en route for the mouth of the Columbia. When the party of Northwesters paddled down the river, McDougal hastened to greet them. Then, using the proxy Mr. Astor had given to him, he sold the whole Astoria establishment to the Northwest Company for a song. The Stars and Stripes were hauled down and the English flag raised instead. As reward for his conduct, McDougal was made a partner in the Northwest Company.

So ended Astoria and the great dream of John Jacob Astor. For years and years the British held sway in the Columbia Valley. Then, after disputes and threats of conflict, the boundary trouble was adjusted and America resumed control. But the winning of the West had been delayed a decade if not a quarter of a century, and the most magnificent project for American trade and American expansion that ever was fostered by one man had failed.

If John Jacob Astor ever regretted the loss of his $400,000, he did not show it, but he did lament that so many men should die in a mission of peace. When he passed away, full of years and honors, his fortune was colossal, measured as it was by the standards of those days. There have been three generations of Astors since him, but no one of the name of match him in courage, imagination or ability. And the Astor fortune has grown to be one of the greatest in the world. But what would have been its size if the Astoria enterprise had been as brilliantly successful as its plan warranted?

Aerial Smuggling.

The crossing from France to England in an air craft, while at present remarkable and unusual, presages the day when such flights will cease to cause newspaper mention. As the machines require no light visible from below and can travel in the dark, their development would seem to provide unusual facilities for the smuggler. Articles of size and weight would not be available, but the small and costly things, such as diamonds and other jewels and certain drugs, etc., offer a cargo of great value which can be carried in hand satchels.—[Popular Mechanics.

Farming in California—The Land and Its Products.

CONDUCTED BY J. W. JEFFREY, STATE COMMISSIONER OF HORTICULTURE.

FIELD NOTES.

Horticultural Examinations.

THE STATE BOARD OF HORTICULTURAL EXAMINERS has announced several dates for examinations in northern counties to be held in November. The first will be at Auburn, in Placer county, on the 10th day of November; Nevada City, Nevada county, on the 12th; Oroville, Butte county, on the 15th; Yuba City, Sutter county, on the 17th; Marysville, Yuba county, on the 17th; Visalia, Tulare county, on the 23rd; Hanford, Kings county, on the 24th; Fresno, Fresno county, on the 25th.

Nevada county has never had a commission of horticulture, but as soon as the new law became effective, a petition asking the Supervisors to establish the office was circulated and soon signed by the required number of fruit growers. There is a general awakening in this county because the pear blight and codling moth are working havoc in the small orchards of that section. A contributing cause to this interest is the establishment of the Chicago colony, near Grass Valley. This community is now sending out fine Bartlett pears in carload lots. Their fruit comes in nearly a month later than the pears of the lower altitudes and consequently the growers get fine prices.

At a large fruit growers' meeting held at Newcastle the last week of September the delegates passed a resolution asking the examiners to hold an examination in Placer county. This conference was attended by fruit men from all points of the north, and the sentiment in favor of better service from the horticultural commission was very strong. The chairman of the Board of Supervisors was present, and pledged himself to do all he could to secure the selection of a competent man for the place, and intimated that the appointee would be given all the financial support he needed. All through the State the interest in the proper application of the new law seems dominant, and we may look for great improvement in the administration of the office in the northern counties in the future.

Buying Land by Proxy.

I HAVE never before had the figures to prove that one was born every minute, and have had to depend upon the saw, "What fools we mortals be," for my authority. But now I have the proof that some twenty, thirty, and forty years ago there was one born every few seconds. Here it is: A prominent eastern real estate agent has written to a California friend that his firm sold $900,000 worth of land by mail last year. I do not refer to this remarkable achievement to get the laugh upon the eastern land buyer, but to get you to be merry at our own expense. For one of the largest and most active of the commercial organizations of our State has placed its approval upon this novel plan of selling real estate here. It has adopted a "mail-order department," to be in charge of the secretary, and through which a proposed purchaser may order a farm or an orchard as he would a winter overcoat. All he has to do is to state in his order what kind of a farm he wishes. It must at any rate be land, and the secretary goes out into the country because he cannot find it in the city, picks up the farm bargain, turns the order over to the agent who has the sale of the property, and the deal is consummated. That is the theory of the plan, any way, and it has been formally adopted by this body. Each local real estate firm is to pay dollars a month to support this purchasing bureau, and the plan is on the go.

I have already set the seal of my disapproval upon this scheme, but what does a little thing like that amount to in the face of the popular uprising that always follows in favor of a new idea, especially when its proponents are men who are earnestly working for the upbuilding of the country? But the new plan at least furnishes me with a text for some timely remarks, even if in vain in this particular case. The text is "The inadvertent location of fruit farmers." In addressing you, my good brethren, I assume that you all know that this State from north to south is suffering from a surplusage of poor fruit. That will be the burden of the meetings that will be held this fall in different parts of the State. Assuming that a majority of purchasers under the new plan would engage in fruit culture, I can see nothing but disappointment for any one who would follow this complex business without the foresight to investigate every feature of the industry before putting his money into fruit lands. The very fact that a great number are succeeding in this line indicates that a great number are failing in the same business. I know of no enterprise in which the survival of the fittest will be more marked in the next few years than in that of commercial fruit growing. Because of its increasing perplexities there lies greater opportunities for the man who is equipped for mastering them. In no way can he provide against misfortune as well as by investigating every detail before placing his money into the venture.

It is easy to own land if one has the price of it, but to manage it so it will be of value to the State and the reputation and revenue of the community is the question of paramount importance to both the fruit industry and the corollary enterprises in all other lines of activity. To do this the new grower must not buy something that the old with all his experience could not make profitable. In starting a new orchard, he must choose the kind of product his money and skill are best adapted to turn out; he must fit his crops to the soil and situation; investigate markets, transportation and a dozen other items that are necessary to success. If he do this with care and judgment, he at once becomes a "desirable citizen;" if he do not his efforts are worse than useless for himself and detrimental to the country, no matter how well his intentions may be. The time has come when every additional grower of inferior fruit becomes a burden to those who are raising a fine quality. If production is to be overdone, it will be because the quality of our horticulture is underdone, and not from the increase of tonnage. The markets of the East are calling for more good fruit than can be produced, but they are not ready to take any more fruit grown and packed by men verdant enough to buy a fruit farm by mail, "unsight and unseen." Thus endeth the first sermon upon a text that had somehow escaped my attention before.

Is He Daffy?

I HAVE written and spoken upon coöperative marketing so many times that I may have lost my bearings and not kept in touch with the better methods now advocated of mixing the fruit business with that of the other industrial interest of the community. One of the latest, or rather one of the most ancient, revived, is to form a great holding and selling agency to be composed of capital furnished, 75 per cent. by the growers and the balance by the banks and moneyed men of the town. The plan may be all right, but why do we not see it applied in railroading or banking. If the principle is good in these lines, why has it not been demonstrated? It is useless to even mention the absurdities of the proposition that mixed interests can handle a given product better than it can be disposed of by the interest most concerned in its success. Yet it is being discussed with all earnestness by a large community of men who have made a conspicuous success each in his particular business.

Buying Land by Proxy.

I have always held that there are certain fundamental principles of trade that cannot be ignored without failure. If that is being "daffy," I am It. "A corporation having a capital of $1,000,000, of which $250,000 is subscribed by the leading bankers and capitalists, would at once assure the business success of the business end of it and would inspire the confidence of the growers in the stability of the enterprise. The corporation would fix the selling price, etc.," and so on runs the new-old plan. With a quarter interest in the enterprise would not the bankers and capitalists want to have something to do with the management of the business? Can bankers and capitalists sell fruit or advise how to sell it any better than expert salesmen chosen by those whose money is invested in the production of the fruit? It seems to me also that if that $1,000,000 investment is to be made profitable to the men who advance the money, it would have to be handled as any other investment—with a view of profit independently of the fruit sales, at least the 25 per cent. of it. Hence it falls back to the question of capital management and fruit profits both in one proposition. They are inherently antagonistic, unless both the capital and the fruit are furnished by the same men, which is not contemplated in the new plan. I admit that the coöperative idea of fruit marketing is weak in some of the largest fruit centers of the State, but it will never be made stronger by patchwork plans that in the past experience have merely diverted the attention of the growers from the main issue, which is the management of their own business from start to finish.

The arbitrary fixing of prices of farm produce seems to be the fetish upon which have been wrecked so many well-intentioned schemes for selling it. The blind devotion of the growers to this idol is remarkable. All the growers can do is to place themselves in every strategic position they can secure for inforcing their ideas of what a fair price should be. The final issue is negotiation, and any plan that does not include a recognition of the fact that there must be a buyer—a trade with rights that must be recognized and its interests fostered—as well as a seller, is a lame proposition. These may seem mere platitudes, but they are not. They are in fact vital issues. For in them are involved the law of supply and demand, the issue of business-like distribution, the quality of the fruit, the ability to furnish it freely to the seller, a score of minor incidents and circumstances that affect the trade and running through it all the conservation of the whole enterprise from its inception in the orchards to the consumer's hands. Two great fruit industries are as flat as pancakes at this time. In the centers of each of them are men of dominant traits, who have been leaders from the first, and who from self-interest or from lack of grasping some of the fundamentals of the fruit trade are not imbued with ideas of progress. It is a hand-to-mouth proposition to do all one can at this end of the line and wait for something to turn up at the other end of it. It is a waiting policy that has ruined at least these two fruit industries.

A Bankrupting Speech.

AN amusing incident occurred at a fruit growers' meeting in the northern part of the State recently, which I had the pleasure of attending. A shrewd representative of the canners' association had the floor and was nearing the time when his ten minutes were but one. He was telling how year after year the canners had been approaching the wrong end of the deal; how their profits had diminished and finally faded tirely. He had reached 1907 at the expiration time, but was going on to 1908. The chairman him down with the remark: "If I do not right now, you will be bankrupt in another thought, what a masterful genius some men littling their own business and arraying when speaking to the people from whom they buy more goods. It is a gift, and goes a toward success. The same faculty appears trade when the owner of a spavined animal marvelous precision anticipate the very thought opponent and with equal celerity explain why to dispose of such a valuable animal.

But the fruit grower whose own overalls and down the orchard rows is rapidly learning of the questions that affect his crop values. the markets from both the buyers' and the point, he is less liable to swallow the idea other fellow is impoverishing himself just as of pride in a business that has long since profitable. There are yet a few lines in the where the adroit talker can get fruit on his own ments, especially if there is a surplusage of fruit line. But the day of candor in dealing is here, the backward fruit grower may be some time it out when negotiating his crop. With two exceptions, every line of fruit now produced in the if the quality is fine, is in demand. But it must gotiated by the grower or his accredited and with business-like ability and a wide view and and a side view of the situation.

New-wood Furniture.

THE demand for solid, genuine walnut furniture the general scarcity of this wood is causing the manufacturers to turn out a class of goods not prove satisfactory. Within the month I have two or three sets of furniture displayed in leaders, made from immature walnut. It does quire expert knowledge of woods to know that or anything else made from this class of wood hold together or keep its polish which in the above seemed to have been a polish of varnish rather grain. It requires about seventy-five years for the log-length of white oak to ripen and reach its tion. I have never seen it stated how old the should be to reach perfection, but I do know specimens I saw in these windows were from young trees. The grain was ugly, the color a low or brown, and the whole set of furniture it had just come from a pine-box factory. I same trouble will occur in the use of eucalyptus But there is no excuse for that, for we have of thousands of eucalypts of mature age. I saw these trees recently being cut for stovewood there was not a tree that showed immaturity. reach the dignity, or the foolishness, of sets over the house, I am going to take a month the purchases. But what's the use of worrying the dim, distant future, for by that time the walnut trees will be fully matured.

Without doubt the trimming, repair- treatment for diseases and insect ene- properly and honestly done, is as logical to the intelligent maintenance of veterinarian's service to the maintenance of live stock. But some of the work done by these tree companies results in actual detriment to the trees. Many of the companies' employés are incompetent to do the work. One of the oldest firms employs largely boys, some of them not older than 16 or 17, and young fellows with no sense of responsibility are often placed in charge of large gangs of workmen, most of them skylarking youths, whose only object is to have a good time. In one case a young man of 18, after a very few weeks of experience in the work, was made a foreman, and placed in charge of work done on estates of prominent and wealthy men of this State. Other companies employ ignorant foreigners with no knowledge of tree life. The use of these two classes of incompetent workmen often results in positive injury to the trees. The work is done in a very slovenly manner, and though it may appear all right at first, is not permanent, and proves injurious to the trees in the end. Some examples familiar to every one who has worked at the business are bad cuts and careless and inefficient capping and cement work, all generally done high up in the tree, where it is not readily noticed from the ground.

Another source of great injury is that of inventing work when there isn't any to do. Instances are known where, in order to prolong the work and thus run up a larger bill, cavities have been chiseled out and carefully cemented in perfectly sound trees. Another example of the same thing, though not so productive of harm, is the inserting of large amounts of entirely useless chain. One company charges more for the chain than it costs, and so, besides the profit on the labor, they make a good profit on every foot used in the trees. Another phase of the dishonesty of the tree companies is their misrepresentations of their employés. They represent their men as "tree experts," "experienced men," "practical foresters," etc., when as a matter of fact, most of them have no knowledge of any branch of forestry, and many take not the slightest interest in the work except to draw their pay. Generally the tree men charge a fixed price per day for the services of their men, this charge often being five or six dollars apiece. Naturally it is to their advantage to prolong the work, and the dishonest ones stretch it out for weeks longer than it should take, thus robbing the customer sometimes of hundreds of dollars. As a rule, the owner of a large estate leaves the conduct of its affairs to the superintendent or gardener, and if it is not possible to fool him about the waste of time, then a little money slipped him on the quiet is often efficacious in making him blind to what is going on.

Atamasco Lilies.

THERE are two varieties of this popular flower grown on this coast—the one pink, the other white. The common names applied to them are zephyr lilies. The proper name of the white variety is Zephyranthes candida. It begins to bloom about September 1 and continues for three months. It is a native of Brazil and grows along the marshy banks of the La Plata River. We know of no plant that increases so rapidly, and we think it within the bounds of truth to say that tons of the bulbs are thrown out annually in this State.

The pink variety is popularly known as Atamasco lily —properly it is Zephyranthes carinata. It is a native of Cuba, Mexico and Central America. It is both exquisitely beautiful and fragrant. The flowers are borne on scapes six to twelve inches high, but one flower to a scape. As a border plant they have few equals and no superiors. It responds to good culture, the flowers being larger and the stems longer. It is fine for cutting.—[Pacific Garden.

Practical Wonderberry Growers.

C. A. LOUD of Echo Park writes that he has succeeded in growing the berry that has been the cause of so much discussion lately. He says:

"I suppose that you want to know all about Mr. Burbank's wonderberry. Several societies and associations, it seems, have had a good deal to say in condemnation of that berry recently, but they do not care for the truth in the matter. A 5-cent fare will bring any one inquiring to a little patch growing and fruiting about as illustrated in the circulars sent out from Philadelphia last winter. They did not come along in ninety days from the seed, but they came along reasonable prompt and we are sampling pies off them. If the parties who have doubts will assist about fifteen or twenty minutes, they can carry away the foundations of a wonderful pie. The patch is not a large one, but it is fruiting to satisfy the kitchen of any size."

G. P. Vickery of Glendora writes on the same subject:

"While some 'desk gardeners' have been roasting Mr. Burbank's wonderberry this summer I have been busy trying to raise some of them, and I flatter myself that I have made a success of it. I secured some of the seed through that ad. that was roasted in these columns last spring, and proceeded to plant them in a hot bed, and can truly say that 99 per cent. of the seeds grew. After they got about two inches high, I set them out about four feet apart in the row, and now I wish they were six, as they grow close to the ground and spread out very much like a peanut vine. Some of my vines that got too much water are over six feet in diameter, and the berries are not ripe yet. Those that got less water are ripe and bearing nicely

"The blossoms are small and white in color and are very numerous, while the berries are all black and full of seeds. The berry is very rich, and it makes fine pies, like those huckleberry pies "that mother used to make." They grow in clusters of four to six in a bunch—very profuse and abundant yielders. This excellent berry should not be condemned until it has been given a fair trial, and by so doing, any one can grow it."

Eucalyptus Ficifolia.

THE specific name of this variety of the genera, of the order Myrtaceae, to which the sweet-scented myrtle belongs, signifies fig-leafed. Why it should be thus designated is difficult to understand, since the foliage of both subjects are wholly unlike, i. e., the tree commonly known as the fig. To be sure, rubber trees belong to the same family, the foliage of some of the members being much like that of the eucalypt under discussion. Nevertheless, we believe the name to be misleading, therefore inappropriate.

This part of the history of this, the most beautiful when in bloom of all eucalypti cultivated in Southern California, is not the one we wish to discuss. It is its value as an ornamental plant that we desire to call attention to at this time. When in bloom, for gorgeous coloring it is unsurpassed. The plants growing hereabouts vary in habit of growth and in precocity of bloom. In 1908 we planted two trees into the open from gallon cans. They were about the thickness of a lead pencil and four feet high. This season the one bloomed profusely, while the other did not have a bud on it. The flowers were very beautiful, though not of the intense scarlet color that characterizes the true type; moreover, it bloomed during July.

The thought suggested by the plant in question is that, for a decorative house plant, if tub-grown and encouraged to throw out branches from base to summit, when in bloom it would have no equal, and when not in flower equal to any other evergreen plant in appearance. To perpetuate the variety it will be necessary to propagate it by cuttings or budding. Here is a suggestion for our progressive nurserymen who care to excel in fine stock, and give to those parts of the world the most beautiful of all ornamental plants when in bloom, where climatic conditions are such as are found in Southern California.—Pacific Garden.

Death.

I took not care to heed thy coming.
 I thought that thou wast far—until
I felt thy presence close beside me,
 And knew the power of thy will.

I did not ask that thou shouldst enter,
 Thy presence then I sought to bar—
But thou wast here ere I had known thee,
 And bore my love with thee afar.

Grief comes apace upon thy footsteps,
 Yet peace ineffable also.
We follow thee when thou dost beckon
 And know that it were best we go.

Mineral Elements in Food.

THE subject of the mineral contents of foods—the organic salts—is one that is beginning to attract some attention among writers on diet, though a great majority still ignore it. It may be truthfully said that in this country the Care of the Body department of The Times is the only hygienic publication that during the past few years has devoted to this subject anything like the space its importance demands.

A copy has been received of a booklet, No. 9, of the "Health from Food" library. Numbers two to eight of this library were recently reviewed here. (Published by the Pitman Health Food Co., Birmingham, England. For sale in Los Angeles by the California Hygienic Supply Co., 657 South Hill street.) This number is entitled "The Role of the Food Salts in the Dietary of Man." The author is George Black, M. B. He refers to vegetable salts in dried powdered form, which have been put up in England, at his suggestion. It is a question, however, whether the heat necessary to evaporate the water from the vegetables would not be as injurious in its influence upon the mineral contents of the food as the process of steaming vegetables. Both are, of course, greatly superior to the ordinary method of cooking in which the water containing the most valuable properties of the vegetable is discarded.

F. H. Mason sends the following from Paso Robles, Cal.:

" 'Care of the Body' is generally instructive and usually entertaining; sometimes his humor is patent, sometimes latent, but there is generally an undercurrent of it running through the articles. Like most writers, and other people, too, for that matter, he has a hobby, his specialty being the distinction between organic and inorganic salts. I have been following these articles with interest for some time, and have been trying to grasp the writer's viewpoint, on this subject, but have had to give it up—it was driving me to drink.

"Once a salt has been isolated and purified, no analyst can determine whether it has been derived from a vegetable, an animal, or a mineral source. He may find, for instance, that a salt is sodium chloride, but he cannot tell, by analysis, from whence it cometh any more than he can tell whither it goeth, after he has deposited it down his laboratory sink. Wherein, then, does this distinction lie? Palpably not in the salt itself, for it can be demonstrated that, no matter what its source, it is one and the same thing. Of course, if the elements sodium and chlorine were taken severally from each other, but in combination with other substances, they might, owing to their mutual affinities, seek combination in the stomach; in which case they would momentarily be it the nascent state and consequently more active. But this result could be, just as effectively, produced by taking two mineral salts separately as two kinds of vegetables or fruits.

"The only other explanation I can offer is that there must be some substance in the vegetables or fruits that assist assimilation. If this is so, is it not reasonable to suppose that the same substance would assist the assimilation of added salts of mineral origin? for we know that the elementary components of any fruit are not in constant ratio to each other.

"A scientific elucidation of the stand 'Care of the Body' has taken on this subject would, I feel sure, interest many readers."

This communication was shown to Otto Carqué, one of the leading authorities in America on the mineral contents of foods, who comments thereon as follows:

"Your correspondent overlooks the most important fact in the processes of life, viz., that they cannot be determined by chemistry alone. The life principle or vital force is above the crude mechanical and chemical experiments of the physicist and chemist. In order to determine the elementary constituents of a plant or animal we must destroy the living organism. Yes, chemically the elements are the same in the mineral, vegetable and animal world, but chemistry explains the mysteries of life as little as the physical laws. A corpse shows the same elements as the living man, but there is the 'great divide' between life and death which we cannot dispute away. The fundamental error which so many investigators make is this: they try to study life according to material, physical and chemical formulas, instead of observing the living body.

"The correspondent may try the following recipe on his own body for a month and then report if he is still alive: Pure gluten, refined sugar and fat, all the mineral elements contained in the body, as 'inorganic' salts, such as chloride of sodium or potassium, etc. 'The proof of the pudding is in the eating.' If a person uses table salt in addition to his food, he cannot prove the necessity of this inorganic substance, just as little as a man smoking tobacco is justified in declaring the latter as essential to life. Foods in order to sustain life must contain all the required elements in a highly organized form. We can live on apples, grapes, corn as they come from nature's hands, but not on the products of the chemical laboratory."

To these remarks by Mr. Carqué, it may be added that while it would be most regrettable that an investigation of this question should drive Mr. Mason to overindulgence in alcoholic beverages, it would be still more a subject for regret should the discussion of these most important facts be suppressed, at the cost of the health of millions of people.

Short Exercises.

"TWENTY-MINUTE EXERCISES" is the title of a booklet by Prof. E. B. Warman, being No. 325 of Spaulding's Athletic Library. (American Sports Publishing Co., 21 Warren street, New York.) Prof. Warman is well known in Los Angeles, where he formerly resided, and where he will again pass the winter. In his preface to the booklet, he says:

"After forty-one years of experience and observation regarding physical exercises, I have arrived at the following conclusion, viz., the average person seeking health, through exercise, becomes very enthusiastic (for a few days) over any and every 'new' system, practices faithfully during the time and then drops the whole thing.

"Why? Because all extensive systems (my own not excepted) contain more than the average person has the time or inclination to follow daily unless he is preparing to become a specialist in this particular field."

The various exercises are illustrated with half-tones of "Yours Vigorously" going through the various "stunts." There are also good articles by Prof. Warman on "The Secret of Never Growing Old," and "Object and Benefits of Fasting."

The Treating Habit.

AT the closing session of the National German Alliance in Cincinnati, a resolution was adopted to the effect that the treating habit is bad, and cannot be too strongly condemned. The Alliance would do away with the practice of men buying one another liquor.

This is in accordance with statements frequently made in these columns, that if the absurd American habit of treating to drinks could be abolished—by general agreement, not by legislation, for that is impracticable—it would be a long step toward the lessening of the liquor habit, for many a young man begins to drink more than he should through the foolish practice of treating, which generally ends by three people taking three drinks when they want only one.

There is no more sense in buying another man a drink than there would be in treating him to a pair of socks.

Buttermilk, Beef Steak and Bacteria.

THE editor of the Care of the Body had been having a bottle of buttermilk delivered daily from a suburban grocery near his residence. Then it stopped coming. On inquiring the reason, he found that the City Council had been busy with another new ordinance, dealing with how, when, and where we shall eat and drink. Grocers are not now permitted to sell buttermilk unless they get it from the dairy in the original package. That is to say, they must not sell it for you to carry home, or deliver it to you, but they may sell you a glass at the store. Funny, ain't it?

In the same store you may see meat hanging up exposed to the air—and flies, for you cannot keep them all out, however careful you may screen doors which are opened every few minutes. Perhaps the meat hangs there for several days, and then, perhaps, scraps may lie behind the counter for a week, to be used for dog food. Well now, the bacteria that gather in flesh food are vastly more injurious to the human body than those which flourish in milk. As for buttermilk, it is an antiseptic food, the lactic acid in it discouraging the formaton of harmful bacteria. It has, moreover, been shown that when meat is kept for twenty-four hours at the temperature of an ordinary room, the number of bacteria it contains is enormously increased. Yet meat may be thus exposed freely to "infection," while milk is hedged with all kinds of restrictions.

This ordinance is almost as foolish as that relating to the covering of fruit exposed for sale. The ordinance says that fruit must not be exposed within eighteen inches of the sidewalk. Now, how much safer is eighteen inches than eight inches—except when there are large dogs in the neighborhood. Then again, the ordinance says that the fruit must be "covered." The "covering" is usually done by putting a piece of cheese cloth over the fruit, through one of the meshes of which a million active and enterprising bacteria could easily crawl.

If the political physicians would only give up this absurd bug chasing and simply insist upon enforcing ordinary cleanliness, it would be quite an improvement, and more good would be accomplished with less friction.

The Hookworm Disease.

IN McClure's Magazine for October was an article describing the ravages of the "hookworm" disease in the Southern States, where it is said that 2,000,000 people are thus affected. The so-called hookworm fastens

Care of the Body.

on the intestines, sucking the blood, so that those infected in this way lose all energy. The author of the article describes as follows some of habits of the "poor whites" in the South, among whom this disease prevails:

"Resin-and-coffee-chewing, lemon-sucking, and salt-lapping are common forms of dirt-eating; cigar ashes are a tid-bit with many, while others relish scraps of dried mortar picked out from between bricks. Pebbles, sand, clay, mud, chalk, slate pencils, shells, rotten wood, salt, raw cotton, cloth, paper, tobacco pipes or pipe-stems, mice and young rats all have their devotees. Dr. Stiles saw one person eating live mice; another—a blind boy—had eaten up three coats, thread by thread, in a year. A girl in an asylum swallowed so much human hair that her stomach became crammed and she died of starvation."

The author claims that these habits are not the cause of the disease, but when you add to them the utter absence of the commonest rules of sanitation, then it is surely not surprising to find that these people furnish a favorable breeding-ground for "hookworm," or any other kind of parasites.

Cigarette Poisoning.

IN a recent article on smoking, it was stated here that cigarette smoking is more injurious than other forms of smoking, and reasons were given therefor. Here is an additional reason. It is an extract from an article in the National Food Magazine about Edison the inventor:

"Mr. Edison says cigarette smoking produces a poison (acrolein) that is terrible in its effects on the system; it is produced by the burning of the cigarette paper. He smokes tobacco and says it is a good stimulant when used in moderation."

The "Nature Cure."

UNDER the illustration in last week's Care of the Body of a group of people taking the air bath at a German sanatorium were the words "native-cure establishment." They certainly do look like "natives," but the words should obviously have been "nature-cure," a method of treating disease which has gained great popularity in Europe, and is now beginning to be appreciated in the United States.

Elizabeth Rebukes Los Angeles.

THE NAUTILUS is one of the sanest—or should we, perhaps, say the least insane—of the so-called "New Thought" publications. Of which same "New Thought," by the way, it may be said, as Lincoln once said of a young lawyer's speech: "Whatever in it is true is not new, and whatever in it is new is not true." The Nautilus, also, is an exception to the ordinary run of such publications, as it looks quite prosperous, to judge from the advertising pages. This is, perhaps, because its destinies are presided over by a practical woman, who, while gazing at the stars, keeps her feet on solid earth, and appreciates the value of dollars and cents, to wit: Elizabeth Town. Elizabeth looks more like a healthy, happy, wholesome housewife than an expositor of mental gymnastics.

Oh yes, by the way, there is also a "William," but he stays—or is kept—strictly in the background.

Elizabeth recently left Holyoke, in the good old State of Massachusetts, and went forth on a lecturing tour across country, combining business and pleasure—with the emphasis on the biz. Among other places she visited Los Angeles, of which her first impressions appear to have been favorable, for in her magazine she wrote as follows of our streets, as they appeared to her in the evening after arriving at the depot.

"These streets are lined with groups of boulevard electric lights of high power, placed so near together that the streets are many times lighter at night than they are in the day."

Well now, what do you think of that, you kickers, who complain about the dimness of the lights on Spring and Broadway and Hill streets? Quite a "new thought," is it not?

This, however, was before something happened to Elizabeth. But let us not anticipate. Listen:

In the following number of the Nautilus, under the heading "A Ban on Education," Eliza gives the City of Angels a severe roast. In an editorial punctured with quite hysterically feminine new-thought italics—which shows that Eliza, although a business woman, is still quite feminine—she tells how Los Angeles "squeezes all the cash it can out of everybody that goes there without being too particular as to the right or wrong of it." "So one of her city officials told me." This, in italics, if you please. Now, where is that municipal traitor who tells such things to the trusting Elizabeth about the chief city of the richest county west of Chicago? Let him step forth and be excommunicated.

To make a long story short, all this rumpus is over the fact that the city authorities collected $7.50 of Mrs. Towne's manager for the third lecture which she delivered here. This, she declares, is more than most "New Thought" lecturers can stand. Rather a reflection, this, on the "New Thought" audiences, is it not? Also, she declares that "up to date no Christian Science lecturers have had to pay this fee." No, because they do not charge admission for telling you that all is mind, whereas Elizabeth charges four bits a head to teach people how to affirm things that are not. That, you see, makes all the difference. Los Angeles makes no distinction between "New Thought" and peanuts, when it is

NATUREAID

Philosophy by Dr. Adolph J. Petter.

Dear fellow-deserter from the constructive principle of natural law: I am confident that I am making no mistake in addressing you thusly, because under our present system of insanely piratical commercialism, even those who know better are more or less forced (in order to exist) to ape the world of wrong, hence destructive livers who give no care whatever to their bodies, thus cannot possibly THINK, SPEAK nor ACT constructively, and so we are all more or less wrongly led to believe that we have no time to practice right, hence constructive living and give proper care to our bodies trinity of highly co-ordinating MENTAL, STRUCTURAL and VITAL ORGANISM, so as to keep ourselves nicely harmonized with the constructive principle of the all-pervading single trinity principled law of equitable compensation that CONSTRUCTS, DISSOLVES and GRAVITATES. And when conditions are made just right, again reconstructs all things within this universal realm and for continued disobedience it dissolves any organisms until it becomes self-unsustaining, when the GRAVITATION principle of this same natural law takes hold and bears that organism back down among the elements composing the earth, air and water from whence it came (Death) MUCH TOO EARLY IN LIFE, and so everything on earth, which, of course, includes we HUMANS, is subservient to this unalterable, all pervading trinity principled natural law of equitable compensation and right here is where my NatureAID "all natural embracing" drugless and surgical-less, hence natural, cure-inducing system steps in to fill a long-felt breach in the healing field, for it is so designed that it will certainly cure each and every WEAKENING DIS-EASED condition to which human flesh is heir, providing, however, you have not already allowed your vitality (fires of life) to burn too low to be again rekindled to WHICH point it certainly will burn if you continue to neglect your body and disobey the constructive principle of this all-governing and obedience-exacting natural law.

No doubt you already realize fully that VIGOROUS HEALTH is the only possible key under the heavens for HONORABLE SUCCESS AND LONG, HAPPY LIFE which simply implies right, hence constructive THINKING, SPEAKING and ACTING, which after all, embraces everything worth while. With this explanation and the scientific common sense taught in my NatureAID magazine you will readily understand and be positively convinced that my NatureAID (improved Naturopathic) system is the only possible natural way under the heavens to cure your each and every weakening disease which includes every infirmity, pain, ill or uneasy feeling, profapsed or fallen organ or part, no matter where located, from the top of the head to the soles of the feet, but embracing EACH AND EVERY congested, inflamed organ or part of the head, throat, lungs, heart, diaphragm, stomach, liver, kidneys, spleen, intestines, rectum, bladder, urethra and their connective bony muscular and ligamental tissue, each and every weakened condition of women; each and every weakened condition of men, including each and every kind of malformation and deformity to which the human MENTAL STRUCTURE and VITAL ORGANISM is heir.

peddled for profit. If Elizabeth had charged no admission, she would not have had to pay any license, and if she did not have to pay for the previous two lectures, why, then, she—or her manager—may expect to receive a bill from the City Hall for back dues.

With a final outburst of italic type, Elizabeth concludes as follows:

"Will Los Angeles continue to stand pilloried before the world for taxing education along with whisky? Against the constitution, the Federal laws and the sentiment of the American people?

"Will the newspapers of Los Angeles stir the people and the Council to correct this evil?

"If not, will it be because there is nobody to pay for it?—as I am told the Christian Scientists pay for all the pro-Science sentiment that appears therein."

Well now, as far as The Times is concerned, no charge was made for the report published a couple of months ago of a lecture in which Christian Science methods were roundly denounced. The Christian Scientists would probably have been willing to pay handsomely to keep it out.

Really, Eliza, you should learn to affirm that you are cool, and to keep on your camisole, or whatever the new-thought name is for a shift.

Don't get oggsited, Eliza.

A Delicate Eucalyptus Oil.

ERNEST BRAUNTON, who does the "Gardening" page in this magazine, sent the editor of the Care of the Body a sample of eucalyptus oil distilled in Los Angeles from the Eucalyptus citriodora, a variety with scented leaves, much resembling those of the lemon verbena. It grows into a tall and stately tree, of which there are a number of specimens in and around Los Angeles. It seems as if it would be a profitable thing to plant this variety in place of the commonly planted blue gum. It is said that oil made from this variety of eucalyptus is the only kind that is not irritating to the stomach, when taken internally. It might also be made the base of a delicate perfume.

A Philosophical Treatise.

"BETTER-WORLD PHILOSOPHY" is the title of an earlier book by J. Howard Moore, instructor in zoölogy at the Crane Manual Training High School in Chicago, whose delightful book "The New Ethics" was recently reviewed here. (Published by Charles H. Kerr & Co., 56 Fifth avenue, Chicago.)

In his preface, the author says:

"This book does not claim to be infallible—simply serious. No being knows. He thinks he knows. A few grams strategically shifted here and there in his organism, and he knows, or thinks he knows, something altogether otherwise. All is attitude and relativity."

Here are a couple of extracts:

"Man's desires are, indeed, innumerable, often hopeless, and sometimes vile, but they may all be rolled together into two; the desire to avoid pain, and the desire to experience pleasure. Every conscious movement made by living beings, from oyster to philosopher, is directed toward the accomplishment of one or both of these ends."

"Labor is pain, and, like all other pain, human beings have struggled to escape it. They have attempted escape in three ways: by shirking, by machinery, and by coöperation."

Calamities.

RIDING on the dummy of a street car the other day, the editor of the Care of the Body was presented by a young man who sat on the same seat, with a pamphlet entitled "Calamities, Why God Permits Them," published by a Bible and tract society in Pennsylvania. Certainly a difficult question to answer, in a manner satisfactory to those with logical, reasoning minds—to those who are not prepared to take everything on faith.

By the way, did this young man, perhaps, intend to insinuate in a polite way that the editor of the Care of the Body department is a calamity? Some of the less broad-minded among the members of the drug-dispensing and carving fraternity undoubtedly think so.

Literary Quackery.

HERE is the reading matter of a poster issued by a popular magazine. Over it is a darky bearing aloft a big tray, upon which you may discern lobster and other eatables and drinkables. It is headed "Eat All You Want:"

"Here comes again that blessed Dr. ——, making it easier and easier for us to live by letting us do what we like. He says more people die of starvation than die of overeating, and that the meat-eating nations and meat-eating individuals are strongest and best, and that the pleasant little saying about stopping before you have had enough is merely a pleasant little saying. He says all this in the August ——."

Who do you think was the physician referred to? You may have one guess.

And what do you think of a member of the medical fraternity who will so prostitute his profession as to write such stuff? And what do you think of a reputable journal, of immense circulation, that will prostitute its columns in publishing such stuff? Finally, what do you think of a fool public that will permit itself to

As Dr. J. H. Kellogg says, in commenting upon this brilliant effort, there is such a thing as literary as well as medical quackery.

Compulsory Vacations.

ONE often hears people say that they cannot afford to take a vacation. There are several enterprising firms in Los Angeles that run excursions for the special benefit of such people. They have handsome black carriages, and they take the excursionists to either one or another beautiful suburban spot, adorned with flower beds and statuary.

One feature of these excursions is that the excursionist has nothing to say whatever about taking the trip. It is compulsory. Also, it is much more expensive than an ordinary vacation.

Salt Pork for Eczema.

A CORRESPONDENT, whose wife is suffering from a severe case of eczema, writes:

"We are Jewish and never eat pork. Imagine my surprise when a leading specialist in Philadelphia included pork and ham in a diet list for my wife."

Fancy salt meat for a person suffering from skin disease. Isn't that about the limit of criminal imbecility?

Settling the Negro Problem.

THE aristocratic village of Brookfield, a suburb of Chicago, has solved the problem of how to keep negroes out of an exclusive white residence district. They simply tore down a house erected two weeks ago, in which lived a negro woman and her three children, having got the fire department to declare the building a "nuisance" at a special meeting of the board. The trustees deny that there was any feeling against the negroes because of their color. However, it is quite possible to suppose that in case the house had been inhabited by white people, it might not have been so promptly destroyed.

This solves the question temporarily, but not permanently, for there is nothing to prevent the negroes from settling in some other aristocratic section. A much simpler, and more effective plan would be to kill all the negroes. It is a wonder that nobody seems to have thought of that.

What Is Life?

"THE ORIGIN AND NATURE OF LIFE" is the title of the second volume in the "New Knowledge Series" edited by Robert Kennedy Duncan, the first volume of which series, "The New Knowledge," was recently received here. The author of this book is Felix Le Dantec, professor of the faculty of sciences at the Sorbonne, Paris. Translated from the French by Stoddard Dewey, with an introduction by Mr. Duncan.

Prof. Dantec is described by the editor in his preface as "perhaps the foremost champion of the mechanical theory of life."

The book is somewhat technical and scientific. The author concludes as follows:

"Perhaps, too, the solution will be hit on by chance. The learned world of today is so prepared for the discovery, that a premature announcement of spontaneous generation realized in gelatine subjected to the action of radium surprised nobody. When the effective synthesis is obtained, it will have no surprises in it—and it will be utterly useless. With the new knowledge acquired by science, the enlightened mind no longer needs to see the fabrication of protoplasm in order to be convinced of the absence of all essential difference and all absolute discontinuity between living and not-living matter."

In regard to this, the editor of the Care of the Body regards the hope as vain that man will ever be able to create life. It is a long step from the fertilizing of unfertile eggs of a sea urchin to the actual creation of life. Man cannot even create the food that sustains life. As previously stated here, a chemist may assemble every substance that goes to make up an apple, in the exact proportions contained in that apple, but he cannot make an apple, nor will he ever be able to make an apple.

A Guide to Osteopathy.

"THE HOUSEHOLD OSTEOPATH" is the title of a book of 200 pages. It is a plainly-worded, practical treaties on the cause, symptoms, prevention, and cure of disease by osteopathic treatments. Every treatment is shown by half-tone illustrations, of which there are eighty. Being written for patients rather than for physicians, treatment for bony misplacements and ailments in which an amateur might do the patient an injury, are not given.

The author is Francis J. [illegible]eidler, D. O., of Seattle, Wash., and the book is for sale by him.

What Pompey Died of.

Why Suffer With That Rheumatism?

An Arnold VIBRATOR

Insures You Perfect Health and Vitality.

It can be attached to any electric lighting current as well as to a set of dry batteries. For poor circulation and ailments of the nerves, brain, heart and vital organs. Invaluable for rheumatic, neuralgic and paralytic affections. Endorsed by physicians. Produces health, strength, beauty, vigor and vitality.

The Arnold Massage Vibrator increases the circulation of the blood in the small capillaries and stimulates the nerves. It is impossible to get any electric shock, and there is absolutely no danger whatever, even a child can learn to use it.

By following the book of directions you can immediately relieve any kind of pain or chronic disease. You can secure perfect health and complexion and improvement of figure.

Poor blood circulation anywhere in the body causes ill health, and the congested blood in the small capillaries causes pressure on the thousands of little nerves, thereby causing an ache or pain.

The Arnold Massage Vibrator perfectly takes the place of drugs and medicines in successfully treating all the common family ailments. It is particularly effective for children, whose little stomachs cannot stand drugs without permanent harm.

Vibratory Massage with an Arnold Vibrator is Nature's own remedy. The healing power is in the blood; IT IS THE BLOOD THAT HEALS. No disease or trouble can exist in any part of the body if good rich blood is sent coursing through the tissues. Vibratory Massage with the Arnold Vibrator, gives to every nerve and blood vessel the needed stimulation, increasing the rate and force of the Heart beat and circulation. Where good rich blood, supplied with the necessary nourishment, circulates regularly, all disease and congestion disappears.
